At a total expenditure of about $[illegible] the Carrie Hemenway Methodist Episcopal Church South has been repaired and beautified. The building committee consisted of Dr. F. R. Hill, Jr., Chairman; Messrs. Edward Burke, A. V. Lowenburg, John A. Klein, T. J. Ferguson, J. Rees Lovejoy and James Engel.

The original structure has an exterior resemblance to many elderly examples through numerous of the windows, which were originally in two vertical sections of leaded with geometrical cathedral glass of varying colors and designs. These have been supplanted by one large opening, filled with leaded and artistic memorial windows representing studies in the life of Christ.

The main entrance of the tower has been beautified by new treatments of the three entrances thereto, elegant columns and granted with effective surface decoration of new Gothic ornament. Going from the tower one enters the vestibule through storm doors and thence into the auditorium with landing room leading to stair approach to the tower, and to exit on General Taylor Street.

The main auditorium has been completely transformed. It was originally a plain auditorium room, having a heavy overhanging gallery at the rear. The former architectural treatment forming the altar and organ and choir grouping have been changed, and the gallery narrowed and a new panel done elaborately treated, corresponding with choir gallery and immediately over the pulpit platform, and which large has the pastor's study on one side and the vestibule stairway leading to the choir on the other.

The interior of the auditorium has some effects in walls with graceful pilasters between the window openings which extend full height and meet in the center of the ceiling through the use of plaster arch bars. On entering the auditorium from the vestibule a wonderful picture of the Auditorium greets the worshiper and forms a focal center over the pulpit and choir gallery, which is the chief point of interest owing to its elaborate paneling, color and gold effects. The auditorium has a new hardwood floor, and the aisles and public spaces are covered with heavy green carpets in beautiful contrast to the walnut oak pews which were newly installed and are in harmonious Gothic design. All woodwork is finished in early English walnut stain.

The artificial lighting is completely hid, and a soft subdued effect without shadows or glare is the result. A new Moller electric pneumatic organ has been installed and is supposed to be one of the finest instruments in New Orleans. The Sunday school chapel in the rear of the church has also been thoroughly renovated and presents a pleasing appearance.

The architect, Emile Weil, says that Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., deserves all the credit for the tone and color effects of the magnificently designed windows, and that his cooperation with the architect went far toward the success of the alterations.

In the storm of last September, Felicity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, located at the corner of Felicity and Chestnut Streets, was badly damaged. The beautiful spire, one of the loftiest and most attractive in the city, was blown from its base, wrecking a part of the roof and front walls. The main walls were left intact.

This is the third time that Felicity Church has been almost destroyed—twice by fire, and the third time by a hurricane. The church is an old and historic one and for many years the membership was very large. Some of the most prominent ministers in Southern Methodism have served its pulpit. Under the leadership of the present pastor, Rev. Felix R. Hill, D.D., the church has been completely restored and greatly beautified. The auditorium and Sunday school rooms are said to be much more attractive and more conveniently arranged than they were before the storm. The approximate cost of the new work was $7500. The church at present is in a prosperous condition.

The First Methodist Church also sustained considerable damage, but under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. S. H. Weekes, D.D., the church has been repaired and beautified. The Algiers Methodist Church was almost completely wrecked and plans are now under way for the erection of a new church.—Times-Picayune.

AN OPEN LETTER

To Rev. A. J. Bearheard.

Rev. and Dear Brother: I read your letter concerning Methodist Union as it appeared in the Christian Advocate (Nashville), and again as it appears in the Midland Methodist of August 31. It makes the impression on my mind that the preachers in New Orleans, and that the great majority of preachers and laymen in the Louisiana Conference are in favor of the unconditional union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Is that the question before the members of the two Churches in Louisiana? It is not understood to be the question in some other sections of our country. Where I live and operate the question is the reunion of Methodism by certain methods in certain cases, which have yet to be considered by the Joint Commission. Neither the General Conference of our Church nor the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, considering the matter of union, has yet said that matter be left to the Joint Commission for consideration.

Did I misread your letter? If not are you sure that you are right in representing more than half of the Southern Methodists in Louisiana as being in favor of going into the Methodist Episcopal Church, for that is what unconditional union means?

Yours fraternally,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Editorial

A SUPERFICIAL CHRISTIANITY INADEQUATE.

Is not the Christianity of this day too superficial to keep the Church spiritual and to leaven and purify human society? We fear that there is reason for concern at this point. Getting people into the Church amounts to little unless at the same time they are brought to Christ. Indeed, it is quite possible that an unsaved person is in a worse condition inside the Church, unless he is there with a full recognition upon his part of the fact that he is a sinner who is to use, so far as is permissible, the appointed means of grace in seeking the Savior, than he would be on the outside, since otherwise he is liable to repose upon his connection with the Church for salvation. The unregenerate man of the pharisaical type is among the most difficult persons in the world to bring under conviction for sin and to lead along the path of penitence and self-renunciation into the Kingdom.

As we see it, the work that now needs to be most done in our congregations is that of making disciples with a definite and conscious religious experience of those whose names are on our Church registers. Nominal Church membership is a thing of comparatively little value, and there are far too many who stop with merely that at this time when it is popular and respectable to beloug to the Church. So, it behooves the faithful pastor to expose the utter futility of depending upon such a reliance as this and to constrain the unchristian portion of his flock to seek to secure a vital relation with the Lord Jesus Christ and not to rest until they are certain it has been obtained. Shall we let men and women who have joined the Church, but who are continuing to live very much like the people of the world, fail to do this and perish in their sins, going down to everlasting destruction? Great will be our guilt in the sight of the Heavenly Father if we do.

Let us preach oftener and more insistently upon the essential features of the plan of salvation—upon conviction, repentance, restitution, regeneration, assurance, and Christian perfection. Obviously these great themes need to be discussed and emphasized until they are clearly understood and are verified in the consciousness of those who throng our temples of worship. These experiences must exist among the true disciples of Jesus everywhere, and, where they are not entered into, a form of Christianity may prevail, but not Christianity in its saving and life-giving power.

A Church may continue to raise money, conduct missionary operations, erect houses of worship, and grow in numbers when it has largely ceased to be a truly saving spiritual agency in the world. No ecclesiastical organization on the earth is today outgrowing Roman Catholicism, yet it is perhaps the most unspiritual of all the branches of the Church of Christ. What the world may adjudge to be success for a religious denomination may be one thing, and what our ascended Lord may account to be a worthy and satisfactory work for it may be quite another thing. There is undoubtedly in this perplexing period entirely too much disposition to weigh and measure the achievements of the Church by the standards of the secularists. The Christianity of Christ and the Apostles was vastly more than a superficial civilizing process, such as the establishment of schools, hospitals, and other kinds of humane and reformatory agencies. These are all well enough in their places, but along with them, as vastly more important, should go the great fundamental teachings of the Gospel with respect to God and Christ and sin and the need of a complete renovation of every man's moral nature. For any form of evangelism that stops short of this, whether at home or in the foreign field, there must come ultimate failure. The religion of Jesus in all its fullness is needed to rescue, uplift, and perfect fallen humanity and fit it finally to reign with our triumphant Lord on high.

NO REASON FOR BEING IDLE.

There need be no unemployed when it comes to Christian work. Every disciple of Jesus has opportunities that an angel might covet. There is no community without open doors for service. One may do good to the physically needy, if any such there be, and there is always a possibility of helping spiritually the souls of men. Christians may be built up more perfectly in the faith, and the unsaved may be won for the Master. The spiritually destitute are often in the finest homes. Some cases may seem hopeless, but they may not be so. Prayer and tactful work can accomplish wonders. And let us remember that Jesus is our coworker, and that he, through the Holy Spirit, can do what is quite beyond human power. With the opening of the fall months and the resumption of renewed activity in the business world, shall we not stir up our energies and quicken our pace for Him who laid down his life for us upon the cruel cross?

"Up, and be doing. The time is brief,
And life is frail as an autumn leaf.
The day is bright, the sun is high,
Ere long 'twill fade from the glowing sky;
The harvest is white, and the fields are wide,
And thou at thine ease may'st not abide.
The reapers are few and far between
And death is abroad with his sickle keen.
Go forth and labor! A crown awaits
The faithful servant at heaven's high gates.
Work with thy might ere the day of grace
Is spent, ere the night steals on apace.
The Master has given his pledge divine,
'Whoso winneth souls, like stars shall shine.'"

A MATTER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

Our presiding elders are announcing their fourth rounds of quarterly conferences, which means that the Annual Conferences in our patronizing territory are near at hand. In view of this fact, we feel moved to write a few words of exhortation concerning the payment of the salaries of our pastors, large portions of which are usually left to be taken care of in these closing months. No charge ought to think of consenting to report a deficit on the assessment for ministerial support if by any possibility it can be avoided. In the first place, these estimates are usually more meager than they should be, and, moreover, the preacher has likely made his arrangements and shaped his expenses with the expectation that they would be paid. And it has been a long time since the purchasing power of a dollar was as small as it is now, and if a minister attends faithfully to the work that devolves upon him as an ambassador of Christ, he has but little opportunity to curtail his outlay for a living by raising things at home, as many others can do. The fact should also be considered that he must have books and current periodicals, if he is to keep abreast of the times and command the respect of the more intelligent of his parishioners.

So let the stewards begin early in the various charges and do their very best to collect the amounts that they are expected to raise, and let the people respond to their calls and aid them in their efforts to do this. The crops are reported to be very short in many localities, but where there are several hundred people to make it up, doubtless the pastor's salary can in most instances be provided for without burdening any one if all will lend a helping hand. Too often when the conditions are adverse some churches are disposed to conclude that they cannot meet their obligations before they have really tried to do so. Such a course is most unjustifiable. Generally, where there is a determined and persistent will to pay in full, there is found a way.

THE EPISCOPALIANS DISTURBED.

The Protestant Episcopal Church is having its share of troubles these days. There is among its members considerable excitement over the question of how best to provide for the episcopal oversight of its colored contingent. Some wish to make provision for a special kind of Missionary Bishop which would give the Negroes an episcopacy of their own, while others want to meet the situation by making colored men regular Suffragan Bishops, who would be subordinate to Bishops of the usual order, but who would sustain the same relations to the whole Church that all Suffragan Bishops do. Other vexed questions before this denomination are its relation to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the part it is to take in the missionary program mapped out by the Panama Congress held some months ago, and the revision of its Prayer Book and Hymnal. In view of the warmth that these issues has generated, there is some talk of postponing the further consideration of them for a time. Haste is seldom wise in settling matters of large moment either in the State or Church

"Many a man who is calling for help might help himself."

GOD'S WAY BEST.

"If all my years were summer, could I know
What my Lord means by the hail white as snow?
If all my days were sunny, could I say
'It is the best that He might all have given'?
If I were never weary, could I keep
Close to my heart the gloves His love does sleep?
Were it given mine, might I not come to deem
The life eternal but a useless dream?
My winter yet my years, my weariness,
Even my storms may be His way to bless.
I call them ills, yet that can surely be Nothing but good that shows my Lord to me."

—Southern Churchman.

CONTROL YOUR TONGUE.

Give not thy tongue so great a liberty, lest it take that privilege. A word unspoken is like the sword in the scabbard (sheath); if vented, thy sword is in another's hand. If thou desire to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue.—Francis Quarles.

THE BEAUTY OF UNSELFISHNESS.

The story is told of a famous lady who once reigned in Paris society, that she was so very homely that her mother said one day: "My poor child, you are too ugly for any one ever to fall in love with you." From that time Madame de Circourt began to be very kind to the poorer children of the village, the servants of the household, even the birds that lodged about the garden walls. She was always displeased if she happened to be unable to render a service. This good-will toward everybody made her the idol of the city. Though her complexion was sallow, her grey eyes small and sunken, yet she held in devotion to her the greatest men of her time. Her unselfish interests in others made her, it is said, perfectly irresistible. Her life surely furnishes a valuable lesson.—The Presbyterian.

SHOWING HIS COLORS.

A certain New Jersey laundry man, who is a member of the Chinese Methodist Sabbath School of Orange, N. J., lately asked his teacher to make a sign for his shop window. This was the sign as it appeared when finished and hung up a few days later: "This Place is Closed on Sunday." He was a Christian now, declared the Chinese, and he wanted his customers and friends to know it. No trying to carry the water of a Christian profession on one shoulder and that of a worldly life on the other, as so many members of our churches do, who have not come out of heathenism, but belong to staunch old evangelical stock, that endured trials if need be for its religion, but was never ashamed of it, as their descendants frequently seem to be. Are the one-time heathen to show a regard for the Lord's day that Christians for generations do not"—The Presbyterian.

POLITICAL OFFICE AND THE MINISTRY.

Some of the Presbyterian and other religious papers are pluming themselves on the fact that a Presbyterian preacher is named on one of the tickets in the coming national elections for the Vice-Presidency. There is not much to boast of in the matter. And this, first of all, in view of the fact that there is not the slightest probability of anything coming of it in the way of a successful candidacy; and, next, in view of the fact that the preacher has already a higher position than that of being in either a hopeful or hopeless race for a political place; and, finally, in view of the fact that consenting to enter such a race savors, in the judgment of many, of notoriety-seeking of a very bald kind. In addition to all these facts is the further fact that whenever such incidents occur they give to the Church's adversaries "occasion to blashpheme." They never help the Church. They always bring it into reproach or criticism.—Presbyterian Journal.

THE CHURCH SOUTH STANDS FOR TRUE DEMOCRACY.

Bishop John C. Kilgo

Bishop F. J. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal Church is reported to have stated in an address delivered at Hendrix College in Arkansas to an audience of Southern Methodist preachers and laymen that the Methodist Episcopal Church has evolved a democratic episcopacy while the Methodist Episcopal Church South has developed an undemocratic episcopacy or words of a similar meaning. For many very obvious reasons I regret that Bishop McConnell allowed himself to make such a comparison. While there may be room for applause it, there are those who dislike to see a method of advancing the cause of truth which will result only in words of scorn. But just what Bishop McConnell means by "democracy" he has not explained, or the reporter forgot to relate. It is doubtful whether there is another word in our American language that has less definiteness of meaning than the word "democracy." It is a term which is employed to express all sorts of varying and far-removed ideas, from the most vulgar type of anarchy and lawlessness to the genius of our American civilization. When Charles I was tried by the Court of the Commons the attendants did not remove their hats, and when the condemned King was led from the hall the crowd blew tobacco smoke in his face and threw their pipes after him, and this they did in the name of democracy. If Madame Roland, as she ascended the scaffold, looking at the colossal image of Liberty, exclaimed, "O Liberty! what crimes are committed in thy name," perhaps she would say in America to-day, "O Democracy! what folly is justified in thy cause." So without somebody of a definition it is not possible to say what a speaker means when he uses the word "democracy."

However from the text of Bishop McConnell's address it is evident that he meant to say his Church took an entirely different attitude toward the episcopacy from the attitude taken by our Church, a simple fact of history well and long known by all informed Methodists. In the Northern General Conference a Bishop is an appointee of the Conference like a secretary, and may be recalled by a majority vote or set aside by a resolution if by the General Conference he is deemed unsatisfactory for any cause. They hold that a Bishop is the creature of the General Conference and that the General Conference has absolute rights in dealing with its own creations. In the Southern General Conference it is held that a Bishop is the creature of the entire Church, selected by authority delegated to the General Conference to act for the entire Church, and that he can not be set aside except by an orderly investigation in which he shall have the right to be heard. Southern Methodists have never, and likely will never, surrender the supreme rights of the whole Church into the hands of a supreme assembly to act above it, and in this single position of fundamental government it has demonstrated its firm opposition to an oligarchy and asserted its fixed faith in the supreme authority of the Church, and, if democracy is a form of government which rests upon the will of the people, the truly democratic position belongs to our Church.

The readiness with which some persons, and especially some preachers, take up with the strictures against the democracy of Episcopal Methodism is an amazing example of the disposition to accept off-hand assertions for profound conclusions. I firmly believe Episcopal Methodism is the soundest form of democracy which has yet been organized, and I as firmly believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is the strongest and soundest form of democracy in ecumenical Methodism. However, it must be kept in mind that the essence of democracy is in its soul, not in its form. It is an attitude of spirit, a conviction of mind, a firm belief of the soul, and the form in which these express themselves is not the vital aspect of it. Archbishop Ireland had this distinction in mind when he said: "Democracy is a fixed fact in mankind." This is its essence, its very soul, without which it would be a mere pretense, a shallow mockery. And when above men it were seriously and sincerely to assert a stronger and more steadfast faith in mankind regardless of social classes and rules, wealth or poverty, learning or ignorance, or even the hatreds of the earth, that is asserted in the doctrines and labors of Methodism: "The world is my parish," is the immortal declaration of Wesley's faith in the equal rights of all men to salvation in Christ, and the universality of the atonement has been and will continue to be the central truth in our Methodist creed. The Methodist preacher has battled for this truth in all quarters of the globe, and through his labors now at last this central truth of the Gospel has been reclaimed in the beliefs of the Christian world. Methodist literature, policies, activities, and preaching, all bear incontrovertible testimony to this belief in the universal rights of mankind to come into the Kingdom of God through the atoning power of Jesus Christ.

But in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the negro slaves on Southern plantations at a time when it was supremely difficult for both social and political reasons, is to be found the most monumental demonstration of our Church's faith in mankind, regardless of race or social condition. In Methodist history it stands apart as the one incomparable illustration of Methodist freedom from every stage of aristocracy in religious belief. And that it began in South Carolina under the leadership of Bishop Capers puts extraordinary emphasis upon the genuineness of it. No commercial spirit inspired these men of God who went through plantations along the coasts, as well as in other sections, preaching the gospel to these foreign people who had been brought, as merchandise into America. These preachers taught them the truths of the Gospel, gave them a knowledge of the true God, and instructed them in the ethics of our holy religion. With a sense of distinct honor I always recall the faithful ministry of my own sainted father to the negroes, preaching frequently as often as five times a day to them on the rice plantations of South Carolina.

And what are the results? How does the religious condition of the Southern negro compare to-day with the religious condition of other foreign laborers who have come to America? Without the least reserve, I affirm that they are the best Christians, the most religious, and the least revolutionary class of laborers in the nation. They are not atheists, infidels, anarchists, demagogues, bomb throwers or any of the other types of disturbing forces in industry and society. They have their defects as laborers, but they are not haters of wealth, despisers of progress, and destroyers of property in order to enforce their demands. Foreign laborers have come into other sections of our country and other Churches have had a supreme call to minister to them, but have they done it with the same unselfish, persistent, and successful fidelity with which our Church labored to save the negro slaves from their savagery? Do not the foreign laborers of other regions keep up a turmoil of strikes, riots, and other forms of social disturbance? Do they not disregard the Sabbath and entertain disquieting attitudes of mind toward Americans? Is not the negro of the South to-day the most trustworthy foreigner, taken as a whole class, in our land?

When they were emancipated hundreds of thousands of them were members in good standing in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and instead of holding them as an ecclesiastical province to be ruled by alien administrators, true to our faith in them, we set them up into a Church unto themselves, and took the attitude of brotherly assistants to them in directing their own work. And the record has proven the wisdom and justified the confidence we put in them when we established them as a separate Church. They have their own Bishops, their own publishing enterprises—in short, a complete organization of their own—and out of this sense of responsibility and the inspiration of this trust they have gained immeasurable benefits. Taken in every phase, the story of our dealing with the negro is a record full of glory for which we should give increasing thanks, and it will endure in the history of the Church as the incomparable illustration of the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in mankind without respect to race or social condition. We did not do this for the sake of democracy, but out of devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ, and that it is a demonstration of the very soul of democracy is rather an incident than a deliberate aim. It is democratic because the soul of our Christian religion inspires a faith in mankind and ministry to all peoples, and the democracy of our Church rests upon the fundamental truths of the Gospel.

In all that constitutes the essence of democracy Episcopal Methodism is easily without a peer. But many cite the itinerant system as an undemocratic policy and charge that this system of furnishing preachers to churches is autocratic, even strongly tinged with ecclesiastical despotism. This is another example of shallow assertion put in the place of sound thinking. Democracy is a form of government, and government means authority, laws, and orderly action. It is opposed to selfish independentism. A sound form of democratic government must be such as will govern and express in the truest way faith in mankind. There may be many forms of it, but that is the best form which most adequately carries out a genuine democratic faith. And so one of the slogans of democracy is, "The largest benefits to the greatest number," which means that it is a form of government which must restrict some privileges in order to confer the largest blessings. It demands a willing sacrifice on the part of its leaders, and requires of those who would be greatest that they be servants. Perhaps Mazzini had had something of this in his mind when he said democracy is "the progress of all through all under the leadership of the best and the wisest." But if the best and the wisest are to lead, then they must regard office as President Cleveland regarded it, a place of service. The itinerancy does put restrictions on the ministry, but these restrictions are not to domineer over the ministry—they are to help the multitudes. In the surrender of the rights of churches to choose their preachers, and preachers to choose their appointments, Methodism is able to do the largest good to the largest number. The real undemocratic spirit to be found in Methodism is among those congregations which insist on selecting their own pastors regardless of the interests of other churches, or among those preachers who wish to have an influential voice in their appointments. The finest example of a true democracy to be found in our American life is the faithful Methodist preacher who goes gladly to serve the humble people far away from public gaze and material comforts. He is America's real hero.

But some stagger at the veto power given to the Bishops of our Church. This they hold is anti-democratic. However, it is likely the most democratic feature in the fundamental polity of our Church, and it is not strange that it should have a place in the constitution of our Church. From the beginning the South has been the home of the American belief in popular government. A Southern statesman wrote and presented to the Convention in 1776 the resolution declaring the independence of the Colonies, another Southern statesman wrote the Declaration of Independence, and Southern statesmen had the largest share in framing the Constitution of the Nation, and in every one of these political documents tremendous stress was put upon the sovereign rights of the people. To protect these rights against any form of oligarchy which might arise the founders of the Republic established balances and checks, and among them they gave the veto power to the President, the sole object of which is to protect the people's sovereignty from any possible assumption of supremacy by a legislative assembly. The same policy has been established in many of the States. And in the veto power of the College of Bishops our Church alone has adopted this feature of our national Constitution and may be called the Church of Americanism. The veto power is not a power placed in the hands of our Bishops in the interest of a dictatorship, but a reponsibility put upon them for the protection of the Church against a supreme General Conference. It is a check, and that any informed Southern Methodist should not know this is astounding. The veto of the Bishops is hedged with a like check. It is not final. The General Conference can set it aside, but in doing so they only refer the whole question to the Annual Conferences to be finally settled by a referendum. Apart from the veto check, the rights of the churches would be wholly at the will of a supreme General Conference, and this position is directly opposed to our American idea of a democratic government.

Twice in the history of our Church the College of Bishops have exercised their veto authority, and it is to the honor of our General Conferences that only twice have they gone beyond what the Bishops thought were their delegated rights. In the instance at the session of 1910, the General Conference by resolution changed the name of the Church, but the College of Bishops believed this to be a question which should go to the Annual Conferences for their judgment, and to protect this constitutional right of the Church they vetoed the act. This did not prevent the General Conference from acting on this matter, but it did require it to act according to the constitution and to regard the rights of the Church at large, and was wholly a democratic check. The other instance, though on another type of question, was in the General Conference of 1894, and the veto then was for the protection of the Church. It is amazing that any intelligent person falls, or professes to fail, to see the check which the veto power of the Bishops is designed to be on any tendency to set aside the basis of authority in the people and invest it in a supreme assembly. Without such balances and checks democracy would soon run into independentism and chaos, and Mr. Lincoln's expressed desire in his famous Gettysburg address, "that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, should not perish in earth," would be unrealized. Southern Methodism to have more closely followed the spirit and the constitutional order of our American government than any other Church in the nation, and no idea is more fundamental in their faith and convictions than their belief in and adherence to popular government, and it will likely be a very long time before there will assemble a General Conference of our Church that will declare for a form of aristocratic government and have the Annual Conferences to approve the heresy.

Lord Byron characterized democracy as "the aristocracy of blackguards," and there is such a spirit which calls itself democracy. It is the anarchy of demagogues, the viciousness of gangsters, the wildness of hoodlums, the malice of revolutionists. But there is a sane, a noble democracy. It is a government whose soul is a faith in mankind, a purpose to help forward all classes, an opening wide the doors of glorious hope to the human race, and bringing into the service of all mankind, through a strong system of government, every resource of power. This is the kind of democracy in which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an abiding faith and from which it will not depart, and if there be those who find such a strong form of democracy more than they are willing to accept they have any easy way of escape, but there are multitudes of our people who are more than willing to be serious, sincere and unselfish enough to hold on to a vigorous type of it, not reducing it to an opportunity to gratify personal whims or using it as a defense of rude and common conduct.

"Faith builds a bridge across the gulf of death,
To break the shock blind nature cannot shun,
And lands thought smoothly on the further shore."

WHY I DESIRE UNION

By Rev. [illegible]

Some one started [illegible] peated it till almost [illegible] "silence gives consent." I [illegible] because of this fact. [illegible] to speak out, and that not [illegible] true "none has expressed [illegible] Saratoga plan," yet more than [illegible] those I have talked with [illegible] selves as seeing therein [illegible] believe it is a time to look for [illegible] to dig up the past, but for prayer and [illegible] brethren at Oklahoma City did some wonderful things, but unless they were infallible and they were not in every particular, let's pray and hope that these impossible things can be made possible.

1. I want to see Methodism united because I do not believe we are showing the spirit of Christianity to proceed as we are now. I wish some of the brethren would show us should this be not true.

2. I want to see Methodism united because of the needless expenditure of men and money as it is now, both of which are needed everywhere. If we believe every soul is worth more than the world, what a price for our [illegible]! The men and women already in use that we could use in other fields, should unification become a fact, would be a force indeed.

3. I want to see Methodism united because the real issue of this separation has long ago disappeared. Of course some will aver that the real cause was that of preventing the General Conference passing on its own acts, but this is a technical hedge, rather than disputive answer.

4. I want to see Methodism united because "In unity there is strength." We could bring about greater reforms at home, and goodness knows some are needed, and we could better do our work in foreign fields.

5. I want to see Methodism united because the longer we delay, the harder it will be to get together, as every General Conference of each Church is enacting laws, etc., that put larger differences between us. These alone already constitute some of the problems of unification.

6. I want to see Methodism united because I believe, whether North, South, East, or West, she preaches the same great doctrines from the same great Bible, and has the same great ideals.

7. I want to see Methodism united because political, social, and commercial differences have been bridged, and "we alone are left."

8. I want to see Methodism united because when properly done it will lessen friction that is inevitable, divided as we are now, a thing specifically forbidden by our Bible.

9. I want to see Methodism united because of the effect it will have on other evangelical branches of the Christian Church. They have differences, and we should show them that these problems, like sins, are dissolvable in and through Christ.

10. I want to see Methodism united, finally, because, when rightly accomplished, nobody will lose anything, unless it should be a grudge, or a hobby.

May peace and harmony prevail among brethren, and God speed the day when for His glory we shall be ONE!

MORE LAW AND LIGHT ASKED OF BROTHER MOORE AND BROTHER MOON.

Having published Rev. J. W. Moore's article in criticism of Bishop Candler's first utterance on the subject of Methodist unification, we feel that it is due to the Bishop to publish his reply, which appeared in a late issue of the Midland Methodist.—Editor of Advocate.

Rev. J. A. Burrow, Editor of the Midland Methodist:

In your issue of August 16 I observe an article over the signatures of J. W. Moore and J. M. Moon and under the caption of "Bishop Candler and the Constitution."

I would not undertake to set up my opinion against these learned brethren and able expositors of the Constitution of our Church; but I beg to respectively submit for their consideration the following points, which it seems to me, they have overlooked:

1. "The Plan of Separation," adopted by the General Conference in 1844, was made dependent upon the action of the delegates from the Southern Conferences and was to become effective in case those delegates found it "necessary to unite in a distinct ecclesiastical connection." If these Southern Conferences could not be set off without their consent, can the organization which they have created be effaced without their consent?

2. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized by a Constitutional Convention, which met in Louisville, Ky., on May 1, 1845. Can a legislative body repeal the acts of a Constitutional Convention without referring back to the constituent bodies the proposed legislation?

3. The Convention held in Louisville, Ky., on May 1, 1845, named our Church "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South." Several attempts have been made to change this name, and in every instance when the proposition has been passed by the General Conference, it has been submitted to the Annual Conferences. If the name of the Church cannot be changed without a vote of the Annual Conferences, can its nature be changed without such a vote?

4. In the plan of unification, framed by the Joint Commission at its last meeting in Chattanooga, approved with amendment by our General Conference at Oklahoma City in 1914, and substituted by a different plan by the Northern General Conference at Saratoga in 1916, is matter, in every one of its variant forms, which is contrary to the Constitutions of both the Southern Methodist Church and the Northern Methodist Church. Can either one of them adopt the parts of this plan, which change their Constitutions, without submitting the matter to the Annual Conferences?

I may add that even if this matter of unification could be withheld from a vote in the Annual Conferences, no wise and true friend of union would wish it to be thus adopted. If we are to have any real union in any form whatever, the hearts of both Churches must be back of it and support it.

I have heard of but one outstanding man in our Church who has taken a different view of this subject, and he was one of my honored and beloved colleagues who seems to have taken some such position amid the excitement at Saratoga; and when he was away from home and separated from his books bearing on constitutional questions. I doubt capitally if even he would say now, after mature reflection, that the matter of union could be consummated without a vote in the Annual Conferences of both the Church, North, and the Church, South.

The able editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate seems to be an ardent advocate of union in most any form, and yet in the issue of his paper of August 3 he uses the following language:

"It behooves our people who are inclined to oppose the proposition to withhold adverse judgment until the time for action shall arrive, for much has yet to be done before union is a fact. In the first place, the two General Conferences must decide upon a plan of union, and that will not be final. After the General Conferences have done all they can do, that action will have to be referred to the various Annual Conferences of both Churches for ratification or rejection, and ratification must be, not by a majority vote, but three-fourths, and all our readers may feel sure that after the whole matter has been threshed out and discussed for several years and then adopted by a vote which is required to be so nearly unanimous, nothing radical or harmful will be done. If three-fourths of Southern and Northern Methodism agree upon any matter it is almost conclusive that wisdom has prevailed. The important step, if taken, will be in the right and we need have no fears, and the brethren need not become unduly excited lest we may be disturbed or swallowed by the greater body. We will have plenty of time to air our views after the basis have been agreed upon, and then every preacher and lay member of each Annual Conference will be entitled to register his vote for or against the measure."

I would not presume to advise my learned friends, Moore and Moon, on a constitutional question; for I dare say that their study of such matters has been far more careful and extensive than any I have been able to make. But I venture modestly to suggest that they will not promote the cause which they seem to advocate, by insisting that it must be rushed through without consideration by the Annual Conferences. Some people would suspect that such precipitate action might indicate something in it which could not bear careful and deliberate scrutiny. Perhaps even these dear and wise brethren, themselves, do not advocate such a course. Doubtless they intended nothing more than the exhibition of their legal ability and attainments.

I beg to submit to these learned expositors of the Constitution another matter. A few days ago I heard an able constitutional lawyer (a sure-enough lawyer) say that since the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized by a Constitutional Convention, it would require a Constitutional Convention to merge it into any other body. Upon this point I do not express, or so much as hint, an opinion, because, as I have intimated, I hesitate to express opinions upon constitutional matters when considering the views of these very able legal minds, my dear friends, Moore and Moon. But I would like them to work on this point and then give me the benefit of their research, in either a private or a public communication, after careful and laborious collaboration.

I hope these dear brethren will forgive me for having assumed what seemed almost universally admitted until their communication appeared—namely, that all this matter of unification would have to be voted on by the Annual Conferences. Since the question of changing the name of the Church had always been referred to the Annual Conferences, I assumed that it was axiomatic that the change of the nature of the Church would have to take the same course. I declare to them most solemnly that I never intended any judicial impropriety in this assumption, but simply meant to assume that all our General Conferences had acted correctly with reference to this constitutional principle; for a Bishop ought to keep in harmony with the General Conference. If they will forgive me, I will never do so any more, and I will consent to remain "unclean until evening" under the Levitical law. Yours fraternally,

WARREN A. CANDLER.

P. S.—Since writing and mailing to Dr. Burrow the foregoing communication, I have been informed that the signature of "J. M. Moon" was added to Dr. J. W. Moore's communication by mistake, and that there is no such man corresponding to the signature. Years ago I knew a promising young lawyer in North Georgia bearing that name, and when I saw the communication, I supposed he had, perhaps, removed to Chattanooga and that he and Dr. Moore had associated themselves in a constitutional investigation, but it appears that the work was done by the Doctor alone, and that he is entitled to the exclusive honor of the communication. This will not detract from the value of the argument, for in a discussion of that sort Dr. Moore is equal to two men most any time. In his communication he sometimes used the word "I" and sometimes the word "we," and the document varied in style at different points, but whether the Doctor is "I" or "we," he is a host when it comes to interpreting the Constitution of our Church, the investigation of Supreme Court reports, the writings of Cooley, and other great legal authorities. My trepidation is none the less since I have discovered that Brother Moon is not the partner of the Doctor in the matter of the communication in which I was reviewed.

THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION AND NEW MEXICO.

By Rev. J. H. Messer.

Few people realize what the General Board of Church Extension has done for the New Mexico Conference. I am not exaggerating when I say that the aid given us by this Board has saved a mighty empire to our Church and has saved thousands of souls to the kingdom of our Master. I know whereof I speak this morning. I have labored in this field for sixteen years, and of course during that time have watched closely the work of our Church. Sixteen years ago we did not have an up-to-date church edifice in the bounds of the New Mexico Conference. Our membership was very small and greatly discouraged. We are now the strongest Protestant Church in this State, but you may be sure it is not by accident we have achieved this success. We have contended with great difficulties. Sixteen years ago in many parts of the State we were looked upon with suspicion and often with contempt. It was thought we were intruders in this State and that we should go back to the criminal slave States where we properly belonged. At one place one of our ministers was asked to preach the Commencement sermon for one of our State institutions, but there was such a protest raised that he was compelled to permit a Northern man to preach the sermon. Beyond doubt a good deal of this feeling against us grew out of the fact that we had such poor church buildings. Other denominations were building expensively, while the most expensive building we had was at El Paso, and it was unsightly and poorly located.

About ten years ago people began to pour into this State by the thousands, many of them coming from the sunny South, but, finding our church buildings so much out of date, they went into other churches or drifted away from the Church altogether. Everything looked so dark that there was considerable talk about turning the whole State over to the Methodist Episcopal Church. This, notwithstanding a majority of the people were from the South and our State is contiguous to some of our strong Conferences.

In 1906 Dr. McMurry visited our Conference, which met at Alpine, Texas. In his public addresses he spoke encouragingly of our work, thus sounding a note which was new to us. In 1907 he went over the field with two presiding elders and promised to use his influence to have his Board to do all in its power for us. Stirred by this promise, then it was we began to grow. We have built church houses till we now have sixty-two, and parsonages till we have forty. We have approximately eight thousand members and are recognized as the leading Protestant Church in this State. Besides this, we care for thousands of our people every year who come here for the benefit of our unrivaled climate, stay with us for a short time, and then go back East. We have won such victories for our Lord, there is now no power which can keep us from becoming one of the strongest Conferences of our Church in a few years.

Our General Board of Church Extension has invested in this field $98,781.40. This has enabled us to lead hundreds of men to Christ. It has made the people feel our Church is no small affair, but one of the mightiest forces in Christendom. It has put new courage in the struggling bands of our people in our towns and cities, and it has brought joy and hope to hundreds of our fathers and mothers, who have been trying to establish homes far out on our fertile plains or high up on the slopes of our beautiful mountains. Now, when one travels over this State, he may see in our towns and cities church buildings worthy of our great Church, the very erection of which is turning the tide against infidelity, the saloon, the red light district, and all the other works of darkness. Often out in the rural sections, on Sunday mornings, he will see scores of people congregating at inviting chapels, and he will find in these chapels, listening to the Methodist circuit riders, some of the noblest Christians to be found on this earth. The General Board of Church Extension has made all this possible, and, my brethren, it is little wonder that the Methodists over this State are loyal to the great Board and that they believe so strongly in Dr. McMurry. Let us this year not only pay our assessment, but let us go far beyond this.

THE M. E. CHURCH VERSUS THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Judge E. V. Highston.

In the proposed unification of the Methodisms of the United States the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church, South, have each proposed as a basis of union practically its own form of government. Recognizing this fact, Dr. John M. Moore begins a recent article in the Nashville Advocate, under the caption of "The Two General Conferences," by asking the following questions, to-wit: (1) "What is the truth about the legislative powers of the two Methodist Churches as found in their law and practice?" (2) "Is the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church any more nearly supreme in its legislative function than the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?" (3) "If so, in what respect and to what extent?" (4) "Are the provisions for safeguarding the constitution in the Church polity any greater in the Southern than in the Northern Church?" (5) "What are the existing provisions of each Church?" (6) "Do the Southern Bishops, by their veto power, perform a function that is altogether ignored in the Northern Church?" He then proceeds to discuss the legislative polity of the two Churches and finally states as his conclusion in answer to the fourth question above, the following: "The truth is that all constitutional matters are well safeguarded in the Northern Church."

The foregoing questions of the brother shows that he has entirely misconceived the contention of those who favor union on the Oklahoma City plan, and who oppose union on the Saratoga plan. These brethren do not object to conferring on the General Conference supreme legislative powers, under constitutional provisions and restrictions, but they do most seriously object to conferring on this body supreme judicial powers. They would coordinate these two powers and make each independent of the other. They contend that to vest the General Conference with supreme power in all the departments of government will make it all-powerful, and is against the spirit of our institutions and American independence, and contrary to the teaching, training, and practice of the Southern Church for the past seventy-two years, and with us, to do so, would amount to the turning back of the wheels of time for that length of time. We are willing to confer on the General Conference the power of supreme legislation; and to grant to its rules and regulations the full force of being the supreme law of the Church, when these rules and regulations are made within the sphere of the powers granted and in pursuance to the constitution; but we are not willing that this body, or its presiding officer, or its judicial committee, either jointly or severally, shall have the final power of passing on the limits of this legislative power and on the constitutional limitations.

Question six above would indicate that the brother entirely misconceives the power of the Bishops of our Church over its legislation. Under our polity the College of Bishops does not have a veto power over the legislation in the common acceptation of this power. The veto power is an executive function, and is vested only where the approval of the chief executive is necessary to make legislation operative; in the event the chief executive, for any reason whatever, opposes the law presented to him for his approval, and such opposition renders him unwilling to approve the same, he can return the measure to the law-making body without his approval, and state his reasons therefor, in which event it is usually provided that the law-making body can still pass the measure over the executive veto by a two-thirds vote of that body; and, upon this two-thirds vote, the measure becomes a law. It is readily seen that our Bishops and the General Conference are vested with no such power. No legislation requires the approval of the Bishops, to become operative; their refusal to approve would not affect the measure. Under our Discipline the only power they exercise towards legislation is judicial. The College of Bishops is our supreme court. See Paragraphs 43 and 107 of the Discipline. In fact, supreme judicial power is vested in the Bishops, and not in the General Conference; by this means we safeguard the Church against the encroachment of the Legislature on the constitution. When under Paragraph 43 the Bishops decide that any rule or regulation is unconstitutional, they act in a judicial and not executive capacity. Only in cases involving constitutional questions can they prevent legislation. When they decide that any rule or regulation is unconstitutional, the General Conference cannot pass the rule or regulation as a legislative act, but may, by a two-thirds vote, submit it to the Annual Conferences as an amendment to the constitution, for the concurrence of three-fourths of the members of all the Annual Conferences. The Paragraph 43 is almost identical in requirement and effect with Article V of the Constitution of the United States, which provides for submitting amendments to the National Constitution. Every State in the Union has a similar provision for amending its Constitution. Neither does the United States nor any State vest any judicial power in its legislative body, but all judicial power is vested in the courts, which are separate from and independent of Congress and the Legislatures. It will be, therefore, seen that the Southern Church safeguards its constitutional rights in the same manner and to the same extent that the National and State governments safeguard their constitutional rights. The history of our country has demonstrated the wisdom of these safeguards, and we can do no better than to follow their example in our church government.

Brother Moore, in trying to justify his conclusion that all constitutional matters are well safeguarded in the Northern Church, uses the following language:

"How is it in the Methodist Episcopal Church? They have a written Constitution occupying the most prominent place in their Discipline. Not only every presiding officer of the General Conference knows what these constitutional elements are, but every member may easily acquire the knowledge; and the General Conference cannot go far in its deliberations over matters that require the constitutional process before this fact is brought to the fore by the presiding officer or some member of the Conference. If any question arises as to the legality of procedure, the matter is referred to the Judicial Committee, composed of nineteen members, four of whom are appointed by the Bishops and the others selected by the delegates from the respective fifteen General Conference districts because of their special fitness for the position. So they have their three safeguards of their documentary constitution, with the prescribed constitutional process quite like our own, their Bishops as presiding officers with the constitution before them, and a carefully chosen Judiciary Committee."

The same may be said of our National Government and the Government of every State. They all have a written constitution, the same is before the presiding officers of Congress and the various State Legislatures, every member of Congress and the State Legislatures may easily acquire knowledge of these constitutions. Congress and the State Legislatures all have carefully selected judiciary committees, composed for the most part of members learned in the law. Still the framers of our State and National Constitutions did not deem these to be sufficient safeguards against legislative aggression, but, as a sure and safe means of limiting all power within the terms of their constitutions, vested the power of final determination of the constitutionality of any legislation in a separate judicial department, distinct and independent of the legislative department; the same as the Southern Church has done and now insists upon having done in the reorganized Church.

The presiding officer is in reality no check to legislation; he can only pass on rules of procedure and parliamentary practice, and his rulings can be reversed by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature; each Conference can adopt its own parliamentary rules and the presiding officer is bound by those rules. The Judiciary Committee is no check to the will of the majority of the Legislature, the action of no committee is final; it can only report its findings to the parent body, and that body is in no way bound to accept and adopt this report. A bare majority of any Conference can reverse the findings and report of any committee. All legislative bodies divide themselves up into committees for convenience and to expedite business; but these committees are never vested with the authority of final action, and in their reports can only recommend legislation; the main body acts on these reports as it sees fit. If we, therefore, should depend on the presiding officer and the Judiciary Committee to safeguard against constitutional aggression, we would be depending on the Conference as the final arbiter, and it would have the final word as to the constitutionality of any legislation.

A written constitution does not safeguard against its violation, especially when it is to be interpreted by the legislative body. This is fully proved by our legislative and judicial history. The written Constitution of our National and State Governments have not prevented legislation unauthorized by them. The Supreme Court of the United States has been called upon more than a thousand times to pass upon the constitutionality of certain legislation, and in a large number of cases it has held the legislation to be void because in violation of the Constitution. The Supreme Courts of the various States have had the same experience. Unconstitutional legislation

IN NEW MEXICO.

Mr. Editor: Having been granted a vacation of fifteen days by Hon. Henry L. Fuqua, the Manager of the State Penitentiary, I started on August 15 to visit a sister, and other relatives in Carlsbad, New Mexico. The weather was very warm, but travel has been reduced to such a comfort that the trip was made both going and returning with but little discomfort resulting. I traveled as far as Fort Worth on what is known as the "Colorado Special," on the Texas and Pacific Railroad. This is a magnificent train out of New Orleans for the Northwest. From Fort Worth, on west as far as Pecos City, I traveled on the "Sunshine Special," which is a splendid train running from St. Louis to El Paso. It stops at but few places and develops great speed. Both of these trains mentioned carry sleepers de luxe, dining cars, and every comfort one would desire.

On the way out, I had a good opportunity to see something of the vastness of west Texas. Everything I saw from Fort Worth to Pecos City was on a grand scale, except the crops, which seemed to be perfectly burned up by the drouth. Just west of Weatherford the Palo Pinto Mountains begin and continue for about fifty miles. Strictly speaking, they are not mountains, but are very large hills, extending up sometimes very abruptly several hundred feet high. Just west of the Brazos River we crossed, in the late afternoon, a deep gorge, the bridge over which a fellow-traveler said was 108 feet high. It is not more than one-third of the height, however, of the great bridge on the Southern Pacific over the Lower Pecos River, which is said to be 320 feet high, the highest bridge in the world. However, sweeping over a gorge more than one hundred feet deep at the great rate of fifty miles an hour, gave me a near sensation of flying. I do not think I should like to cross the Pecos River bridge at that rate of speed.

From Pecos City my route to Carlsbad was over the Sante Fe Railroad, right up the Pecos River Valley. Already, as we leave Pecos City on the Sante Fe, we have glimpses of the lower end of the Rocky Mountains. We set back our watches one hour and realize that we are in the great West. From our car window, over towards El Paso, we see the two or three peaks of the Davis Mountains in Texas, reaching up to an elevation of perhaps 6000 feet. Soon after crossing into the State of New Mexico, we clearly make out the rising peaks in the Guadaloupe range, said to be 9000 feet high. They are clearly visible for a distance of seventy-five miles in the pure atmosphere of that section. We were fully fifty miles from them, and I am sure they could be seen from a much greater distance.

The Pecos River Valley is the natural home of alfalfa. With irrigation, the crop is assured, and the climate is especially suited to its curing, with the result that large sums of money have been expended upon alfalfa and stock farms. Fruits abound also, although this was not a good fruit year, owing to a frost in April, which killed most of the fruit on the trees. I saw, however, in the bends of the river several orchards of peaches and apples the limbs of which were bending with precious fruits. The Pecos Valley varies from one to five miles in width, most of which, in the various lengths of the river, has been brought under irrigation by the Government Reclamation Service. The plan is this: The Government loans a community one million or more dollars to build a dam across the river, taking a lien on all the lands subject to irrigation, with an agreement for the settlers to pay annually $4 per acre for water. After twenty years all the expense of building the dam has been repaid to the Government, and the dam then becomes the property of the community, without any further expense than operation.

I visited the Avalon Dam six miles north of Carlsbad, which appears to me to be a structure that will last a hundred years. Joined into the rocky sides of the river, and constructed with massive blocks of rock and concrete, I do not see how it could ever blow out. These dams are built all along the valley, as the river is a constantly running stream, and is practically boundless in its supply of water, fed as it is by mountain streams and underground springs, as well as by what rainfall may occur. The country had just passed through an eleven months' drouth, which caused much loss and suffering to the ranchmen back over the low hills from the river, but the people in the valley had no thought of suffering.

I had the great pleasure of meeting our ministers in that section. Brother Wallace, our minister in Pecos City, whom I met by chance, told me of his church and congregation. I saw the dome of his church, which was good to behold. At Carlsbad I had the pleasure of listening to a splendid sermon by Brother Allison, the presiding elder, who resides in Roswell. At the evening service they pressed me into the pulpit, much to my dislike. Our minister there, Brother Redmon, is a splendid gentleman, much beloved. He served four years in the Isle of Pines as a missionary. Our Church in the sections I visited seemed to have the work well in hand, with a very bright future ahead.

Many of the people who live in and around Carlsbad went there at first because of pulmonary diseases. The town abounds in little cottages rented to such people. No one seems to be afraid of a consumptive there, and, as a rule, unless the patient is very far gone indeed, he soon begins to recover, and oftentimes within a month a job is found and they actually go to work.

Just north of the town is situated the celebrated Carlsbad Spring, the most beautiful thing of its kind I ever saw. It has been concreted around until the collected waters are fifteen feet deep, and are as clear as crystal, but to the observer they appear only about four feet in depth. A rock at the bottom as large as a person's fist seems as large as one's head. The water of this spring is especially suited to stomach troubles, but as the people go to Carlsbad for lung troubles it is not much in demand.

Altogether, the country is beautiful, and the mountains in the distance are perfectly entrancing. It was our purpose to go out in the foothills to a celebrated cave, and view several large ranches, but following an extended drouth of eleven months a veritable wet season reigned, for the time being, which prevented all travel. In fact, the Sante Fe Railroad was put out of business south of Carlsbad for several days, and on my return we made it into Pecos City by means of a hand-car, which was a real "Sunshine Special." But to the east of Abilene to Weatherford and throughout all the Panhandle country of Texas, I understand a very serious drouth still prevails.

After spending about eight days with a sister and nephews and nieces, I abandoned the intention of returning via El Paso, owing to strike rumors, and beat a hasty retreat home, risking the waters of the overflowed Pecos River Valley, swollen by rains in the mountains to the west, and made the last ten miles into Pecos City by a hand-car. What a come-down from my expectation! Visiting what I thought would be a desert, and riding through floods, similar to a flood season in the Mississippi River Valley! However, I reached home safe on the 31st ult., glad that I made the trip, and feeling that I had gotten more out of the trip than the cost of it.

DR. CARRADINE SPEAKS.

(Dr. Beverly Carradine, who is well known in this section, and who has evangelized all over the United States, recently made the following utterance in his paper on the subject of Methodist union. The Doctor has been regarded everywhere as a man of unsurpassed spirituality, but if he does not mind in taking this position he will cause himself hereafter to be classed very differently in that regard.—Editor of Advocate.)

There is always the usual quadrennial gush about the unification of the Methodist Churches, North and South. They were talking about it when I was a young preacher. But the great men in our Church, like Keener, Parker, Doggett, Pierce, McTyeire, Wightman, and others, remembered the past, the many impossibilities of amalgamation, the wisdom of working apart in all kindness and love, and so did not gush and dish out sweetened verbal mush when the subject was broached by the regular quadrennial cocked and primed orator.

Preachers, like women, can be made to cry very easily by an appeal to certain sensibilities, both calm reason and godly judgment remain after the handkerchief is dry, and so in view of the past—bearing in mind the great essential differences between us of the South and those of the North—we feel like saying, as Abraham did to Lot, you can proceed one way and I will go another; you may journey to the north, but I will remain in the south; only let there be no hard feeling between us. We are all the children of God, but in view of our hopeless minority vote, if we joined you we would be as silly in putting ourselves in the power of another body of people as the crane, according to Aesop, who thrust his head in a lion's mouth to get out a bone. He got his head out, for a wonder, but was told by the lion that for the services he had rendered him he had reason to be thankful that he escaped alive. We had our head in this mouth once; why put it in again? We are trusting that Bishops Wilson, Candler and Hoss, and Doctors Lee, Meek, Parker, Werlein, and others of our leaders will hold things steady when the "gush" comes, and the "oratorical mush" abounds and men in listening to "appeals to the gallery" stand ready, in dotage and anecdotage, to weep on one another's second button. Again we warn the crane to keep out of the lion's mouth. We mean no disrespect to the lion, but we have solicitude for the crane, and want it to live.—The Gospel Herald.

WHO CAN BEAT IT?

We have just had the unique experience of receiving into the membership of the Methodist Church a woman who will be 109 years old on the 26th of November next, her age being vouched for by her granddaughter who lives with her, and who says that her mother has the "christening papers" that vouches for grandmother's birthday. She was born in Cuba of a French mother and an Italian father, but early came to New Orleans where she was living when Jackson fought his famous battle in 1812, being then five years of age. She tells that two regiments of soldiers walked all the way from Louisville, and that the people opened their homes to them, and that they had as their "yell" or war song—

"Row up, boys, row up; we'll sweeten with gunpowder Packenham's tea,
And send them home packed up like pork from Tennessee."

She tells also of a man who refused to let Jackson have his cotton to use in making breastworks, and that they put him in jail; that Jackson worked a strategy in turning a body of water on the English, thus wetting their powder; that the people said, as their motto, "We don't put our cotton up for fear of dying, but to shield our city from the hand of a tyrant," and many other such things does she remember. She has been married four times. Her name is Mrs. J. Montemat; and just a few Sundays ago she served a dinner to a company of visitors who came in on an excursion train, doing most of the work herself. Until she recently joined our Church she had all her life been a Roman Catholic. "Can you beat this?"

LITTLE HARRY AND THE ORANGE.

Delta.

Little Harry often went to the home of a sick neighbor; and although sick she thought a great deal of Harry, and was pleased to have him with her. His childish cuteness helped her to pass through the slow, creeping hours of the day.

The kind neighbors, and Harry's own mother, often carried dainties and fruits to the sick woman. One day a well-to-do friend brought a basket of luscious peaches, on the top of which she had placed a very large orange, both to decorate the basket and be a refreshing morsel for the feverish patient. As she came in she set the basket on a stand in the hall, thinking it best to see whether it would be judicious to let the sick woman see the fruit until she was permitted by the nurse to eat of it. The nurse told her to bring it in, for the juice of a good sweet orange would be especially good for her. So the lady tripped out for the basket, when lo! the very thing she was glad she brought was gone.

Where had it gone? The servant was asked about it, but she said she had not seen it, for she did not know the basket was in the hall. No one else had been seen about the house. Even Harry had not been over that day as any one saw; and all were of the opiuion that the servant had taken it, so the matter was dropped; and another orange was sent over from the lady's home.

For some reason Harry became very conspicuous by his absence. He never came over any more. The sick woman wondered at it. She sent for him, but he did not want to go. His mother and others asked him why he did not go over any more. He just didn't want to go, was all the reason he would give. But one day the mother happened to think of the orange episode, and she asked him if he knew anything about it. He flatly denied all knowledge of it. And so it was dropped again. But Harry was having a hard time. He always enjoyed the sick woman, who was now well, and the good times he used to have in her home; but he could not go to her house any more, remembering what a mean thing he had done in stealing her orange. And, besides, he was losing all respect for himself, for he knew he was a thief.

So one day he determined he would go and make a full confession to his mother. And no sooner had he started for his mother than he began to cry; and the nearer he came to her the harder he cried. And when he reached her he fell down before her, as she was sitting at her work, and buried his face in her lap, trembling and crying with a really broken heart.

His mother was frightened. And it was some time before she could understand, between his sobs, what he was trying to tell her; and when she did she gathered him up to her bosom and rained tears of joy and kisses of love upon him, assuring him of his full forgiveness by both herself and their neighbor. Harry then fell into a quiet, restful sleep; and when he awoke it was as if he was living in a new world. His headache and burden were gone, and the joys of life had come back to him again. The home of the woman who had been sick, and who liked him so much, he could visit again, and his old pleasures his sin had deprived him of were his again.

This was his confession: He had seen the lady enter the house with the fruit. He slipped in after her, not intending to steal, but thinking some of it might be given him. But when he got in the hall and saw the basket sitting there, and no one around, he took the orange hastily from the top of the basket, and, slipping out, he hurried to the barn, where he ate the orange, and slipped the rind through the cracks of the barn floor.

This is the truo story of the small boyhood of one of God's noblemen to-day. He never knew why he was moved to take the orange; but something seemed to say to him, "Take it! Take it! No one will ever know!" But he says "I knew! and God knew; and I was most miserable all the time, until I confessed my sin and was forgiven. Then I was happy again." Doing sin always brings misery and sorrow; confessing our sins, and being forgiven, always brings joy and gladness.—Western Christian Advocate.

SELFISHNESS.

By Hon. W. A. Belk.

Dear Doctor Meek: Have you read in the past few years that little poem of John Greenleaf Whittier, entitled "In School Days?" Somehow the philosophy of life as found in the last lines of that poem have lingered with me. You recall that during the spelling lesson that afternoon this little girl spelled the word and "turned down" this lad. That after school was out she "lingered" and bashfully said to him:

"I'm sorry I spelt the word, I hate to go above you,
"Because"—her brown eyes lower fell—"because you see I love you."

The little girl died and the poem concludes thus:

"Still memory to a gray-haired man, that sweet child face is showing;
Dear girl, the grasses on her grave have forty years been growing;
He lives to learn in life's hard school, how few who pass above him.

Have you ever seen that philosophy exemplified? Yea, have you ever felt it keenly yourself? How many men have you ever seen rise to wealth or position over the downfall of another and as they passed up would say like the little girl: "I'm sorry I spelt the word, I hate to go above you?" I never see a good man defeated for office, nor a good man lose his position, that I do not wish that he who has "passed above him" would stop and leave a little token of love by expressing at least some regret that "his triumph" should be the other's loss." But such seems to be our selfish nature. "It's four and no more," too often is the whole world to us. Can't we quit it in some way? Is there not room in the flower garden for all the flowers? May I not achieve success in a straightforward way and without trampling down another? Am I to live for myself alone? Can't I rise by helping another rather than destroying him?

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see.
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

Holly Springs, Miss.

WORKING THE CHURCH.

The line of division between evangelical Christianity and what the New Testament calls "the world" is clear. Suppose you commit the Baptist Churches to the "closed shop." Then all Baptists who do not believe in the closed shop are invited to get out of the denomination. We have, therefore, substituted labor unions for Christianity. The true solution is to say that a Baptist church, as a church, has nothing to do with this question. The case is far worse when a few men who happen to have been elected to some position in the denomination for Baptist work prostitute their position in an endeavor to speak for the denomination in matters with which it has no concern, or, at least, are not essential to it.

It is worse still, when some foreign organization claims to represent the churches, and pretends to speak for them on any subject, political or social, national or international, claiming that its opinions are those of the Protestant Churches. It is all based on the assumption that evangelical Christianity is nothing, and that the churches are good for nothing, except to be used by every would-be leader, and by any organization that is ready to spend time and money to conduct a propaganda among them.—Journal and Messenger.

THEATRICALLY-MINDED PREACHERS.

The Lutheran Witness tells of a theatrical manager who endeavored to persuade church papers to give free advertising space for the benefit of the Actors' Fund (a fund designed to care for superannuated actors). The Witness thinks the offer may not be so much out of the way, after all, since the Church is in some danger of entering the field against the theater. It says: "Consider, for instance, the case of 'The Prodigal Son acted out in a Baptist Church in an Ohio town. Dressed in a robe and sandals similar to those used in Bible times, and with a wig and cane, the minister represented the father of the 'Prodigal Son,' and in this outfit preached what we are informed was a 'very appropriate sermon.'" A writer calling himself simply "J. B." offers a suggestion in the Northwestern Lutheran anent the Witness' story. He says if any pastor feels tempted to follow this unique plan adopted by the Ohio brother, he would suggest a sermon on Balaam as offering the preacher rich possibilities —The Presbyterian.

THE CHRISTIAN AND THE WORD.

It may be safely said that the growth of a Christian is, in the great majority of cases, quite exactly proportioned to the real applied knowledge of the Word of God. "Is it not for this cause that ye err, that ye know not the Scriptures nor the power of God?" And so the Word becomes the greatest and most rational means to personal acquaintance with God. We may as certainly and truly come to know Him through His Word as we may come to know a correspondent whom we have never seen through his letters.—President King of Oberlin.

THE FACTS IN THE CASE.

One frequently hears it said these days that our General Conference declared for "the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the method of reorganization," as if it were fully committed to such a general plan or principle, while the component parts of the plan were mere "tentative" suggestions, which are in no sense binding and which the Commissioners may lightly surrender if they wish. As a matter of fact, however, the action of our General Conference did not at all recognize any plan or principle of union, separate and distinct from its constituent elements, and the contention mentioned above is, in our opinion, utterly fallacious and unwarranted. To see that this is true, one needs only to examine carefully the wording of the declarations made by the General Conference at Oklahoma City, which were as follows:

"1. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South (This language was unfortunate—the General Conference could speak for itself, but not for the CHURCH, concerning a matter inherently constitutional in character.—Ed. A.), considers the PLAN outlined in the suggestions that were adopted by the Joint Commission representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and reported to the General Conferences of their respective Churches as tentative (notice that the plan and suggestions are here linked closely together.—Editor Advocate), but nevertheless as containing the basic principles of a genuine unification of the Methodist bodies of the United States, and especially of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the method of reorganization. (Let it be noted that the "basic principles" of the unification referred to were said to be "CONTAINED IN" the plan of the Joint Commission—not "principles" imported from the outside and utterly out of harmony with and subversive of that plan.—Ed. Ad.)

"2. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South. (Loose language again.—Ed. Ad.) regards the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the method of reorganization suggested by the Commission on Federation as feasible and desirable (Note this is not unification by just any method of reorganization, or one yet to be devised, but that "SUGGESTED BY THE JOINT COMMISSION.—Ed. Ad.), and declares itself in favor of the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in accordance with THIS GENERAL PLAN OF REORGANIZATION, and in favor of the unification of all or any Methodist bodies who accept THIS PROPOSED PLAN after IT has been accepted by the Methodist Episcopal Church. However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church.

"3. The representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Federal Council of Methodism are hereby instructed and empowered to act as Commissioners with like Commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and other Methodist bodies in the United States, in elaborating and perfecting the tentative plan THAT HAS BEEN PROPOSED, in carrying forward such negotiations as have for their purpose, and may result in the consummation of the PROPOSED UNIFICATION IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE BASIC PRINCIPLES ENUNCIATED IN THE SUGGESTIONS (Mind you, suggestions, not "plan."—Ed. Ad.) which were adopted by the Joint Commission and reported to the General Conferences. Should the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1916 declare itself in favor of unification through the PROPOSED plan (Not merely any plan.—Ed. Ad.), and should appoint a commission on unification separate from the Federal Council of Methodism, the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are hereby instructed and empowered to appoint a similar Cimmission that shall serve until the next meeting of the General Conference."

Two things are obvious from the foregoing enactment, when it is closely scrutinized: 1. As we have already said, there is no such thing as "a principle or plan of union" to which even the General Conference, to say nothing of the CHURCH, is obligated apart from its component features. The unification which our General Conference declared to "be feasible and desirable" was by the METHOD of reorganization suggested by the Joint Commission on Federation. These specifications, of course, are in the nature of the case subject to some modification, but according to the action of our General Conference not to a substitution or a virtual transformation. If that were the case, all the antecedent labors looking to the unification of the Churches would have no binding force whatever on anybody, and everything would be wide open and the situation practically as it was when the negotiations began six years ago.

2. Any scheme of union that the present Commissions of the Church, North, and Church, South, may formulate that does not have its "basic principles" rooted in the plan wrought out by the former Joint Commission on Federation, and approved by our General Conference, will have been matured by our Commission of Twenty-five having exceeded its powers, and will have back of it no antecedent authorization by any official body of our Church competent to delegate such authority.

There has been, as we see it, a great deal of confused writing and thinking on this subject, and there is need of getting a clear and definite view of the action taken by our General Conference and the status of things thereby created.

A LITTLE TOO MUCH.

The City Temple, London, is one of the world's greatest Protestant Churches. It has had a long and honored history and it was given a new fame by the splendid ministry of the renowned Dr. Joseph Parker, who was a gifted orator and preacher, and whose theology was evangelical and safe. Dr. Campbell, its late pastor, however, as will be remembered, went considerably astray in his teaching and developed what he called "The New Theology," which he is said to have repudiated within recent months, endeavoring to destroy, as far as possible, the books setting it forth. Some time ago he gave up his famous pulpit, and it is now reported that Dr. J. Fort Newton, the pastor of a Universalist Church at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who at one time was a student at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., has been called to succeed him. The publication of this report is said to have brought forth a strong protest from orthodox Christians on both sides of the Atlantic, and the Church News Association (New York) states "that charges of sharp practice in capturing the call are made and that threats to test its validity are being heard in England." Alas! that there should be such talk in connection with the pulpit of any Christian Church.

We scarcely need to say that our sympathies are with those who are disposed to stand up for sound Christianity in this contest. It is high time that those who believe in the written Word of God were showing enough resistance to the invasions of "liberalism" to set up a banner in defense of Divinely revealed truth. There has been far too much indifference exhibited in this respect by the true followers of the Master.

SHOULD MAKE THEIR MEANING CLEAR.

"We have read very carefully the article by Dr. J. W. Lee in the St. Louis Christian Advocate concerning the action of Annual Conferences with reference to the unification of the Methodisms. We utterly fail to see that for an Annual Conference to approve formally the principle of unification as enounced by the General Conferences, North and South, and to indorse the Oklahoma resolutions would either embarrass the commissioners or intimate that they are not capable of dealing with the subject. Surely it can never be out of place for an Annual or any lower Conference to indorse the action of a General Conference."

As we have shown elsewhere in this issue of our paper; our General Conference endorsed no plan or "principle of unification" apart from the specifications composing it. The fallacious view that we are as a Church committed to the general idea of unification in a nebulous sort of way and that we are obligated to readjust and work out the stipulations as best we can, whether they are to our liking or not, has been very widely spread over the Church ever since the Saratoga General Conference. And this misconception has done not a little toward complicating the situation existing among us.

If our Annual Conferences are to speak concerning unification at this stage of the proceedings, since they will have to pass finally upon any scheme that may be formulated, we think they should do so in a judicious manner and make their meaning perfectly clear. Any kind of indefinite endorsement of the actions of the General Conferences, North and South, as if they were essentially in accord, would, in our opinion, be certain to be construed by the extreme unionists as favoring the complete amalgamation of the two Churches and used by them as warranting any members of our Commission who are not much disposed to stand for the Oklahoma City enactment in going a long way toward the Saratoga basis. In our judgment, there is a subtle danger in such a blanket procedure against which we would do well to guard carefully. If we do not want union on the basis of the action of the Northern General Conference, let us see that we do not make any deliverances that can by any possibility be interpreted to that effect.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Now for the Conference collections! Let us do our best for all the worthy causes represented in these assessments. They furnish the sinews of war for the Church.

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., reports encouragingly concerning the progress of the work in his developing charge. His letter brought us a club of 7 trial subscriptions, for which we extend to him our thanks.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Burns, Miss., says: "Everything is moving along very well on the Trenton charge." Brother Winstead's letter contained two renewal subscriptions, for which we are grateful.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, has been lending a helping hand in the Sunday School Institutes that are being conducted in the several presiding elders' districts of the Mississippi Conference. He is a remarkably versatile worker.

A press dispatch states that Dr. J. C. Ballard will again accept the position of a surgeon in the United States Army. Dr. Ballard is a man of superior Christian character, and is admirably qualified in every respect for the service to which he has been called.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., assisted Rev. J. L. Decell in a good meeting at Waynesboro, Miss., last week. Brother Davis, who serves the Waynesboro Circuit, also took part in these services and contributed not a little toward their success.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate, sent in within the past few days: Rev. P. H. Fontaine, Good Pine, La., 2; Rev. H. B. Thomason, Waynesboro, La., 2.

It was with much sorrow that we noted a few days ago the death of Mrs. J. L. Lucas, an esteemed member of our Church at Starkville, Miss.

She was a woman of many superlor traits of character and will be sorely missed. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. S. O. Roberts, of Felixville, La., says: "I could not do without our paper. It is next to my Bible. I like an editor with convictions and am willing to follow him in the ordeal through which our Church is now passing."

Brother James Hand, of Purvis, Miss., was a visitor to New Orleans this week, and while in the city paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. Brother Hand is one of the most generous laymen in the Mississippi Conference and is widely known for his good works.

In a business letter to our office, which brought us three subscriptions, Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Duck Hill, Miss., makes the following reference to his charge: "Everything is progressing well. We have had fine meetings, and we expect to go to Conference with a good report."

A letter from Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., sends us an additional list of 7 subscriptions. Thus he continues to forge forward toward his goal of ONE HUNDRED SUBSCRIBERS during the present Conference year. "A workman that needeth not to be ashamed" is Brother Perry.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our brilliant young pastor at Macon, Miss., writes for sample copies of the Advocate that he may seek to extend its circulation in that progressive city, and adds the following statement: "Kindly permit me to say 'Amen' to your stand on the union question."

Rev. A. R. Hoffpaulr, of Estherwood, La., writes us as follows: "Will you kindly state in the Advocate that I desire to get a reliable middle-aged Christian lady to keep house for me, so that my three children (the eldest a girl of 13) may attend school? Applications should be accompanied with the proper references."

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, of West Monroe, La., has favored us with 4 subscriptions to the Advocate. He is giving a good account of himself in his preseu field of labor. We are grateful to Brother Ledbetter for some kindly words concerning our position on the question of the unification of Methodism in the United States.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, requests us to announce the following Camp Meeting schedules: "The Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will begin Wednesday night, September 27; the Salem Camp Meeting, on Wednesday night, October 4, and the New Prospect Camp Meeting, Thursday night, October 12."

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who has led the Rayne Memorial congregation in a complete overhauling of the historic church edifice in which it worships, is in his fourth year. Dr. Hill enjoys the reputation of being a strong and suggestive preacher and is quite popular with his flock, who will give him up with not a little reluctance.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of the Shreveport District, has fully sustained his reputation of being a hustler in his present field of service. Brother Atkinson does not spare himself in carrying forward the Master's work, and we dare say that his report to the Annual Conference will show that his labors and those of his helpers have not been in vain during the past year.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey is keeping up his usual excellent record as a presiding elder on the Corinth (Miss.) District. He is a hard worker, which counts much as an element of success, and furthermore he is a man of uncommon force. The charges under his supervision may be expected to make a creditable showing when the Annual Conference convenes at Winona this fall.

Read the interesting communication from the pen of Rev. H. S. Johns, Chaplain of the Louisiana Penitentiary, which appears on another page. No Methodist minister in Louisiana is rendering a more important service than Brother Johns, and the brief season of rest which he recently enjoyed was well earned. We appreciate his thoughtfulness in sending the Advocate this entertaining account of his trip to the West.

From the Morgan City (La.) Daily Bulletin of September 4, we take the following: "Reconstruction work is going on to prepare the Pharr Chapel building for the installation of one of the finest pipe organs ever placed in a house of worship in South Louisiana. In a short time this superior instrument will be in place, and its inspiring tones will be a wonderful addition to the esthetic influence of the usual services of this congregation." Rev. C. C. Weir is the efficient pastor of this enterprising flock.

Through the courtesy of the Publishers, at Tuskegee, Alabama, we have received a copy of the "Negro Year Book for 1916-1917," by Monroe N. Works. This is an annual publication, for which there has come to be a large demand, and the present issue, which embraces 488 pages, is brimful of interesting information. It is well-arranged, is neatly printed, contains a serviceable index, and is paper-bound. The price, postpaid, is 35 cents. Address the Negro Year Book Co., Tuskegee Institute, Ala.

The pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, being out of the city, the pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Church was filled last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m. by Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, who delivered an able discourse. At the evening hour the service was impressively conducted by Rev. L. 1. McCaln, who, we are happy to state, has fully recovered his health. Brother McCaln, as was announced in the Advocate last week, has been designated to succeed Brother Peters as pastor of the McDonoghville Church.

Rev. T. V. Peters, our McDonoghville pastor, was due to leave for Burrville, Tenn., the early part of this week, having been relieved of his charge on account of the state of his health, as was stated in the last issue of the Advocate. Brother Peters has done excellent work wherever he has served in the Louisiana Conference, and we sincerely regret that he has found it necessary to put off the harness for a time. We hope that his recuperation will be rapid and that he will soon be able to resume his "loved employ."

Rev. John Paul, who is well known in Mississippi, writes: "You may say that on account of typhoid fever and a general physical breakdown, I have been released from my work at Hampstead Square, in Charleston, S. C., and have since accepted the Vice-Presidency of Asbury College, at Wilmore, Ky., where I will teach the Bible and philosophy. My work will begin there on September 13. In the short time I was at Hampstead Square, the church had a net increase of one-fifth in its membership. My health is now recovered."

The Meridian District is making gratifying progress under the capable leadership of Rev. J. T. Leggett, who as a district superintendent ranks with the best to be found anywhere. In the pulpit he never fails to measure up to a high standard, and as an administrator he knows how to lead the way in the achievement of substantial results. And with it all, he is a warm-hearted, affable, and brotherly Christian gentleman, who is a welcome and appreciated visitor wherever he goes. All the echoes that reach our office are highly commendatory of his work.

Dr. W. C. Lovett, editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, in a late issue of his paper, penned the following note: "Bishop Candler's article entitled 'Calm Consideration Called For,' which appeared in these columns some weeks ago, has had perhaps more widespread endorsement among our people than anything that he has written in some time. From every section of the connection approval of his wise and timely deliverance has come and continues to come. Southern Methodism has long ago learned that it can safely follow his far-reaching and wise leadership."

Some of the Methodist pastors in this section have been smashing records of late. A few days ago Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Donaldsonville, La., received, as he tells elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, a woman more than a hundred years old into the Church; and recently Rev. H. W. Van Hook officiated in a single afternoon in three weddings at the little chapel at Beauvoir, the Mississippi Home for old Confederate Soldiers, in which all the brides and bridegrooms were above seventy years of age. Certainly both of these occurrences were very remarkable.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of September 8 says: "Dr. W. H. LaPrade, our pastor at Gulfport, Mississippi Conference, called to see us last week while on a visit to his son, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., pastor of our Inman Park Church, this city. His presence reminded us of the days we were together at Emory, and called up some of the strong debates he delivered in the Few Society. My, what days those were, and what strong men have done service for the Church and State who were at Emory in the days of — well, no matter; it was some time after the Civil War."

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation which reads as follows: "The Trustees and Faculty of the School of Law of Emory University request the honor of your presence at the formal opening of the L. Q. C. Lamar School on Wednesday morning, September 27, 1916, Atlanta, Ga." A special program has been arranged for this occasion, and it promises to be a memorable one. Especially should the Methodists of Mississippi be interested in this announcement, since they have under way a campaign for $50,000 to cover the cost of providing a home for this department of Emory University.

To the brethren who have sent us articles on the unification issue, we will say that we will publish them as rapidly as possible. We have no disposition to keep any one from being heard on this momentous question. Some people who do not realize the tremendous interests that are at stake in this movement may think that too much space is being devoted to it; but this issue really involves practically everything else of consequence in the Church. What do subsidiary things amount to when the very existence of Southern Methodism as an autonomous organization is uncertain? There is one thing, however, that we think it would be well for all to remember, namely, that the unification question is no test of the spirituality or lack of spirituality of people. Even in the denominations that are most exclusive, as the Southern Baptist Church, for instance, there are as good Christians as can be found anywhere on earth.

Under date of Sept. 12, Rev. E. N. Broyles writes: "Brother Lagrone and Brother John Robertson were recently with us at Macon, Miss., in what was termed by many the greatest meeting ever held here. Brother Lagrone is a great preacher and Brother Robertson is a fine leader in song. I have just returned from a good meeting with Brother T. E. Gregory at Caledonia, Miss. He is one of the most effective men I have ever worked with. His people love him and he has power with them for God and the Church. During this year he has ridden over 4000 miles on his circuit and has had over 80 additions to the Church."

The August Bulletin of Emory University is on our table, and a most interesting publication it is. It is a paper-bound volume of 220 pages, and contains the announcements of the University for the session of 1916-17. The courses of study set forth in the various departments of this splendid institution have manifestly been carefully arranged and are quite comprehensive in their scope. We note the names of the following students from Mississippi in the Candler School of Theology: J. W. Chisholm, New Augusta; Samuel Jackson Foose, Tchula; J. M. Guinn, Houston; J. H. Jolly, Washington; Olin Ray, Walnut, Miss.; J. D. Wroten, Booneville, Miss. Of these, Rev. J. M. Guinn, who is now serving Centenary Church at McComb City, Miss., had conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. Louisiana, which lies chiefly west of the Mississippi River and is, therefore, affiliated with Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Texas, is credited with one theological matriculate at Emory.—S. A. Seegers, of Haynesville. The attendance upon the other schools of this institution was highly gratifying. Law and medical students desiring the best advantages would do well to look carefully into the facilities to be had at this fast-growing University. Write Mr. Walker White, Sec'ty and Treasurer, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., for a catalogue.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

Mrs. C. T. BOOTH was born on April 10, 1844, and was married to Mr. W. T. Booth in November, 1867. Of this union were born several children. Sister Booth joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life and remained a consistent member until February 28, 1916, when she was transferred to the Church Triumphant. In the home and in the community the name of Sister Booth was the synonym of all that is pure, good, and true. No one knew her but to love her; no one spoke of her but to praise her. Sister Booth suffered a long time—about ten months—before she died, and prior to this she had suffered a great deal; but all her afflictions were borne without a complaint or a murmur on her part. She seemed to be willing to suffer if God willed that she should, and if others by looking at her might know how to appreciate good health. The writer knew her during her last spell of sickness which, as has already been said, lasted ten months, and as often as he visited her he found her always resting quietly and in a calm, peaceful frame of mind. In her conversations she always manifested the spirit of true faith. She leaves eight children—three boys and five girls—to mourn the loss of their mother. The father preceded the mother to the grave three years ago. Amidst a great concourse of friends and loved ones, we laid her body to rest in the Green Valley Cemetery on February 29, 1916. Earth was made poorer by her advent into glory, and heaven was made richer. H. R. McKEE, P. C.

Mrs. McKINNON was born in Covington County, Miss., on September 16, 1833, and was married to Mr. D. J. McKinnon on May 17, 1854. She moved to Jasper County in 1870 and lived at the first place at which she settled until her death, which occurred on July 2, 1916. Mr. and Mrs. McKinnon had nine children, only one of whom had preceded the latter to the grave; the other eight are living. Sister McKinnon was a loving mother and grandmother, a true and faithful friend, and the systematic reading of her Bible was her delight. She was very careful to raise all of her children to be Christians and servants of the Master. She was the preacher's friend. It was her desire that he should come to see her often and she was always ready to give him instruction and advice. Being a devoted wife and affectionate mother, she filled her honored place in the home with joy and sunshine. Although a sufferer for several weeks before her death, she bore all her afflictions, as a Christian should, with resignation and fortitude. She welcomed her departure with eagerness, knowing that she would meet face to face the Savior to whom she had committed her life in her girlhood days and whom she loved and trusted with an abiding faith. Surrounded by all of her living children and some of her friends, her gentle spirit took its departure. At the time of Sister McKinnon's death the writer was absent attending the Divinity School, so her body was laid to rest in the Pleasant Grove Cemetery by Rev. A. B. Barry, of Pachuta, Miss. But she herself has joined the innumerable host of the redeemed who, rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory, await the resurrection of the just. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

LABOR DAY SERVICE.

The Methodist Church in Morgan City, La., had a special service September 3, devoted to the labor question. Rev. C. C. Weir made a timely talk, taking for his text Gen. 3:19. He said that there were two kinds of toilers, one who toiled too much, while the other did not work. By Scriptural quotation, he showed that labor is entitled to respect. The matter between labor and capital is not between men, but it is rather a fight about the result—money—produced by labor, and, "money being the root of all evil," the fight is bound to go on until the sharing plan is more universally put in practice by all corporations. The preacher hoped very soon to see the real brotherhood of men come into existence.

Mrs. E. A. Pharr sang feelingly and harmoniously one of the many musical adaptations of that old but ever new song, "Jesus Lover of my Soul."—Morgan City Daily Review.

TWO HELPFUL REVIVALS.

Dear Dr. Meek: If you will give me space, I will report two more good meetings I have held. The first was at Indian Village. We started there on the second Sunday in August at 11 a. m., preaching twice a day. Rev. A. S. Lutz, our presiding elder, came to us on Thursday morning and preached three very helpful sermons, at 11 a. m., 3 p. m., and 8 p. m. At the close of 8 p. m. service we received a class of 12 into the Church. Your humble scribe preached Friday at 8 p. m., the meeting closing with that service. We had 14 accessions, all adults, making 26 in all. This makes 64 that we have received into the Indian Village Church within the last two years and I did all the preaching except three sermons delivered by the presiding elder.

Our next meeting was with Brother Dennis Fordham at Lapine, on the Brooklin charge. Brother Fordham began the meeting on the fourth Sunday in August at 11 a. m., and we went to him Monday at 11 a. m., and remained until Friday through the 8 p. m. service, preaching twice a day. We had 25 accessions. Brother Fordham said this was the greatest meeting ever held at Lapine. Doctor, it was good to be in these meetings. The Lord was there with us. We give God all the praise.

A PROFITABLE INSTITUTE.

Editor Advocate: The two days' session of the first district Sunday School Institute ever held in the Seashore District of the Mississippi Conference came to a close Monday, Aug. 28, at 5:30 p.m. All who attended as delegates or visitors were more than pleased with the program, and pronounced the Institute a most successful one. Seventy-three delegates and visitors registered during the session, 15 pastoral charges were represented, and 8 pastors were present all or part of the time. Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, was with us and gave splendid help at the time needed. Rev. Geo. W. Thompson, presiding elder, Hattiesburg District, was also present and gave us cheer through his prayers and presence. Rev. J. R. Jones, our own presiding elder, in the devotional exercises held in the opening of each session, brought us nuggets of thought of pure gold that greatly benefited all who heard him. Rev. J. L. Neill and his accomplished wife were at their best and did most effective work. The talks and lessons given by our Divisional Secretary, Mr. A. L. Dietrich, were of the highest order, strong and spiritual. The local church and people of the town were hospitable and friendly in a high degree. A PASTOR.

SHANNON, MISS.

My Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a round of revial meetings on this charge. The people say that never before have they had such glorious revivals. Indeed, this entire section is revived. The Pleasant Grove Church is four miles from Shannon and is one of the country churches attached to the charge. Here the neighborhood was wonderfully uplifted and 18 new members were added to the register. Brewer, the other country church on this charge, has caught a new vision of God, and they, too, rejoiced in the Savior's love, and 26 new members identified themselves with our church at that place. In addition to those that came to our Church, our sister Churches had their registers largely increased in numbers, and their memberships very greatly revived. I thank God for a Christian religion that will spread. I thank Him for a religion that is contagious: so much so, that our neighbors can catch it from us, and that in catching it, they will be helped by it and help others that they come in contact with. After having closed these two great meetings just referred to, we came to Shannon and began the warfare against sin here; and as a consequence we closed last night (Sept. 3), after a two weeks' battle, with the entire town revived and a number of sinners saved. Some of the most consecrated Christians here say that we had a hundred or more conversions in the Church, besides those in the ranks of the open sinners of the town. The churches were in a terribly backslidden condition, but thank God they are now so revived that they can talk religion in the Church and out of it now, and also they have established prayer altars. When we arrived on this charge the first of the year, we realized the deplorable condition that existed and we began at once to pray for and lay plans for a great revival, and in a few months we had organized the Sunday schools and missionary societies and had other plans on foot for a great battle against sin and the existing evils, and God in his goodness and mercy heard our prayers and has wonderfully blessed us and saved many sinners from their sins and reclaimed many backsliders. All the glory and praise are our Lord's for these blessings, but we are greatly indebted to Evangelist J. H. Bell, of our Conference, for his faithful and valuable work among us in all these meetings. Bell is indeed an evangelist with a message. He is one of the most humble and sweet-spirited fellows I was ever with. He does not in any way compromise with sin, and oh, how much we are in need of men who will stand up for the right, whether it pleases the officers in the church or not! We need more such bold preachers as Bell, and if the pulpits were filled with such consecrated men the Church today would not be in such a backslidden condition. Then, too, the preacher who declares the whole truth would not have such a hard time as he goes here and there. I am glad to recommend Brother Bell to the preachers, and I want to say if you will open your pulpits to him and co-operate with him you will have a revival, not only in your churches, but in your own hearts. When the preachers and church members get "pure religion," the revival fires will spread so far and wide that all the sinners will be drawn to it and so constrained that they, too, will glorify our Father in heaven. Brother Bass with his good wife, of Corinth, Miss., did the singing for us during the meeting, and I want to say that he did it well, and I am glad to recommend him as a good and consecrated singer. Pray for us.—W. V. Shearer, P. C.

THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, AT COLDWATER, MISS.

This attractive structure has just been converted into a brick-veneered building at a cost of about $8000, the present value of the building being more than $11,000. It has ten well-arranged Sunday school classrooms, a ladies' parlor and a pastor's study, and is heated by steam. The pastor of this enterprising congregation is Rev. H. G. Roberts.

is closely connected with your nerves, so close in fact that anything which effects your nerves must necessarily effect your heart and vice versa.

If you are troubled with palpitation, dizziness, shortness of breath, swelling of ankles, pain on either side of the chest, or weak and irregular pulse, symtoms of a nervous breakdown, the best way to remedy the trouble is by giving your heart and nerves the proper tonic. Renovine for the heart and nerves is the best tonic for soothing and restoring a shattered nervous system. For sale by all reliable dealers, 50c and $1.00. Manufactured by The Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

Worth $1,000,000.

If you were about to die and heard of some remedy that would restore you to health, you would gladly give all you possess to obtain it. For only 25c you may secure a box of Gray's Ointment which may be the means of preventing your death from blood poison. It is from little neglected sores, cuts, bruises, burns, etc., that fatal blood poisoning often starts. Gray's Ointment, if applied as soon as the affection is contracted, will allay pain and heal the wound, thus preventing any serious after-effects. Successfully used in thousands of homes for nearly a century. Most druggists sell it. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE.

The great need of the Church to-day is a revival of Home Religion. This is fundamental. As is the home, so is the community and the Church. This is conceded by all those who are in the forefront as leaders in Christian endeavor. Prominent ministers and laymen all over our country are ready to co-operate in some plan that will bring about a change of conditions in the home life of the Church. The conviction of this need became so pronounced a few years ago in the hearts of a few men keenly interested in the welfare of the Church that the Family Altar League was organized. The growth of the movement since has been nothing less than wonderful. God has set his seal of approval upon the League. During the past seven years 300,000 Covenant Cards have been distributed, over 60,000 homes have affiliated with the movement, and it is estimated that more than 250,000 lives have been influenced for good. A monthly magazine has been published containing daily readings with comments and helpful suggestions for the home life. Cards and literature may be obtained without cost. Dr. Biederwolf, the founder, is raising an endowment fund of $100,000, of which $40,000 has been subscribed.

The League has grown so rapidly that the Directors decided recently to open larger headquarters and engage a General Secretary. Since he took charge of the work plans have been adopted for a country-wide campaign. The most important work of the Secretary is addressing churches and conventions and conducting conferences. He will be glad to assist pastors in introducing the movement in their churches. The following well-known men are among the directors: Dr. John Timothy Stone, Dr. Francis E. Clark, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, Bishop Charles B. Mitchell, Marion Lawrance, J. Campbell White, Henry P. Crowell, Dr. James M. Grey, Judge McKenzie Cleland, and E. O. Excell.

For information and literature address the General Secretary, Rev. R. Howard Taylor, Family Altar League, 508 Lakeside Building, Chicago, Illinois.

Heed the Warning If You Have a Cough!

The deep-seated cough that does not yield to ordinary treatment may lead to distressing pulmonary troubles. Or it may bring on a chronic bronchial affection. Many persons now incapacitated might have avoided such disastrous results by timely care and efficient medical treatment.

Among the latter Eckman's Alterative has an enviable record. It is a time-bearing preparation which is easily assimilated in most instances. Where used in connection with nourishing food and proper living, it has given widespread relief.

Its freedom from poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any nature whatsoever renders it safe to try. And its content of calcium gives it tonic value. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

REVIVAL NOTES FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

The summer months have been busy times for our preachers serving country charges. It is the most convenient time for holding revivals; and the preachers, in order to accommodate the membership, endeavor to crowd all their meetings into the few weeks between laying-by and harvest times. So, revival fires have been burning all-over the district during the past three months.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge at Vaughan's has held all his meetings, ably assisted by Revs. J. F. Campbell, B. F. Jones, J. R. Foreman, and A. S. Oliver. The Holy Spirit honored the efforts of pastor and helpers and 12 were added to the Church on profession of faith.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson, at Camden, reports three meetings held, conducting one himself, and having been assisted in the other two by Revs. M. M. Black and J. C. Ellis. Six accessions and the work in good shape are the results.

Rev. H. M. Johnson was assisted at Millsaps Memorial in a meeting by Rev. W. H. Lewis that was well attended and accomplished great good.

Rev. M. W. Porter, on the Harrisville charge, which consists of six churches, has held all his meetings, resulting in about 40 conversions and reclamations, and 23 accessions. He was assisted in these meetings by Revs. T. J. O'Neil, T. H. King, H. P. Lewis, Jr., J. M. Smith, A. J. Davis, and W. S. Harper.

Rev. G. P. McKeown has held his meeting at Edwards, assisted by Rev. L. L. Roberts, which did good, and brought one member into the Church.

Our pastor at Benton, Rev. J. F. Campbell, reports all his meetings held, in which he was ably assisted by Revs. R. P. Fikes, R. E. Rutledge, and J. S. Duke, and which brought twenty-one into the Church.

Rev. J. C. Ellis, at Florence, has held five meetings on his charge, which have brought 20 members into the Church. He had to assist him in these meetings Revs. I. L. Peebles, T. J. Norsworthy, H. C. Norsworthy, and J. C. Ellis, Jr.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, on the Eden charge of seven churches, has held five meetings, received eight into the Church and built a new church as a result of one of the revivals. Many of the members have been quickened into new life and activities in church work. He was assisted by Revs. C. A. Shultz, A. J. Davis, R. H. Kleiser, and B. L. Sutherland.

The pastor at Madison, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., reports three meetings held, and nine added on profession, a prayer meeting started, and a new Epworth League organized. He was assisted by Revs. J. G. Byrd, H. T. Carley, and B. W. Lewis.

These nine pastoral charges report 31 meetings held and 100 additions on profession.

CLEVELAND CAMP MEETING.

The Cleveland Holiness Camp Meeting closed on August 13, 1916. Many difficulties confronted us to hinder the meeting. Our preacher got sick, and we had a hard time getting some one to begin the services. Rev. E. R. Smoot, the Methodist pastor at Cleveland, kindly consented to preach for us until we could find a man. He preached sermons that were truly great. We think that he is one of the finest preachers in the North Mississippi Conference. Rev. L. D. Farmer, of Houston, preached for us during the last week, both in the morning and in the evening. He is a Nazarene preacher, and does not fail to declare the whole plan of salvation. He preaches the doctrine of sanctification as a second work of grace in a forceful and convincing manner. He also sings and prays with power. Rev. Homer Jenkins led the singing. He also preached in the afternoons. He sings and preaches in the spirit. A number of other workers were present, among whom were Rev. E. M. Shaw, the pastor, who, with his testimonies and earnest prayers, added much to the meeting; Rev. C. C. Beevers, from New Mexico, comes a thousand miles every year to attend this camp, and indeed we feel like he is the father of it. The visible results were not as great as on many former occasions, but God's word is true and lives forever; therefore, we are sure that fruit will be gathered into life eternal from the meeting.

Mrs. S. C. TAYLOR.

FROM THE SARDIS DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am enclosing you my fourth round. I have been moving also. It was a big job in August. We have bought an elegant district parsonage in Sardis. It is a large story-and-half building with ten rooms, a large hall, and has the modern conveniences. There are three and a half acres of land around the house and it has a servant's house, a barn, an orchard, etc. It is situated within a block and a half of Main Street and is in the business part of town.

The work of the district is in fine shape, notwithstanding the fact that the boll weevil is here in full force. Every preacher in the district is hard at work. Mounger at Charleston and Wendel at Como are in the midst of fine meetings. The country revivals have been good and are now about over. The Sunday school work is beginning to take on new life. The finances are in good shape for this time of the year. A few charges are right up to date with their assessments.

My wife, who has been in the Cragmont Hospital, near Asheville, N. C., for about eighteen months, will be home in a few days greatly benefited. She has gained twenty pounds while there, being that much heavier than her normal weight.

I am glad to tell you that John Park and W. D. Wendel are getting stronger all the time and that they are going and working like Trojans. Miss Leonese Park married this evening, Sept. 7, in the Methodist Church here. Brother Park performed the ceremony. The wedding was very beautiful.

Brother James Porter carried his son to the hospital on Saturday to be operated on for appendicitis.

The knowledge of God's greatness is of infinite blessing and help to those who believe in him. The greatness of God is at your command if you have faith. "One man with the truth of God in his heart, and a deep consciousness of union with God, is a majority. Such men have been victorious when persecution was rampant, and their cause has been successful when a light-hearted jest would quench the flame of truth in a burst of inextinguishable laughter. Only sin and unspiritualness hinder joy, and so disparage religion, and keep the young and joyous from embracing it.—R. Allen.

YOU WOULDN'T BE SUFFERING

Special emphasis will be given Questions 12, 13, 14 and 15. Pastors will see to it that all proper data is in hand. Stewards and others will please see that the obligations of the church are met. These are all meager compared to our ability and our blessings. We ought to be heartily ashamed to fall down on any part of our finances for the Lord's cause.

THE CHAUTAUQUA HOME MISSIONS INSTITUTE.

The sixth annual Home Missions Institute, under the auspices of the Council of Women for Home Missions, was held at Chautauqua, N. Y., from August 12 to 18.

The Council of Women for Home Missions, whose president is Mrs. George W. Coleman of Boston, represents eighteen constituent, corresponding and consulting boards and ten affiliated mission study schools. The purpose of the Council is to establish a medium through which National Women's Boards and Societies may cooperate in wider plans and more effective work for the homeland. The motto is, "Our Country—God's Country."

A general committee of three—Mrs. F. W. Wilcox of New York, Congregational; Mrs. H. L. Hill, New York, Methodist; Mrs. George H. Swift, Philadelphia, Baptist planned the work of the Institute and co-operated with a local committee of which Miss M. C. Patterson, Pennsylvania, United Presbyterian, was chairman. Mrs. F. W. Wilcox presided at all the sessions.

A feature which received special emphasis was that of advertising well the program each day. This work of publicity was in charge of Mrs. George H. Swift. The Editor of the "Chautauqua Daily" expressed his appreciation of the co-operation of the Council in submitting reports following immediately upon each session and in the pre-announcement a week earlier of the Institute to be.

In spite of the fact that the Mission Study Class dealing with the text book, "All Sorts in New America," was obliged to meet at eight o'clock each morning, because no better arrangement could be made by the Chautauqua management, the attendance was large. Mrs. D. E. Wells, Presbyterian, of Chicago, who needed no introduction to Chautauqua circles, was the lecturer and the emphasis which attended upon the need of presenting a living Christ to the people of South America, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico and our great Southwest was most convincing. At the same hour each morning, Mrs. J. H. Bruce of Cleveland, of the Reformed Church of America, taught a large class of children in the "Everyday Workers," from the same book, "The Children of the Light-House." At the critical every afternoon Mrs. Bruce and the editor of Missions among Juniors met and held a conference on methods.

All of the speakers and lecturers who were announced for the Institute were able to fill their engagements. Addresses Monday were brought by Miss K. L. Hill, a delegate to the Panama Conference. Miss Olive Ogden, Connecticut, a missionary from San Juan, New Mexico; Mrs. A. B. Howell, Baptist, a missionary of Chinese Child; Rev. W. S. Wood, of the Chinese Church, a missionary of Porto Rico; Alberto Vargas, a Spaniard, a former Roman priest, Rev. J. A. Penick, Baptist, of Los Angeles, who knows thoroughly the United States.

On Tuesday afternoon a Missionary Symposium was presented and those who participated were Miss Schwartzkopf, Indiana-Utah, Missionary to the Hopi Indians; Miss Ellen M. Stone, Congregational, of the Bulgarian of Dunmore, Pa.; Dr. McClellan Swallow, of Porto Rico; Miss Olsen, Congregational, New Mexico; Miss Howell, Baptist, China. The helpful meeting was closed with prayer offered by Mrs. May Leonard Woodruff, Methodist, a vice president of the Council.

Dr. Shailer Mathews conducted helpful Bible study classes each morning, which were well attended by the members of the Institute, and on Sunday morning at the regular weekly service of the College Women's Club, Mrs. George H. Swift was invited to give the address, choosing the subject, "After College—What?"

The total registration was 1560. Many States, as well as the Dominion of Canada, were represented.

Signed: JULIA DEAN SWIFT,
Chairman Publicity Com.
Philadelphia.

A MESSAGE FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SUPPLIES OF THE MISS. CONFERENCE.

We are well into the third quarter of 1916; and very little has been accomplished in the "Supply Department"—at least few reports have come to your Conference Superintendent. I am sure some have sent boxes of donations who have failed to report to me.

This department of missionary work is of greater importance than many of us stop to consider. There are many needs we might supply and much joy and comfort give to God's unfortunate and suffering ones, by just a little thoughtfulness and generosity on our part. Then have we thought that the joy and happiness of this work is twofold, equaling to the giver as well as the receiver. It has been said that the best cure for a sick or dying auxiliary is to get it busy packing a box to be sent out. At this season most auxiliaries are either a "little sick" or dormant—suppose we test the remedy! A "linen shower" for our Island and Meridian Wesley Houses would be most acceptable at this time. Both are greatly in need of household linens (bed and table), curtains, scarfs, etc. A special appeal has come from Biloxi for good second-hand clothing, shoes, etc., for women and children. In cases of poverty these are given away, but where the people can pay, a small charge is made. The Deaconesses are very careful in distribution.

Let every auxiliary—adult, young people and junior—feel the pressure. It is very blessed to give than to receive. Be sending as soon as possible a box or barrel of good things to one or the other of our Wesley Houses. Then, as soon as you get your box off, be sure to send a report of the same by mail, giving a list of contents, the estimated value of the whole and where sent, remembering all charges must be prepaid by the auxiliary sending.

A recent letter from the Meridian Wesley House says: "We can always use to advantage good second-hand clothing. Our special needs just at this time are said turnpike shades, bible covers, cradle blankets for the nursery, and supplies for the sewing class such as thread, remnants of calico, gingham, domestic, etc."

Let us keep our boxes and barrels moving—mail them from time to time and, though it is late, let's make 1916 the best year in our history. Please let me hear from you often.

Sincerely yours for service,
MRS. J. K. DUNN,
Sup. of Supplies.

NERVOUS DISEASES

We have reprinted from a leading Health Magazine a series of articles by Dr. Biggs treating on Nervous Debility, Melancholia, Sexual Neurasthenia, Nervous Dyspepsia, and other nervous diseases. The articles explain the cause of these ailments and fully describe the treatment employed at the Biggs Sanitarium in such cases. A copy of the pamphlet will be sent FREE to any address on request.

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and do more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—MRS. MARGARET GRASSMAN, 739 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and dyspepsia when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—MRS. GEORGE A. DENNIS, 11 Dumaty St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—MRS. E. KISSLING, 32 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

From the Field

New Albany Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just closed a very fine meeting at Union Hill, in which the preaching was done by Rev. L. W. Cain. Brother Caln is a man who knows God and who preaches with great power. Things are moving on nicely up this way. My third quarterly conference was indeed a great occasion.—C. A. Northington.

High Point, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just been with Rev. E. D. Simpson, of the High Point charge, in a great meeting. There were 45 additions to the Church. It seemed to us that the old-time power had returned. Brother E. D. Simpson stands well with his people, and will round out a good year, with perhaps 100 persons brought into the Church.—J. D. Simpson.

Kosciusko Circuit, N. Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed the last of our revivals on this work, and I am able to report the best spiritual meetings I have ever been in. We have added only 18 to the Church so far, but the spiritual uplift of the members has been even above our expectations. Surely the Lord was with us at every place and we could really sing "the old-time religion." We feel that we have been strengthened along all lines.

I am pressing the claims of the Advocate before my people, and to some extent I am succeeding in my efforts, having, with the enclosed list, sent in 24 subscriptions within the last two months. I am very anxious for my people to keep informed on the great questions that now confront Southern Methodism. C. A. PARKS, P. C.

Burnsville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you give a layman space in your valuable paper to report our revival meeting at the Bethel Church on the Iuka Circuit? It was one of the most refreshing, helpful revivals that we have had in several years. Rev. J. R. Murff, of Gattman, Miss., did the preaching. Brother Murff is a strong gospel preacher and possesses great spiritual force. He held his congregations and they became steadily larger. To know Brother Murff is to love him. Prof. W. O. Bone led the singing. Brother Bone is a fine singer and a man full of the love of God. He did a lot of good in the meeting. He sings with the spirit and the understanding. God met with us at each service and blessed us. There were 7 conversions, backsliders were reclaimed, and the spiritual interests of the Church were built up. Brother W. I. White, our pastor, is loved by all his people. The meeting closed Thursday night with 15 or 20 penitents at the altar. There were three additions to the Church on profession of faith. Our prayers will continue to follow Brother Murff and our beloved pastor, Brother White, in their work. —A Layman.

Lapine, La. (Brooklyn Ct.)

Dear Brother Meek: We closed a very successful revival at Lapine on the Brooklyn Circuit on Friday night, Sept. 1. Brother Bamburg did the preaching. The congregations were large. The one purpose in every Christian's heart was to save the lost. Everyhody, saint and sinner, small and great, got interested. We took 24 persons into the church; some of them were old folks and some were children, hut most of them were young men and young women. The entire membership was revived and also many members of other churches. Many said it was the greatest revival held here in many years. Brother Bamburg is a good man and a good preacher. The people all liked him. He is an efficient revivalist. His sermons are practical and full of the spirit of Christ, and they got hold of the people. Strong men who were fixed in the ways of sin yielded to the power of the Gospel he preached. We have one more revial meeting to hold. We have taken 53 into the Church this year. The charge is being built up in every way. Some improvements have been made on church buildings and also in the Sunday schools —Dennis Fordham, P. C.

Cedar Bluff, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: One of the greatest revivals that the Cedar Bluff (Miss.) people have ever known came to a close on Tuesday, August 29, after having continued for ten days, with three services daily. Great spiritual power was manifest from the heginning. The Church was wonderfully quickened, and 35 persons gave their names for membership on profession of faith, 29 of these coming into the Methodist Church. Others will likely follow. I was assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., who did the preaching. Miss Elizabeth White, of West Point, Miss., presided at the organ. Brother Bass's work both strengthens Methodism and helps the pastor. He reaches all classes with the same key, the everlasting Gospel, attended with power. He elevates the preacher in charge in the esteem of his people and leaves them loving, praising, and "pounding" him. The times before the meeting were "hard times and worse a-coming." Now it is peace and plenty everywhere. I did not know there were so much meat and money in this town, and that my people loved me so well. May the Lord bless every one of them! Miss White was a great help in the services and endeared herself to all the people. I have only one other meeting to hold on my work, which is in fine shape. I am expecting to make a full report at Conference in spite of the boll weevil. God bless the Advocate!—W. A. Bowlin, P. C.

Greenwood Springs Charge, N. Miss.

We have finished holding our meetings for this year—six in all. The first meeting was at Friendship and it was a good one in many respects. There was a good attendance, good interest, good preaching, and a good revival. Nine united with the Church on profession of faith. This is a fine showing in view of the fact that it rained nearly every day. Brother Rex Murff assisted me at this place, doing all the preaching except one sermon. Murff is a good and earnest preacher, being fearless in the denouncing of sin.....We began at New Hope on the fourth Sunday. We found Brother N. N. Maxie, of Myrtle, on hand to aid us. He worked faithfully during our stay here. As a result of this meeting, 5 were added to the Church. Maxie is a fine, modest, young man, a man of promise..... At four other points, Splunge, Pleasant Grove, Greenwood Springs, and Soule's Chapel, I had Brother S. G. Bass, of Corinth, to assist me, with his son, S. P. Bass, to direct the music. It goes without saying that both the preaching and singing were of a high order and great good was accomplished, the extent of which perhaps eternity alone will reveal. We had 8 additions to the Church in these meetings. Brother Bass is earnest, faithful, and fearless in his preaching, and looks well after the interests of the Church and pastor. We commend these brethren to any who want good work and congenial helpers. Mrs. S. P. Bass joined us one day before their departure to another field of labor. We were sorry to give her up so soon, or that she did not come earlier. Upon the whole, this has been a good year with us. God has been good and gracious to us, and I serve as good a people as can be found anywhere.—Thos. E. Yancey, P. C.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test of all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In some cases it is worse than foolish to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc. often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT NOTES.

Bishop Murrah's visit to Hattiesburg was an occasion of great pleasure. He preached two sermons of unusual ability. The congregations that heard the Bishop were immense, and all were delighted with his sermons. He was the guest of Rev. C. W. Crisler and Rev. T. W. Adams.

The Sunday School Institute of the Hattiesburg District was held at Main Street Church on August 29 and 30. About 120 earnest Sunday school workers were in attendance. The meeting was full of work and enthusiasm. Great good will come from it. We were fortunate in having such a team of workers with us. The meeting next year will be held at Hattiesburg.

Our presiding elder has been unfortunate of late. The storm of July 5 and the rains that followed practically destroyed his crops, and a Gulf and Ship Island train ran down and killed two of his fancy cows. Too bad! The writer has an infallible preventive of such losses. He has neither crops nor cows. He that hath not can never lose.

Another itinerant baby has joined our district ranks. On the first day of this month a baby boy raised a cry of distress in the parsonage at Richton. Congratulations to Brother and Sister Alsworth! The writer "marrified" them on March 3, 1915; hence he has a very lively and tender interest in the baby.

Rev. W. E. Harrison has been released from the Seminary charge at his own request. Rev. J. H. Jolly, late of the Candler School of Theology, has been appointed to succeed him. No better appointment could have been made.

The appointment of Rev. W. B. Alsworth to the Richton charge to succeed Brother Burton, who was released because of ill health, was a most fortunate one. He will fill the bill. He is a fine preacher, and a hustling worker. He will bring things to pass there. He and the people are already in love with one another.

Hattiesburg is not greatly excited over the "unification" business. We are determinedly "agin" the Saratoga plan. There is no heart-panting for the Oklahoma plan. The most of us feel that we had better "leave well enough alone." Some of us wonder if the "unification" exegetes of the "intercessory prayer" of our Lord are sincere. Exegesis of that type is exceedingly dangerous. We are proud of the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He is a polemical gladiator of the first rank. Some of us are following him with delight. We say, "Amen!"

The son of the pastor of the Court Street Church, together with his wife, spent a few days in July with his parents and preached twice to his father's congregation. He came through the country from Flora, Miss., in his Ford car. His father called his attention to the contrast between the present and the past conditions. The father walked his first circuit, and hired a pony, bridle and sadle, for $25, with which to serve his second work. Why, how times have changed! Good for the boys! T. W. A.

VOCATION DAY IN EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Vocation Day for the Sunday schools of our Church has been fixed for Sunday, September 24, and the lesson in our Sunday school literature for that date is devoted to that subject. It is hoped that the day will be effectively observed throughout our Methodism. Would not this be an appropriate time for our pastors to preach the annual sermon on the ministry called for by the Discipline? The Department of Ministerial Supply and Training will send free to all who write for them a package of helpful pamphlets on the subject by some of our prominent preachers. Will the brethren also send to our office in Atlanta the names of all candidates for the ministry, so that we may put into their hands some helpful suggestions about the great work to which they are called?

R. H. BENNETT, Secretary,
Department Ministerial Supply and Training.

GOD'S CONSTANT CARE.

In the midst of the multiplicity of "common," and yet absolutely necessary blessings for body and mind, as well as spirit, one is pretty liable to lose sight of the fact that he should be constantly grateful to the Almighty for them. A University of Chicago professor recently said, "If an earthquake should occur in Chicago, with a vibration of only one-fourth of an inch, the result would be the destruction of every building in the city."

M. E. CHURCH VS. CHURCH, SOUTH

is continually passed, although we have written constitutions, and the legislative bodies all have presiding officers and judiciary committees. In fact, to properly understand written constitutions for the government of large territory and varied interests requres a high order of legal and judicial ability; and among the lawyers to become a great constitutional lawyer is about the highest ambition. So, men specially fitted for legislation are rarely fitted to pass upon such legislation.

Therefore, the statement that "all constitutional matters are well safeguarded in the Northern Church" is contrary to all reason and experience. The Southern Church should never consent to any union that does not vest the supreme judicial power in a body separate, distinct and independent of the General Conference. In fact, our National and State governments, furnish the safest guide on which a union may be had. If we could unite on the same basis, following out the same principles so far as we could, we would then have a safe, permanent and strong union.

Editorial

"Then, O my soul, since God doth love thee,
Faint not, droop not, do not fear;
For though his Heaven is high above thee,
He himself is ever near."

We are much more concerned about the purity of the membership of the Church and the soundness of its teaching than we are concerning its mere numerical strength.

Christ is all-sufficient. He is all-wise, all-powerful, all-loving. One whose destiny is rightly linked with His need not be apprehensive as to anything that the future may bring, either in time or in eternity.

Build up the prayer meeting, and it will help to build up everything else. And the way to make this mid-week service attractive is to see that the Bible is kept to the front in it, and that it is deeply spiritual from start to finish.

Every day sets before us opportunities that will never return—opportunities for self-improvement, for doing good to others, for extending the Kingdom of our Lord; and he is wisest who makes the most of them. The present-doer is the man who achieves the largest results in life. The person who forms the habit of procrastination is on the sure road to failure.

"Where is the blessedness I knew when first I saw the Lord?" Most suggestive are these words of the sacred poet. They describe a very common experience, but one which ought not to exist. The joy which comes to the new disciple in the moment of conversion ought to grow deeper, richer, and fuller with the passing years. The early Christians made much of the peace and joy that came into the soul along with the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and so ought we. If these fruits of the Spirit are not ours, we need a new vision of Christ and a nearer approach to him by penitence and faith. Let us not dare to be content without the restoration of these needful blessings.

Miss Francis A. Keller has lately had the MacMillan Company to bring out for her a striking and informing volume, entitled "Straight America," in which she asks, "What is the matter with America? and gives in response the answer, "Most of the people are not Americans. So, if we were asked, What is the matter with Southern Methodism, we should be somewhat inclined to say, There are too many in our pulpits and in other places of responsibility who are not really Southern Methodists. We have long had at work in our Church a spirit of disaffected independentism that has been eating out its very heart; and if we are to save it from disintegration, it is high time that we were beginning to correct this condition of affairs. A denomination cannot exist and prosper without the loyal support of those charged with its work of administration.

PREACHING.

John Wesley had scant patience with any of his preachers who did not seek to develop the preaching gift. To this end he was constantly exhorting them to read, study, and make earnest preparation for their pulpit work. In this day when there are so many things to engage a pastor's attention he needs to guard himself doubly at this point. Many other duties are important, but none are sufficiently so to justify him in facing his congregation on the Sabbath with no fitting message to deliver.

We sometimes hear it said that we are not growing preachers of the highest order in this day, and the facts seem rather to sustain this view. The failure to do so is probably due to a number of causes. Knowledge alone does not make one an effective pulpit man. He must have profound convictions, a strong faith, a heart aflame with divine love, and a burning passion to rescue and strengthen perishing and needy human souls. It is when the desire to save men and build them up in Christ possesses and dominates one that one speaks with kindling and life-giving power. Hence, the man who would be a preacher such as God wants and the world needs must be deeply spiritual as well as diligently studious. A lack at either of these points must necessarily make him largely ineffeient.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

A few days ago we wrote to one of the most distinguished ministers in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, asking him if he could tell us where we could secure some literature bearing on the movement to unite his denomination with the Northern Presbyterians. In our communication we ventured to suggest to him, in the event of union between the Northern and Southern Methodists largely on the Saratoga basis, the possibility that not a few of the latter might feel disposed to seek a Church home with his people. We did not, however, mention at all the question of tactics; so what our brother had to say on that subject was purely voluntary upon his part. The following is the principal portion of his letter—we have deemed it best, for very obvious reasons, not to make public our distinguished correspondent's name:

"Replying to your favor of August 26, I beg to say that you have my most hearty sympathy, as seemingly you have to pass through an experience at least similar to that which I passed through a few years ago in connection with the fad of organic union. Unfortunately, I have preserved none of the literature used at that time, nor can I tell you where you can obtain it. I can give you a few of the things that will show you the tactics that were used, however, as I have a very clear recollection of them:

"1. The unionists organized secretly * * * and went among the people urging that organic union meant LARGER THINGS. They argued that the U. S. A. people had come to our position both doctrinally and in polity. (Both statements were incorrect.)

"2. When they came in contact with those opposed to the proposed merger, they would say, 'Oh, well, be quiet; don't agitate the question. We are simply putting it up to the U. S. A.'s. They will doubtless turn the proposition down, and that will give us a great advantage in the South.'

"3. When Presbyteries came to vote, they advised their friends: 'Vote, of course, if you are sure you can win, but if doubtful plead for a delay of the vote.'

"4. No political propaganda ever sought to take advantage, or did take advantage, of antagonists more than the unionists took advantage of those in our Church who were opposed to the merger.

"Many former Cumberland Presbyterians went to the Methodist Church, South, rather than into the Northern Presbyterian Church, and should they return to their first love and bring with them some of their Southern Methodist friends, including some of their godly preachers and pastors, I am certain that they would receive a warm welcome. Yours for service,

THEIR BEST OPPORTUNITIES NOT NEW.

Some persons talk as if the laymen in the Churches had had no opportunity to do anything until recently. This is a complete misconception as to the facts. Wide open doors of service have always stood invitingly before the laity, both men and women, and ministers have ever been most anxious for them to enter them and achieve something of consequence for our glorious Lord. They have had in every age a chance to win souls, to visit strangers and the sick and impress them for good, to minister to the poor and needy, to look in on those in prison and hearten them with messages concerning Christ, to go to the prayer meeting and make it warm and inspirational, to become mighty in prayer and faith and the unfailing upholders of their pastor's hands. Were not these lay activities quite as valuable as those that have lately come into vogue in the shape of various official gatherings, conducting formal religious services in the place of preachers, having banquets, etc.? We rather think so. These new doings may be well enough; but let us see that they do not supplant the old. It is much easier to make a showing in the various forms of officialism than it is in the genuinely spiritual work that a living faith and earnest, agonizing prayer alone can accomplish. None but the branch that steadily abides in the true Vine can bring forth this latter fruit.

Beware of the loose threads in your character. Like the loose threads in a garment, they may soon lead to rents that are irremediable? Live faithfully up to your highest conceptions of right if you would safeguard yourself from regrettable lapses in conduct.

"IT WAS IN THINE HEART."

By W. B. Turner.

Lines suggested by an address of a sermon preached by Rev. W. B. Lampe, in Murfreesboro, Ark., from the text, "Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name thou didst well in that it was in thine heart."

I sing the purpose unfulfilled
The youthful dream not realized,
Of glory, greatness, art most skilled;
Of worth to man idealized.
And yet, O soul, fresh courage take,
This truly will hold of self a part:
Thy rosy visions growing did make
"Thou didst well; 'twas in thine heart."

Thou mayest not climb the heights desired,
Nor do great deeds of high emprise;
But others, by thy vision fired,
May lift thy banner to the skies.
Lost to the world's free tones sublime
Ring over field and busy mart:
"Not failure, but low aim is crime"—
"Thou didst well; 'twas in thine heart."

Thou mayest not the temple build
Whose beauty shall entrance the race;
But someone, with thy purpose filled,
May do God's work and take thy place.
So comfort take; 'twas not in vain,
Although the swelling tear-drops start;
Thy high ambitions shall remain—
"Thou didst well; 'twas in thine heart."

God looks at motives and ideals;
Thy strength may fall short of thy task;
But He the earnest soul reveals.
And thou from Him that boon may ask.
Yet, if thou ughtest the good fight,
Nor laggest not thy courage hence depart,
Victor of vanquished, thou art right—
"Thou didst well; 'twas in thine heart."

—Christian Guardian.

"YE THAT LOVE THE LORD, HATE EVIL."

The measure of our love to God is our hatred of evil. This is clearly intimated in the Ninety-seventh Psalm, where the Psalmist says, "Ye that love the Lord, hate evil." Measured by this standard, how much do you love God? Do you hate evil with a perfect hatred that seeks to drive it from your own heart and to help others to wage successful warfare against it? Test your love to God by measuring your hatred of evil.—Christian Observer.

IF WE START RIGHT.

They failed to drive out their enemies. I believe the reason so many Christians have such a stormy passage, and the Christian life is not what they expected it to be when they became Christians, is that they don't drive out every foe and every enemy. In other words, they are not more than half converted, they don't get control of their temper, the god of pleasure seems to have a grip upon them, and lust and covetousness and selfishness come in, and they do not get victory. Nine-tenths of the battle is won, it seems to me, if we start right.—D. L. Moody.

ABOVE ENVY.

We were re-reading the other day the letter of Charles Darwin to Alfred Russel Wallace when he received Wallace's book on "Natural Selections." He wrote concerning the preface: "There never has been passed on me, or indeed on anyone, a higher eulogium than yours. I wish that I fully deserved it. I hope it is a satisfaction to you to reflect—and very few things in my life have been more satisfactory to me—that we have never felt any jealousy toward each other. I believe that I can say this of myself with truth, and I am absolutely sure that it is true of you." Not all scientists are thus modest, and not all theologians even rejoice in each other's success, and yet we hold that envy is naturally a vice of small souls, and the man who is jealous of another's success has something to unlearn before he attains the dignity of truest and highest manhood.

NO NEED FOR ANNUAL CONFERENCE ACTION.

I dislike to differ with so good a friend as Dr. Butler. He is right, it is many times, but I think he is wrong in this question, which is simple, one of duty, and easily settled. I beg to submit the plan in full to the end of Bishop Candler.

I shall not try to refute all the fallacies of Brother Butler's article. Suffice it to say that the Methodist Church has divided time and time again, and the Southern Methodist Church was divided, overcomed, in two of those divisions, and in no single instance did those divisions go to the Annual Conferences for a constitutional amendment. I will come back and investigate and see whether I am correct.

In 1844 the General Conference of the undivided Church "set off to the British Conference of Wesleyan Methodists several circuits and societies in lower Canada." This did not go to the Annual Conferences for their approval. The Supreme Court of the United States makes mention of this case.

In 1848 the General Conference separated the Annual Conference of Upper Canada from this jurisdiction and erected the same into a distinct and independent Church. This was not sent to the Annual Conferences. The Supreme Court of the United States makes mention of this case.

In 1867 the Church was again divided by General Conference action. The Northern Methodist Church took exactly the position taken by Brother Battle, and the Supreme Court of the United States overruled its contentions. It is surprising to see such an ardent Southerner as my good friend is suddenly affirming and rehearsing the old discounted doctrine of the Northern Church which has already been passed on by the highest tribunal in our land.

But the Southern Methodist Church has divided twice and in neither case were the divisions subject to the vote of the Annual Conferences. The Southern Church and the Northern Church formed a union in the Empire of Japan, and that union was never passed on by the Annual Conferences.

In 1876 Bishop McTyeire was a leading figure. Here is what the General Conference there did: "Resolved, first, that the action of the last General Conference in reference to an ultimate organization of the colored people of the M. E. Church, South, into a separate Church is complete, and therefore no additional legislation is necessary to the end intended." Whose action was complete? The action of the last General Conference. No additional legislation, such as the constitutional reference or further General Conference action, was deemed necessary.

In their address in 1878 the Bishops say: "Conformably to the wish of the last General Conference, we have organized and presided over five Annual Conferences, composed exclusively of colored members. It is our purpose, unless otherwise advised by your body, to call a General Conference next winter for the purpose of organizing them into an entirely separate church."

The Japanese Church was severed from the M. E. Church, South, and united in holy wedlock to the Methodist Episcopal Church in Japan, and this was done by General Conference action alone. The Bishops in their address at Birmingham say: "There is no more significant event in the history of our missionary operations than the adoption, on the fifteenth of March, in Baltimore, of a basis of union for the two Episcopal Methodisms of Japan, drawn up by commissioners authorized by the General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." Who authorized this union? Did the Conferences pass upon it? What was the matter with Brother Battle?

If he wishes to further pursue the subject, I would suggest that he read the historical statement in the Discipline of the Methodist Church of Japan; he will be much enlightened. Says the Discipline: "In the course of time a general conference grew up that the Church of God would be [illegible] the union of the Methodist Churches in Japan. While this fact was explained to the [illegible] American several of their General Conferences approved the suggestion and appointed commissioners to consider the matter and effect union if practicable. As the result the Commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Church in Canada, at their first session, on July 17, 1907, in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., unanimously agreed on a plan of the union of the ministers and members of these three denominations in the Empire of Japan in the Nippon Methodist Kyodan. In accordance with this agreement a General Conference was convened in Tokyo, Japan, on Wednesday, May 11, 1907, composed of delegates presented by the four Annual Conferences of the three united Churches in Japan, and the Nippon Methodist Kyodan was formally organized in accordance with the plan heretofore approved, and under the advice and with the approval of the authorized Commissioners of the three American Churches."

Shall we change all of our precedents in order that a specific constitution may control three-fourths of the Church as regards the matter of union?

J. W. MOORE.

Chattanooga, Tenn.

BROTHER J. W. MOORE AGAIN.

In this issue of the Advocate appears an article by Rev. J. W. Moore in which he vainly maintains the impossible position he assumed some time ago, that the General Conference alone can divide the Church, and that the General Conferences are now competent to "unite" the Churches without submitting the question to the Annual Conferences. It is hard to believe that Brother Moore is really in earnest in his position, and that he is not trying to perpetrate a little "pull" at will upon the Church. He reminds one of Bishop's Comet, which appeared a few years ago to illuminate the skies for a night or two and then mysteriously retire. It may be possible for such a luminary as Brother Moore to lead a train of General Conferences into trying to effect a union with another Church, thereby substituting an [illegible] for the one it now has, but since the General Conference has been so careful to submit even little matters of a constitutional nature to the Annual Conferences—like the change of name and lay representation—there is a fair hope, at least that it will not attempt to reorganize the whole Church by doing away with its present laws and substituting new ones therefor without action of Conference. [illegible] it of course the General Conference could make such an attempt. All Brother Moore's article does that would seem much to be [illegible]. Great must be the work of [illegible] for he imagines in the [illegible] of his paper that it takes much courage to make the [illegible] defense of Bishop Hoss when we [illegible] Brother Moore has attacked him, and I pity all of the Bishops, for all of them combined, must be reduced to a great extremity indeed to be set upon by such a pigmy as Brother Moore, who has even assumed to advise General Conferences how to act. But with all this, I am still inclined to believe that the General Conference would be slow about the assumption of authority which the Church has never dreamed of delegating to it.

Strange as it may seem, in the issues of the Church press after Brother Moore's startling plan of General Conference amalgamation appeared several seriously joined the issue with him. One of these was no less a person than Bishop Hoss, who gave him this kindly advice in love: "Think the matter over again, Brother James, in your cooler moments. And also give a little closer attention to your doctrine that the General Conference can decree union without asking anybody's consent. Are you certain of yourself on that point?" Possibly, I may be in error. I have been a Methodist preacher for only fifty years and would, therefore, speak with becoming modesty; but in my humble judgment any effort on the part of the General Conference to do what you suggest would raise a storm in the Church the like of which has never been heard." Another voice of protest against Brother Moore's scheme was that of Dr. J. E. Harrison, a veteran of many General Conferences, who said: 'Brother Moore is a close reasoner, but he delivered a non sequitur when he wrote the rhetorical sentence, 'Surely the power that separated can unite,' because it was the General Conference of the M. E. Church that passed the Plan of Separation, and the Plan of Unification must be adopted by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which has a proviso on the subject of constitutionality.'

But my good friend Brother Moore, in his present article, cites his readers to five incidents in the history of Methodism which he terms "divisions" of the Church, and which he assumes to be precedents for General Conference action alone in the matter of unification (though he seems to favor amalgamation). He rightly designates the bisection of the Church in 1841 a "division," and it has been so regarded by our Church authorities ever since it occurred. It is recognized that the General Conference of the former Methodist Church in virtually dismissing one of the Bishops from the episcopacy assumed supreme executive, legislative and judicial authority; and, after this, consented to the division of the Church without submitting the matter to the Church at large, but leaving final action dependent upon the vote of the Southern Conferences. So the Supreme Court had two arguments to hold that the division was constitutional: one was that the General Conference had consented to the division after the assumption of supreme authority, and the other was that the Conferences of the South, or the side of the Church which formed another organization, voted for the division as the General Conference had stipulated. This incident cannot furnish a precedent for the Southern General Conference alone to unite the Church with another body, because it has constitutional restrictions backed up by the veto power of the Bishops; and because the division of 1844 was acted upon by the Southern Conferences, thereby setting a different precedent to be observed in such matters. Further, to say that "the power that separated can unite," as Brother Moore remarked in a previous article, will not hold true in all instances. The Southern General Conference has not assumed, and could not assume, the same power as that claimed by the General Conference of the former Church, for much authority is denied this body. When the States ceded certain rights to the Federal Government, these States could not assume these rights again. When a person is married he cedes certain personal rights and liberties to another and never again can they be rightfully retracted. The old saying is true: "Once a Mason, always a Mason." Our General Conference would scarcely attempt the impossible.

Let us notice the four other incidents of Church history which Brother Moore calls "divisions." In 1820 a comparatively few Methodists in Canada were given over, at their own expressed will and vote, to the British Wesleyan Methodists. In 1828 a few Conferences in Canada, at their demand, were set up into an autonomy of their own. In 1870 the Southern General Conference, at the request of the Negro element of the Church, arranged for the Negroes a separate organization. In 1906 the Southern General Conference, by the request and vote of the Church's constituency in Japan, freed them from any connection with the Church, and these people then united themselves with other Methodists in that country and formed the Methodist Church of Japan.

In each of these four instances—all of them being relatively quite small—Brother Moore designates the action as a "division." Maybe when he visits a tonsorial parlor and has his hair clipped off a little, he terms the operation a "division" of his physical body. When he pares his nails perhaps he thinks he has "divided" himself. It would be impossible to submit to the Conferences every modification of the Church's "far-flung battle line." Even the Board of Missions has much power in the work of the Church; for the Discipline states it "shall have charge of all the foreign missions of the Church," it can "establish missions," and certainly it may discontinue missionary operations, taking care not to interfere with General Conference power to alter Annual Conference boundaries, which the General Conference, however, is expressly empowered to do.

But these four incidents in Church history cited by Brother Moore to prove his contention that the General Conference alone can consummate unification, so far as our Church is concerned, militate against his views in most evident fashion. In every instance the people affected by the action of the General Conference either requested or demanded that such action be taken. The General Conference in none of these cases assumed to act upon its own prerogative. Now, let Brother Moore assume that the General Conference, for some reason of its own, took a notion to set off the Holston Conference, of which he is an honored and loved member, into an autonomy of its own, or to just turn it loose to drift until it found some other mooring. It may be suspected that Brother Moore's voice would be heard loud and long in protest, ringing up and down the Church; and it may be suspected that the other Conferences would come to his rescue and insist upon the General Conference rescinding its unwise action. No precedent, therefore, can be found in these incidents for General Conference action alone in the matter of unification. In 1811 the General Conference, though it did assume undue authority in limiting the episcopacy, and though it did consent to the division of the Church without submitting the matter to the whole Church, must be given credit for making the question of division to hinge upon the action of the Southern Conferences, which were greatly affected in that serious time. Unification, as every one knows, will affect every Conference within the bounds of the two great Churches considering the problem. This evil can never be brought to pass in Southern Methodism without an expression from the Annual Conferences, if the constitution of the Church and past precedents are the guiding lights.

Further, it should be noticed that Brother Moore is not in harmony in this view of General Conference power with other leaders in the Church who have extreme "union" views. The distinguished editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate may be taken as a fair example; for Dr. Ivey maintains that, "while the question of unification is to be considered by a joint commission, the findings of that commission will not be final, but will have to be accepted or rejected by the General Conference, and, if accepted, will have to be ratified by three-fourths of all the members of the Annual Conferences. The question should be decided first by the commissions, then by the General Conference, and then ratified by the Annual Conferences. The matter will not be unduly hastened."

It merely remains to be said that I believe Brother Moore has taken an unfortunate stand upon this question.

DAVID AS A GOOD SAMARITAN.

The parable of the Good Samaritan has been the theme of many sermons and songs, and the basis of many good deeds.

Many incidents of the Old Testament are quite touching, and valuable for their lessons, teaching charity, and the results flowing therefrom.

In the thirtieth chapter of First Samuel we have the account of the sacking of Ziklag by the Amalekites. While the Israelites and Philistines were engaged in war, and David and his men were hiding from the armies of Saul, and had for the time being abandoned their temporary base, Ziklag, the Amalekites saw their opportunity and sent out a raiding party of perhaps 3000 men and overran parts of the Philistine and Israelitish country, and had taken vast spoils of cattle, capturing the inhabitants, and in their drunken frenzy had burned Ziklag with fire; then, beating a retreat, they brought the spoils safe. However, in their retreat they had met a sick man, thinking his life of no value, and left him mercilessly to die by the roadside.

When David and his men returned from the burning of Ziklag, they had heard the report, and when they beheld the desolation, with all their flocks gone, their wives and little ones taken captive, they "wept until they could weep no more." In their extremity David called for the priest and the ephod. He enquired of the Lord whether he should go up after the Amalekites to recover, if possible, their wives and little ones and the spoils. God returned answer that he should go up after them, for the promise was that he should surely recover all. However, it seemed a desperate undertaking—600 men against thousands.

The line of march was taken up to the south east, toward the land of Amalek. On their way down they came upon the sick man left by the Amalekites. Should they pass on by, considering that they were engaged in a very important campaign? What was a poor dying man by the roadside in comparison to their effort to recover their the spoils.

But David stopped his army, gave relief to the man, found out that he was an Egyptian, and had been servant to one of the Amalekite captains, and knew all their plans and he thus furnished the key to the successful campaign of David. The Egyptian not only gave David the plans of the Amalekites, but acted as guide to bring them down to where they were encamped. The camp was surrounded, the Amalekites slain except four hundred, who escaped on camels, and all the people taken captive were recovered, as was also all the spoils.

The merciful act of David in stopping his army to relieve a poor, destitute man, however, was the most significant fact in the plan of Divine Providence to give David victory. God knew the benevolent heart of David, and chose that method to bring him unto his loved ones.

So as we go forth from day to day solving our problems, enquiring of the Lord for guidance, let us not give a deaf ear to charity appeals, for some day we may pick up an Egyptian, as David did, who will lead us into the right paths of success.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand, for thou knowest not not whether shall prosper either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

Baton Rouge, La. H. S JOHNS.

FOR CHRISTIAN CO-OPERATION, BUT NOT ORGANIC UNION.

Mr. Editor: The ablest of our ministers are writing strongly upon the question of organic Church union. While I do not expect to advance new ideas, I do feel that I want to add my indorsement of the opposition. I do not mean that I am opposed to Christian fraternity. I favor that in all Christian effort, but if we as the Church, South, should cease to exist as we have since 1844, I think we would do less good. Our growth has been great and we are now in condition to grow more rapidly than ever. Let us have commissioners appointed from both North and South composed of our wisest and safest men on both sides. Let every question relating to the best interests of the Churches be acted upon by them in a joint meeting. After their decision, it must be acted upon by the General Conferences, and that decides it permanently. There are some things that exist now that should not, as, for instance, having altar erected against altar. This hinders the progress of both Churches and is not spending the Lord's money wisely. I think this should be corrected and any other thing that would hinder instead of help. Let the M. E. Church South, retain its name and its control. If it should not, in my judgment, it would be seriously hurt.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE OPENS.

We are indebted to the Memphis Commercial-Appeal for the following account of the opening of Millsaps College.

"The twenty-fifth annual session of Millsaps College was opened today, September 12, with a promising list of matriculates and with everything pointing to a prosperous term. The recent death of Maj. R. W. Millsaps, founder of the College, was a topic of comment during the formal opening exercises, and it was as though the very spirit of the beloved philanthropist was present among those who are left to carry on the upbuilding of Millsaps College to a greater and more notable career.

"The opening exercises were held in the College chapel beginning with the singing of "America" by the entire assembly. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District and the invocation was offered by Rev. W. A. Borum, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

"An address of welcome was delivered by President A. F. Watkins, who in general terms extended the right hand of fellowship and confidence to the students, old and new. President Watkins' address was followed by a few well-chosen words of greeting by Judge Edward Mayes, dean of the Millsaps Law School, addressed particularly to the law students, which were supplemented by words in a similar vein from former Chief Justice A. H. Whitfield of the Supreme Court, associate lecturer.

"Other speakers were Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Vice-President of the Faculty, and Frederick Sullens, editor of the Jackson News, and the several pastors of city churches, the latter drawing the attention of the young men before them to the gospel opportunities within their reach.

"It was stated that the registration of students will not be completed for several days, but the indications are that it will be far ahead of that for last year, which was excellent."

GOOD BEGINNING AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

The sixty-third session of Grenada College opened this morning, September 12, under very auspicious and promising circumstances. The attendance was larger than it has been for the past three years, and the prospects are brighter for a successful year's work than they have been at any previous time in the history of the present administration.

During the past summer the College buildings have been completely renovated, and when the session was formally opened this morning at 9 o'clock everything was in readiness for the reception of the students and the beginning of the academic work.

Rev. R. W. Evans, pastor of the Methodist Church at Gunnison, Miss., conducted the devotional exercises, after which Miss Williams, of the piano department, rendered a piano solo and Miss Carden sang "A Birthday." Prof. A. B. Campbell, superintendent of the Grenada public schools; Rev. R. A. Tucker, pastor of the Grenada Methodist Church, and Rev. T. G. Freeman, each made a short talk.

President Countiss then introduced the new members of the faculty and made the necessary announcements preliminary to the organization of the academic work. Probably the most important announcement was that the College curriculum had been enlarged and broadened by the addition of the department of education and the science department. Students who take nine hours in education during their college careers will thereby become exempt from further tests for teaching in the public schools of this State.

J. R. Countiss, President, Psychology and Education; Misses Corinne Laney, Latin; Minnie Moss, Mathematics; Nettie Tillett, English; Helen Caldwell, Modern Languages; Lillian Ferrell, History; Minna T. Grote, Science; Elizabeth Duncan and Bernice Williams, Piano; Mary S. Carden, Voice; Janie Cubbin, Art; Mamie Boykin, Expression; Elizabeth Cooper, Domestic Science; Phronie Stone, Secretary to the President. Preparatory Department: Misses Etta Mae Jones, Latin; Etta Turner, English; Mamie Boykin, Mathematics.—Commercial Appeal.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

The grounds of historic Whitworth are again thronging with students and re-enforcements are arriving on every train. The return of the college girls is more than welcome to College neighbors and their presence on the campus is as refreshing as an oasis in the desert. The college session began yesterday and the remainder of the week will be spent in classification and examinations. The formal opening will take place next Monday at 11 o'clock, to which the public is invited. The opening sermons will be preached in the Auditorium Sunday, Rev. W. H. Morgan of the Baptist Church occupying the pulpit in the morning and Rev. W. E. Hill of the Presbyterian Church in the evening.—Lincoln County Times, Sept. 14.

WANSFIELD COLLEGE.

We take the following from a press dispatch to the New Orleans Times-Picayune: "The sixty-third session of Mansfield Female College opened yesterday, September 14, with 150 in the boarding department and a good attendance locally. This opening was one of the best that the College has had in years, and President Boothe predicts that the patronage will be the largest the institution has had for some time."

SUNDRY THINGS.

Dear Dr. Meek: When you look forward to a long vacation in the mountains, expecting to bask amid flowers, trout, lakes, streams, and rugged peaks, and find instead that you are forced to spend the greater part of the time allotted to your outing in bed, putting up with doctors and nurses, eating pills and powders, and living on a diet of water and orangeade, then, Mr. Editor, you will learn the irony of fate.

The doctors and nurses were kind and all that one could wish, but the indoor life with bottles and specks, with the inspection of the tongue and with blood taken from the lobe of the ear for microscopic tests are not to my liking, when one might be on the mountain-top. It is a long lane that has no turning, however, and so after four weeks I found myself on the way to the mountains as afore planned.

Lake Junaluska—the Mecca of Southern Methodists—is beautiful for situation, and more and more should the summer begins tend that way. It is amid the mountains of North Carolina, near Asheville, and some 2500 feet above the sea level. There are within a radius of fifty miles forty peaks which are over 6000 feet high, and no less than eighty peaks over 5000 feet high. The result, though not "a joy of the whole earth," should be a joy to Southern Methodists. One could hardly imagine a place naturally more beautiful. The grandeur of altitude is seen amid the Rockies or Alps and the cascades of melting snow are absent, but not missed. The little lake, some six miles in circumference, is beautiful beyond compare and the whole is a gem not often found.

Bristol, Tenn., and Wytheville, Va., were both visited and much enjoyed. One is treated to a strange experience in the former. The State line is in the center of the car track of the Main Street, and passengers on opposite sides of the car are traveling in different States. Wytheville is a surprise and quite a beautiful place. The churches are all brick and the pastors live in substantial, handsome houses, graceful and inviting. I had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Hillis on John Rush; while I tarried in this attractive place.

My return home was timed so that I should be at the opening of "Old Centenary." Having been pastor at Jackson, La., my interest in the College is not of late growth, and, being this year housed beneath its roof, I am in a position to speak with knowledge. The fact that Centenary is not a large college should not dampen our zeal or turn our attention elsewhere when we have money to invest or boys to educate. The large school and college appeal to us, but the boy gets no more from such a seat of learning than he absorbs. A great library or a small one benefits the boy only as he uses it. A book from a small library is just as helpful as from a large one. Education is contact with a superior mind. In a large college recitation is seldom, and frequently only once a week, or less frequently in very large schools, while association with the teacher is impossible under the conditions existing. Here at Centenary association with, and confidence and advice with the faculty can be had by any boy as much as he may wish. Example and high ideals mold character, but only when the teacher has an opportunity to know the boy and win his confidence can he lead him to see the real vision of life. May not this last fact explain why a large portion of the men who have made history and advanced civilization have come from small colleges?

The opening of Centenary was most pleasing, and the outlook is more favorable than it has been for some years past. The faculty is composed of competent men, capable of directing the boys, and they are gentlemen of Christian character and force. Addresses were made at the opening by Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., Rev. R. W. Tucker, Dr. G. S. Sexton, Dr. R. H. Wynn, and the writer. The building and grounds have been much improved since the last session and everything promises well for the future.

CHURCH NEWS.

It is stated that Bishop Waterhouse expects to transfer his residence from Los Angeles, Calif., to Emory, Va., this fall.

Sir Charles C. Wakefield, the present Lord Mayor of London, England, is a member of the British Wesleyan Church. He has recently declined to stand for re-election, though strong pressure was brought upon him to do so.

Bishop J. C. Hiles is one of the most active workers and forceful personalities in Southern Methodism. He has lately been doing some very fine writing for the Southern Methodist press. Such wholesome utterances as he has been giving out cannot fail to do great good.

Miss Belle Bennett, President of the Woman's Missionary Council of the M. E. Church, South, and Miss Mabel Head, one of the Foreign Secretaries of the Board of Missions, sailed for the Orient on August 17. They will be gone for several months and will study missionary conditions in the Far East.

The Presbyterian Journal says: "A Virginia court has decided that the agreement entered into by a man and woman before a Roman Catholic priest that their children should be baptized and educated in the Roman Church was an illegal agreement, being in violation of the Constitution of Virginia and that of the United States."

The Camp Meeting at Ocean Grove, N. J., had Billy Sunday as its principal preacher this season. There are stated to have been more than 2000 conversions. Commenting upon this happy outcome, the Eastern Methodist says: "The Ocean Grove Association has seen a great light. The wisdom shown in the program of this year proves this without doubt. Do it some more, brethren. You are on the right trail? We wonder if there are not some other camp meetings that would be helped if they were conducted by a man of real and well known revival power."

Dr. Parkhurst, the Editor of Zion's Herald, and Dr. Bradfield, the Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, are debating the question as to whether Methodism should aspire to be a World Church, or a National Church. According to our reading of ecclesiastical history, neither National nor World Churches have made such a record as specially to commend it. It seems to us, however, that in desiring to place the Negro in a separate denomination (in which we think he was right) while pleading for a National Church, Dr. Bradfield in reality surrenders his case. Is not the Negro a part of the American Nation? And if he is, and the Doctor wants a truly National Church, how can he logically ask to have him left out of it?

SOUTHERN METHODISM AND ORGANIC UNION.

Rev. John L. Williams, A. M.

I have been intensely interested in the wonderful history of our Southern Methodism, and of late rather amazed at the conclusions reached by some of the brethren who are anticipating the organic union or the reorganization of American Methodism in so short a time. In fact, some of the brethren have figured it out so exactly and so definitely that it will be just a matter of a few weeks, or months at most, when we shall have only one grand Methodism in America. I am reminded of the Ancient days: "When all the lightning bugs men in convention and recorded their protest agaist the 'sun,' one of the most influential bugs of the 'convention' arose and, addressing the chair, said: 'My fellow lightning bugs, we are being menaced and hindered in our glorious shining during the day by the bright and illustrious sun, and we could all accomplish so much more in illuminating the world if the face of old Sol was eliminated'—(and all the other bugs clapped their hands and turned on their little lights in great applause). When, lo! old Sol appeared on the scene and every bug covered its face from the piercing light of the Majestic Sun."

Let us learn a lesson from the lightning bug convention: Let us face the facts before us. Be calm—be not too hasty. It is a matter of too great importance to be settled in one or two years. It is a momentous question. There are subsidiary issues and questions which must be settled before we can consider the "main issue." It is a time for great prayer and judicious thinking. It practically means the giving up of every tradition for which the Southern Church has stood, and there is involved in it the traditions of our native Southland. At this time, when we are liable to swing too far in our feelings and impulses, I, for one, feel like breathing the earnest prayer of "Bobbie Burns" who, in his Cotter's Saturday night, prays for Scotland:

"O Scotia, my dear, my native soil,
For whom my earnest wish to heaven is sent,
Long may thy hardy sons of justice toil,
Be blessed with health and peace and sweet content.
And oh! may heaven their simple lives prevent
From luxury's contagion, weak and vile;
A virtuous populace may rise the while,
And stand a wall of fire around our much loved Isle."

For seventy-two years Southern Methodism has gone forward from a weakened and poverty-stricken condition until to-day our great Church has emerged from devastation and ruin to be a wealthy Church, which in every age has proved faithful to her Lord's Commission. We have had federation for years and it has proven a failure, so far as the compact between the two Churches is concerned. Much of my own ministry has been on the border line, and I have watched and worked with the hope that the two Methodisms might understand and work in harmony with each other. But I must say that it has been in every case, so far as I know, the absorption of the Southern Church or elimination of it. It is true, our brethren across the border are Methodists, but then there are some things for which the Southern Church stands, which if properly understood are of such significance that the Southern Church must CONTINUE TO HOLD AND TO DEFEND THEM, if we are to be faithful to our people of the South. On the other hand, there are things for which the Northern Church stands which would make it impossible for them to do their work should they lay them aside, which things, in spite of any talk of union, the large majority of the Church beyond the border will never consent to. Let us remember that in the South we have a common ancestry, a common faith, common customs, common joys and common sorrows which bind us together as they are also bound in the North. The South will ever remain solid. Our country is filling to overflowing with people of various races, diverse tongues, and conflicting traditions. The late General Conference of the Northern Church at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., rejected every proposal which our General Conference at Oklahoma City, Okla., offered, and in lieu thereof they propose a reorganization of American Methodism on an altogether different basis, and a basis which, if accepted, will destroy constitutional Methodism.

Was Joshua Soule, who wrote our Constitution, wrong? Was our sainted Capers wrong? Was our beloved Keener wrong? Have all the fathers who have lived before us, contending for the traditions of the South, been wrong? Nay, verily. Their heroism refreshes our courage and stimulates our desires and increases our love for our great Church. Some great institution must ever remain intact to keep before our minds and memories that the South is the home of God's immutable truth. Where, if not in our great Church, were the fathers in the early days of our great Republic preaching on every hilltop and in every vale a constitutional Methodism? Let no man discredit the work of these faithful old veterans of the Cross who walked by faith and not by sight, making their lives in vain. Men such as I have mentioned above never went forth as a futile libation. Like the perfume which Mary poured upon the head of her Lord, the fragrance of their sacrifices and service penetrates even to the center of our beloved Methodism, quickening fainting spirits unto new life, and inspiring our beloved Church to a new endeavor. When we turn as a great Church indifferently away from a sacred devotion to the traditions and principles of Southern Methodism we will learn the degrading lesson, that not to have and hold to sound convictions is at best a blunder.

Again, God has honored our Church and we have made marvelous progress in recent years. No Church in America has made such rapid progress as the Southern Methodist Church. In fact, God has honored all American Methodism, but as respects geographical extent, the spread of Southern Methodism is most marvelous. The spread of Christianity itself has been wonderful. The first two centuries were remarkable, but then men were blessed with plenary inspiration for a greater period; then miracles were wrought and wonders were performed, the Christian religion springing up in Judea, Samaria, and Galilee. Churches were raised at Antioch, in the beautiful Isle of Cypress, in the neighboring provinces of Pamphylia and Pisidia, Lyconia, Galatia, and Phrygia, and, in fact, throughout Asia Minor. Berea, Philippi, Thessalonica, Athens, Corinth, and all other cities in Greece, were visited with the light of truth. Christianity then spread through a large portion of all other parts of the Roman Empire and marched as far as Lyons in France. The Roman Empire embraced the whole of the places above mentioned. It extended three thousand miles in length and two thousand miles in breadth, and comprised the most fertile and best cultivated parts of the known world. It was limited by the Atlantic on the west, the Rhine and Danube on the north, the Euphrates on the east, and the desert of Arabia and Africa on the south. This was a vast area, but, when compared with the territory over which Southern Methodism has spread itself within the last fifty years, ours is a more remarkable showing and is indeed a magnificent tribute to the spirit and genius of our great Church.

If Southern Methodism does not exist in Palestine, Asia Minor, Arabia, Greece, or Egypt, it exists in the southern half of North America, in South America, in Cuba and the islands of the Sea. It is well established in China and other oriental countries. It has, besides its great membership in the South, a vast multitude of adherents in other sections and lands. It has diffused its blessings from the great American Capital at Washington, D. C., to Los Angeles, California—from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"See how great a flame aspires,
Kindled by a spark of grace;
Jesus' love the Nation fires,
Sets the Kingdom on a blaze."

Take another period of Church history. The reformation was begun by Luther in the year 1517—this revival of truth in the midst of a corrupted Church established itself in many parts of the German Empire. It was propagated in Sweden by one of Luther's disciples, Olaus Petri. In Denmark it was spread by Martian Reinard and Carlostadt. In France it found a patroness in Marguerite, Queen of Navarre. In Switzerland, John Calvin became famous as one of its great apostles. It made considerable progress in Spain, Bohemia and Poland. In the Netherlands upwards of nearly one hundred thousand were put to death for embracing it. In all the provinces of Italy, more especially in the territories of Venice, Tuscany, and Naples, great numbers of all ranks were led to express an aversion to the Papal yoke. In Spain not a few embraced it and even Charles V himself is presumed to have died a Protestant. In England Henry the Eighth unintentionally helped it on by assuming the chair of church supremacy heretofore occupied by his holiness the Pope, while his only son, King Edward VII, was its brightest ornament and in some respects its most effectual support. In Ireland, George Brown, Archbishop of Dublin, pulled down images, destroyed relics, and purged the churches within his diocese from superstition and their rights; while in Scotland, John Knox, a disciple of John Calvin, launched his thunders against the Vatican, until he shook at its base, and at last Queen Elizabeth by her army put an end to Popery in the entire Caledonian Kingdom. This was a glorious and widespread work with blessed results which will be felt to the end of time. But compare it with the progress of Southern Methodism and say, considering the number of years and the extent of territory, which has made the greater progress. Undoubtedly Southern Methodism has. In the South it has become the dominant and popular faith of the country. With its standards planted in every city, town, and village in the land, shall we take the responsibility of halting its progress by throwing the entire Southland into a religious convulsion? Can we, in the name of our common Lord, afford to lose our identity or be swallowed up or absorbed by a people so unsympathetic? From every section comes the voice of the Old South mingling with the voices of the New South, saying:

"Let the jarring discord sink in night,
Let doubt, dark suspicion take its flight
And never more return.
O, let the Cross be lifted high
While holy fires that never die
On sacred altars burn."

Leesville, La.

Prayer is the key to the storehouse of the Heavenly Father's richest treasures. Why, then, should any one sit poverty-stricken as to spiritual things when the best that God has to give may be had if rightly sought? Alas! the right sort of praying is not an easy exercise. It must have back of it a clean and pure life and lofty and unselfish purposes. People who really know how to pray are distressingly scarce in our churches.

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

What a Church Extension Loan Means

By Bert A. Gibbs

From its very beginning Methodism has been a missionary organization in every sense of the word. Its spirit is that of the whole Church. The spiritual efficiency of its form is shown in numerous and in numerous other forms. Methodist communities can only be kept alive by the spirit of the Church. The Church is a living organism which must grow or die. The Church is a living organism which must grow or die. The Church is a living organism which must grow or die.

The great principle of the policy is that the loans are made in each case. The money and all of it is for the work, and thoroughly permanent can be secured in no more readily. In the mission field the Mother Church is a living organism Methodism in their organization and work.

However, our splendid accommodation of today is the result of growth. Development one new feature after another has been added. Day are we learned to depend the missionary to home and foreign lands. The horse, the saddle circuit rider and tent were every one of our Methodism and be proclaimed the message of salvation wherever the pioneer had pitched his tent or with his log cabin.

In course of time our people grew less nomadic, and with this change the pastoral time has lengthened. It was an honor among our people housed in beautiful and comfortable residences should worship in the open field or under a brush arbor. It was all right for camp-meetings and special occasions, but there must be a permanent and fitting place of worship for the community. If God is to be first in our life, love of neighborhood life, that the people should erect a beautiful temple to Him; a building that should be prominent among all their edifices. The well-to-do communities were able to meet this need as a rule, but the weaker ones were seriously handicapped. Indeed our Church has lost heavily in scores of communities by a lack of parsonages and proper church buildings. The development of our connectionalism simply had not kept pace with the changing conditions of the country.

Church Extension Appears.

In order to meet this great need the General Conference of 1910 formed the Church Extension Board, with headquarters in Louisville, Ky. Rev. David Morton, D.D., was elected the first general secretary, and he laid the foundations of the work with remarkable wisdom and success. Each Conference was directed to organize a similar Board auxiliary to the General Board.

Beginning with nothing, the work of the Board has grown steadily to its present large proportions of nearly $1,000,000 resources and an annual income of nearly $400,000. At the end of the first decade the annual income from assessments had risen from nothing to $67,000.00, while the loan fund capital had grown to $[illegible]. When the second decade closed [illegible] the annual collections amounted to $[illegible]; but the loan fund now totaled $[illegible]. With the close of the third decade (1917) the regular assessment yielded $194,479.47, and the loan fund had increased to $[illegible]. Since then about $[illegible] has been added to the loan fund, making that fund more than three-quarters of a million dollars. The present annual assessment of $[illegible] yields over $[illegible], while the income from other sources swells the total income to nearly double that amount.

How Funds are Applied.

The amounts realized from the regular assessments are divided equally between the General and the local Conference Boards. Thus these auxiliary boards have about $[illegible] a year to meet local needs, while a like amount is used by the General Board for the needs of the Church as a whole. Most of the income from assessments is used as donations to aid worthy congregations to build churches and parsonages. Necessarily donations are confined to weak congregations. Assistance is given wealthier congregations in the form of loans at a low rate of interest, repayable in annual installments.

The work of the Board's aid is [illegible]. The demand [illegible] and to be met. A great [illegible] people [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] more than [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Home Circle

THE KIDNAPED DOLL.

Mrs. George S. Brown.

If there was any one thing June liked above all else it was receiving a letter—one that came with a stamp and postmark on it and directed to her, not enclosed in one of her mother's. It gave her such a grown-up feeling. So she ran in from school one afternoon, her blue eyes dancing, her golden curls flying, for she had met the postman at the gate and he gave her a letter directed to "Miss June Watkins." There it was, a very crumpled, dirty little letter, written in a very shaky, crooked handwriting. But June did not care for that. It was her letter, her very own; so she tore it open with a very important air and began to read.

Her mother, looking up from her sewing, watched her little daughter curiously and wondered as the smile faded from the rosy lips. With a frightened cry, June threw the note down and buried her face in her mother's lap. "Oh, read it, mother," she sobbed. "What can it mean? I can't, I won't; oh, its cruel!"

Mrs. Watkins eagerly reached for the note and was as startled as June at the contents:

Miss June Watkins I'm goner kidnap yer doll, yer big one wid shiney eyes an' veller kurls. Yer can put it under that big tree by yer fer terzite at 8 where I can git it. If yer don't, just look out, fer I'll hook yer white rep shure if yer don't. Now doll or pup, which? Yer can choose. I'd ruther have the doll. THE BLACK-HAND.

Mrs. Watkins was too indignant to speak at first, but she knew she must console the little sobbing child, so she began with all the loving endearments mothers know how to use.

"Hush, my darling," she said. "This is not worth crying about. It is a joke that some one of your little playmates is trying to play."

But June only shook her head sorrowfully. "I can't, mother; I just can't part with Dorothy Dainty. She is my newest, bestest dolly that Santa Claus brought me, and she has real eyebrows and true hair and she is just the darlingest dolly that ever was. It would break my heart and hers too."

"Why, my pet," said her mother; "you shall not part with her at all."

"But, mother," interrupted June crying afresh, "it would be just as bad to lose Snowball, my precious puppy what runs to meet me and jumps in my lap, and stands on his hind legs to beg for my lunch. And, mother, you know how he whines and cries when I go to Kindergarten. He'd cry his very eyes out if he had to leave me for always and he will be napkidded if I don't put my darling dolly out under the tree to-night. Whatever shall I do?"

"My little girl, listen," said Mrs. Watkins. "You shall not give up either of your pets. This is just a mean joke, a trick. But here's father and we will tell him all about it."

Mr. Watkins was also indignant, but he was eager to find out who this kidnaper of dolls and dogs might be; so he persuaded June to take her doll out under the tree at the appointed hour, promising that he would hide near by and seize the thief.

June consented very reluctantly. She put on Dorothy Dainty's cloak and hat declaring that she would catch her death of cold in the night air, and kissed her again and again, clasping her in her arms and saying over and over that she would not leave her for long. "Never mind, my precious, papa will get you away from the napkidders. And you are a brave dolly, for you are saving poor Snowball's life."

At eight o'clock Dorothy Dainty sat demurely under the tree while Mr. Watkins hid in the woodshed ready to pounce on the little scamp who had written his daughter such a letter. He hated practical jokes and fully made up his mind that he would either give the boy a sound thrashing or turn him over to the police. Half past eight came, and Mrs. Watkins was having an awful time keeping June indoors; she tried to read aloud to her to divert her mind, peeping every few minutes to assure her of the doll's safety.

The longer Mr. Watkins was penned in the woodshed the angrier he became and he was just slipping out to pick the doll up and go in the house when he saw a long stick pushed stealthily under the gate and the doll dragged to the fence; then a hand was thrust under and the doll pulled through. There was a scurrying of footsteps as Mr. Watkins threw the gate open and ran after the kidnaper. But instead of a mischievous boy, what was his surprise to see the doll clasped in the arms of a forlorn, ragged little girl. As he laid his hand on her shoulder she crouched at his feet, and as he pulled her forward into the light of the corner street lamp, he recognized the pinched face of little Polly Perkins, a child who often came to the house to get food and clothes from Mrs. Watkins. Her mother had at one time been a servant at the Watkins', but was so shiftless and lazy she was discharged; but Polly had continued coming for she was a quiet, well-behaved little girl.

Mr. Watkins' voice was very sorrowful and his hold on Polly's shoulder was as gentle as if she were his own little daughter as he asked, "Why did you do this, Polly? Did you want to make little June unhappy?"

Polly began to cry pitifully. "Oh, Sir" she said, trying to choke back her sobs, "I didn't mean no harm, I love June. She's good ter me—an' never pokes no fun at me ragged clothes. I ain't wantin' ter steal her doll an' I was a goner take it back. I ain't never stole nothin'; an' I wouldn't er kidnaped her doll fer meself. But sir, you knows I got a little sister at home an' she ain't never seen a doll wid open an' shet eyes. I telled her about June's playhouse an' pianny an' dolls, an' me little sister she said as how she'd be glad ter die if she could jus' see them things fust. She can't walk here an' see 'em and I knowed June won't let me take her doll to me dirty house, so, I says, I'll git that doll some way. I done heard about kidnapers an' I says I'll be one, but I didn't mean no harm. An' yer can send me to jail if yer'll jus' lemme show June's doll to me sister what's waitin' fer it."

Mr. Watkins swallowed a lump in his throat as he said huskily, "No Polly, you are not going to jail, but come back with me and give June her doll and to-morrow I shall buy one for your little sister, one just as big and pretty that she can always keep for herself."

"For true, Mr. Watkins? Yer ain't foolin' me?" cried Polly. For true, Polly," said Mr. Watkins. "Now let us go in and see June."

Great was the surprise of Mrs. Watkins and June as Mr. Watkins came in leading little Polly. When all the explanations were made Mrs. Watkins' eyes filled with tears and June put her arm protectingly around Polly as she said, "Take Dorothy Dainty home with you now Polly, cause your little sister will be looking for her. I know you will be good to her and you can keep her until father brings you one just like it. And Polly, you can borrow Snowball, too, whenever you want him."

The next day Mr. Watkins brought home the twin sister of Dorothy Dainty and many other nice things, and June went with her mother to take them to Polly's house. Polly met them at the door, her eyes red with weeping.

"Oh June," she sobbed, "I'm so glad I kidnaped yer doll an' yer lemme bring her home 'cause ter-day it wouldder been too late. Me little sister is dead, the preacher's here an' he says as how she's gone ter God. She was awaiting for me las' night an' when I come in wid yer doll her eyes got as big as a saucer an' she says, 'Oh, Poll, is thet er doll er a angel? Is it mine an' can I take her to heaven wid me?' An' she jus' laid on the bed wid it in her arms an' went ter sleep thet-a-way an' she ain't never waked up. An' she looks so happy an' smilin' an' ther preacher say she ain't never gone be lonesome no more an' ain't never gone be sick, cos I must cry. Me ma ain't never gone cos' the preacher says as how I must not grieve. An' say, June, you're so good for me to be kind to, for I'll be sorry, cos it made her so happy! But yer can have me doll now, she can't see it no more."

June was crying and hid her face on her mother's shoulder, but Mrs. Watkins put her arms around little Polly and drew her close to her warm heart.

"Never mind, Polly," she said gently, "you did not mean to do wrong and we know it was not to please yourself but your little sister whom you loved, and so, though it wasn't the right way to do, we freely forgive you. And, Polly, I shall not let you go to the orphans' home but shall take you home with me to run little errands for me and wait on the table and be June's little playmate. Would you like that?"

Polly was too happy to speak when she heard Mrs. Watkins' loving speech. She did not know how to thank her nor to express the joy that filled her lonely little heart; a sob in her throat choked back the words, but she threw both arms around Mrs. Watkins' neck and clung to her so closely Mrs. Watkins perfectly understood what it was she wished to say. And June danced around them, happily crying, "And I'll can play with all my toys. And mother we won't ever let her be lonesome for her little sister, will we?"

New Orleans, La.

"HE IS FAITHFUL THAT PROMISED."

Every promise of Scripture is a writing of God, which may be pleaded before Him with this reasonable request: "Do as Thou hast said." The Creator will not cheat His creature who depends upon His truth; and, far more, the heavenly Father will not break His Word to His own child. "Remember the word unto Thy servant, on which Thou hast caused me to hope." is most prevailing pleading. It is a double argument: It is Thy Word, wilt Thou not keep it? Why hast Thou spoken of it if Thou wilt not make it good? Thou hast caused me to hope in it: wilt Thou disappoint the hope which Thou hast Thyself begotten in me?—C. H. Spurgeon.

Editorial

TWO BUGLE BLASTS FROM THE NORTH.

Some time since when we ventured to suggest as one of the probable segments of the world and of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church (by which we mean a form of union that would not leave our Church with a different measure of autonomy to protect herself if necessary) that the boundaries of higher ecclesiastical might be opened upon us to a much larger extent than heretofore, some of the extreme unionists in the North showed a disposition to make issue at us and accuse us of misrepresentation. Since then we have not had an opportunity to take the matter up and go more fully into it, as it has been our purpose to do; nor is the space yet at our disposal to enter this task. But in the Western Methodist (Philadelphia) of September 14 there appear two statements from distinguished Northern Methodist ministers which bear so pertinently on this question that we deem them well worth quoting. The first is from Rev. George A. Cooke, of the Williamson Conference, who says:

"Our editors do not stand for nor defend the Christian faith as it is understood by Methodists. Our editors maintain a cowardly silence on the subject of higher criticism of the Bible. This so-called higher criticism is the most gigantic undertaking of the age, and it is anti-Christian through and through. If our editors are not in favor of it, they are called to attack it. In either case it is a betrayal of Christ."

The other statement is by Dr. L. W. Marshall, the widely known evangelist and author, who is one of the editors of the Eastern Methodist. Writing on the subject of "Methodist Unification," he says:

"I am familiar with the causes that divided the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1845. I think I know why we have remained separated seventy-one years. I have traveled extensively, and conducted evangelistic meetings in nearly all the large cities and important towns of the South, being thereby brought into contact with our brethren of the Church, South, in home, social, and church life. Because of this I presume to know some things concerning the problems of unification. They are many and complex.

"I am sure the great majority of the ministers and members of the Southern Church desire unification, provided it can be brought about without compromising principles, interests and the work of God. There are questions involved that need to be calmly and prayerfully considered; that may not be wisely and satisfactorily settled in a great mass meeting, with the stage set for startling effects. I would not be misunderstood. No man in Methodism, North or South, is any more enthusiastically in favor of Methodist unification than I, provided it is brought about wisely and well. Unification is apparently so desirable that persons unfamiliar with all the matters involved—and most of our people belong to this class—are indignantly restless because of delay. If we fail to get together, the chief reason is one but few have thought of—it is this: Our brethren in the South are more loyal to the Bible as the Word of God and the doctrines and usages of Methodism than we of the Northern Church. They are not ignorant of the fact that the colleges and theological seminaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church have largely taken up with the rationalistic critical views of the Bible promulgated by the Graf-Wellhausen school of higher criticism and that this false and soul-destroying theological teaching is in the course of study prescribed for ordinations in our ministry, and unconsciously in evidence in our Sunday school literature. The most exact and permanent estimate of these views is Dr. Lyman Abbott, who was more highly honored by the several Conferences at Saratoga Springs than any other man. He was the principal speaker at the anniversary of the Sunday School Society of which Dr. Elmer Black is corresponding secretary. Dr. Black introduces himself to the program of this meeting. He knows full well what are Dr. Abbott's views of the Bible and Methodist doctrine and purposely put him on the program, because he himself is very much in sympathy with Dr. Abbott's anti-Methodist and anti-Biblical views. Table quit.

"Till the conservative Church South unite with the liberal Church North much larger and more influential. This is the question that outweighs any other. It is all others and may prevent a union that otherwise appears to be certain in the near future."

REMARKABLE FINANCIERS.

The following from the Northwestern Christian Advocate is so well expressed and so apposite to the times that we take pleasure in passing it on:

"A Methodist minister's income is some higher today than a decade ago, but the dignity served the rise in prices and if his own salary is painful to observe. Yet he is not vociferously complaining, he threatens no strike, he withholds no slightest service. His greatest concern is in the origin of his gifts. He is serious in the community rather than the financial income. If his people fail to observe the need of more suitably adjusting the seemingly trivial but really serious discrepancy, he does not cry out. He has inherited from a ministerial ancestry the art of existing on little. He knows how to deny himself that his members often consider real needs. He sets up a little school of finance within his household, and each member thereof becomes a past master in the art of using money. A minister's salary is like one of those gasoline engines in the heart of an automobile—it drives the machine a maximum distance on a minimum amount of fuel. A Morgan or a Rockefeller could take lessons in finance from more than one Methodist preacher."

A NOBLE ARM OF SERVICE.

Do not overlook the informing statement concerning our Church Extension work which appears on another page in this number of the Advocate. This arm of service has certainly demonstrated the wisdom of its establishment and its work for the upbuilding of Southern Methodism constitutes one of the most eloquent chapters in the history of our Church. And never was this great agency so potent and efficient as it is at present. It has at its head in the person of Dr. W. F. McMurry a man of great personal force and extraordinary business capacity, whose whole heart is in the task committed to his hands and who does not spare himself in seeking to execute it. Without a retinue of Secretaries, he has achieved results that are nothing short of phenomenal, and he has kept the activities under his direction thoroughly loyal to the Church that they were set in motion to serve. We have every reason to be proud of our Church Extension work and the masterful leader who has been commissioned to shape its policies and blaze the way in carrying it forward. Let us all lend him a helping hand toward the realization of his splendid ideals for the future.

BROTHER HOLMES' COMMUNICATION.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate a statement made to the Methodists of Louisiana by Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, the Conference Lay Leader, which we hope will be given a general and careful reading. Brother Holmes is a most capable worker and the suggestions which he makes are the result of painstaking deliberation. The question of financing our churches is a most important matter and certainly deserves thoughtful attention. The value of system has come to be almost universally recognized in the business world in which it has wrought wonders, and the surprising thing is that so many of our congregations hesitate largely to adopt it. It is high time they were doing better in this respect. Persons desiring a sample budget system, eliminating the utility of a congregation and saving subscriptions to cover it, would do well to write Brother Holmes, enclosing a stamp for reply.

This is our suggestion. His document we feel sure is quite as well calculated to help any congregations in Mississippi as it is those in Louisiana, for which it is specifically designed.

REMEMBERED HIS NATIVE COUNTRY.

Mr. Constantine Metallis, a native of Greece and a member of the Greek Catholic Church, recently died at Brookhaven, Miss. He left an estate valued at $50,000 to schools in Macedonia with the exception of $7000, which went to relatives. Mr. J. W. McGrath, a leading citizen of Brookhaven, and Dr. J. W. Cooper who enjoys the full confidence of the entire community in which he lives, were named as executors of the will of the deceased, which read:

"There is probably not a country on earth where freedmen have such privileges and opportunities as they have in the United States. This is indeed a land of refuge for the oppressed and needy of all nations and races. May it within reasonable limits, forever so remain."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., is assisting Rev. N. B. Parmer in a meeting at Magnolia, Miss., this week.

The official paper for the Mississippi Centennial Exposition at Gulfport will be made by the Mississippi paper mill at Moss Point.

Rev. H. B. Perrin, of Collins, La., says: "We expect to wind up the year here in fine shape." We like the ring of this statement.

By a vote of 76 to 31 the Western Virginia Conference declared against making Conference and district lay leaders ex-officio members of the Annual Conference.

The date for the opening of the Palmer Creek Camp Meeting, in the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, has been changed to Friday evening, August 25.

After an absence in Tennessee, where he met public engagements, Dr. S. H. Werlein occupied his pulpit at First Church last Sunday, giving his congregations impressive messages.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, the energetic and faithful presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is planning for an aggressive fall campaign. He believes in reenforcing his pastors in their labors in the various charges in his "diocese."

The Epworth Era is keeping up to a good standard these days, and the League works seems to be taking on new life throughout the connection. This must be highly gratifying to Dr. F. S. Parker, the General League Secretary of our Church.

Rev. C. A. Battle's able reply to Dr. J. W. Moore's criticism of Bishop Candler, which we published, has also appeared in the Texas Christian Advocate. Brother Battle is fast taking rank in the Church as a writer of fluency and force.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Como, Miss., states that he is looking forward to a great rounding out of the year's work in that delightful charge. We are happy to know that Brother Wendel has been growing stronger physically within recent weeks.

After an enjoyable vacation, Dr. George S. Sexton is again at home in Shreveport, La. He is serving with great acceptability our First Church congregation in that city, which is perhaps the strongest Methodist flock in this section of the South.

At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. P. M. Byrd, at Basin, Miss., Miss Kate Byrd and Mr. A. B. Goff were united in marriage on Sept. 2, 1916, Rev. J. L. Carter officiating. May Heaven's choicest blessings rest upon this union of these happy hearts!

Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Warlick, of Bogalusa, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss., Frances, to Dr. James Hinton, of Macon, Ga., on September 12, 1916. The Advocate extends congratulations to the happy couple and wishes them much happiness.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, of Monticello, Miss., has our thanks for a club of trial subscriptions. Of his charge, he says: "My work on the Pleasant Grove charge is moving along nicely. I am winding up my third year, and I think it will be the best of the three."

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the pastor, began a revival meeting at Indianola, Miss., last Sunday. He expects Evangelist J. A. Bowen to come to his assistance next Saturday. We trust that the labors of these brethren will be crowned with a large measure of success.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the accomplished pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, has recently assisted Rev. J. A. McCormack in a successful revival meeting at Franklinton, La. Brother Harper states that his visit to that growing town was a most enjoyable one.

Rev. W. W. Hopper, of Mayersville, Miss., sends us several subscriptions, for which he has our thanks, and appends in his business letter the following note: "We have just closed a fine meeting at Fitler, Miss., and the church is being finished and furnished by the good women of the community."

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., recently assisted Rev. J. H. Ingram in a series of revival services at Doddsville, Miss., which were quite helpful spiritually to the people of that community. Brother Duren states that Doddsville is a splendid little town and that Brother Ingram is highly appreciated there.

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Montpelier, Miss., says: "During the past fourteen days we have had splend'd revivals at two of my churches—Foster's Chapel and Woodland. At the former place there were 35 additions to the Church, and 13 at the latter. We have had 117 accessions in all during the present Conference year."

Under date of September 15, Rev. W. W. Graves, of Newton, Miss., writes as follows: "We are in the midst of a great meeting at this place, which commenced last Sunday and which will probably last two weeks. Rev. J. H. Bell, one of the Conference Evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, is doing the preaching."

Correspondents of Rev. J. L. Neill, the Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, should hereafter address him at 810 West Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss. Until recently Brother Neill and his family have been boarding, but have now decided to keep house in the new quarters which they have secured.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, is assisting Rev. R. F. Harrell in a meeting at Centerville, Miss., this week. This is the sixth meeting in which Brother Sharbrough has given aid this year and he has yet two other similar engagements. Still there are those who think that our presiding elders are idle men.

A press dispatch from Meridian, Miss., on the 18th inst. says: "A city-wide protracted meeting, with services simultaneously in all the Protestant Churches (whites and negroes) began here yesterday morning and will continue for an indefinite period. Each church has a visiting minister to do the preaching and a visiting singer to lead the choir."

A correspondent sends us a letter from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in which it is stated that Pastor Roussel, who has been raising funds in the United States for the suffering Protestant Churches in France, is altogether a different person from the notorious Pastor Russel. He thinks it may be well to give this information to the public.

The Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, is being generally mentioned for the Federal Judgeship of the Western District of Louisiana, which has been left vacant by the death of Judge Boarman. Many strong endorsements of him for this place have been forwarded to Washington. There is no doubt that this distinguished lawyer would wear the ermine worthily.

The following have our thanks for two or more subscriptions, forwarded within the past few days: Rev. Thomas F. Yancy, Verona, Miss., 3; Rev. F. H. McGee, Independence, Miss., 6 (trial); Rev. W. W. Nelson, Monticello, Miss., 5; Rev. R. T. Nolen, Williamsburg Ct., Miss. Conf., 2; Rev. J. F. Waltman Farmerville, La., 5; Rev. J. R. Roy, Gilbert, La., 2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Bolton, Miss., 2.

We have never liked nepotism in either Church or State When a high official who has been chosen to represent the people of a State in the Federal Congress undertakes to use the influence of his office to secure a lucrative position for a near kinsman we think his course deserves condemnation. We have known Congressmen and Senators who moved upon a higher plane than that.

Rev. C A. Northington, the diligent pastor of the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, in a business note to our office, inserts the following item of interest: "I have just closed a very successful meeting at Wells Chapel, Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Guntown, doing the preaching. All my meetings have now been held, and I am able to report up to the present 76 accessions to the Church since the last Annual Conference."

Dr. John T. Sawyer, who is a man of far more than ordinary ability and who is one of the honored veterans of the Louisiana Conference, frequently favors our office with a visit. He has been a member of several General Conferences and some years ago brought out a strong small volume dealing with worldliness in the Church. Dr. Sawyer has no inclination to unite with the Northern Methodist Church on the Saratoga basis.

We erred some time since in speaking of Rev. C. A. Bowen, who is a son of Rev. J. A. Bowen, as being connected with our College for Women at Athens, Ala. He is filling the chair of Bible and Philosophy at the Woman's College at Montgomery, Ala., an A-Grade institution. As he was principally reared in North Mississippi, the Methodists of that section feel an interest and pride in the promising career of this gifted young minister.

Ground for the erection of the new Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss., was broken on Tuesday, September 12, the occasion being marked by appropriate exercises. Rev. J. M. Morse, the resourceful pastor, was the master of ceremonies. After a prayer by Rev. W. H. Hill, pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, Mr. W. D. Davis read a history of the church, after which happy addresses were made by Dr. Cooper and several others.

Dr. Inman W. Cooper, of Brookhaven, Miss., writes: "I am happy to state that the Brookhaven District will be well represented at Millsaps College, having sent there six young ministers. Within two weeks a few friends have given more than $700 for ministerial education. This district will assist five young preachers attending Millsaps. I am grateful to the friends who are aiding me in this work." This is indeed a fine service, and our great-hearted friend, Dr. Cooper, is to be highly commended for leading the way in it.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, who is deservedly one of the most popular Conference evangelists in the Church, writes us as follows from Meridian, Miss.: "My health is fine and I have engagements for the entire fall. I have just come from a very fine revival at Waverly, Tenn. I am here at East End with Rev. J. A. Meore in the beginning of a good meeting. My labors from now until Conference will be in North and South Mississippi. The work grows so rapidly that it would take more than two men to respond to the calls that come to me."

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Sallis, Miss., writes as follows: "My work is getting on nicely. We have had unusually good meetings at all my churches. I was assisted by Rev. S. A. Brown of Kosciusko, Rev. J. D. Boggs of Booneville, Dr. T. C. Wier of Starkville, and our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of Durant. All of these brethren did faithful work and their preaching was of a very high order. Sinners were convicted and converted under their strong messages and 35 persons were added to the church. I like the ring of your utterances on the union question, Mr. Editor."

We have received from our gifted young pastor of Central Church, Meridian, Rev. H. B. Watkins, a most interesting and suggestive card which he is using with good effect in his pastoral work. We should be pleased to give a fac simile of this card for the benefit of the brethren were it not for the fact that it is expensive to have a plate made such as would show it up creditably in print. It is one of the misfortunes of the average Conference organ that it is pressed for funds and can not illustrate its columns as those in charge of it would often like to do. If any brother should be specially interested in this note and will write Brother Watkins, doubtless he will give him information concerning this useful card. In all such cases, of course, the postage for a return letter should be enclosed.

A GIFT OF LOVE.

A little girl named Mary had a gold dollar given her. She had never had so much money at one time before. How pleased she was. She loved to look at the shining coin and feel that it was hers. But one day she went into a house where a little girl lived who had no shoes, and there was no money in the house to buy any, for the father was sick, and the mother could work only enough to buy bread for them to eat. Mary looked lovingly at her gold dollar, and then she gave it to buy shoes for the other little Mary. That was a gift of love, and Jesus was pleased, as He was with the gift another Mary of whom we read in the Bible made so long ago.—The Presbyterian.

IMPORTANT NOTICE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

A number of young men who have felt the call to the ministry are anxious to secure a college education, but are not financially able. They are looking to the Church for help. A subscription was taken at Laurel last winter for this purpose, and the Board of Education was asked to administer the fund. This we have done, according to our best judgment, as the subscriptions were paid. There are now only $33 in the treasury, the schools have begun, and those looking to us will be greatly embarrassed unless the subscriptions are paid promptly. Send all contributions for this fund to Rev. R. Selby, 726 N. Jefferson St., Jackson, Miss.

W. H. LEWIS,
President Board of Education.

The paper famine is beginning to be appreciably felt in Southern Methodism. As was stated in our columns some days ago, the Pacific Methodist Advocate has reduced its size, and now the North Carolina Christian Advocate has announced that it will hereafter bring out three eight-page issues a month, and one the usual sixteen-page size. The Baltimore and Richmond Advocate has commenced using paper very much inferior to that it was formerly printed upon, and our Publishing House has begun to complain of the situation.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

FLETCHER MARSHALL MAYERHOFF, the youngest son of Charles J. and Henrietta A. Mayerhoff, was born on Dec. 25, 1852, in Sageville, Lauderdale County, Miss.; was married on Oct. 2, 1906, to Miss Lucy B. Moorman, of Lucile, Lauderdale County, Miss., with whom he lived most happily for about ten years, and died at his home, in Sageville, Miss., on Aug. 19, 1916, after a short illness of three days, leaving a devoted wife, four promising, sweet children, a fond mother, and two affectionate brothers, to whom it was so hard to say goodbye. But we'll point them to Jesus, and let them feel that their loss is his eternal gain.

A bright young life has passed away, just in the prime of manhood, so full of flattering promises, leaving an aching void in the hearts of his many friends, both in the business and social world, for whom he always had a genial smile and a kindly greeting, which we'll never forget—and our hearts grow sadder still, when we remember that scarcely had the rosy tints of morn kissed away the dewdrops when loved ones were summoned to his bedside, found him in a helpless condition and almost unable to utter a distinct sentence, because of the dreadful paralytic stroke that had so suddenly seized him—all the while his condition being unyielding to the nursing of loved ones and medical aid, thus lingering in the vale until Saturday, 5:30 p. m., he knew us no more, and fell sweetly asleep, with friends and relatives watching his quiet breathing, each one seeming so prayerfully to say: Oh! dear Lord, how hard it is, but "Thy will be done." Help us to be resigned. Some day we'll understand. C. E. S.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, our omnipotent Father, on August 21, 1916, took from us by death, never to return, Mrs. ETTA LUNSFORD CANTERBERRY, a faithful member of the Methodist Sunday school at Kilmichael, Miss.; and

Whereas, we, the Committee of this Sunday school, speaking for each individual member, feel keenly the loss our school has sustained and our individual loss in the translation of this Christian woman, our sister, co-worker and friend; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Etta Lunsford Canterberry our Sunday school has lost one of its most competent, useful and exemplary members.

Resolved, That the useful life, stainless character, and great service of this noble Christian woman as a teacher in our Sunday school and as an instructor in our public schools command the highest tribute that we can bestow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Kilmichael Record for publication in their columns, and that a copy be sent to each member of the bereaved family.

Signed: F. M. Smith, Mrs. Della Davis, Mrs. Lillian Townsend, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

It is with a feeling of sadness that the Woman's Missionary Society, of the Topisaw charge, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, pays this testimonial of respect to the memory of its oldest and one of its most loyal and best loved members, Mrs. R. H. Felder.

Aunt Lizzie, as she was usually called, was a lady of many excellent qualities—active, unselfish, always ready to aid in every good work. She was indeed "a friend to the friendless." By her decease our community has suffered a great loss. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That, while we as a Missionary Society bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will, we realize that we have sustained a great loss and that our Society is poorer because of our sister's removal.

2. That in appreciation of her labor of love among us, we extend to the sorrowing family our love and sympathy.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that they be spread upon the minutes of this Society as a constant reminder that we should ever strive to emulate the beautiful life of our deceased sister.

Signed: Mrs. W. C. Garner, Mrs. Ira Felder, Mrs. E. J. Coker, Committee.

THE COMMISSIONER PUZZLED.

Whether this shall be a cornubopia, a multum in parvo or a mirabile dictu remains to be seen; for certainly all sorts of "they says" have reached me from these corners since my last. The elder's been here: Chapman dropped in, and the Sunday School Institute with its gathering has come and gone. By the way, "the Beloved" has increased my territory, whether as a mark of appreciation or to get the more work out of me, I'm in doubt; but being bound by a "four-fold cord," I must respond.

Beginning at the northern extremity, Alford is credited with being in sight of the end of one of the most successful pastorates on record for Anguilla. He is in great favor with his people, has just finished a neat church at Delta City at a cost of approximately $2000, and will turn over to his successor at Jackson a strong circuit. It's long been my opinion that Alford wasn't long for nothing.

Chapman, just below, at Rolling Fork, moves easily, and there has arisen a question as to what value a terrier pup shall be given in the financial wind-up—we've heard of Conference suits, and read of socks, and I recall one pastor who reported a $20 gold piece as fish bait; but this terrier pup injects a new issue. Foreman boasts of many good things on the Silver City charge; but he is ruing his bargain, wishing he had "old Charley" back and the other fellow had that auto. But when a fellow serves so industrious a people as those who wake up at Midnight to begin the day, he need fear no evil. Roberts, at Gibson Memorial, has unloaded in the little parsonage and is planning for a fall campaign, with the famous Lewis quartet to lead the music. McVey, at Harriston, is spreading out and has organized a church of 40 members at Tilman. Dr. Featherstun is employing young Brother McGahagin, of Port Gibson College, in church extension down at Russum, where a congregation has been gathered in, both for Sunday school work and preaching.

I must not forget to report the visit of Brother Jim O'Neil who filled the Gibson Memorial pulpit recently, to the great pleasure of the people. Should his growth in the pulpit be as he has otherwise developed, we shall hear from him among the giants of his day.

Jim Lewis, from Utica, with a well filled auto, or Ford (?) made us a hasty call—whether to get that proverbial coal of fire or because he felt out of place beyond that pent-up Utica, he said not. Brother Hopper and wife have been with us; they seem to have suffered no malarial troubles, though they live where the mosquito revels among the marshes. He is this week engaged in a protracted meeting at Fitler's. Hopper's circuit is a veritable misnomer, being a shoe-string the entire length of Issaquena County, embracing a population of only a few hundred whites. In point of accessions, Strait, of Rocky Springs, takes the first place, having added 65 to his enrollment. Ware, from Fayette, and Cain, from Washington, report well for their people. They labor where were the beginnings of Methodist history in the Southwest, and where are opportunities of gathering much of lore, both civic and ecclesiastical.

Our Sunday School Institute was a success, though not as well attended as provided for. Fifteen charges and eighteen schools were represented, 70 delegates being present. Brothers Neill and Dietrich gave us many suggestive, inspiring talks. The district organization is constituted as follows: President, J. G. Parham, Rolling Fork; Secretary-Treasurer, H. H. Crisler, Port Gibson; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. Z. M. Davis, Vicksburg; Home Department, Mrs. J. E. Hicks, Port Gibson College, Teacher-Training, Rev. J. B. Cain, Washington; Wesley Bible Class, W. E. Barron, Vicksburg. Our energetic elder was in place from the first till the last session, with strong appeals to track the disciplinary regulations—he left his portfolio with the paper debris incident to a conference; but Uncle Sam through his parcel post department came hastily to the rescue. So again, "all's well that ends well." T. B. HOLLOMAN.

THE EVERY-MEMBER CANVASS—HOW TO MAKE IT.

To the Methodists of Louisiana.

The Board of Lay Activities believes that enough time has been spent in "getting ready," and that the time has now come to actively engage in the work of improving the financial methods of our churches.

To that end it has been determined to hold an every-member canvass in every church of the Louisiana Conference in October or November. The presiding elders have given it their endorsement, and we hope every pastor and every layman will enthusiastically fall into line. This canvass is to take care of next year's finances.

WHAT IS IT AND HOW SHALL IT BE DONE? The answers are briefly as follows:

1. Call your stewards together. Use a carefully prepared Budget Blank. Make an estimate of the total needs of your church or churches for the next conference year. This will constitute your Budget.

2. Appoint a Specific Sunday, preferably two or three weeks off (from the time of announcing it) to make the "Every-Member Canvass."

3. Tell the congregation about it several times. Ask them to remain at home during the Sunday afternoon upon which the canvass is to be made, until after the Committee has called upon them.

4. Appoint the Committee to make the canvass. The size of this Committee should be—say—10 to every 100 of membership. This would necessitate each pair seeing only 20 people, not a very formidable thing to do, but you may have a larger Committee, of course. The canvassers should never work alone, but in pairs—one steward with one other member, if possible. Women often make excellent canvassers.

5. Divide your church membership into convenient districts beforehand, putting those living near each other in one district, and so on. Give each committee of two a list of the members upon whom they are to call, with their addresses. Also, give to each committee of two pledge cards for every person they are to see. On the Sunday of the canvass call your full committee to the chancel rail, and charge them with their duty. Make the service impressive, sending them out with a pledge to see every one whose card or name they may have.

6. If in the city, let it be understood that the night service is to be given over to the reports of the canvassers in giving an account of their stewardship. If in the country, this is to be done on the date the next service is to be held.

7. Let every subscription be made, not as a lump sum, but on a basis of so much per week or per month. If possible, get a subscription from every member of every family. Let each child have his own card and box of envelopes. "Train up the child in the way he should go." Let the youngest and the poorest member be taught to pay what he owes the Lord, and even if he can pay only one cent a week let him make the subscription. As soon as all subscriptions are in, make a careful list and number of them, and send to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or to the Duplex Envelope Co., Richmond, Va., for the number of weekly and monthly envelopes you will need, and give to each member his or her set of envelopes in a small carton, all dated (this date begins with the first Sunday in December) that they may be placed in the collection plate or basket each Sunday morning beginning with December 1. Where services are not held every Sunday, the weekly contributions may be put in the proper envelope each week, and all brought to church on the first Sunday there is to be preaching.

8. Let there be a definite plan for keeping up with all contributors who may be in arrears. Every month or quarter let a bill be presented to each contributor whose account is not paid up. It might be well for the same committee that made the canvass or for the Missionary Committee to arrange to do that work.

9. This is the whole plan set forth in the simplest language possible, and no one should say it can't be done, for, brother, it is already being done in 25 per cent of the churches of our own connection, with results that bring joy to pastor and people. Some of the inevitable results are as follows:

1. Your people obey the Scriptural injunction—"Let every man on the first day of the week," etc.

2. You relieve your pastor of one of the greatest burdens of his life.

3. He ceases to be a perpetual money-raiser, and becomes a free, unfettered preacher of the gospel.

4. You will be doing what all other progressive churches are doing, and thereby helping to make the Church, as a whole, a stronger and more aggressive factor.

Many other reasons could be mentioned, but the foregoing should suffice. We beg you to take up this matter immediately. Don't let it get cold. We pledge you the help and support of your Presiding Elder, your District Leader, and your Conference Leader to make the plan a thorough success. And when done, please write the details and results to this office that proper records may be made of same.

We are praying for a great strengthening of the financial status of our Church the coming year (through the use of this plan), including a better and fairer basis of ministerial support. Please help us attain it and oblige,

Yours cordially and fraternally,
W. S. HOLMES.
Conference Lay Leader.

P. S.—If you prefer to do so, you might make an estimate of the number of weekly or monthly envelopes you need, and order them beforehand so that they may be distributed when the canvass is made, thus obviating the necessity of calling on the people a second time, and thus saving time. Some churches do this, but we are not sure it is the best plan. That outlined under section 7 may be the better plan.

In case, however, that you postpone the canvass until November, it will be necessary to order both cards and the envelopes before the canvass, as it would be too late to order after the canvass.

During the canvass, if any members are away from home, or if any decline to make a pledge, do not leave the pledge card unless you have extra ones or make a memorandum to call again. Otherwise such members might be overlooked. If one committee fails to get pledges from certain members, other committees might succeed in a later call.

Yours fraternally,
W. S. HOLMES.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER SAUNDERS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am at home after spending ten days at Wayneshoro, Miss., with Rev. J. L. Decell and his good people. It was a very delightful time for me to be associated with Brother Decell and his most excellent wife in their home, and the members of his church showed that they know how to do things, both in their homes and in a protracted meeting. It would be hard to find a congregation more loyal to their pastor in the work and the choir was as good as you would find anywhere. The singing was religious and soul-inspiring. Brother Decell will tell you something of the meeting. We had a good time.

On my way going and coming I had the pleasure of seeing and speaking to several of the brethren: Brother Leggett, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. H. P. Watkins, Brothers Broadfoot, J. A. Moore, Gatlin, Schultz, Davis, Osmond Lewis, Downer, Linfield, Walters, Cottrell, Dr. Henry, and Brother P. D. Hardin. I also saw Brother Dan Kelly a little while on my way back. He was just getting started well in the Meridian meeting. I predict a good meeting, as I know that Brother Kelly is a great preacher and a good evangelist. He will lead them to victory if they will follow and I am sure that they will do that.

I spent a few minutes with our mutual friend, Rev. J. D. Newsom of the North Mississippi Conference. He now lives in Meridian and he and his good wife are waiting on the sunny-side of life with faith undimmed and are ready when the Master calls. As one of my friends said the other day, "It is a good thing to be on the home stretch and nothing in the way." I am pretty well worn down and need rest.

Your Brother,
W. H. SAUNDERS.

YOU WILL WRITE A LETTER LIKE THIS.

I wish that I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

701 Barnard Street,
Savannah, Ga., Dec. 28, 1910.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.: Dear Sir: As you are aware, in 1909 I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

Leeds, S. C., March 2, 1911.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, gall stones, kidney or liver disease, or any chronic ailment that has not responded to drugs. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Sunday School

FIRST AND MOST IMPORTANT.

Many very far reaching changes we shall need to make in Sunday school work unless we refuse to hear the call of God and of the hour. But first in order and first in importance is the prepared leader—pastor-teacher, who is to make possible the better things. New and enlarged conceptions of the mission of the Sunday school and personal equipment to do the order of work that is needed are first essentials. The State provides its normal schools for the training of its teachers and salaries for those who teach. How shall the Church provide a correspondingly thorough training for its larger corps of unsalaried Sunday school teachers and officers? This is the question that must somehow be answered. Until we see the necessity of answering it, no real advance is possible.

New Standards in Teacher-Training.

This question has become one of primary importance for the Protestant Churches in the United States and Canada. The Religious Education Association and the Sunday School Council have each been emphatic in insisting upon more thorough-going courses of training for Sunday school teachers and officers. After two years' careful work on the part of its teacher-training committee the Council, at its annual meeting last January, adopted and recommended to the denominations the general outline of an entirely new teacher-training course. On the basis of the Council's recommendation our Church is preparing jointly with the Methodist Episcopal Church a new course of study. "The Pupil, the Teacher, and the School," by Barclay, and "The Worker and His Bible," by Eiselen-Barclay, have been adopted as a part of the new course, embracing the first five of the twelve units of the course. These two books will be continued in the course until the new texts can be written. The Department of Teacher-Training will be glad to supply information regarding the new training course and the new plans of the Department for training work. Address John W. Shackford, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

At nine-thirty o'clock Sunday morning, August 27, 1916, the first session of the Seashore District Sunday School Institute was called to order. It not only marked the first session of the Seashore District meeting, but also the first for the Mississippi Conference. And from the first day at Wiggins to the last day at Vicksburg we heard the prophecy for better things in the Sunday schools of the Conference. Many were heard to say, "We had no idea these meetings would mean so much."

From Wiggins we went to Hattiesburg, thence to Meridian, and from there to Newton, to Hazelhurst, to Canton, and closed the series at Vicksburg Saturday night, September 9. We spent two full days in each district.

The main purpose of the meetings was to perfect the district organization asked for by our General Sunday School Board. This was done in each district and I am sure that no Conference in the entire Church has a better corps of district officers than were elected for the ensuing year in these district meetings. The complete list will be given the Advocate in a few days for publication.

The great success of these meetings from every standpoint is due the presiding elders and the temporary district officers. Many of these district officers wrote to each pastor and Sunday school superintendent as many as three personal letters. They also took prominent parts on the program under their respective departments. I wish that space would allow me to speak in detail of the great work done by some of them.

The visiting speakers at each meeting were Mr. A. L. Dietrich, Field Secretary for the Gulf Division; Rev. H. P. Tolbe, President of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, Mrs. J. L. Neill, and myself. Besides these, Dr. A. P. Watkins attended all of the meetings except those of the Brookhaven and Port Gibson Districts and rendered valuable assistance every time he was called upon to do so.

My records, including all denominations, show a total of 660 registrations in all of the meetings, 113 charges, and 162 Sunday schools represented. There were 25 Sunday schools of other denominations represented. The cards show that Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Christians, Roman Catholics, and Jews attended the sessions.

The attendance by districts was as follows:

Seashore District, 15 charges, 21 Sunday schools, 75 registrations.
Hattiesburg District, 14 charges, 24 Sunday schools, 115 registrations.
Meridian District, 14 charges, 24 Sunday schools, 97 registrations.
Newton District, 13 charges, 22 Sunday schools, 100 registrations.
Brookhaven District, 12 charges, 14 Sunday schools, 45 registrations.
Jackson District, 15 charges, 25 Sunday schools, 90 registrations.
Port Gibson District, 13 charges, 22 Sunday schools, 75 registrations.
Total, 96 charges, 162 Sunday schools, 660 registrations.

We rejoice, praise God, and push on to better things.

J. L. NEILL,
Field Secretary.

AUGUST TEACHER-TRAINING WORK.

The month of August shows an improvement over July in Teacher-Training work, there having been enrolled 25 classes and 379 students during August. In the Gulf Division there were enrolled nine classes, 122 students, distributed among the different conferences as follows:

Alabama Conference—Two classes, at Montgomery and Citronelle, with 26 students; Louisiana Conference—Two classes, at Crowville and Gilbert, with 31 students; Little Rock Conference—One class, at Fordyce, with 18 students; Mississippi Conference—Three individual students, at Wesson, Carriere, and Derby; North Alabama Conference—Two classes, at Decatur and Athens, with 19 students, and two individual students at Somerville; North Mississippi Conference—Two classes, at Eaglehill and Drew, with 21 students, and two individual students at Hernando.

Diplomas were issued in the Gulf Division as follows: One First Course diploma at Birmingham, Alabama; five First Course diplomas at Slaughter, La.

A. L. DIETRICH.

REVIVAL AT COMO, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We began our revival services here the first Sunday in September. On Monday Dr. J. L. Weber, of the Madison Heights Church, of Memphis, came to us and remained till Wednesday night, September 13. Our people were charmed with him and the Church was greatly strengthened by his strong gospel sermons. Dr. Weber does not resort to any trick, but out of a rich experience he gives the people sermons filled with wisdom and power. The church was well filled during the entire series of meetings and the people gave perfect attention to his utterances.

In a congregation of from two to three hundred there would not be a half dozen persons not members of the Church. The sermon to men on Sunday afternoon was very plain and effective—every man but one coming and grasping the preacher's hand, promising to live a more consecrated life. The service for the ladies Monday afternoon was a very uplifting one.

We feel that we have all been lifted to a higher plane and will ever have a kind feeling in our hearts toward Dr. Weber. Brother Irvin Price was also with us and charmed our people with his sweet voice.

These are a noble people here at Como and any preacher is to be congratulated on having the privilege of serving them.

W. D. WENDEL, Pastor.

Has Many Friends in the North.

While the Southern friends of "Renwar" are almost countless, this remarkable remedy for rheumatism has many good friends in the North. Among these is Mr. M. E. Sorge, Milwaukee, Wis., who writes: "I am glad to say that I have used Renwar with the greatest satisfaction and benefit. It has taken all the traces of rheumatism out of my system. To any one suffering from rheumatism I can highly recommend Renwar Rheumatic Salts." If you suffer from rheumatism or constipation, get a 50c. bottle of RENWAR of your druggist. Money refunded if it fails to relieve. Prepared and guaranteed by Warner Drug Co., Nashville, Tenn.

Astonishing Power of Iron to Give Strength to Broken Down Nervous People

Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate Folk 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all druggists.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual district meeting of the Hattiesburg District was held at Ellisville, August 24, 1916. Devotional services were conducted by Mrs. C. M. Lowry, who read the parable of the talents as her lesson. On the afternoon of the 23d a ladies' prayer meeting was held at 4 o'clock, at which members and visitors met together to pray for the success of the meeting.

Roll call at the opening business session by Mrs. Rawls, who was elected secretary, showed 26 delegates, representing 13 adult auxiliaries and 4 young people's societies.

Mrs. J. E. Ferguson, of Ellisville, gave a graceful and hearty welcome to all. This, with the splendid sermon preached by Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Hattiesburg, on the evening of the 23d, gave inspiration to all and an earnest desire for a better work.

Mrs. H. McMullen, the District Secretary, gave a report of the year's work. Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Conference Secretary, discussed Wesley House specials, explaining fully conditions as to this, and urging a speedy payment of assessments as provided. She recounted the Wesley House work at Biloxi, and showed bright prospects, and how contributions to this particular work were so necessary.

Reports from auxiliaries were most interesting and encouraging. There was a general discussion on "Aims of Our Auxiliaries for 1916." This was led by Mrs. Carter, of Magee, followed by Mrs. McGregor, of Main St., Hattiesburg; Mrs. Allsup, of Broad St.; Mrs. Sullivan, of Court St., and Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Ellis.

Mrs. Lewis talked favorably of the Station Plan for our district—a definite work—and a pro rata of pledge for foreign work. The book supply department was presented by Mrs. Rawls.

This being planned for a continuous session, the entire body has served a sumptuous dinner, after which they returned to work. Rev. L. Carley opened the afternoon session with prayer.

Mrs. Decell, Conference Second Vice President, presented the "Children's Work" in an attractive manner, while Mrs. Middleton, Conference First Vice President, spoke beautifully on the young people's work. Mrs. Clark added some timely remarks on this latter work. Mrs. J. R. Ellis discussed "Our Literature."

The Petal and Main Street (Hattiesburg) young people gave interesting papers on "Aims for 1916." Mrs. Hamblin's paper on "Social Service" was full of practical helps and was enjoyed by all. "Mission Study" was ably presented by Mrs. E. McInnis.

Mrs. Lewis gave the closing address, giving items from the last Council meeting, and finishing up with a rousing talk on "More Efficiency," surpassing all in her most charming and persuasive manner.

The conference adjourned after prayer by Mrs. Lewis and the singing of the Doxology. Magee will entertain the District meeting next year.

Mrs. E. McGREGOR.

PRESIDENT OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE RESIGNS.

To the Executive Committee and Women of the Louisiana Conference:

I herewith tender my resignation as President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, to take effect at once. It is with much regret that I sever this relation, which has brought me into such close relation with the splendid women of this Conference. My work has been a pleasure to me, and as I leave you my prayers are offered for you and for this great work, that in your hands God will bless it and bless you all. My residence will be within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference, but my face and thought will be turned toward you for many days. May God bless the Louisiana Conference!

Yours in the Master's service,
NETTIE L. BLISS,
Shreveport, La., Sept. 8, 1916.

In a personal letter to us, Mrs. Holt tells of the greatness of the loss of this splendid worker, and as they were so closely associated in the work we feel that Mrs. Holt's words will more fully express the sorrow which the Louisiana Conference women feel than any we can write, so we take the liberty of quoting her. She writes, in part, as follows: "The resignation of our beloved Conference President brings regret to us all. She has served the Conference so lovingly, so patiently, and with such a beautiful spirit during these four years that she has won a place in the hearts of the women throughout the bounds of the Conference. To those of us who have served with her more intimately she is doubly dear. We shall miss her sorely, and we pray God's blessing upon her as she goes among her loved Mississippi women again. Our First Vice President, Mrs. Cunningham, will serve until a meeting of the Executive Committee can be held."

OUR CO-OPERATIVE HOME.

Since I came here, on May 17, there has been on an average 23 young women in the Home, till the last three weeks, when vacation days have taken a number to their homes. But vacation days are nearing a close and I find myself looking for familiar faces that have already become dear to me.

The girls have felt the heat of summer very much and are anxiously awaiting cool weather when work will not be so tiresome. There has been very little sickness—no protracted spells—in the Home, for which we are very grateful. A full house has helped materially through the summer, which usually finds a small family and a deficit to be made up later on. Still the Home is not self-supporting, and had it not been for the boxes which the missionary societies so lovingly and kindly supplied during the past year the outlook would not be as encouraging as it is to-day. Pontotoc had the honor of sending the first box two or three weeks ago. It was very timely, as the missionary jars were empty, and lunches without sweets are not very inviting to girls. I trust that each auxiliary may be represented in the Co-operative Home pantry, which is large enough to accommodate easily all the jam, jellies, preserves, pickles, canned fruits, and canned vegetables needed.

Our local board has some interested, earnest women whose prayers and work are a support to the worker in charge—helping to solve problems and untangle knots that find their way into the most well ordered family.

Our dear Miss Daniel did a noble work, and her tribute to the women of the North Mississippi Conference was most beautiful. She depended largely upon your prayers and your interest in fostering this work. I feel assured that I shall have the same loyal support. The Corinth Co-operative Home is the child of God's love, and you, His people, are entitled to a share in its success. We are doing a good work—"Come thou with us and we will do thee good."

ADELINE M. PEEPLES,
Deaconess in charge.

FACING DIFFICULTIES.

During the present fiscal year our Publishing House has been facing a serious situation in so far as the expense of conducting its business is concerned. Paper and all materials that printing and publishing houses must use have recorded unprecedented increases in prices, in some instances as much as five hundred per cent. Thus far our Publishing Agents, Smith & Lamar, have not increased the prices of any publications. The Methodist Episcopal Church has found it necessary to increase the subscription prices of practically all of their official papers. Facing an increased expense of many thousands of dollars, our Publishing Agents have thus far given our people the same service and at the same prices as before the war in Europe began. The Publishing Agents cannot under conditions such as now exist continue indefinitely this liberal policy. It is probable that at an early date there will be reductions in the number of pages of some of the Church's periodicals. Many of the daily papers of the country have been reduced in number of pages, or their subscription prices have been increased. We believe that if our Publishing Agents find it necessary to order a reduction in the number of pages of any or all of the Church's periodicals our people will accept the situation without complaint or criticism. Our preachers and the lay membership of the Church should stand by their own Publishing House, especially so in this emergency and in view of the liberal policy to which our Publishing Agents have held. Give your own House every order that can be filled by the Publishing Agents, and that means all of your orders for books and supplies, whether published by your own House or others.—Methodist News Bureau (Nashville.)

remember that first aid to relief is found in abundance of fresh air—day and night—freedom from over-exertion and pure food.

Attention to these matters should do much to arrest the progress of he malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where Nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited.

Under such circumstances, try Eckman's Alterative, which has been used with large benefit by many sufferers. In numerous cases it has helped to bring about recovery. Also it has been successful in treating asthma and bronchial troubles.

ACIDS IN THE SYSTEM

Acids accumulating in the system in excess, poison the blood and cause a great variety of diseases, affecting the skin and other mucous surfaces, the heart and arteries, brain and general nervous system, joints and muscles.

Some of these diseases are Rheumatism in its many forms, Catarrh, Eczema, Hives, itching and burning of the skin, dizziness, mental depression and a variety of other ailments. You must eliminate the acid from your system and purify your blood before you can be rid of your trouble.

S. S. S. has been purifying and nourishing the blood for over half a century. It is also a very efficient tonic and being purely vegetable, it is the most efficient agent known in the cleansing of the blood and toning up of the system.

From the Field

Eden, Miss.

Dear Editor: Please give me a little space to tell about our meeting at Eden, Miss. It began on the second Sunday in August under the leadership of our pastor, Rev. A. S. Oliver, who did the preaching himself. He preached fourteen soul-stirring sermons, which resulted in a revival of old-fashioned, heartfelt religion. My heart was greatly blessed, and many others testified to the same experience. There were no accessions to the Church, but the membership generally was spiritually quickened and helped. The services on Friday were especially uplifting. We feel that much good was accomplished which will endure. Our prayer is that the Lord may richly bless Brother Oliver and his family.—Mrs. J. F. Wilson.

Sulphur and Vinton Charge, La. Conf.

Our work has been going forward since Conference, and is more promising to-day at both churches than it has ever been before in their history. We have had two splendid revivals. The one at Vinton was held in the early spring. Brother M. Hebert did the preaching, and we had an excellent meeting. The people were so well pleased with his preaching that we have been trying to have him come back for another series of services.

We closed our meeting here at Sulphur on the first of the month. Brother A. F. Vaughan did the preaching. He did it in a plain and uncompromising way, and we feel that the work has been greatly strengthened by his work among us. We organized an Epworth League during the meeting, and received some very strong men and women into the Church. These made nearly 50 additions to the Church since Conference. Our finances are well up and we expect to carry a good report to Conference this year. We are serving a loyal people and the Lord is blessing our labors.—L. Hoffpauir, P. C.

NEW ORLEANS LEAGUE UNION.

The New Orleans Epworth League Union held its regular monthly meeting at the Mary Werlein Mission on September 12, with a rather small attendance, due to threatening weather, which, however, did not interfere with those present having a profitable time.

The reports from the various Leagues were, on the whole, encouraging and gave promise of a banner winter season. In the business meeting the question of the formation of a District League, comprising all charges having Leagues in the New Orleans District, was again discussed, and it is hoped that this organization will be perfected shortly.

A quiz on the Handbook was conducted by Mr. Johns, of Baton Rouge, our State Conferenee Treasurer, which was participated in enthusiastically by all present, and was a very instruetive as well as interesting part of our program. It will no doubt be an incentive to further study of and use of the Handbook in our work.

Our "Special" for the evening was a short temperance program. Effective posters lined the walls, and Mr. L. Herman, of the Carrollton Avenue League, a well known business man of our city, gave a short talk on our responsibility in connection with the fight against the liquor traffic, both individually and as a League. The Leagues were urged to take up matter of educating the general public by the use of posters, pamphlets, etc., samples of which, with information as to the source of supply, were on hand. An endeavor will be made to have temperance education listed as one of the definite projects of the Union.

Mary Werlein retained the banner secured at the last meeting for best attendance. Prior to that time, the Algiers Chapter had held it for five consecutive months.

A VOICE FROM "THE RANK AND FILE."

Dear Dr. Meek: If I am an extreme Southern Methodist it can be explained by the statement that I was born while the great Battle of Gettysburg was in progress. Fever was running pretty high at that time on both sides. I am a creature of circumstances.

There is so much being said about unification that it almost makes one's head ache. But I, for one, have no faith in its object—too much commercialism, and too little spirituality. We are living in a commercial age of the world. I fear that the Church is catching the step. No doubt a combined Methodism would have a great commercial and political influence. But, in my opinion, it would not do more for God and his righteousness. If two neighbors can not get along together, I can not see how they would do so by moving into the same house. If my neighbor is all the time tearing my fence down to build up his own and calling us all the bad names which our good Doctor Featherstun has said he heard while on the border, I can not see how we are going to get along better by all moving into the same field.

If I wanted any good reason beside my own for not wanting my Church to unite with the Church, North, I would take Doctor Featherstun's article for my argument. I don't want any better. Say what you may about the negro—I love him as a negro and I respect him as such, so long as he conducts himself as becometh his race. I lived in a town a few years ago to which there came a presiding elder (a white man) of the Church, North, four times a year for three years to hold quarterly conferences, and I believe once a district conference. He was not at any time in a white man's home. He spent his nights and took his meals in negro homes. He paid them social visits. A Methodist with a white skin moved into my circuit a few years ago from the North. He and his family took meals at negro tables, slept in negro beds, and invited negroes to do the same in his home. A lumber company put up a big mill on my circuit some years ago. They were so social with the negro that they even permitted young negro men to call on their girls and take them buggy riding on Sunday evenings. Some one may say that these are extreme cases. But how many of them would it take to blow our Southern Methodist Church into atoms? "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

I will tell you where the trouble is. Brother Lagrone has truly said that it is coming from those who are up in the air. They have enjoyed for years the best pie that the Southern Methodist Church has had for them. They still want a little better pie with a little thicker spread of butter on it. Did you ever see big old bull bats late in the afternoon flying very high and making a great noise with their mouths? Do you know what they are doing? I have been told by a good authority that they are catching gnats. I fully believe that our Church has entirely too many men who are doing little but flying high and making a great noise with their mouths—accomplishing little else. Yes, I am sure, knowing him as I have for more than forty years, that Brother Lagrone would cure the last one of them in a short time if he could make their appointments.

May God bless you, Dr. Meek. Stand by your guns, trust in God, and "keep your powder dry."

IN ANSWER TO DR. BOSWELL.

Rev. Dr. John W. Boswell.

Dear Doctor Boswell: Your open letter appearing in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of the September 7 issue is before me. You state that a recent article of mine impressed you that New Orleans preachers and a great majority of preachers and laymen in Louisiana are in favor of unconditional union. I regret that the article so impressed you; that is, I am sorry if this impression has caused you any worry, for I assure you that troubles come to most of us thick enough, and for any to suffer needlessly is to be regretted.

In my article the word "unconditional" is not used. You will find "the present movement" a part of two or more sentences. To say "unification of Methodism by reorganization" every time one alludes to the present movement to unite Methodism is too cut-and-dried a way of saying the same thing to suit me. I note that, in published reports of the deliberations of the Joint Commission, our own General Conference, and the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, such expressions as "plan of unification," "organic union" and "reunion" are used without being qualified by the word "reorganization."

Personally, I am persuaded that all of us are thinking along the same lines. We are talking about union and we are looking for a re-united Church. To turn the deliberations about so vast and consequential a movement into a quibble over the use of words is about as profitable as to argue over whether "the cat sprang over the fence" or "jumped over the fence." I am not convinced that I have represented my brethren as desiring "unconditional" union. The matter of "going into the Methodist Episcopal Church" has not been mentioned. But if for any reason my residence should be in Chicago, I think I would join the Methodist Episcopal Church, and from it, by the grace of God, ascend to the Church on high.

I am convinced that we have a great and glorious Church, this Southern Methodist Church of ours, and I am not disposed to take a position that our Church is such a failure that it must be disbanded in order to advance the interests of the Kingdom of God. I most emphatically disavow any intention of casting such an impression on any one. I further disavow any intention of representing any number of my brethren as desiring to join any other than our own Church, or as threatening to do so. Once or twice, I have read from the pen of some who have spoken determinedly against the Saratoga Plan veiled threats to join some other communion if such a plan of union should be adopted, but I have heard no threats from those who believe the present deliberations will end ultimately in the unification of American Methodism. Yours truly,

New Orleans, La. A. J. GEARHEARD.

AN ADDITIONAL WORD.

Dear Brother Gearheard: Referring to the above letter, a copy of which you kindly sent me in advance of its publication, I beg leave to say: I am glad to learn that you are not in favor of the unconditional union of the two Episcopal Methodisms; and that you are "not disposed to take a position that our Church is such a failure that it must be disbanded in order to advance the interests of the Kingdom of God." In this I dare say you more nearly represent the sentiment of Louisiana Methodists than in your communication to the Christian Advocate (Nashville), in which you certainly made the impression that they were ready for "union" rather than "unification by reorganization," which is the question submitted by the respective General Conferences.

There is no "quibbling" in these words. I never quibble in serious matters.

Fraternally,

JOHN W. BOSWELL.

COMMONPLACE MERCIES.

O common are sunshine and flowers,
And common are raindrop and dew;
And the gay little footsteps of children,
And common the love that holds true;
So Lord, for our commonplace mercies
That straight from Thy hand are bestowed,
We are fain to uplift our thanksgivings—
Take, Lord, the long debt we have owed!

If Christianity would live and conquer, it must be true to Christ. If it departs from Him, it destroys itself.

"Pussy-footing" may win what one desires in the State or Church in this life, but it will not count for much in the Day of Judgment. Honest adherence to principle, apart from any selfish interests, will then have its inning; and the honors which it will bring will be durable and unfading.

The Presbyterian Journal makes the following observation: "An exchange keenly says that one of the cleverest devices of the devil is the prompting of people to give religious reasons for irreligious acts." And the distressing thing is that this practice seems to be becoming more common.

The last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church took Wesley's sermons out of the course of study for young ministers. We think this action is much to be regretted. The way of salvation has been the same in all ages, and will forever remain unchanged; and Wesley's setting forth of the fundamental features of it was remarkably clear and impressive. Few men in the world's history have had such an insight into the spiritual truths of the Kingdom as he did. None of our modern Church leaders are his superiors in this respect, if indeed any of them are his equals. The passion for the new and novel, however, is gradually unmaking Methodism. Whether the resulting ecclesiasticism will retain its evangelistic fervor and life-giving force remains to be seen.

THE ALTAR AND THE GIFT.

A strange thing was seen one day on Royal Street—a blind negro guided by two faithful dogs, one of which went in front of and the other behind the old man. But we never see the blind leading the blind. Such a feat the scribes and Pharisees of the time of Christ were trying to perform. And in their wicked evasions of the law the Master called them "blind guides." He named one of their evasions: "Woe unto you, ye blind guides, which say, whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing, but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor! Ye fools, and blind, for whether is greater, the gold or the temple that sanctifieth the gold? And whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty. Ye fools, and blind! for whether is greater, the gift or the altar that sanctifieth the gift?"

It is said that the temple was one of the most magnificent buildings of the ancient world. Other buildings were larger, but none surpassed it in cost or beauty. Gold was freely used in its construction, and every cloudless morning the sun, rising over the Mount of Olives, gleamed along the golden roof that covered the sanctuary. But other buildings have been adorned with gold. The library of Congress in Washington City also has a golden roof. Gold of Ophir did not make the temple holy, nor all manner of precious stones. It was made holy by the altar within, that sanctified the gifts that were laid upon it by the Holy of holies and the mercy-seat.

Following the system of the sanctuary of old, we may use the altar as a symbol of worship and of true sacrifice, which alone will sanctify any building and convert it into a temple of God.

The altar may also be a symbol of the spirit—the thoughts, desires, motives, intents and purposes in the heart of man. It is still the altar which sanctifies the gift, whatever it be, that we in this age make to God. It is the motive of the man and not the gift itself that decides whether his gift is sanctified or not.

This test should be applied to material things. From remote ages of the Church God has demanded the tithe. And it is strange indeed that any professing Christian should fail to see that the consecration of material things is a part of Christian living. But it is possible for a man to give large sums which no altar sanctifies to the man himself, because he has not the right spirit. Heaven cannot be bought and sold. And this does not mean that God does not demand our gold. But he demands ourselves as well.

What has been said of material things may be said of talents of mind and heart. How can we expect a blessing when we give only grudgingly of our time to God's service? And though duty is a high claim and its sanctions imperative, how can we expect a very gracious blessing when, at the command of duty only, we drive ourselves to tasks in the kingdom, which are irksome to us?

And this leads us to think of the fact that, first of all, we must give ourselves unto the Lord. The gift of self is the highest of all gifts. And when that supreme sacrifice has been made, no other sacrifice will prove hard, and duty will not "seem a load, nor worship prove a task." In stirring up the Corinthian Christians to contribute to the poor saints, Paul cites the example of the churches in Macedonia—how that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality," "and this they did," says Paul, "not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God." Ah! that was the secret of their liberality, and the abundance of their joy. If we first give our own selves unto the Lord, money, time, and talents will be gladly given. And we will find a joy in service. You have heard the song of the man who toils. And that is what the laborer in the Master's vineyard needs to learn—the song of the toiler.

Of all the institutions of heathen Rome, the most beautiful was the school of the Vestal Virgins. Unlike many of the gods and goddesses of Mount Olympus, who were swayed by the same dark passions that surge through the human breast, the fair goddess, Vesta, was famed for her purity and for her spotless moral character. The sacred fire of the goddess was believed to have been kindled by the rays of the sun. It was an emblem of the flame of life which, the ancients believed, was kept burning in each human breast by Vesta. The noblest and loveliest of Roman maidens were chosen to serve the goddess. They entered the temple at an early age, and remained there thirty years. It was their duty to keep the sacred fire burning on the altar evermore. They were required to live lives of blameless purity. In case of any lapse from virtue on the part of a Vestal, she was walled up alive in a tomb. But so pure and faithful were the Vestals that during a thousand years the sacred flames never died for lack of fuel or want of timely care, while only eighteen failed to keep their vows.

May we, who are blessed with a larger knowledge of the way of life, be as faithful to our trust as the beautiful Vestals of Rome. May no strange fires burn on our altars. May we use no unbeaten oil. And may the altar ever sanctify the gifts we make.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions. Fraternally, tion and guidance. The position of the bishops was like that of a missionary in Africa superintending a number of native churches. But the churches which Paul founded in many lands were not in any way dependent on each other. They were not under the control of the Church at Jerusalem. They were naturally subject to the apostolic authority of Paul, to whom they owed their very existence as churches.

The true Church of Christ is the Church Universal, the body of Christ on earth, the Bride of Christ in Heaven. All who belong to Christ, no matter what their position as regards visible churches, are members of His body.—New York Weekly Witness.

AN ISSUE OF VAST MOMENT.

Dear Brother Meek: There is no question before the Church to-day in which I am more profoundly interested than I am that of unification. Indeed, I can recall no single question which has arisen since 1844 which I think to be of such far-reaching importance. It is a matter of such moment, it seems to me, that every member of all the Churches involved ought to do his best to think the whole proposition through. It is easy enough to have an opinion upon this subject without any serious reflection. But to undertake to solve, even to one's own satisfaction, the delicate and momentous problems now before the Joint Commission is to discover at once the greatness of the task before us. To my mind, a happy termination of the negotiations, no matter what the conclusion, will require of us all the sanest thought, the most unselfish devotion, and the highest order of consecration. It needs to be carried in the mind of every one of us that the answer which we seek is "unification," and not any uncertain alliance.

From the very outset I have declared without hesitancy or reserve that I am for unification. I am for it because I feel that under certain limitations the Church is committed to it. But I am for it primarily because a contemplation of the great underlying purpose of the Kingdom of God, and of the chief end and aim in the founding of the Church marshals every energy of my mind and heart in its favor. I am willing to stand for anything that will help toward a fuller realization of the design of Christ—the redemption of the world. I think that unification would surely contribute something in this direction. In saying this, however, I am not losing sight of the very practical difficulty in the way of its achievement.

When one begins to hunt for the real content of the unification which he approves, he will find it to be much more than the merging of organizations. It stands to reason that the cause of human redemption cannot be advantaged by anything less than the solidarity of union. A solid phalanx and a harmonious movement of all the forces in a common cause are the only legitimate excuses which can be offered for the agitation now going on. I take it that no thoughtful and worthy man would consent to any revision which had not the prospect, at least, of increasing the efficiency of the new organization over the aggregate of what is being done by the separate units. This would require a basis so fully and completely representing the heart and soul of all the elements as to command their fullest loyalty and devotion. When we take this fact and place it alongside the exceptions which have already been made to the tentative plan the difficulty is readily apparent. Then, whatever may be said by way of opinion or conjecture as to the tentative plan now under discussion in the Church press, when the "irreducible minimum" has been reached, if it shall not furnish a platform upon which every unit of American Methodism shall be able to stand with every foot down, its acceptance would be an unspeakable calamity. There would be more than a revival of all the unhappiness of seventy years ago, but without anything of hope in the expedient resorted to then. If we shall join forces there must be union, or there will be dissolution.

It is not worth while, I think, to try to go around our troubles, for they will confront us at last. Taking up, therefore, only what is apparent now, there appear to be three indications of radical difference. These three things are of such character as to require certain and effective elimination before there can be possible the homogeneous mass upon which unification must be founded.

The first of these matters has to do with the colored contingent of the Northern Church. When we recall that so large a constituency is not represented in their General Superintendency it would seem that this difference might be easily removed. But, however that may be, the acuteness of our racial and social problem in the South is such that we cannot, and I dare venture the assertion we will not, yield a point so vital to the integrity of our civilization. Conditions are such as to make it impossible for the larger part of the Southern Church to accept less than the Oklahoma declaration at this point.

A second point of difference is revealed through the effort to secure the integrity or autonomy of sections through a jurisdictional organization. I think this clearly indicates a cutting contrast in the structural organization of life North and South. It is a recognition of social, "temperamental," and economic difference of such a nature as to require protection against the inexperience and misapprehension of those whose thought and method have been developed under vastly different conditions. I believe that it is necessary to preserve the autonomy of natural divisions; but I have to confess my skepticism as to the wisdom of the jurisdictional plans, as I understand it. As a solution of the question of autonomy it looks easy enough; but I fear that it has in it the possibility of subverting the very unity that we seek.

The final indication of difference is in the outcropping of the old controversy as to an absolute General Conference. I think it is already apparent that it makes no difference as to whether the word "supreme" was used inadvertently or not, the sleeping lion is awake. There will have to be such an iron-clad indication of the ultimate authority as to leave no shadow of doubt before there can be unification. Whatever of tradition may be surrendered by any side must be done with definite understanding and full consent.

In conclusion, I desire that it shall be understood that this discussion of the difficulties is with no feeling of hostility to the principle involved. I am for unification. If it be unification, I believe that the Joint Commission should have our full confidence and sympathy; but at the same time I think there should be the fullest understanding of the temper of the Church. The whole Church will have to pass at last upon any plan of unification which the Joint Commission may submit to us; and I think that every one ought to understand the gravity, the finality of that decision. On the one side, I think that we should not allow our judgment to be warped by the passions and the prejudices of the years that are gone. A divine discontent ought to remove any desire for provincialism; and we ought to meet the issues of the new day and changed conditions in the light of consecrated thought. But, on the other side, it ought not to be thought that racial, social, and constitutional differences are to be transmuted by the alchemy of religious sentiment. Neither must it be imagined that unsolved problems can be hushed down by the joint fiat of all the communions interested. I say again, as I said in the beginning, it is the greatest question that has been before us since 1844. It ought to be dealt with in the fear of God, and in all the soberness of righteous thought and intention.

A VERY DANGEROUS EXAMPLE.

A lady who has strong objections to the theater writes that her son went to the theater and saw their minister in a front seat with his wife. The lady's husband thinks, perhaps the minister had only gone to see how the show was conducted, it may be so, but it seems much more likely that he is one of a large class of good people who think that many plays given in the theater are quite proper and afford innocent entertainment, if nothing more, and that it is proper to go to such plays.

As the Editor of the Witness has never seen any play in the theater to [illegible] to have any opinion about it based on personal observation, yet he is in full [illegible] who look upon the theater as a [illegible] stitution, and believes that he has sufficient reason for holding that opinion.

But this opinion does not involve the assumption that all exhibitions given in the theater are inherently immoral or injurious. If that was the case good people would not go to the theater. But these good people who go only upon the plot of the play and the manner of its performance are both innocent—or at least, who intend to go only at such times—do not seem to attach sufficient importance to the fact that their presence in the theater gives it a standing which it would not otherwise have in the eyes of young men and women, and encourages them to break away as early as possible from the rules laid down by their parents.

If ministers and other good people who by their occasional presence in the theater encourage young people who know them to form a habit of going there could trace the effect of their example in all cases to its final outcome, our impression is that few of them would want to take the responsibility. Jesus left us some very solemn warnings about the sin of putting stumbling blocks in the way of other people, which should be remembered.

Even if there was a theater in which no indecent or immoral exhibition was ever given it would be a very doubtful place of resort for young people because the theater has so great a fascination for many minds that it is apt to become the chief interest in life, and when there is even an approach to such a condition the young person who gives way to it is unfitted for the serious responsibilities of life.

The great danger of theater-going, as also of card-playing, and dancing, and liquor-drinking, is that all these things have a strong tendency to excessive indulgence, because of the fascination which they exert upon the minds of a very large proportion of those who at first intend to enjoy them only in moderation.

The moving picture shows are also in this class. Even if entirely proper, they will undoubtedly have a harmful influence on the minds of those who visit them too frequently.—New York Weekly Witness.

GRENADA COLLEGE OPENS WELL.

Dear Brother Meek: I am delighted to report that Grenada College has had the best opening since the outbreak of the war. Students are still arriving and we have but few vacant rooms left. The prospect for the session is extremely encouraging.

Brother Jaco will be in the field through the fall pressing the campaign for our building fund. We are greatly hampered for lack of classrooms, having outgrown the old lecture rooms. The time has arrived for a great forward movement for the education of our young women. I believe our people will rise to the occasion and prepare to do justice to the great interests at stake.

Cordially yours,

REV. GEORGE . GALLOWAY.

Rev. George H. Gallo was born in Madison County, near Canton, M September 17, 1871. His parents, Dr. J. H. Mrs. S. J. Galloway, were originally from Nor Carolina. He was one of four brothers and s sisters, all of whom survive him except one ter. His early educa- tion was received in t public schools of his county, after which he tended Centenary Col- lege, Jackson, La. He g uated with the honors of his class in 1896. H heart was given to God in early childhood, and tle yet a boy the call of God to the ministry e to him.

At the session of th Mississippi Conference in 1896 he was admitte trial into the travel- ing connection and g to the Church thirty years of earnest, faithf service. The following gives the order of his pastorates: Columbia, three years; Magnolia, t o years; Carthage and Walnut Grove, two years Rose Hill, two years; Lauderdale, one year; B ridian, East End, two years; Pearlington, four years; presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, four years; Conference Missionary Secretary, one year; President of the Mississippi Conference T aining School, one year and six months; Hatties ung, Court Street, two years; McComb, Centenary, one year and six months.

He was married on December 19, 1899, to Miss Emma Leavell, of Hinds County, Miss., who stood by him to the end of his itinerant career, proving herself a helpmeet indeed. Eight children blessed this union—six sons and two daughters—all of whom survive him except one daughter.

On May 31, 1916, the summons came suddenly for him to lay his armor down and receive the crown of glory awaiting the faithful and the true. He was in the midst of one of his most joyous and successful pastorates; only a few weeks before he had closed a very gracious revival in his church, and the outlook was most encouraging. The devotion of his church was manifest in the profound sorrow which spread over the entire membership when the announcement of his death was made: yea, the entire community mourned the loss of this true servant of God. He had attended the closing exercises of the public school the evening before, and during the night the end came as he was rising from his knees at his bedside where he had knelt to pray. His body was laid to rest in the McComb Cemetery after impressive services in Centenary Church, which was filled to its utmost capacity by sorrowing relatives and friends. The presence of a number of the ministers of the Conference was a source of great comfort to the hearts of the bereaved wife and children. The magnificent floral offerings were but a faint expression of the high esteem in which he was held and the deep sympathy felt by all; their silent message meant much to the sorrowing ones.

Thus has been given in outline the life work of one of God's chosen servants, one who was not unmindful of the great responsibility of his high calling, one who studied "to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." God gave evidence of his divine approval in that many were led into a saving knowledge of Christ through his ministry, and many others were strengthened in their Christian experience by his words of counsel and admonition. In a letter from his wife is the following statement: "Scores of letters have come to me from the various appointments that Mr. Galloway had served, telling me of what he had meant to this one and that one in their Christian experience." These letters are a great consolation to her in this hour of sorrow, and, knowing the deep yearning of his heart for evidences that he had been a help to others, she adds: "Oh, if half of what has been written me of his work had been said to him, what an inspiration it would have been! He longed always for a fruitful ministry—to know that he was helping somebody in the struggle against evil."

That Brother Galloway was a man of God who knew and loved the doctrines of Methodism was evident to all who knew him. It was the joy of his intimate friends [illegible] as it was the privilege of the writer to be numbered among this inner circle of friends. We came to know each other in this intimate way while he was [illegible] elder of the Vicksburg District. He loved to talk of those portions of Scripture which relate to the exceeding greatness of God's love and the rich experiences that ought belong to those who accept Christ as their Savior. He yearned to be filled with all the fullness of God, and many were the happy moments that came to him as he thus studied and talked of the treasures of God's Word.

He was a man of strong convictions and did not hesitate to contend for what he believed to be right. Often in the heat of discussion which followed, his utterances would have the ring of harshness and severity, but those who knew him best were well aware that there was no bitterness in his heart, only the kindliest feeling for those who took the other side of the question. He loved God; he loved his brethren and longed for their love in return. It can be said of him truthfully, "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," and when the end came he was doubtless met by the Lord with the glad welcome: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

OPENING AT PORT GIBSON COLLEGE.

At the invitation of the President, it was my pleasure to preach the opening sermon at the Port Gibson College, Sunday, Sept. 17. In appreciation of the event the citizens of the town were in large attendance, who, with the student body filling up one-half of the large church auditorium, made a splendid congregation. Port Gibson has reason to be proud of her two educational institutions—Chamberlain-Hunt for boys, and Port Gibson College, for young ladies. The work being done in the institution and the canvass made by President O'Neil during the summer have brought the old school to the forefront again, as was evidenced by the large number in the chapel at the opening exercises Monday morning. The attendance from the homes of the community, despite the existence of a first-class high school, gives evidence of the fine work done in the college. Eighty-seven matriculated the first day, and almost every train brought in others until the hundred mark had been reached. A cottage detached from the main buildings and used to house a limited number of boys is filled to its capacity. President O'Neil says that he can accommodate a few more girls, but not another boy.

The student body comes from the south and southwest counties, the Delta, and some from Louisiana. The faculty is an excellent one, and the college is doubly fortunate in having Mrs. Hicks of Fayette, widow of Chancellor Hicks, in special charge of the girls. At the recent session of the Sunday School Institute of the Port Gibson District, Mrs. Hicks was elected Manager of the Home Department for the district. The friends of Port Gibson are highly pleased with its auspicious opening and predict for it a greater future.

SOME POINTS TO BE CONSIDERED.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been reading the articles appearing in the New Orleans Christian Advocate on the question of the union of the Methodisms of our country, both for and against. In an article published in your paper of June 23, 1910, I said, "I am glad that we have one at the helm who can be trusted to steer the dear old New Orleans Advocate in safe channels." I have had no reason to change this view during the six years of your editorial management of our Conference organ.

As it has been suggested that there be a general discussion of this important question of whether or not it would be advisible and to the glory of God for the two Methodisms to be united, I feel that [illegible] as prayerfully and dispassionately as we can to the subject in our Advocates.

In the first place I want to endorse what you have said editorially in regard to it. But in this article I desire to call attention especially to only two points which you have mentioned as reasons why it would not be best for us as a Church (except on our own terms, as given at the Oklahoma Conference) to have unification. You gave as one of the reasons that the M. E. Church is not as orthodox as the Church, South, that their Sunday School literature is not safe or sound according to Methodist doctrine. This we believe is both evangelical and sound, and that it (the Northern Church) is infected more than we are by higher criticism. Now if this be true, and I think you have shown that it is, this in itself is sufficient reason why we should not carelessly unite with them. Sound doctrine is the life of the Church, for the Lord can not bless a departure from evangelical truth. Wesley said the sole purpose for which the Methodist Church existed was "to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands," and in so far as we as a Church depart from that purpose, we must fail in the work given to us by the Master. To take the Bible to be the revealed Word of God, inspired in every verse, chapter and book, from Genesis to Revelation, and accepting the doctrines and rituals as according to the interpretations of the founders and fathers of Methodism, we should "hold fast to the faith once delivered to the saints."

The second point I want to mention is the relation we sustain to "our brother in black." The Negroes' plan of managing their own church affairs seems to work very well. Our preachers often preach to them as they have opportunity, and much good can be and is being done in this way. Bishop Galloway used to preach to them often, thus showing his interest in them. Sam Jones also used to preach to them frequently. They realize that our preachers are their best friends and that they sympathize with them in their work. A change in the present plan and relationship that we as a Church sustain to them might be very good, but it may not be for the best.

There are other reasons against organic union which I might mention, but to my mind these two are sufficient reasons against it. I wish every Methodist could read Bishop Candler's great utterance on this subject.

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

UNION AND REASON.

By Rev. W. R. McPhearson.

There is no question before ecclesiastical denominations of more moment just now than that of uniting the two branches of Methodism. Either of the Churches may be verging on the greatest crisis of its history. The solution to the problem now before the two branches of this the greatest force for evangelism of modern times will either render both a great act of beneficence in preparation for world-wide evangelism, or else hinder for all time the cause of our common Lord.

I sincerely believe that where the destiny of souls may be determined in the performance of a duty or act of service that the utmost care should be exercised in the performance thereof. There should be reasons of paramount value for the bringing together or keeping apart these forces for righteousness. There seems to be a tendency to let feelings, which are not always begotten of love, run riot with the real man and thereby render one incapable of service where there are real issues involved. We in the solution of this problem will either make or mar the history and, in view of the fact that the future generations will read the record, let this be done with a surety that no regret will ever obtain as the result of the doing.

I am not in accord with the spirit of union as I am able to see the question at present, since there appears to me no adequate reason why the two Churches should at this time become one, in any way that this might be effected. I advance this proposition: that the union of any denomination whatsoever is not profitable where the forces for efficient service are not multiplied. The adequate means used and the results obtained by both Churches since the separation in 1844, as they have addressed themselves to the task of evangelism, is a marvel unsurpassed by any other Church of Christendom. It is a fact of life that the weak individual or nation must go into alliance with one of superior strength and power of endurance in order to render large service. If, therefore, the Northern Church has failed to propagate the Gospel through the many avenues of its boasted cosmopolitan life and has failed to foster and maintain institutions of learning, then the only policy would be to form a confederacy with a Church which has succeeded along these lines of service. The facts show that this is not the case. The Church, North, has to-day some of the best equipped and most adequately endowed institutions of higher education to be found in America. She is justly proud of the rapidity with which her Christian laymen have caught the vision and met the demands of this great cause. The Northern Church has not been lacking in missionary effort, having been one of the foremost Churches for Christian evangelism in the foreign field. The only good the Northern Church could hope to deprive from union would be, to be strengthened from association with Southern churchmen, or take over and operate the Southern Church. They, like Caesar, may be ambitious, but I am persuaded that ere they accomplish this they will say, "Yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look; he thinks too much." I see no legitimate reason for the advocacy of union on the part of the Northern brethren.

Judging from the evidence on every hand, the Southern branch of Methodism does not at this time need to form alliance with one stronger than herself. The Southern Church has truly made as great progress and achieved as large results within the last seventy years as any ecclesiastical organization of which the writer knows. It is marvelous with what rapidity she has, with such small beginnings, performed her task of evangelism from the pulpit and in the field of Christian education since the Civil War.

The sons of the Confederacy returned from the bloody fields of battle only to engage in a more heated fight against the foe and enemy of men's souls. Southern Methodism rebuilt her houses of worship and opened the doors of her schools and colleges, thus making ready her forces for a conquest, the results of which only eternity will reveal. One familiar with the commercial interests of the South after the war can truly appreciate the progress made along those lines. The progress of the Southern Methodist Church would not suffer in comparison with the progress made in commerce. Methodism has known no failure in the South. From large circuits and a poorly paid ministry she has developed large churches and well paid pastors, adequate to the needs of modern life and modern church activity. The Southern Methodist Church does not claim to lead in the field of higher education, but she has some of the best colleges and universities to be found in the United States. The Southern Methodist Church founded and for a long time maintained Vanderbilt University, and when it was decided that it could no longer render service as an institution of the Church, under the leadership of men like the Candlers other plans were laid and within a short time we have two universities, either of which is giving to the Church a larger service, in keeping with Christian principles, than did Vanderbilt at any period of its history.

The cause of missions has been one foremost in the minds and plans of the leaders of the Southern Church; and as a result of their untiring efforts, men and women all over the Southland have caught the spirit of world-wide evangelism. Wherever service is needed men and women go, whether along the bayous and across the marshes of Louisiana, in the slums of the cities, or to China, Africa, Brazil, Cuba, or the Islands of the sea.

Therefore, if, the Northern Church is adequately meeting the demands of evangelism and the Southern Church is not lacking in those qualities which go to make a truly great Church, why should we hinder the work thus being done by trying to effect a union of the two? The fact that both Churches, in some few instances, occupy the same territory is no reason for a union of the two. If the South is conducive to the health of the Northern Church, let them build here. If we have forces to send to the North and our Church will survive in the "snow-clad hills" of that section, let us arise and build there.

As long as we look up to the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night for leadership, as long as we as Churches are pervaded by the Spirit of the Man of Nazareth, as long as we are refreshed from on High, so long will we have power to beget sons and daughters to the Lord: and therein alone will we vindicate our divine origin and mission in the world.

THE BASIS OF UNION WITH SOUTHERN METHODISM.

By Rev. George A. Cooke.

The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have identically the same system of doctrine—Wesleyan Arminianism—and with each of us the doctrine are constitutionally safeguarded. We have practically the same "General Rules" for the government of our local churches. Also our system of connectional government is practically the same. Now, that the issues that led to the division of 1844, have become a thing of the past, what differences really divide us and keep us apart at the present time? We may as well face the facts and the issues as they really are. Nothing but confusion and suspicion can result from a policy of evasion. I write as a loyal minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, as such, insist that we of the North be candid and fair to our own constituency and to our Sister Methodism.

Did our General Conference at Saratoga accept the basis of union as agreed upon by the Commission on Federation, and as adopted by resolution of the General Conference of the Church, South, at Oklahoma City? This is a question of fact, and should be answered in the spirit of fairness. Bishop E. E. Hoss, D. D., of the Southern Church, who has been closely identified with the federation movement from its beginning, thinks there must be some further adjustment of differences before we can get together as a reorganized Episcopal Methodism. In an article in the St. Louis Christian Advocate he says: "The two Churches stand to each other exactly as they did five years ago. One or the other of them, before any union can be effected, will have to recede from its present position on some matters of supreme importance, and that is a thing which men of real principle always find it difficult to do. For example, the Joint Commission, whose work has been heartily accepted by our General Conference, said: 'We suggest that neither the General Conference nor any of the Quadrennial Conferences be invested with final authority to determine the constitutionality of its own actions.' Over against this suggestion, which surely deals with things fundamental, our Northern brethren set the following: 'We recommend that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive, and judicial body of the church under constitutional provisions and restrictions.' Could two propositions be more contradictory in character? It is not possible to reconcile them. One or the other must give way. As I see it, a General Conference with 'supreme legislative, executive, and judicial' functions is a despotism pure and simple, just as much so as our Federal Congress would be if it possessed the functions of the Supreme Court and the President in addition to its legislative authority. What is the use of talking about 'constitutional restrictions and limitations' to a body that is the final judge of the constitutionality of its own actions? For all practical purposes, it can make anything constitutional by simply declaring it so. I mean no disrespect to my brethren who are asking us to adopt such a measure, when I say that they might as well ask us to adopt the 'Croton' speech of Bishop Hamline in the General Conference of 1844, and turn it into organic law."

Bishop Hoss believes that our Saratoga Conference modified one of the conditions in their approved plan of union, and that our modification makes a fundamental difference in the conditions. Is he not correct in his estimate? If the parties who made the change at our General Conference did not think there was a difference, why did they make the change? Let them explain. Bishop Hoss says this change is fundamental, and that it throws all negotiations out of gear. If there is widespread feeling on this subject in the Southern Church, we shall need to modify our proposals or discontinue all efforts at union.

It should be remembered that the Church, South, has had the episcopal veto since 1870. While our General Conference has had a growing sense of independence and power, the Southern General Conference has been held in check by the restraining hand of the episcopacy. Our General Conference is the sole judge of the constitutionality of its own acts. If this constitutes tyranny, then the accusation of Bishop Hoss is just. If he is wrong, it should be shown that he is wrong. If he is right, we should correct the fault in some way.

We cannot honorably ask a Sister Church to join with us in the organization of a new Church whose chief corner-stone is spiritual tyranny. Nor can the Southern body honorably accept such a proposition. The reorganized Church should be built on a solid foundation of principles that will make it secure against tyranny, disruption, and apostasy. To smooth out the wrinkles in this trouble, and pave the way for an agreeable reorganization, could not our committee of twenty-five, frame a proposition covering this difficulty, and submit it to the Church papers for discussion and to the Annual Conferences for adoption so that the Southern Church will know we do not stand for ecclesiastical tyranny?

Wilmington, Del.

BISHOP McCONNELL AT THE HENDRIP SUMMER SCHOOL FOR MINISTERS.

Bishop F. J. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal Church delivered some five or six addresses at the session of the Summer School for Ministers held at Hendrix College last June. Many misleading statements of what be is supposed to have said on the subject of the union of the two Churches have appeared in the press. One of our Church papers refers to his utterances as a criticism of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for its view of the episcopacy, and still another of our ablest and most honored leaders speaks of the Bishop in his addresses at Conway as having "served an ultimatum on us to the effect that his Church would never stand for such an episcopacy as ours." Of course, neither of these men would intentionally misrepresent any one. They have probably been misled by reports that may bave appeared in the secular press.

For a public man to be misquoted is such a commonplace thing that ordinarily no reference to it is made. My only reason for saying anything in this connection is that no injustice may be done a great cause as well as an honored Bishop of our Sister Church. Bishop McConnell was a guest in my bome throughout his stay at Conway. I heard everything that he said on unification both in public address and in private conversation, and while I would not pretend to quote his exact words, yet I am safe in making the following statements:

Bishop McConnell never in the remotest way criticised the M. E. Church, South, neither did he serve an ultimatum on our Church, nor could anything that he said be construed by a fair-minded man as a criticism or an ultimatum. To say that he criticised our Church or that he served an ultimatum upon it not only belies the thought of the noble and dignified utterance of the Bishop, but does violence to the whole spirit of tbe man.

I might add tbat if all of the discussions of the subject on both sides, both in the press and on the platform, are characterized by the same spirit of Christian charity and fraternity, by the same dignified, courteous consideration for the opinions of others, and by the same clear comprehension and able statement of the questions involved, as were Bishop McConnell's utterances at Conway, whatever tbe issue, neither church when the question is settled will have anytbing to regret and both Churches will have set the world an example in the consideration of a great public question.

Conway, Ark. J. H. REYNOLDS.

By the Editor.

The Church paper referred to in the foregoing article was the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and the Editor himself made the statement in that publication which has been called in question. We regret that Dr. Reynolds did not plainly so affirm, for we are not given to writing anything that we are ashamed of, and which we desire to have corrected by indirection.

Our correspondent states that we were "PROBABLY" misled by reports that had appeared in the secular papers. So far as we are concerned, there was no "probably" about it: we plainly stated that our comment was based upon "the press dispatches" and the sentence accredited to Bishop McConnell concerning our episcopacy which called forth our utterance was reproduced in italics and placed in quotation marks, as follows: "Methodists in the North have evolved a democratic episcopacy, while the South has favored an absolute College of Bishops."

"Discussing the union of the two Methodist Churches, Bishop McConnell said that their two points of difference were the Negro problem and opposed ideas of the episcopacy. North and South he said were agreed upon the first, but the second offered a chance of disagreement. Methodists in the North have evolved a democratic episcopacy, while the South has favored an absolute College of Bishops. His remarks brought tears to many of the ministers present." (Whether the reporter meant to limit this happy throng of weepers exclusively to ministers, or whether his language was flexible enough to leave a place among them for Dr. Reynolds, we do not know.)

This statement was published in the Memphis Commercial Appeal, which is the most widely circulated daily paper in the South and which is read nearly all over Arkansas, the dispatch being sent from Conway, Dr. Reynolds' home town, on June 20. The affirmation that our College of Bishops is "absolute" was such a misrepresentation of its true character that in our issue of July 30, a full month later, we called attention to this fact and to the impropriety of a Northern Bishop thus misrepresenting our episcopacy while lecturing to a body of Southern Methodist preachers. Though thirty days had elapsed between the time of the publication of the dispatch referred to in the Commercial Appeal and the appearance of our editorial on the subject, Dr. Reynolds apparently had not cared enough either about our episcopacy or Bishop McConnell to set the matter straight in that great journal, which has nearly a hundred thousand subscribers and perhaps several times that many readers. It is scarcely to be thought he did not see what was said in that paper, in view of all the circumstances, though, of course, it is barely possible that he did not. But as it was not corrected by any one, we felt, after four weeks of waiting, that the question thereby raised was legitimately open for discussion in the public prints.

Did Bishop McConnell "criticise" our episcopacy at Conway, Arkansas? That would seem, from the utterances he is stated to have made, to depend upon the meaning of the word "criticise." One of its meanings in the Standard Dictionary is thus given: "To discover and pass judgment on the merits and demerits of," etc. Webster also gives the following as one of his definitions: "To discuss the merits or demerits of a thing or person."

Dr. Millar in the Arkansas Methodist of August 3 quotes one brother who was present as saying, in part: "He (Bishop McConnell) explained that his General Conference could set aside a Bishop if he was not satisfactory and expressed a preference for that relation, and a hope that his division of the Church would not be required to relinquish its position."

Another brother quoted in the same issue of the Arkansas Methodist, among other things, says: "It would be substantially correct to say that he pointed out the fact that the episcopacy of the North is more democratic than that of the South; that he did this with modesty; that he insisted that a Methodist episcopacy must be democratic.

We respectfully submit that these expressions of men who were present at Conway are quite ample to sustain the claim that Bishop McConnell criticised our episcopacy, and that the use of the words, "MUST BE DEMOCRATIC," in view of his characterization of the nature of the two episcopacies, justify the statement of Bishop Hoss that he in effect submitted "an ultimatum."

The tribute which Dr. Reynolds pays to Bishop McConnell is very beautiful, but unfortunately for his cause the Bishop has been reported elsewhere as having shown himself rather a free talker in an adverse manner concerning some of the affairs of the Church, South. And, after all, it is largely a matter of taste and judgment as to what one considers to be within the bounds of propriety. And we are frank to say, after having served on the Committees on Education with Dr. Reynolds at the last two General Conferences and having heard him talk on these occasions concerning Vanderbilt matters, and having noted his subsequent course in educational work as it has touched that institution, however much his opinion, which we are publishing, may weigh with others, it lacks much of being in any high sense authoritative with us.

THE RIVER OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

By Rev. W. J. Heys.

"And everything shall live whither the River cometh." Ez. 47:8.

Rivers are types of blessing. Man's first home was a watered garden. Egypt would be a desert but for the River Nile. The Amazon and the Paraguay make South America a land flowing with milk and honey. To come nearer home, the Mississippi is a wonderful river well called the "Father of the Waters." It rises in the heart of the Rocky Mountains and flows over golden sands. Where the distant Alleghanies rest upon beds of buried sunshine, a mighty contribution is gathered to swell the flowing river. Where the sun melts the snows of northern drifts, where undiscovered pennies lie, his waters leap forth. Like the mighty Vulcan, it turns the turbines of Keokuk, lightiug the cities, propelling the cars and saying to man, "Here am I at your service."

Not only does it gather waters, but it brings from North, and East, and West a wonderful deposit which it spreads over unnumbered acres of bottom lands where flourish abundaut crops of wheat, corn, alfalfa, and cotton. The Father of Waters does not despise the smallest contribution. He welcomes little Plattin Creek as well as the big Ohio River.

"The Mississippi never stops
To grumble at the tiny drops
Of rain the clouds fling from aloft
Or flakes of snow so white and soft.
They only make his waters flow,
Until he bears upon his breast
The commerce of the North and West;
And yet he's made of drops so small
No one can tell from whence they fall."

So it is with the Church Extension River. It gathers and conserves the resources of the Church for the day of need.

I—The Source of the River.

It springs from the heart of the Church. It gathers mighty tributaries, but it does not despise the day of small things. When it was young its volume was as irregular as that of the Missouri River in its beginning, but now, with increasing volume, it pours its waters over the land. Among its tributaries are Annual Conference Collections, Specials, Individual Contributions to Loan Funds, Loan Funds repaid, and Parsonage Aid. Even the little miscellaneous streams from obscure sources make a very respectable addition to its volume. This great river is now pouring life-giving waters to the tune of five and a half million dollars into all the needy places of our connection.

II—What this River has Done.

It has followed the pioneer and made possible the little country church. It has carried reinforcements to the growing city and made possible larger things for God and humanity. Ten thousand homeless congregations are housed and working because this river came to them. Two thousand itinerant preachers are dwelling in comfortable homes because this river came to them. Ten thousand more are waiting in hope that this stream will reach them. Even in the regions beyond the sea, it has brought back life and hope and strength. Yet there is no loss of the life-giving current. It gives and yet it increases, and is another application of the Master's words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Blest river of Extension,
Pursue thine onward way:
Flow thou to every nation,
Nor in thy richness stay:
Stay not till all the homeless
Have found a worthy home,
Until the last disciple
Shall to the Kingdom come."

WHY I AM NOT A BAPTIST.

A booklet just from the press that makes Methodists loyal and blocks the way of the proselyter. Highly commended by both pastors and laymen. Should be in every Methodist home. 10 cts. per copy: $1.00 per doz.: $7.50 per hundred. Address, P. O. Lowrey, Donaldsonville, La.

WANTED TO BE MATRON.

A cultured Methodist woman, experienced in keeping first-class boarders, a model housekeeper, unencumbered, and an excellent business manager, would consider a position as matron for a college, orphanage, or other first-class institution. Address, Mrs. Wm. Jefferson, Whitecastle, La.

AT BEDTIME.

When mother tucks me fast in bed,
Each evening when my prayers are said,
If I've been good and true all day,
I'm sure to hear my mother say:
"Good-night, my precious little boy;
You've given mother so much joy."

But if I've let my temper show,
As little folks will do, you know,
Then, when the stars peep in at night,
My mother's voice don't sound just right:
"Dear little lad," she says to me,
"Try hard a better boy to be."

Perhaps if mother's lovely eyes
Were not so blue and soft and wise,
I'd not care even if I had
Been selfish all the day—and bad;
But when I go to sleep each night,
I want to leave her dear eyes bright.

THE LITTLE CATALOGUE GIRL.

Her business was to distribute catalogues in one of the big art galleries in New York. She was so small that they had to put a big book on her chair so that she could see over the catalogues piled upon the desk in front of her.

Twenty years after she first sat there, the art gallery made her a present of twenty thousand dollars. She is the most consulted woman in the field of art in America. Upon the judgment of Rose Lorenz, rich men spend many, many thousands of dollars in the purchase of pictures She has a part in the buying and selling of mere art treasures than any other woman.

This sounds like romance, but it is real life. She began at once to study art subjects as soon as she was installed as catalogue girl. She became an authority on Chinese art. She knows English, Dutch, French, and Italian art as you know the spelling book or the multiplication table. She has a remarkable memory and wonderful application. Hard work and continued study have been the price of her preeminence.

Her home is an artistic gem in itself—one of the most exquisite and tasteful in the city. Not even the wealth of the millionaires can rival the attractiveness of the home which reflects her taste.—Young People.

PEGGY'S CABIN.

"Peggy O'Neil," writes an American who lived in Ireland for several years, "was an old woman who sold milk to us during the summer we spent in Munster. She was a tidy little body, with bright blue eyes and gray hair, smoothly folded under her white cap.

"She lived in a thatched turf cabin built for her grandfather—a black little cell with but one slit to let in the light. The cabin was clean enough inside, but the air was foul, and the smoke from the peat fire on the hearth filled it almost to suffocation to lungs unaccustomed to its acrid odor.

"We left Ireland and did not return to it for more than two years. Then we noticed a great change in Peggy's cabin. It had four windows with glass panes. Peggy came out smiling to meet us.

"'Is it the windys, sor? True for you it's a great change—an improvement. Nivir a bit was it for myself I eared, for I do be out of dures most of the day; an' me an' me father an' the gran'father befor' me were used to the dark in the house; but me brother died, an' I brought his little girl home, an' it's a broken back she has—God bless her!—and hes to lie on her bid all the day. Thin I said, this black cabin is a small wurruld for the darlin', an' I saved me money an' had a windy cut in the west wall.

"'Now the fields and sheep are let in,' I says, 'An' thin didn't I have one cut in the roof itself? an' thin the heavins were opened to her—glory be to God! So now her wurruld is bigger, an' the sights in it an' the sunshine make her heart glad.'"

Even the most thoughtful reader may learn something from poor Peggy's enlarged and somewhat pathetic experience. Your life is narrow, perhaps; you find it uninteresting and monotonous. Complaint and discontent will not enlarge its opportunities or remedy its defects. There must be other means for that. Cut windows in the walls.

You are, let us say, a farmer's daughter, tired of house-work, dish-washing and cooking day after day. Get a simple book on botany; study the flowers and trees around the house.

A window in your life will suddenly open and countless wonders will appear. Or study geology, or take up the history of some one country, or go out and make one or more good friends, or begin some charitable work in the neighborhood.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE NEW TEACHER.

School opened later in the year than usual; and when Louis at last heard the bell ringing out its call, the sound was very welcome. "I'm going now, mother," he called. And he hurried eagerly away. He felt very proud and important with his new book in his hand, for he was promoted to the second room.

There was, however, one matter that troubled him a little, and that was that Miss Avery would no longer be his teacher. "I don't see," he complained to himself, "why the teacher can't get a promotion card and go to the second room too."

But the second room was a disappointment to Louis. Miss Brooke, the teacher, was very busy with her big new class and had little time to get acquainted with each pupil. And she was certainly very different from Miss Avery.

"I don't like her one bit," Louis declared at home that noon.

"I've noticed that when a boy doesn't like his teacher there is usually something wrong with the boy," said his mother quietly.

"But she doesn't do things right," argued Louis. "She doesn't teach a bit like Miss Avery."

Louis had had only one teacher, and he had felt all morning that everything that was not done as Miss Avery did it was done wrong. Why, Miss Brooke didn't even gather up the crayons, and she ought to know that bad boys sometimes carried them off and marked up walks and fences. And they hadn't marched once that morning or sung a single song. What troubled Louis most, however, was that Miss Brooke had seated him opposite Jack Elkins, with whom he had a quarrel. And Jack had made trouble for him all forenoon.

"I 'most wish I hadn't been promoted," he complained as he trudged back to school. "Then I'd have a teacher I like."

When he reached his room Miss Brooke was standing in the doorway, looking rather troubled. "I forgot a book I have to have this afternoon," she explained. "I wonder, Louis, if you would run down to my home and get it for me. It's not far."

"Yes, of course," answered Louis. And he hurried off for the book, for which Miss Brooke thanked him warmly on his return.

"Would you like to have me gather up the chalk?" he ventured.

"Why, yes, if you will," Miss Brooke answered. "What a help you are to me! You see, there's so much to do the first day that I can't crowd it all in."

"I learned a lot this afternoon," Louis announced at home that evening. "We had a good-nature lesson, and we learned a new song, and O so many other things! I like the new teacher, too, now." Then, after a moment's thought, he added: "I guess you're pretty sure to like a teacher better after you've done something to help her."

"That's the biggest lesson you've learned today, Louis," answered His mother. "But there is more to it. You are pretty sure to like any one better after you've done something for that person."

"It wouldn't make me like Jack Elkins," Louis declared.

"I'm not so sure of that."

"It might make him like me better, but I don't see how it could make me like him."

Try it and see."

And Louis did try it and found that the plan worked almost as well as it had done with the new teacher.—The Child's Gem

OUR PRESIDENTS.

If Charles Evans Hughes should be elected President, he would be the first Baptist to hold that office.

There have been eight Episcopalian Presidents, seven Presbyterians, four Methodists, two Dutch Reformed and four Unitarians. Jefferson labeled himself as a liberal in religion, but his enemies said he was an atheist.

The Episcopalians made their big Presidential record in the early days of the Republic, while the hold of the church was still strong.

Garfield was ordained as a preacher in the Church of the Disciples.

Hughes would make the twentieth lawyer to occupy the White House. Only eight Presidents so far have not been members of the bar.

Eighteen of our Presidents out of the twenty-seven were college men, and as Hughes went to two colleges, he would strengthen the forces of the sheepskin holders.

The average age at which men have been elected President was fifty-eight. Hughes is only fifty-four. Roosevelt was forty-three when he succeeded McKinley, and he was our youngest President. "Tippecanoe" Harrison was sixty-seven.

All our Presidents except two—Van Buren and Roosevelt—were of British extraction.

The father of Justice Hughes was a clergyman. Three Presidents—Wilson, Cleveland, and Arthur—were sons of preachers.—Girard, in Philadelphia Ledger.

I believe that wherever guidance is honestly and simply sought, it is certainly given. As to our discernment of it, I believe it depends upon the measure in which we are walking in the light. —A. L. Newton.

WISE WORDS FROM AN UNEXPECTED SOURCE.

The Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D., who is an Englishman by birth, and formerly was pastor of the Baptist Church in New York of which John D. Rockefeller was a member, and later of the First Congregational Church of San Francisco, has won for a little notoriety in the United States by his unusual sayings and doings. He has hitherto been "a liberal" in his theology and his attitude apparently has been that only things that are new and novel in religion could be expected to achieve results of consequence toward the betterment of mankind. Some months ago, however, Dr. Aked accepted an official connection with the Ford Peace Expedition, resigning his Western pastorate to do so, and since that time has traveled in Europe considerably, with a view to doing what he could to promote the ends of that chimerical project. Recently he returned to the United States and severed his connection with Mr. Ford's fanciful propaganda, and it has been stated in the public prints that he offered to take up the work of his former pastorate in San Francisco at a reduced salary, but that his proposition was respectfully declined.

In a recent issue of the Congregationalist and Christian World, Dr. Aked discusses the Ford Peace Commission in a very frank and straightforward manner, guarding against calling in question the motive behind the undertaking, but pointing out its impracticability. In the course of his utterance he makes the following suggestive statement: "I have learned that there is no short cut to the Millennium. I have learned that the peacemaker must be a peaceable person; that if in his own heart there is not the peace of God which passeth all understanding, through the makers of war, he cannot silence the roar of guns and the shriek of shrapnel. I have learned that a good 'movement' must be steeped in prayer and saturated with devotion; that the peace propaganda must be baptized into Christ; that the way which is not Christ's way is not likely to lead to the consummation of Christ's purpose on the earth; that peace begins at the Cross, and that the very tree whose leaves are for the healing of the nations grows from the seed which fell in an empty tomb."

Commenting upon this striking deliverance, The Presbyterian (Philadelphia) makes the following observation: "These and kindred expressions expose the very root of much of the Christless effort of our age, which have been followed by misdirected but well-meaning persons. The whole Church has been sorely tempted to forget her mission, appointed by her Lord, namely, the saving and reconstruction of men, which is the foundation of all other work and true progress. Dr. Aked's statement appears to us to show another case of a man led away by modern speculations, returning to the shelter of Christ's Cross, the fellowship of his sufferings, and the power of his resurrection. His case is similar to that of Dr. J. Fay Hills and Rev. R. J. Campbell. We believe that the present war will in some way fulfill its purpose, and that the glory will outshine many present shame."

The trouble about such "wandering stars" as these is that after they have gone to return to a life once used to serve will hardly ever fully restore power or joy. It is possible for a servant to keep the way in some part, but it never always and gets very crooked. A man sometimes makes good temporarily after personal failure.

Many have thought here have been made within the past two years as to the probable spiritual outcome of the present world war, but in our opinion there are little else than mere forms of speculation. Some have ventured to predict that the almost certain outcome of the great conflict will be the destruction of German rationalism and materialism, but as yet but little has occurred to give a substantial warrant to that view. Those pernicious teachings have to a considerable extent been transplanted in the United States and are flourishing in many of our great universities, with but little, if any, indication that they are on the wane. That they will lead to final disaster if persisted in we do not at all doubt, but to repair the shattered faith of nations is not an easy task, and if we have read history aright wars have seldom effected this result in an extreme manner. People have a wonderful way of calling on the Lord as Pharaoh did in a time of great exigency, and of forgetting Him when the day of calamity is past.

The aftermath of great wars has not usually been conducive to more wholesome moral and religious conditions. Campaigning as a soldier does not ordinarily make one a better man, and the thousands mustered out of service do not generally return to civic pursuits with higher ideals and a more ardent determination to live a self denying Christian life. So, what may be ahead when the present titanic struggle in Europe is ended, God only knows. Of one thing, however, we are profoundly convinced, and that is, that the hope of humanity everywhere is in the glorious, old-fashioned Gospel of Christ, which the Apostles preached, and to which Dr. Aked now seems to be showing a disposition to return.

LET US TRUST IN GOD.

In the Christian life there must be perfect submission to the will of God as evidenced in providence, whether we understand the plans that He is working out for our good and the good of our friends and loved ones or not. No matter what troubles may confront and dismay us and threaten to overwhelm us, we can only trust and obey Him of whom David said, "He is my refuge and my fortress," and of whose preserving and guiding power countless others have testified in the ages gone by, and to whose faithfulness and sufficiency those who follow in their footsteps shall ever bear witness. We know that our Maker performs many of his wonderful works in a manner that is not comprehensible to finite minds, and all that we can say of anything he does is, "It is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our sight." We run no risk in trusting a Being who is omnipotent and omniscient, and yet who can do only that which is just and merciful and good, because to do otherwise would be contrary to his divine nature. In fact, cold and calculating reason tells us that our only recourse is to "lean on the everlasting arms," for we can not be so blind as to fail to realize the fact that there is no other refuge from the storms of life, and that for the welfare of our souls we must cling to the rock of our salvation, which is Christ Jesus.

The Quaker Poet beautifully says:

I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I can not drift
Beyond his love and care.
And so beside the silent sea,
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me,
On ocean or on shore.

St. Paul assures us that he is "persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Overcome by such love, let each one of us say with Cardinal Newman: "I do not ask to see the distant scene; one step is enough for me." Let us as little children put our hands confidingly in the Father's and go forth to meet the things which are before us, neither dreading them nor willing to enter upon them with too much haste. We stand and live in the present, with our faces toward the future and our backs toward the past.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

A SUGGESTIVE NOTE.

We are in receipt of the following note, which is quite suggestive from the active and resourceful presiding elder of the Holly Springs (Miss.) District:

"Dear Advocate: Several appointments in the district are out in full already. They did some hustling early in the year. Several others will never see daylight financially. They put it off till the end of the year, and now children, poor hell yearn and book worm, and the greatest of these is book worm. J. H. FELTS."

The amazing thing is that the people of any charge will continue to postpone the matter of raising their necessary collections year after year until the last two or three months and take all the chances incident to such a policy. One would think that two or three such experiences would cure them, but alas! such is not the case. May we not hope, however, that at least some of them will battle aggressively against "the book worm" affliction this fall, and that they will resolve to turn over a new leaf and break loose from this Fabian policy next year. "So mote it be."

FLOURISHING WHITWORTH.

We are in receipt of the following note from Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, written on September 22:

"Our enrollment this week was 180. We are sure to go to 200 within a month. The members of the Faculty are all in place and giving great satisfaction. The College has had two gifts within the last month, which, together, amounted to $2000. Blessings on my dear friends, who are ever helpful."

The many friends of historic Whitworth will be happy to learn of this good news. Dr. Cooper is doing a great work for the young womanhood of this section.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The press dispatches state that the city-wide evangelistic campaign in Meridian, Miss., has been a gratifying success, and that last Sunday was a great day in that city.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. A. S. J. Neill, Haynesville, La., 5; Rev. W. A. Terry, Hattiesburg, Miss., 2.

Rev. T. E. Gregory, pastor of the Columbus Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, says: "My work is in excellent shape. These are a fine folk." With such a leader as Brother Gregory, it is not surprising that this charge is making good headway.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, our pastor at Oak Grove, La., has sent us an interesting report of his work, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. The year has indeed been a fruitful one with him and his co-laborers.

Rev. V. C. Curtis is closing out his second year at Lexington, Miss., with his work in excellent condition in every respect. It scarcely needs to be said that his people hold him in high esteem. He easily ranks with the most efficient men in his Conference.

Keep in mind the fact that Saturday, October 14, will be Work Day for the Louisiana Orphanage, and that Sunday, October 15, will be Harvest Day, to gather in the results. Let everybody lend a hand in making these "days" memorable among the Methodists of this State.

Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Shannon, Miss., reports that since his revival meetings he is having a large attendance at the mid-week prayer services and upon the regular preaching appointments. This is as it should be. A revival that does not thus make its influence felt is worth but little.

Rev. J. A. Hall, our popular pastor at Greenwood, Miss., is reported to be preaching to large and growing congregations. We are informed that he expects to conduct a series of revival services in the near future, in which he will be assisted by Mr. Jack Wilson, a well known layman of Grenada, Miss.

Rev. P. F. Luter is stated to have had a good year at Acona, Miss., which appointment is having its first experience as a station. We are informed that a parsonage near the church has been purchased, and that this worthy people propose to see that their pastor is well cared for in every particular.

Rev. C. C. Miller is having a good measure of success in his pastorate at Lake Providence, La. He is one of the most accomplished and faithful ministers in the Louisiana Conference, and with so capable an assistant as Sister Miller to re-enforce his efforts it is not surprising that his work is in a healthful and promising condition.

Rev. J. L. Cady, of Greensburg, La., was an appreciated visitor at the Advocate office last Saturday. He had come to the city to bring his wife, who was at the Presbyterian Hospital, where she was expecting to undergo an operation. Not being in the city, the Editor, much to his regret, missed the pleasure of seeing Brother Cady.

Mr. D. R. Barbee, the Managing Editor of the Mobile (Ala.) Register, together with his wife and little daughter, Mary, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. D. Barbee, at Greenville, Miss. These esteemed and useful laymen are sons of the late Dr. J. D. Barbee, who for so many years was one of the agents of our Nashville Publishing House.

Mr. Marvin Lagrone Rogers, a son of Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Sallis, Miss., is filling the chair of Mathematics and History in the Polytechnic School at Maryville, Tenn. Professor Rogers is a Millsaps man, and we are much gratified to see that he is giving such a good account of himself in his chosen field of service. We wish him great success.

Brother V. Y. Felder, a prominent layman of Magnolia, Miss., was in New Orleans last Tuesday and paid our office an appreciated call. He belongs to the noted Felder family of South Mississippi, and takes a keen interest in the work of the Church. He stated that scarcely any of the people in his section are disposed to look with favor upon the merging of our Church with the Northern Methodists.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, the able presiding elder of the Greenville District, filled the pulpit of our church at Greenville, Miss., last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m., delivering a notably impressive and helpful sermon. Notwithstanding that a portion of his district has unusually short crops this fall, Brother Spragins expects most of the charges in the territory under his supervision to make good reports at Conference.

Rev. C. R. A. Brantley, pastor of the Okolona (Miss.) Circuit, has lately been pressing the claims of the Advocate in his rounds, with a goodly measure of success. He has our thanks for what he has been doing in behalf of the Conference organ. Brother Brantley says: "Where I have been able to get our people to take our paper the churches are stronger and there is a higher standard of Christian living."

Under date of September 21, Rev. Charles P. Moss, of Tchula, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a great revival at this place. I was assisted by Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Lexington, Miss., and the Wisdom Sisters, of Macon, Mo. I recommend these workers to any pastor as a safe, sane, and effective team. They do the work and do it right. I do not think I have ever witnessed anywhere a deeper work of grace. My church is wonderfully built up."

Rev. J. J. Baird, of Brooksville, Miss., in a business letter to our office, appends the following note: "Crop conditions in our section are far from good, and prospects are somewhat discouraging as we approach the end of the year; but we expect to go to Conference with a full report on all claims. I am in hearty accord with you in your position concerning 'Methodist union.' I think all of our people should be informed as to this subject."

Rev. A. J. Coburn, of Clinton, La., writes as follows: "Our work is progressing to some extent along some lines, but not as rapidly as we should like to see it. We have received 22 persons into the Church this year—6 by certificate and 16 by vows. Our Sunday school is improving somewhat, and we are getting it organized according to the 'Standard of Efficiency' fixed by our Church. We are serving a splendid people and we feel that this charge is on the up-grade."

It is with sincere sorrow that we have learned of the death of Mrs. Bettie McRae, the wife of Mr. John L. McRae, of Acona, Miss., which occurred a few days ago. Mrs. McRae was a woman of great faith and beautiful Christian character, and will be greatly missed in the community in which she resided. The interment was made in the Acona Cemetery, the obsequies of the deceased being conducted by Rev. P. F. Luter and Rev. W. J. O'Bryant. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

We are in receipt of the following wedding invitation: "Mr. and Mrs. Felix Robertson Hill, Jr., request your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Kathryn Vaughan, to Lieutenant Walter Owen Rawls, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, on Thursday evening, October 12, 1916, at 8 o'clock, at Rayne Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South, New Orleans, La." The Advocate extends congratulations to the prospective bride and groom, and wishes them a large measure of happiness.

The opening exercises of the Rayne Memorial Church of this city, which, while undergoing extensive repairs, has had its main auditorium closed for several months, will be held on Sunday, October 8. The preacher on that interesting occasion will be Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of Dallas, Texas. Dr. F. R. Hill, Jr., and his Official Board, acting for the congregation, have issued attractive printed invitations to these ceremonies, which will doubtless bring together a large number of New Orleans Methodists.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our gifted young pastor at Macon, Miss., has lately been presenting the claims of the New Orleans Christian Advocate to his people, with the pleasing result that he gave us on the 22d inst. 15 new subscriptions and 3 renewals. We scarcely need to say that we highly appreciate this good work in behalf of our paper. What Brother Broyles sets his mind to do is unfailingly done with a good measure of efficiency and success. May the Master continue to bless richly his labors!

Our stirring young pastor at Flora, Miss., Rev. M. F. Adams, has given us another club of 6 subscriptions from his charge—3 of them new and 3 renewals. He has lately had a fine meeting at Vernon, in which he was assisted by his father, Rev. T. W. Adams, of Hattiesburg. Our young friend states that he is being kept very busy these days standing his examinations in the Correspondence School of the Church and in looking after the Conference collections. We dare say that he will make a good showing at the Conference in Jackson.

Dr. Louis Albert Banks, the well known preacher, lecturer, evangelist, and author, is expected to occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist Church in Bogalusa, La., next Sunday. He will speak in the interest of the prohibition cause. Rev. Sam Small and other distinguished temperance advocates are also filling engagements in Louisiana at present. Rev. A. W. Turner, the Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, is to be commended for the energy with which he is pressing the battle against the iniquitious rum traffic in this commonwealth. Let all the brethren lend him a helping hand.

The Editor was in North Mississippi from Wednesday of last week until last Monday morning. This will explain why some departments of the paper are not as full in this issue as they usually are. We found the cotton crop in Holmes and Carroll Counties the poorest that we have ever seen grown in that section of Mississippi. In the Delta, however, though decidedly below an average yield, it is somewhat better. The other crops are generally rather inferior, though the yield of corn is fairly good and the farmers will have a good many hogs to kill. Such a thing as actual want is practically unknown among the agricultural people of the South.

We extract the following from a letter from Rev. Robert Selby, of Jackson, Miss., Commissioner for Emory University, written on Saturday, September 23: "I have engagements within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference for the first four Sundays in October. The sentiment in favor of Emory University is growing, and I am confident that Mississippi Methodism will do its part in paying for the Lamar Law School Building. I will go to Atlanta from Starkville next Tuesday to be present at the opening of the Lamar Law School on Wednesday, Sept. 27." We are glad to have this optimistic note from Brother Selby. Emory University should have the loyal support of all Southern Methodists, particularly of those east of the Mississippi River.

The following dispatch was sent from Winona, Miss., to the Memphis Commercial Appeal on September 22: "Dr. H. J. Small died here yesterday morning quite suddenly. He was 80 years old, a member of the Methodist Church, and one of this city's most prominent citizens. Funeral services were held at the Methodist Church Friday morning, conducted by Rev. J. A. Hall, of Greenwood, the interment taking place at Oakwood Cemetery. The deceased is survived by four children, J. B. Small, president of the Citizens' Bank; Lidell Small, senior member of the firm of Small & Moore; Mrs. Rema Weed and Mrs. D. B. Moore, all of this city." We knew Dr. Small personally and have been a guest in his home in the years agone. He was, indeed, a worthy citizen, an ornament to his profession, and a stanch and faithful Methodist. We have been saddened by the news of his death, and we pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort the bereaved loved ones.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

Dear Friends: I am writing to call your attention to the fact that Saturday, October 14, has been set apart by the management of the Mississippi Orphans' Home as Work Day, and the Sunday following, October 15, is special Orphanage Sunday. By "Work Day" it is meant that every friend of the orphan children is requested to give the proceeds of one day's work or the proceeds of one day's business for the support of our 220 children in the Orphanage. About 335 children have been cared for during the entire year and about 220 have been kept in the Home throughout the year. It is sincerely hoped that each church, Sunday school, Sunday school class, Missionary Society, Epworth League, and individual will observe this day for the orphan children.

We appreciate very much the response by all who have observed regularly one Sunday during the year. In many cases the receipts have been liberal and generous, but these funds have not been sufficient to meet our necessary expenses. A number of bills have had to go over without being paid until after Work Day. Each pastor and superintendent is requested to appoint a special committee to carry out the program for Orphanage Sunday, as published in Our Home, and to receive the proceeds of Work Day and forward the same to the Methodist Orphanage. Special envelopes should be distributed at least one week in advance of Work Day. These may be procured from your printer and the cost of them paid for out of the proceeds of Work Day, or, where it is not convenient to have them printed, a request to the manager of the Orphanage will bring a supply free of charge.

Let us all pull, plead, and pray for a great Work Day.

Yours for the orphan children,
J. B. RANDOLPH, Manager.
Jackson, Miss.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

On July 9, 1916, T. L. HUBBARD received his summons to the home eternal. He was born on Nov. 5, 1840, and was converted when a young man and joined old Camp Ground Church in Pontotoc County. He was a man that endured many hardships and he suffered a great deal during his latter days; but he bore it all without a murmur. It was my pleasure to visit him before he departed this life, and I found him leaning on the everlasting arms of Jesus. He said he was ready and willing to go to live with Jesus. He loved his Church and his influence was far-reaching for good. I commend his dear children to God, who alone can comfort them in this hour of bereavement. A FRIEND.

On the morning of the 17th of September, 1916, the death angel came to earth and claimed the spirit of Sister ALICE RICHARDSON (nee Talley), a daughter of Emile and Josephine Talley. She was born on Sept. 15, 1893, and married Handy Richardson on Oct. 28, 1911. From this happy union there were born two bright little boys. Sister Richardson joined the M. E. Church, South, when a girl, ever living up to its rules, leading prayer meetings, and doing anything she could for the Master. Those who knew her best loved her most. Sweet-spirited, tender in nature, willing in service, obedient, and all that could be said of a Christian can be said of her life. We shall miss her so much, but we know where to meet her. May God's blessings rest upon the bereaved ones. Her pastor,
J. S. RUTLEDGE.

JOE W. SHUMAKER was born on Nov. 16, 1882; died on July 29, 1916, and was neatly laid away in the Rural Hill Cemetery amid a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends. Joe was an exceptional Christian character, being trained from infancy by an old-time Christian father and mother. He grew up in the faith and joined the Methodist Church early in boyhood, and rapidly grew in favor with God and man. He taught school for nine years and in every place he left with the love of both parents and children. It would take a large book to contain the good things said about him. The Church misses his prayers and aid, but most of all his saintly and aged mother misses his faithfulness and canstant attention. and not much less do his loving sister and brother miss him. He has gone to a better world that knows no sorrow to [illegible] the time of the happy reunion, but during the time of waiting may God sustain the bereaved ones!
His pastor,
E. D. SIMPSON.

Mrs. SARAH MATILDA BELL was born in Monroe County, Ga., on July 24, 1828, and died in the triumph of a living faith in God in DeSoto, Clarke County, Miss., on May 16, 1916. Sister Bell joined the Methodist Church in early girlhood and lived a godly, consecrated life till God saw fit to call her home at the ripe old age of 88 years. She was married in 1848, and was the mother of five children, three daughters and two sons, who are left behind to mourn her death. One of these is our worthy and most estimable townsman, J. L. Bell, optician and jeweler, who has been the efficient treasurer of the Board of Stewards in Newton for twenty years or more. Sister Bell's life was full of good deeds. Not only did she give a noble family of boys and girls to bless the world, but, like her Master, she touched the lives and hearts of the sorrowing and suffering here and there, in so much that when her end came many there were who felt that their best friend was gone. Surely, there will be many in that day who will rise up and call her blessed. Sister Bell has gone to join that innumerable host of the redeemed who, rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory, await the coming of those she left behind.
W. W. GRAVES.

Mrs. ANNIE CLARKE YAEGER was born on the 28th day of May, 1844, in Catahoula Parish, Louisiana, and died at Ford's Wells, near Water Valley, Miss., August 8, 1916. Her parents were Joseph Boone Clarke, of Maryland, and Ann Mobley, of Franklin County, Miss. On March 2, 1869, she was happily united in marriage to Mr. William C. Yeager, who died on May 31, 1899. Of this union there were born the following children who survive her: Mrs. C. H. Hammond, of Water Valley, Miss.; Mrs. E. C. Murray, of Houston, Texas; Mrs. Hugh Junkin, of Natchez, Miss., and Mr. William C. Yaeger, of Houston, Texas. She had three brothers and one half-sister—William M. Clarke, George N. Clarke, Joseph M. Clarke, and Mrs. Ella L. Palmero. It is the blessed privilege of but few to close out three score and ten years of life in the full possession of one's faculties, at peace with God, and in love and charity with all mankind. But such was the lot of the subject of this sketch, who was converted to Christ early in her girlhood, uniting with the Methodist Church in Tensas Chapel, and thenceforth walking in the path that shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. She was actively identified with all the enterprises of the Church. In the Sunday school she was a devoted and efficient teacher in the Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, until within a few weeks of her departure. In the Epworth League she took an active part, frequently conducting the exercises. She was a zealous member of the Missionary Society. It goes without saying that she was a regular attendant upon all the services of the sanctuary, including the prayer meeting. In ministrations to the sick, including regular systematic visits to the Charity Hospital, in deeds of practical charity to the poor, her labors were abundant. She was exceptionally gifted and qualified for effective leadership, both as a writer and speaker. Yet her ambition was not to shine, but to serve; and whether in the lead or in the ranks of Christian service, her consecrated zeal was equally exerted. She came to the close of her earthly career full-orbed, like a ripened sheaf of wheat. She realized that the time of her departure was at hand, and with triumphant faith she passed away in great peace. One of earth's choicest, purest spirits, she was exemplary in her devotion to duty in all her earthly relations as daughter, sister, wife, mother, grandmother; loyal in love and faithful in service to her Lord. Such is but an imperfect sketch of Annie Clarke Yaeger, whose body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Natchez, Miss., there to await the resurrection of those who die in the Lord. The children and the grandchildren may truly sing:

"Tell mother I'll be there in answer to her prayer.
Yes, tell my darling mother I'll be there."

C. F. EMERY, Pastor.

IN MEMORIAM.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Kearney, adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society of Hazlehurst Methodist Church, on Monday, Sept. 18, 1916:

Whereas, death has invaded the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Hazlehurst Methodist Church and taken from us our oldest member, Mrs. Elizabeth Kearney, and whereas we feel keenly our loss in the passing away of our sister, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Kearney this Society has lost a faithful member, who for a longer continuous period of time than of any other of our members gave her prayers and efforts to the welfare of the cause of Christ's Kingdom.

Resolved, That we extend to the families our sympathies and prayers in their bereavement, praying the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon them.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We all know that a Sunday school may have every kind of modern equipment, but if it has not equipped teachers it does not amount to much. Just in proportion as we have teachers that know God, that know child nature, and the material suited to child nurture, in that proportion will we have good schools. The teacher is the coworker with God in making character; the teacher makes the school.

One way to become a useful teacher is to attend the institutes provided by the Church. At an institute a teacher may learn as much in a day as might be learned by reading books for a year or more. It would be wise for a school or some well-to-do parent to furnish the means for the teacher of his children to spend a day in study at one of these institutes.

Early in November Miss Minnie Kennedy is to conduct institutes in our Conference, under the auspices of the Conference Sunday School Board, for the benefit of our elementary teachers, for those who teach children under 13 years of age. Miss Kennedy is Superintendent of Elementary work in our Church. She is a specialist in reality. Some of the teachers in our bounds have traveled more than a hundred miles to get the benefit of her instruction. Wide-awake parents who are anxious for their children to receive the best instruction the Church has to give should see that the teachers of their children have the means to attend one of these institutes. Of course, the preachers will urge their teachers to spend a day under the guidance of this gifted woman.

The Elementary Superintendents in the different districts are trying to get as many names of the teachers as posible that we may send them invitations and programs. We have no other way to get the names of the teachers except through the preachers or superintendents. We count on these men to give this information the day the request is made.

The District Superintendents of the Wesley Bible Classes have been at work and are still trying to secure the names of the teacher, president, and secretary of each organized and enrolled class. We must have these names so we can keep in touch with the classes to help them over difficult places. We must have the names so we can get ready for the Conference Federation of our Wesley Bible Classes early next year. Then we want to print these names in our year book next year for the benefit of all our workers. Of course we cannot put these names in the year book unless they are given in answer to the letter sent out by the district superintendent.

GREETINGS TO NEW SUPERINTENDENTS.

I had to renew the fire insurance on my household furniture the other day, and that reminded me of another renewal that is taking place all through our Church at this season—the renewal of our Sunday school superintendency. Sometimes we renew by retaining the same one, sometimes by choosing a new one (as I chose a new company for my insurance).

I have been in a number of charges in the Gulf Division where the renewal ought to be by the way of a change, and that puts it up to the pastors; but what I started out to write was not advice to the pastors about whom, or what kind of a man, to nominate (I think the presiding elder should do that); but I wanted to write a brief message to these "renewed," or new, superintendents themselves. And I won't attempt to catalogue all the qualifications or detail all the duties of that officer—it would take books to do that; I just want to call the attention of the superintendents who are to have charge of our Sunday schools for the next year to three definite, distinct things in connection with their work as executive heads of the Sunday schools, and those things are: Each one of their Sunday schools must be educative, missionary and evangelistic, if it is to be a real Methodist institution and is to accomplish the purpose of the Church in maintaining it. And it is the business of the superintendent more than any other one man to see that it is such.

While the real test of Sunday school work is not reveaicd in the answer to the question, "What has the pupil learned?" as it is in the answer to this, "What has the pupil become?" yet, it is expected that our Sunday school pupils shall gain knowledge through their membership in our classes, and to a considerable degree the permanency and thoroughness of our evangelistic and missionary work will depend on the efficiency of our educative work. Therefore the superintendent will look well into the organization of his school, the qualifications of the teachers, the kind and supply of literature and other teaching material used—in fact he will carefully look to all features that enter into that part of the school's work that aims at the imparting of knowledge, the training of the mental faculties.

Our Church has an exceptionally fine and complete missionary policy for its Sunday schools, yet there are many superintendents who are ignorant of it and have not brought their schools into line, and many others where it is being done only in a halfway manner. Every superintendent should familiarize himself thoroughly with paragraph 264 of our Discipline and with the special study plan for Sunday schools, and then bring his school right to the front in this matter. No Sunday school can long exist without a missionary outlook.

And the Sunday school should be evangelistic. In the October "Workers' Council" Dr. Chappell's figures show that 86 per cent of the increase in our Church membership for 1915 came from the Sunday school. A fine showing, and it speaks well for the character of work being done there. But let our superintendents for the new year make it their purpose to infuse an evangelistic spirit into their Sunday schools more thoroughly than ever before. Let them make their "opening exercises" more devotional, more truly periods of worship, more spiritual in tone (and every superintendent ought to have a written program for every session of his school). At the monthly meeting of the workers' council the spiritual condition of the school ought to receive careful consideration, and much prayer and thought given to the subject.

In closing I wish to urge every Sunday school superintendent to study his work and seek to discharge to the full every obligation the position places upon him. The Church has evidenced great confidence in him in giving him the greatest position she has to give a layman, and he ought to respond in a truly manly way. The superintendent ought to be much on his knees first, then much on his feet "about his Father's business."

WHAT WE COULD DO IF WE WOULD.

J. Campbell White, at the recent National Missionary Congress in Washington, D. C., made this startling statement:

"We have been saying that we could not afford to give eighteen million dollars a year to foreign missions or to send four thousand men abroad. Yet to-day Great Britain, with less than half our population, is spending twenty-five million dollars a day; and Canada, with less than one-tenth our population, is sending three hundred thousand men to fight and die in Europe. We are asking too little for the cause of Christ and the salvation of the world."—Southern Missionary News Bureau.

OFF FOR THE ORIENT.

Miss Belle H. Bennett of Richmond, Ky., President of the Woman's Missionary Council of the M. E. Church, South, and Miss Mabel Head of Nashville, Foreign Secretary of the Board of Missions, sailed for the Orient on August 10 for a careful study of the Board's work in China, Japan and Korea. They will be gone for several months; and if the European war comes to an end in the meantime they will return by way of Europe, stopping in India to see something of the miracles of missions in that land.—Southern Missionary News Bureau.

SHILOH CAMP MEETING.

This old historic ground in Methodism, situated in Rankin County, Miss., was the scene of seven days' revival services, which closed September 14. More than two hundred persons camped on the ground, while many came each day from the surrounding country. Rev. W. W. Murray, the pastor at Shiloh, had secured Rev. J. L. Greenway, of Silver Creek, as preacher, and Rev. J. S. Duke, of Jackson, as leader in song. J. L. Greenway preached twice each day, while Rev. G. G. Yeager and Rev. H. S. Westbrook preached in the afternoons. The meetings moved forward with old-time revival power, the altar being at times filled with seekers after God. Twenty-five to thirty persons professed conversion, and the old tabernacle rang with shouts of praise. An incident of the meeting took place on Sunday, when a young couple came to the parsonage and were married by the pastor. At the night service the bride and groom found their way to the altar and were happily converted, thus taking Christ with them into their new relation. A splendid people who believe in God and his power to save find their way to Shiloh each year. G.

CHURCH NEWS ITEMS.

Methodist News Bureau.

Bishop R. G. Waterhouse and family will at an early day reach Emory, Va., their old home. They will return to make that town their permanent residence.

Any contributions for the relief of the suffering Armenians and Syrians or for war sufferers in other lands can be sent to our Board of Missions, Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, Nashville, Tenn.

The Missouri Conference, with 3,091 Church members, reports 1,068 copies of the general organ and Conference organ taken—one Church paper to seventeen members. This appears to be a small percentage, and yet it is about the average for the entire Church.

During September, "Good Literature Month," each pastor in our Church is expected to call the attention of his people to the Advocates—the Conference paper and the general organ. Only about ten days remain for this special appeal and canvass, but in those days many names can be added to the subscriptien lists of the Church papers.

Joe Ramsey, well known throughout Tennessee and in other sections of the Church's territory as a lay evangelist, died recently at his home in Viola, Tenn. In his early boyhood he lost his eyesight, but in spite of this handicap he secured an education and was a diligent student to the end of his life. He was a successul evangelist, and under his ministry thousands were brought into the kingdom.

Bishop Candler reports several substantial donatiens to Emory University. Mrs. T. T. Hillman, of Birmingham, Ala., has given $5000, and other recent gifts in Birmingham aggregate some $2000. From Sylvester, Ga., have come two gifts of $1000 each—from Mr. C. H. Strongward and from Dr. T. J. Jefford and wife. The Methodists of the Bowden Circuit, in Carroll County, Georgia—the native county of Mr. Asa Candler, Sr.—have given $1000. Since the close of the campaign in Atlanta in March, in which campaign more than $700,000 was contributed to Emory University, there have been added other contributions from outside of Atlanta to the amount of $150,000.

Concerning the movement by the Texas Methodists to provide an endowment fund for superannuates, Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, writes as follows: "I approve most heartily the movement to secure an endowment fund for the purpose of paying our retired ministers at least four hundred dollars annually. This is a movement which should have the enthusiastic support of the entire Church. It is vital to our continued growth and success. The ministers who are battling under the banners of the Prince of Peace ought to be able to look forward to an old age made comfortable and secure by the grateful contributions of those in whose spiritual behalf they labor. Officers of the army and navy and judges of Federal courts are retired on handsome stipends, and the great business concerns of the country are finding it to their material interest to set aside a certain amount for those who are compelled on account of age to retire from their active service. Certainly the Church ought to take some action along this line."

STRONGS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just finished a good meeting at Strongs. There were 8 additions to the Church and most excellent results otherwise. Rev. L. P. Wasson, of West Point, assisted and did some really fine preaching in his earnest efforts to reach the unsaved. This early taught pastor and "man sent from God" appeared in college for a time and also is a student of the apostolic lesson that "our sufficiency is of Him," as were all the great pulpit masters. Strongs should easily be a noted community and plant large for present good and for future rewards.

No wrong impression was intended, I am sure, in the Shannon (Miss.) notes in the New Orleans Advocate of September 14, but some of the statements appear to be misleading. The pastor found things in a "deplorable condition," the writer said, and proceeded to "organize the Sunday schools and missionary societies," etc. But the Sunday schools were there during the two preceeding years, and in that time had advanced from 190 people in attendance to 335, and the Missionary Society at Shannon already existed and some others had been organized. The new "recast" parsonage, which came into existence during those same two years, was largely helped by that splendid Missionary Society at Shannon and some good meetings were held and the church membership of the charge went from 428 to 432 in numbers. The Shannon pastor and his most worthy people are to be congratulated on the splendid revivals and the good accomplished otherwise; but the Sunday schools were there at the first and the Missionary Society work and nice parsonage certainly did not look "deplorable," and the same must have been true of the kind reception and the good salary provided for the new pastor. The statements were correct, no doubt, as intended, and perhaps the pastor meant to say that he enlisted the Sunday schools, etc., and that a revival was needed.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

October has heen set aside as the month for our Whirlwind Campaign for new members and organizations. From time to time you have had placed in your hands literature upon the subject, outiining the plans and offering suggestions for the carrying out of the same. For several months the district secretaries have kept you advised upon this great movement, and now the time is here, and we ask all of you to "join heart and hand" to make this month the greatest in our work for the advancement of the missionary cause in our Conference.

Our aim, as you know, is to have an adult, young people's and children's organization in every congregation, with every woman and child a member. Have we set our goal too high? We think not, for we know the women of Mississippi and know if the officers have been faithful in keeping this plan before them they will not he "found wanting." Our women have been much in prayer for the success of this campaign, and God is surely going to pour ont such a blessing upon their labors as their hearts will scarcely be ahle to contain; and praises and shouts of joy will be heard throughout our bounds.

To more fully stir and enlighten those who are not in any organization, or who, being in, are indifferent, our Conference officers have secured the services of the Field Secretary of the Council, Mrs. S. S. Harris, who for many years labored in China as a missionary. Mrs. Harris comes to us with deepest consecration, a heart full of love for the work, and a wide vision of the world's needs. Do not fail to hear her, for those who have heard her speak of her wonderful power in presenting her message; it goes straight home to the heart, and unless a woman is set in her coldness and indifference she can never be the same perfunctory worker as before. Give Mrs. Harris a chance to bring a blessing to your life and give to you a vision of the needs of men dying in their sins. We ask our women to put forth every effort to attend the meetings in the towns nearest them, and when posible to attend more than one. Go in large delegations and go praying, and the success of the campaign will be assured.

Below we give the itinerary of Mrs. Harris:

Sunday, Oct. 1—Mendenhall.

Monday, Oct. 2, 8 p.m., and Tuesday till 4 p.m.—Yazoo City.

Wednesday, Oct. 4, all day and 8 p.m.—Edwards.

Thursday, Oct. 5, all day and 8 p.m.—Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg.

Thursday, Nov. 2—Shubuta.

A MESSAGE FROM MRS. W. W. MOORE, CONF. SUPT. OF SOCIAL SERVICE.

We are nearing the end of the third quarter and another opportunity is offered every auxiliary to make a report of their work.

Let each superintendent of social service hear again the words of the Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me," and feel encouraged to make a report of her work, whether the things accomplished during the quarter he great or small.

Your Conference Superintendent is looking forward to the time when reports will be coming in. Don't disappoint her.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Meridian District was held in the Methodist Church at Shuhuta, Miss., August 11 and 12. Mrs. McQueen, the district secretary, presided over the meeting and made several interesting and earnest talks on the work. She made a splendid report on the work of the district. She urged, however, that the ladies consecrate themselves to more earnest and faithful endeavor in the future. There were many helpful and inspiring papers read, and, as a result, an added impetus was given to the missionary cause in this district.

The attendance was splendid. There were sixteen delegates in attendance besides the ladies from the home society. The societies of Central, Fifth Street, South Side, and East End Churches of Meridian were represented; besides, Wayneshoro and De Soto had delegates present. All sent in good reports.

An attractive feature of the session was the demonstration of the children's work by our Second Vice President, Mrs. Decell, on Friday afternoon. Mrs. Decell brought her little folks up from Waynesboro for this program and they made a splendid showing of the good work Mrs. Decell is doing. They were assisted by the children's society of Shubuta.

Mrs. Middleton, our first vice president, was then given the floor and made a splendid talk.

The conference closed Friday night with an inspiring sermon by Rev. H. B. Watkins, pastor of Central Church, Meridian.

Mrs. B. P. BROOKS, Secty.

OCTOBER THE MONTH FOR YOUR MISSION STUDY CAMPAIGN.

While busy with other affairs, do not forget or delay to organize your mission study class. No auxiliary can afford to he without one, for an informed auxiliary is surely a transformed one. This is the day of forward movement and the advance along all lines; so you would not he satisfied to sit idly hy and do as you've done for the past ten or fifteen years. Each day hrings added light to us, and if we do not live up to it ours will he the condemnation.

Why do we so earnestly urge mission study classes? Some one puts it very tersely in the following:

"Mission study
Broadens the mind's outlook,
Prompts original thought,
Stimulates reading,
Develops missionary ideals,
Strengthens life purposes,
Leads to intensive, systematic prayer,
Prompts systematic missionary giving,
Trains leaders."

PREACHING CHRIST IN A HEATHEN TEMPLE.

"A most wonderful thing recently happened here in East Changchow," writes Rev. John C. Hawk, a Southern Methodist missionary to China. "The temple of the Chinese God of War was turned over to us for ten days as a place. We pitched our tent in the large court in front and used the temple proper for a puipit. The people came and gave spiendid attention to the Gospei message.

"I have been predicting that the Confucian temples of China would eventually he turned into parks, puhlic utility buildings, and the like. Yesterday work was begun on the temple next door to our Mission property to transform it into a puhlic lihrary, tea garden, and playground. What a boon it will be to the poor of the community!"—Southern Missionary News Bureau.

"Prayer is attaching oneself to omnipotence."

Tetterine gives instant relief tn all skin diseases such as Eczema, Tetter, Ringworm, Ground Itch, etc., and constitutes a permanent remedy. 50c at druggist's or by mail from Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BLANCHE JEFFERSON, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The way to check a cold is to fight it from the first. Even the worst maiadies often are easiiy conquered if attacked early enough. Colds may leads to asthma, bronchial troubles and pulmonary affections. In the treatment of these one of the first needs is to build up body resistance.

Eckman's Alterative often has assisted in such upbuilding. As a treatment for the troubles named, it has been used for more than twenty years. And in many instances it has effected lasting relief.

As with any other medicine, it should he regarded only as a first aid to right care and hygienic living—and a safe one. For it contains no narcotics, opiates or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

From the Field

Auburn, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I began my revival meetings the third week in July at Ebenezer. Brother J. W. Thompson, of Meadville, Miss., did the preaching. He is a strong preacher and a Christian gentleman. There were no additions to the Church. Our second meeting was held the fourth week in August. Brother B. F. Lewis, of Hazlehurst, Miss., did the preaching. Brother Lewis is a preacher of unusual ability. Six were added to the Church. Our third meeting was held the last of August. Brother C. C. Griffin, of Biloxi, Miss., assisted me in this meeting at Johnston Station. Brother Griffin is a Strong preacher and a jovial companion anywhere you may chance to meet him. There were no additions to the Church. May the good Lord bless these brethren who labored so faithfully in my meetings. The Lord bless you, Mr. Editor.—Robert H. Barr, P. C.

Caledonia, Miss.

The revival meeting at the Methodist Church in Caledonia during the past week, held by Rev. T. E. Gregory, assisted by Rev. E. Nash Broyles, who did the preaching, resulted in much good. The church was revived and built up. The meeting was a success beyond a doubt as Mr. Broyles captivated the people from the very beginning of the meeting. The weather was ideal and the church was packed to overflowing at every night service, with a good attendance in the daytime. He is a strong preacher and a successful revivalist. His sermons were forcible, clear-cut and deeply spiritual. Judging from his talks to the children, he is far from being an ordinary preacher. The results of this meeting were 10 accessions to the Church, ranging from five to seventy-five years of age. Brother Broyles has a host of relatives here and needs no words of commendation, but we are glad to say that all were more than pleased with his work. He won the hearts of the people and impressed them with his deep consecration, his splendid preaching, and his freedom from eccentricites. He is manly, dignified and tender. He preaches the truth with plainness, directness and force. Friday was set apart as flower day, and it was one of the most effective services that has been witnessed in Caledonia in many a year. Rev. T. E Gregory reports having received over ninety into the church this summer on his work, and he has three more meetings yet to hold. Rev. H. Y. McCaleb also assisted in this revival meeting, doing some earnest preaching. Brother Gregory will begin a revival meeting at Andrews' chapel on Sunday, the 24th, and continue it during the week.—Columbus Dispatch.

Okolona Circuit, N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have finished our meetings for this year—five in all. Tranquil was the first, and in many respects it was a fine meeting. Eight were added to the Church on profession of faith. Notwithstanding the threatening and rainy weather, we had good congregations and great interest was manifested from the start. Brother S. B. Myers assisted me here and did some strong preaching. God bless him! I began at New Hope on the 2d of August and had to do the preaching myself. The Lord blessed us. This was one of the coldest of dead churches, but the people were greatly revived. We had 10 accessions on profession of faith and one by letter in this meeting. I slipped over on the Buena Vista Circuit and assisted Brother W. R. Williams at Boone's Chapel, and there we had the "old-time religion" manifested, and there were about 20 conversions. I then came back to my work at Thompson Memorial, and there we took in 4 on profession of faith. Then at Union we had a good interest and received 4 there, 3 on profession of faith. Our last meeting was held at Grady's Chapel. Here we had deep conviction and, I believe, the church was raised to a higher standard of living. I have never heard plainer, stronger, or more vital truths put to the people than were given us by Brother J. E. Thomas in this meeting. God bless him! Only one was received in this meeting, but eternity alone can disclose results. The Lord has blessed me beyond my expectations. I have received into the Church on this circuit 28 on profession of faith and 2 by letter, and the work has done better than for a good many years, though there still remains much room for improvement, and it would advance very much faster if I could succeed in putting the Advocate in every home. Summing up, this has been a good year with us. This is a good people and they could be such a wonderful light in the world if they would only let the Lord use them. God bless the Advocate!—C. R. A. Brantley, P. C.

Neglected Wounds Troublesome.

Did you ever notice how a small wound often festers and produces pus? That is a sign that the wound is becoming infected—it is the danger signal of blood poison. Don't neglect small wounds. Slight bruises, skin abrasions, sores, cuts, burns, pin pricks, etc., often cause blood poison which may prove fatal. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately to the affected part. It allays pain, heals the wound and prevents the serious and common after-effects. It has been used almost daily for ninety-six years by a multitude of families. Isn't that enough proof of its merit? RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas Prof. R. C. Pugh for six sessions wrought so faithfully and effectively in the Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose, Miss., and

Whereas he was a member and ardent supporter of the Waldo Moore Literary Society, and was influential in bringing many boys into our Society, and

Whereas he has gone to another field of labor; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we the members of the Waldo Moore Training Society do hereby express our appreciation of the high grade of service rendered our School and Society by him.

2. That we commend him to the people to whom he has gone to labor among; and that we shall always tender him a gracious welcome into our midst when circumstances may bring him among us.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Prof. Pugh, a copy spread on the Minutes of our Society, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: L. Clegg, B. H. Williams, E. M. Sumrall, Secretary, Committee.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

I was very much pleased to note in last week's issue of Advocate that Doctor I. W. Cooper had secured help from some of his friends in the Brookhaven District for the education of several young men from the district in Millsaps College. Those friends deserve the thanks of all the Mississippi Conference, preachers and laymen, and they will have the grateful appreciation of the young men who are their beneficiaries.

At the session of the Brookhaven District Conference in May, 1915, a Committee was appointed to secure funds for this very worthy purpose, and Doctor Cooper was made the chairman of that committee. He, with others of the committee, succeeded in getting funds for several young men last year. If this work, so much needed, can continue from year to year in a splendid organization of the men, and a wise distribution of the funds, there is a prospect of having a better prepared ministry for our Church.

A letter from Doctor Cooper about another matter has this sentence, which should be considered very carefully and prayerfully: "I am convinced that the salvation of our Church is in an educated ministry." This is not the first time that a conviction of this kind has been expressed, and it is time that the strong men of the Church are discovering that this is a place where they can invest their money to great advantage.

One of the younger men of the Conference, in remitting me his contribution of $5 for the helping of Brother McNeece and others who have been helped by the subscriptions of last winter, wrote me as follows: "Had the Church said to me (before entering the Conference) 'you are not prepared, and we cannot receive you,' I should have prepared myself." This is the sad situation that we meet frequently, and it should no longer be true that we do not provide for the education of those who feel the need of it.

In addition to what is being done, if the brethren who made subscriptions last winter, and who have not paid, would send me the amount subscribed, or a part of it, others might be helped in the same direction.

Let those who are still due on subscriptions please remit, or write me a letter saying why they cannot remit at this time.

O friend, we never choose the better part
Until we set the Cross up in the heart.
—Markham.

Christ is being as truly betrayed by some persons to-day as he was when he dwelt in Palestine in the flesh. And these modern Judases, like the one of old, are frequently men of high privileges, of whom the Church has a right to expect better things.

"He hath dealt bountifully with me." So wrote David concerning the Lord's course toward him. And thus He deals with all His servants. Never was one faithful to Him to whom He did not more than fulfill every promise. His best gifts are bestowed in overflowing measure.

Great Britain's greatness is especially shown in two things: her resolute will, and her capacity to mediate among other nations and enlist them in executing her purposes. Having gone to war with Germany and overreached her enemy in diplomacy, she shows no disposition to listen to the peace advocates until she has achieved the great ends that she has in view. Never was her primacy among the powers of the Old World more outstanding than it is to-day. Intelligence and determination are wonderful elements of strength either in an individual or in a people as a whole.

The laws of God cannot be repealed by men. This is true of the enactments of Deity in every realm. The force of gravity holds, no matter what finite beings may say or do. And so does the moral law, with the accompanying penalties for its violation. And so does the doom to death, which none may hope to escape. The wise man lives in recognition of these laws, knowing alike their universal sweep and immutability. They originated in infinite wisdom and love, and, rightly observed, they cannot but contribute to the future good and progress of mankind. He who established them rightly related them to the welfare of the human race and of the universe.

Be a constant worker for the Master. To the soul that is aflame with earnestness and which is on the lookout for opportunities, there is no day that does not bring open doors to useful service. The wayside sowing of our Lord bore a harvest that was marvelously rich. Think of the cases of the Samaritan woman at the well, of blind Bartimaeus, of Zacchaeus, and numerous others, which apparently were unanticipated, but which he quickly seized, accomplishing results that made the angels rejoice and which will prove as lasting as eternity. Such possibilities were not by any means restricted to the past. On the contrary, they never abounded more than they do at this time. Amid earth's toiling, struggling, and sorrowing millions are many hungry, needy hearts, the capacities of which, if won for Jesus and filled with the Spirit, no man could measure.

OUR WIDENING RESPONSIBILITY.

The United States has for years been the world's richest nation, and is steadily becoming increasingly so. Our wealth is now estimated at more than two hundred billion dollars, which is more than double that of Great Britain, the country that holds the second place. And the claim is made that there has never existed on the earth a nation that approximated ours in the value of its resources. Rome, in the days of her proudest glory; Greece, when at the height of her dazzling splendor; Babylon, with her magnificent hanging gardens, and the far-reaching empires of Charlemagne and Napoleon, have all been completely outstripped in affluence by this young Republic of the West.

The rapidity with which our country is piling up treasures was impressively set forth by Mr. John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the National Currency, in an address before the American Bankers' Association, in session at Kansas City, on September 26, who, among other things, said: "This country of ours, which in 1902 had already reached a pinnacle among the nations, has since that year doubled the volume of its business in virtually all the great cities of the land. If we should divide the new wealth created annually among all the men, women, and children engaged at work, they would have not far from a thousand dollars per year each. Our deposits in all the banks in the United States at present are so huge that if there should be withdrawn from these banks an amount of deposits equal to the total resources at this time of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Spain, the Bank of The Netherlands, the Bank of Norway, the Bank of Sweden, the National Bank of Switzerland, and the Imperial Bank of Japan, all combined, the deposits of our banks would still be as great as they were three years ago. If a balance should be struck to-day, the probability is that we would find ourselves, for the first time in our history, a distinctly creditor nation. We hold a mortgage on the world's physical assets; and the world holds a mortgage on our souls—on our good-will and broad nobility of purpose.

"Patriotic Americans have a right to gloat over such a showing with a swelling pride. Thoughtful Americans will find cause for fear that wealth may betray us into a rapacity and inequality of distribution that will mean destruction. We are in a world infinitely vaster than Rome knew. We can hold in it power and place far beyond the wildest vision of the proudest Roman. 'In all time of our tribulation, in all time of our prosperity, in the hour of death, and in the day of judgment, good Lord deliver us,' runs the Litany. Men as wise as Caesar Augustus wrote that for us to use in our prayers. They understood, as he did, that the dangers of prosperity are as deadly as those of adversity, death, and judgment.

"We have outgrown responsibility to our own country and generation. We have become responsible to the whole world, because we have become the supreme world power, especially in that vital department reaching to the root and core of all things which we here directly represent—the financial. It is for you, gentlemen, controlling the powerful banking interests of this supreme country, to determine whether these dollars of ours shall prey upon our country and the world with teeth and claws, or shall have souls put in them to upbuild, to help to heal the horrible scars of war, to lift the stricken to strength and hope."

Emanating from a high official of the Federal Government, and spoken to the Nation's leading financiers, these are indeed striking and significant words. And they are as wise as they are eloquent. The peril of handling large wealth is very great. This is shown in the fact that no Nation or Church has yet escaped the corrupting influence of the conditions that great riches inevitably create. And we cannot be blind to the fact that the amounts that our people are giving to the work of the Churches and to other worthy causes are pitiably small compared to the sums that are being squandered in needless self indulgence. A pure Christianity, that grips the conscience and produces a life that is Christlike in the use of all its resources, is the only hope of our nation and of the world.

THE TRAGEDY OF AN UNCHRISTIAN LIFE.

Apart from Jesus, how poor and unsatisfactory is the most successful life! In a few brief years it must end and all that has been acquired in the way of worldly possessions must be left behind. And none but the person who has lived as a Christian has any definite promise for the future. Nothing is sadder than a Christless old age with one's physical strength fast going, with the tomb inevitably near at hand, and no assurance as to what awaits one beyond it. See that you do not approach the end of life's pilgrimage in this condition!

THE MAINSPRING OF PHILANTHROPY.

In addressing the National Conference of Catholic Charities, which recently convened in Washington, D. C., Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic University in that city, is quoted as having said: "The modern philanthropist would improve man's material condition, forgetting that he has a soul. It is the aim of the Church to put the spirit of religion in work for the poor." This is an impressive statement of an important truth. Far too much of the benevolent activity of this age concerns itself only with the physical situation of the unfortunate and needy, and such ministrations soon lose the highest sanctions and the generous spirit of self-forgetful service. It is when we view man as an immortal being, vastly greater than anything else on earth and destined to live forever, that we are prepared to do most for him. It was by exalting him and teaching his worth that the Master set streams of philanthropy to flowing throughout the world. It is a most significant fact that all charitable and eleemosynary institutions are either directly or indirectly the products of Christianity; and if Christianity should cease to exist, they too would ultimately perish with it.

NO QUESTION IS EVER SETTLED UNTIL IT IS SETTLED RIGHT.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

However the battle is ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With fluttering flags and prancing nags
And echoing roll of drums,
Still truth proclaims this motto
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppressor
May grind the weak in the dust,
And the voices of fame with loud acclaim
May call him great and just,
Let those who applaud take warning,
And keep this motto in sight—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Let those who have failed take courage;
Though the enemy seems to have won,
Though his ranks are strong, if he be in the wrong
The battle is not yet done;
For, sure as the morning follows
The darkest hour of the night,
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

O man bowed down with labor!
O woman young, yet old!
O heart oppressed in the toiler's breast
And crushed by the power of gold!
Keep on with your weary battle Against triumphant might;
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

A REMARKABLE PRAYER.

(The following prayer was offered by Bishop E. E. Hoss at the dedication of our new Church Extension Building in Louisville, Ky., on Sunday afternoon, May 7, 1916. It is a supplication of such depth and sweep that we deem it worthy of publication in the Advocate. We have taken it from the Church Extension Hand Book.—Editor of Advocate.)

"O gracious God, our Heavenly Father, we lift up our hearts in adoration to Thee. Thou art very great; Thou art throned in the heavens; seraphims raise their voices day and night to say, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy glory; glory be to thee, O God most high. We, Thy humble creatures of the dust, and of a day, would mingle our feeble voices in the general acclaim. Wilt Thou bend Thy ear to hear our prayer and open Thy heart to receive it? Wilt Thou stretch forth Thy hand in beneficent answer?

"We acknowledge and bewail our manifold sins and wickedness which we from time to time have most grievously committed against Thee, provoking Thy just wrath and indignation against us. We have no good thing in us of ourselves; our lives at best even but poor and broken things. Even our highest endeavors have come to naught, and our holiest aspirations have failed of realization. We come before Thee in the spirit of repentance. God be merciful to us sinners; pardon all the offenses of our past lives; the sins of our childhood; the sins of our hot and hasty youth; the sins of our calculating and selfish middle life; the sins of our old age; yea, and if it be so that we have later gone astray from Thee, the sins of yesterday, and even of to-day. Forgive all our sins—not some of them, but all of them—for when Thou forgivest, Thou forgivest not grudgingly and in scanty measure, as if it were a strange and unwilling work, but Thou forgivest freely, like the great God thou art. Blot out all our iniquities and remember them against us no more forever.

"There be many among us who say, 'Show us thy God.' We live in an age of doubt; when the minds of men are turning back upon themselves to answer inquiries as to whether life is worth living at all. But we have a better recourse than that. We lift up our countenances unto Thee and then we rejoice more than they in the time of their corn and wine increase. We thank Thee for Thy manifold mercies to us; for the incarnation of Thy Son, the second person in the blessed Trinity, who took our human nature upon Himself, and in our humanity, which He wore as a working dress, bearing our sins in His own body upon the tree, and making atonement for them, who not merely made the sacrificial offering of His life, but went down into the dark recesses of the grave and wrestled with death, and overcame it, and emerged on the morning of the third day in the light and glory of that new life, leading captivity captive and giving the good news to men.

"We thank Thee, O God, for the Holy Spirit, whom, having received all power in heaven and earth, He hath sent forth to be His personal representative among men and the administrator of His redemption.

"We thank Thee for the organized Church; for the ministry; for the Holy Sacrament, and for all the means of grace and for the hope of glory. O Lord, we thank Thee for that part of the Church to which we providentially belong; the Church that has nourished and cared for us during our whole course upon the earth and that spreads its authority over us at this time. God be praised for the millions of men through all ages that belonged to the Methodist Church. We thank God for all its agencies and instrumentalities. And especially at this time would we be thankful for the organization of the Church Extension Society. God be praised for David Morton—for his courage, his wisdom, his integrity, his solidity, his persistency, for his noble life, for his triumphant death. And for Peter Whisner, who succeeded him, and carried on the good work. And for his younger servant, Dr. McMurry, who now bears the burden of this work upon his shoulders and upon his heart. God be praised that he has been able, in Thy providence, to rear and erect the new building in which the society is now to be housed. O, may this building long stand, a public testimony of our gratitude to Almighty God and to the liberal generosity of the Church to which we belong. And do Thou, O Lord, abundantly bless all the work of this Board of Church Extension in the future as in the past; may there never be a touch or stain of dishonesty upon any of its transactions. Save it always from any trace of selfishness or self-seeking. Let it always be controlled and dominated by the sole and single purpose of glorifying Thy great name. Protect and preserve the life of Thy servant, Dr. McMurry, and of all those who are associated with him in this great enterprise. Give them strength of body and mind and spirit for the tasks that have been laid upon them. Open the treasuries of the Church that more and more the resources of this world may be placed at their disposal for the purpose of accomplishing the ends for which this Board was created. Let great grace rest upon them from day to day and from year to year. May the spirit of God be here, flooding with his sanctifying and quickening presence all those who are here, for the honor and glory of Thy great name.

"Bless the whole Church to which we belong. We pray that more and more it may become a better Church, without spot or blemish, or any such thing, a victorious Church, waging a relentless war against the powers of darkness, and going forward with waving of banners and shouts to the final close of the war. Save us from any decline of faith. In every part of the Church may Thy Holy Spirit come with power, entering into the great congregations of the city and visiting with His manifold blessings little groups that are gathered together in the mountains and on the plains; yea, have a blessing for the humblest home that belongs to our fold.

"Nor do we pray for ourselves alone, but for the whole Church. We thank God that we belong to the one, united, universal Church of Jesus Christ; the Church that takes in all the saints, those that are to glory gone, those that are marching to the end of their career this day, and bless those that are to come after us. We thank Thee that the promise is not merely to us, but to all Thy children, and to all that are afar off, as many as the Lord shall call; the promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against this Church—not be overcome or cast down by the process of death. Generations may come and go; we shall follow our fathers to the grave, and our children shall follow us. O grant that increasing multitudes may follow them, and that down to the last record of time Thy Church may be abiding in full strength and increasing vigor and energy and enlarging glory and success.

"Hear us for our country, and for all the churches in it, and for all the churches the wide world over. God bless the missionaries in foreign lands, every one of them; where two or three are gathered together fulfill there Thy promise to appear among them.

"We beseech Thee, O Lord, bring speedy end to the terrible war now raging over yonder. O God of peace, hear our prayer, and bring to a speedy end the storm and tumult of war that floods the earth. Give us peace in our own land. We thank Thee that in Thy providence we have been spared and saved. We thank Thee for the Christian man at the head of our Government, a man who dreads the possibility of war and has done what he can to save us from it. Give him strength and wisdom and the support of the people, to the end that he may guide us wisely and to the glory of Thy great name.

"Listen to our prayers and accept them. 'Would they were worthy of Thee, but, Lord, because we have nothing else to give that is worth anything at all, we give Thee the tribute of our hearts. From the depths of our spirits we lift up our voices and return thanks and glory and honor and praise and majesty to Thy great name forever and ever. Amen."

REMEMBERED OR FORGOTTEN—WHICH?

By Rev. W. J. Snyder,
Of the Upper South Carolina Conference.

"Shall I be remembered after I am gone?" is a question that comes to every man. That it comes often and clamors for an answer is evidenced by the many ways in which men have ever endeavored to perpetuate the memory that once they lived and labored and loved.

The age-old query of Job, "If a man die shall he live again?" finds its counterpart in the question, "If a man die shall he be forgotten?"

The fear of sinking forever into oblivion has its foundation in the fact that the departure of even the great leaves hardly a ripple on the ocean of time. The grave is banked with flowers, soon to fade and crumble into dust; the mourners and friends turn away and return to the old paths of life; the world moves on and—forgets. True, in the fond heart of parent or child there will linger for years a memory of the face and form, but ere long that heart, too, will be stilled and—who remembers then?

This longing for an earthly immortality finds expression in many ways. Each of us would be remembered for the virtues we possessed and for the good we may have done. The polished shaft or simple slab in every cemetery attests this fact. Over faults and frailties the mantle of charity gently falls while virtues are carved in the rock.

A world conqueror desires to be remembered not for the blood he shed but the good he did, and so with means gathered at the point of the sword he builds a city and gives it his name. A Carnegie carves his name in stone over the doors of the many libraries his wealth makes possible. A Lawson pays a florist $50,000 to name a carnation for his wife, and whenever a Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson pink decorates a bride or a bier its marvelous beauty recalls her for whom it was named. Lord Raglan would long ago have been a memory as evanescent as the cloud that floated in last year's sky were it not for the garment which bears his name. Who could have told in a year's time the name of the hero, for hero he was, who gave his life that the Atlantic might be wedded to the Pacific, if our President had not changed the name of Culebra to Gaillard Cut? And thus it goes, man longing for his name to live and striving to find some way in which to perpetuate it.

Another desire of the human heart is that the good which a man does shall live after he is gone. Of course it is known in a general way that influence never dies, but the mind yearns for something tangible with which to continue that influence. In order to gratify this commendable desire men have endowed charitable and other institutions so that their money will continue to work after they have passed to the great beyond. That the gratifying of both these desires was within the range of possibility for every one who wished to make them a reality seemed almost too good to be true till the thought found expression in one of the great enterprises of our own Church. Your name or the names of your loved ones need never be forgotten, and untold thousands will rise up and call you blessed for the good you do, even to the end of time. This desirable combination is to be found in the Memorial Loan Fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Would you fittingly memorialize your departed loved one and also mark the resting place of that body so dear? A simple slab will designate the spot as well as a magnificent mausoleum, while the difference in cost, invested in a Memorial Loan Fund bearing the name of the one dear to you will from year to year be speeding on its mission of building churches and blessing humanity. Moreover, in the archives of the Church and in every annual issue of the book which tells of the work will appear the name of the one whose memory made the loan possible.

Each year the memorial, increased by the interest, becomes more efficient and productive of greater good, till in a hundred or a thousand years no one could estimate the amount of work accomplished. The territory in which the loan shall be placed may be designated by the donor, who has the privilege of saying whether it is to be administered throughout the entire connection or within the bounds of a certain Annual Conference, or even in the district where the one memorialized lived and labored.

Thus at home or in distant lands, the ministry of a life will continue to bless mankind till the time when the redeemed turn away from temples built with hands to worship in the City of our God, the Holy Jerusalem, which has "no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."

Would you like to invest in a memorial of this kind? Then write to the Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Ky., and all necessary information will be gladly furnished.

THE UNION QUESTION.

Rev. James H. Felts,
Presiding Elder, Holly Springs District.

Mere bigness has no special attraction for me. I have no greater admiration for an elephant than I have for a good horse. I am by no means sure that the larger Church is the more efficient. Gideon was more efficient with the smaller company. The Church of many millions makes a greater show, but it is yet to be demonstrated that it serves the Lord or humanity more truly. The Roman Catholic Church is a good example. Even the Church of England became bloated with numbers and importance to arroganee and exclusiveness. It took a Wesley to demonstrate anew the power of God to save all who believed; to bring the gospel to the masses. Even the Master cheered John by telling him that the "gospel was preached to the poor." So long as we have worked on this gospel line we have had prosperity. In proportion to our increase in wealth and numbers we have drifted away from the simplicity that appeals to the rank and file. There should never have been any occasion for the organization of the Salvation Army. If the larger Churches of Protestantism had done their duty there would not have been. Power is dangerous. The Lord's army has never been found in any one organization—probably never will be, despite the claims of certain well known divisions. We stand a good chance to lose more in one direction than we will gain in the other. I believe the Cumberland Presbyterian Church was a better force for good in the South than the U. S. A. people are ever likely to be. When we get blinded by the sight of the "loaves and fishes," our day of effectiveness as a saving ageney is past. I am not convinced that union is even "desirable" at this time.

I am ready to make every honorable concession necessary to bring about real federation. I am ready to have a clear understanding with other Protestant bodies as to territory to be occupied. But granting that the time is ripe for union, there are some things that must be settled, AND SETTLED FOREVER, before we can hope for real union. All discussion is tentative at present. The whole Church must be heard from, else we will have both union and disintegration. Twenty-five good men and more than one General Conference are not sufficient. It is easier to transfer property than men. Church relationship is voluntary. We may change when we will. Union is revolution. It is a new organization that is appealing to us. The Church of our fathers is no more. Church loyalty can no longer be successfully pleaded. The one important question remaining to be answered is, to my way of thinking, can we carry the whole Church with us? Can we hold our Southern constituency? I am not disturbed because of the border situation. It is the great heart of the Church that I am thinking about. I so seriously doubt our ability to carry the whole Church with us that I am unalterably opposed to union at this time. To face a season of disintegration, bickering, strife, war over property, and a sadly weakened Church struggling against great odds to maintain itself is not inviting. And this to satisfy the leaders! The whole Church must be consulted and heard. If that is done many years will come and go before we unite. Let us federate, fraternize, eliminate altar against altar, settle the negro question, practice both the spirit and letter of real brotherhood on our border lines, take Northern Bishops from our territory and send them where they have a real field, cooperate in all our mission territory, eliminate some of the political features that mark the Northern Church, create a proper sentiment among our own people—then union will come so normally that friction will scarcely be known.

"But our leaders are doing so and so." Yes, yes: I have heard and seen a little. How far can leaders go without followers? Where lands the head when feet and hands fail to follow? How interesting is the 12th Chapter of 1 Corinthians: "And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary; and those members of the body, which we think to be less honorable, upon those we bestow more abundant honor." Covet earnestly the biggest Church in America; yet show I unto you a more excellent plan. With thousands of our sons and daughters finding Church homes elsewhere, we would be discounted and shamed in the land of our birth. Our boast of reaching the masses would become a reminiscent dream. All the wealth of the North, and all the prestige of a great organization would not carry a single Southern man or woman who is not in sympathy with the movement. Unity of sentiment must precede union. It will be poor comfort to talk about what we should have done when we see our sons and daughters uniting with other Churches, or struggling to maintain a depleted organization of their own.

If you think that other denominations will not take advantage of the situation, you "have another think coming." I have already met it in a small way. More, some of our own have discussed in my presence "What Church I will join when union comes." Even a vote of the General Conference and all the Annual Conferences will not meet this emergeney. IT MUST COME TO THE CHURCH CONFERENCES. We cannot consult our own personal preference and honor God or the Church. We can take church property by law. But we Methodists have learned to distrust the courts in these later days when it comes to passing on church property. Our people must go with us if we are to have union. "Better be safe than sorry." Better create sentiment first—not just HEAD sentiment, but eye, ear, feet, hands—then we may come together in a way that may preserve our high ideals, honor our God, and save our people.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

There is a sure way of prosperity. It has never failed and never can. The following rules, observed by all the members of any church, will ensure good days. If the church is decaying, the decay will soon be arrested. If it is standing still, it will soon begin to grow. If it is already flourishing, it will grow more rapidly:

(1) Attend all services regularly. If possible, be on time; you need at least five minutes after coming in to get a seat and to compose body and mind for the service.

(2) Never miss a service needlessly. If you have visitors, invite them to go with you; they will respect you more as a Christian if you are faithful to your duty.

(3) If it rains or snows, make a special effort to go. Our churches stand much in need of storm-proof religion.

(4) Take part in the service. You go to worship, not to be entertained.

(5) Be devout in your attitude; all whispering should be studiously avoided. Find the hymn, and sing if you can; and share the book with your neighbor.

(6) Speak to strangers, and invite them to come again. A hearty handshake will add much weight to the invitation.

(7) Be friendly to all. Remember, hand-shaking has not gone out of fashion. A hearty Christian greeting means much by way of cheer, comfort, and encouragement.

(8) Accept gladly any work assigned you. If some one is struggling under a load, take hold and help. At least, do not increase the burden.

(9) Never encourage strife, but be a peace-maker. Peace-makers, you know, are called "the children of God."

(10) Avoid gossip as you would an enemy: it is one of Satan's best agents for starting church troubles.

(11) Give cheerfully, according to your ability. The Lord has dealt bountifully with you, hence you should be liberal with His cause.

(12) Think of the services through the week, speak of them to others, and pray that they may be attended with divine blessing.

(13) Pray for the sick and the poor. Help the Lord to answer your prayers.

(14) Pray for the clergyman. His usefulness will be greatly increased by the daily prayers of all the people.

(15) Pray for some unsaved soul in particular.

(16) Pray, pray, pray! Keep on praying. No Christian should be behind in his prayer accounts.

(17) It is a great deal braver to try to do something to better the condition of things than to stand and criticize. If you mean to help along, don't get in front and block the way. Get behind and push. You will then see how little you feel like finding fault with the burden-bearers after you have shouldered your part of the load.—Canadian Churchman.

One must often consider not what the wise think, but what the foolish will say.—Arthur Helps.

M. T. BYNUM,
Treasurer Board of Missions, N. Miss. Conf.

DR. E. H. RANDLE DEAD.

The following dispatch was sent to the Times-Picayune from Hernando, Miss., on September 28:

"Prof. E. H. Randle, A.M., LL.D., one of the most widely known educators and scientific writers in the South, died at his home here yesterday, Sept. 27, 1916. He spent nearly fifty years as a teacher, having taught at McKenzie, Tenn.; Paducah, Ky.; Ripley, Tenn.; Byhalia, Miss., and Hernando, Miss. He was an author in the scientific world. The books published by him were: 'Plurality of Human Race,' 'The Characteristics of the Southern Negro,' 'Antagonisms of Forces in Nature.'"

It is with sincere sorrow that we chronicle the decease of Dr. Randle, who was a man of picturesque and unusually forceful personality. He had an inquiring mind which never ceased to reach out after knowledge, and he was a Southern gentleman of the old school, courteous, chivalric, and possessed of high ideals. He was an ardent Southern Methodist and a devout believer in the Christian religion. What men they grew in the days of the ante-bellum South! They are swiftly passing from among us, and we fear that we shall never behold their like again.

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

CHALLENGE OF THE FERNWOOD CHARGE.

Mississippi Conference.

The Fernwood charge pledges $1000 to the Galloway Endowment Fund for old preachers, and asks that the other pastoral charges of the Conference provide $6000. This pledge was made when it was learned that $7000 added to the $18,000 now bearing interest would enable the Endowment Board to assist the Joint Board of Finance in retiring ten old preachers on $500 annually. In response the Endowment Board urges that on the second Sunday in October this generous proposal be announced in all our pastoral charges and a collection be taken for this fund. The Board also urges that during the second week in October the collectors appointed by the presiding elders canvass the district to secure, if possible, the entire amount.

The collectors by districts are as follows: Jackson District, Mr. T. B. Lampton and Rev. W. M. Sullivan; Hattiesburg, Mr. J. A. McLeod and Rev. W. M. Williams; Meridian, Rev. H. B. Watkins and Rev. O. S. Lewis; Seashore, Rev. W. B. Jones and T. M. Evans; Newton, Rev. C. M. Crossley and G. G. Beaman; Port Gibson, Rev. C. M. Chapman, Rev. C. F. Emery; Brookhaven, Rev. J. M. Morso and Rev. N. B. Harmon. Prayerful, persistent work in the interest of this fund will enable the Mississippi Conference in a few years to retire all of her old preachers on $500 annually. Be sure to take the collection and help the collectors in their canvass. Send the cash to Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Port Gibson, Miss., and report the amount immediately to one of the collectors in your district.

By order of Endowment Board,
N. B. HARMON.

A GREAT WORKER.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of this city, presiding elder of the Lexington District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has closed his work for the year and is ready for the Annual Conference, which will be held at Nicholasville, beginning September 20, with Bishop James Atkins presiding.

The report of Dr. Mann just completed and which will be submitted at the coming Conference, shows him to have been one of the most active ministers connected with the Church in the United States. His achievements during the past year, from September, 1915, to September, 1916, are truly phenomenal, as will be seen from the following summary:

Held sixty quarterly meetings as presiding elder of the Lexington District.

Conducted revival meetings at Hazard, Irvine, Red House, Somerset, Waco, Ky., and Washington Spring, South Dakota, thirteen weeks in all.

Made special visits during the year to Nashville, Tenn.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Columbus, O.; Clarksburg, W. Va.; Lake Junaluska, N. C.; and delivered special sermons or addresses at each place.

Preached 275 sermons. Had 217 conversions at the various revival meetings. Traveled a total of thirteen thousand miles.

Served as business manager and editor-in-chief of the Central Methodist.

Served as president of the Board of Education of the Kentucky Conference.

Served as member of the campaign committee in raising endowment funds for Kentucky Wesleyan College at Winchester.

Served as member of the National Commission on the Church and Country Life.

TO LOUISIANA METHODISTS.

I again urge you to observe our Annual Work Day, for the benefit of the Orphanage. Our needs are imperative, and we are solely dependent on the results of "Work Day" for the funds needful to meet our ever-increasing obligations and to carry us through the winter. The children we now have on hand, and that we have already agreed to take at once, brings our number to 120—ten more children than we have ever had before.

We have no assessment, and none of the Conference money will go toward the support of the Orphanage. Your opportunity to give is "Work Day," Saturday, October 14, and Sunday, at Church and Sunday school, October 15. Please specify that your gift is for the Orphanage, so that it will not be confused with other collections that may be taken on that day. Or send your donation direct to the Orphanage at Ruston.

God has gloriously blessed our land. We have been preserved in peace. Prosperity is abroad in the land. Yet there was never a time when the cry of the dependent and homeless child was as distressing or more frequent than now. Help us to meet this cry and relieve this distress by giving of one day's labor to the Orphanage. If all our people would respond to this appeal, and have the children of the Sunday schools bring in their donations, the relief and help that would be given to this great work would be an impetus that would lead on to greater and better things for the many children of our land who are crying for a home and a chance in life.

We urge every Methodist, and every man with a heart, to help this great cause on "Work Day," followed by "Harvest Day," Sunday, October 15. May the blessings of God, the "Father of the fatherless," be with you all. Faithfully,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.
Ruston, La., Sept. 30, 1916.

Treas. Mississippi Conf Bd of Missions
Hattiesburg, Miss., Sept. 30, 1916.

MRS. RANSON J. JONES.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been a little dilatory in announcing through the columns of the Advocate the death on September 18, 1916, of Mrs. Sarah Mounger Jones, the widow of the late Rev. R. J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference. While feeble, her health had been fairly good and she was only confined to her bed for one day, when the Messenger of God called her home. Since the death of Brother Jones in 1901, she had made her home with children here and patiently, calmly, devoutly awaited her coronation. For forty-three years she was the devoted wife of a sturdy itinerant preacher. She was a sister of Dr. E. H. Mounger, who was present at the funeral. Two daughters preceded her to the better world. Three sons abide.

Her funeral took place at East End Church, Meridian, on the afternoon of September 19. The undersigned was assisted in the funeral by Revs. J. T. Leggett, Jno. A. Moore, A. M. Broadfoot, H. A. Gatlin, C. E. Downer, and J. A. Bowen. A suitable memoir will doubtless be furnished the Advocate.

H. B. WATKINS.
Meridian, Miss.

I desire no other evidence of the truth of Christianity than the Lord's Prayer.—Madam de Stael.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Church News

Bishop W. A. Quayle, of the Northern Methodist Church, will soon have issued a new volume, entitled "Recovered Yesterdays in Literature."

Bishop Murrah has just held the Louisville Conference, which convened at Franklin, Ky., on September 27. His presidency gave great satisfaction.

Dr. C. C. Woods, Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, was elected Secretary of the Southwest Missouri Conference for the forty-first time at its late session.

According to the Pacific Methodist Advocate, the Columbia Conference, at its recent session at Corvallis, Oregon, voted against increasing the lay representation in the Annual Conferences by the ex-officio method.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Godbey, of Kirkwood, Mo., have recently donated to the Church Extension Board of the M. E. Church, South, the sum of $20,000. They will receive an annuity on this gift during their lifetime.

A charter for a chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society at the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchhurg, Va., has been granted. This is an honorary college fraternity, membership in which is based on scholarship.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate states that President Jenkins, hecause of a lack of room for them, has heen forced to refuse admission to ahout 75 young ladies who desired to enter the Wesleyan College for Young Women, at Macon, Ga.

Bishop Wilson Lawrence thinks that the $5,000,000 fund for retlred ministers which the Protestant Episcopal Church has been raising will be in hand by next March. Of the $500,000 that the diocese of Massachusetts was expected to raise, $360,000 has already been secured.

It is stated that the publication of the Methodist Advocate, which has heen the organ of the Western Virginia Conference, will be discontinued. Rev. W. I. Canter, who has been the editor of this periodical, has done his work well, and we shall regret to see him retire from the tripod.

The Faculty of the Candler School of Theology recently adopted resolutions highly commendatory of the work of Professor Julius Magath, who filled the Chalr of Hebrew and Old Testament Literature during the past year in the absence of Dr. Shelton, who was engaged in doing some postgraduate study.

Rev. Gardiner L. Tucker, the Episcopalian rector at Houma, La., has accepted the positlon of Field Secretary of Education for his Church in a dlstrict composed of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, and Kentucky. Mr. Tucker will enter upon his new work on November 1.

Dr. Andrew Gillies, one of the most successful and best known pastors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will take a year's rest on account of the state of his health. Dr. Gillies was a guest of Bishop Thirkield in New Orleans a couple of years ago and is pleasantly remembered in the Crescent City.

Mrs. Lucy Kidd Key, the wife of Bishop J. S. Key and President of the North Texas Female College, at Sherman, Texas, died on September 13, after a brief illness. Mrs. Key was formerly connected with Whitworth College, at Brookhaven. Miss., where she wrought with great efficiency as an educator. She was a woman of unusual capacity and force. Bishop Key will have the sympathy of a host of friends throughout the Church in his bereavement.

We take the following from the Baltimore Southern Methodist of September 21: "Judge William L. Chambers, of the United States Board of Mediation and Concillation, writes that Bishop Wilson's sermons at the recent session of the Washington District Conference at Goshen on 'The More Ahundant Life' and 'Believest Thou This?' were as fine as he ever heard from human lips. Bishop Wilson is also reported to have lately delivered a great discourse at Trinity Church, Baltimore. He is certainly a most remarkable man.

A CHALLENGE OF A MILLION.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D. D.

Talk of a million for foreign mlssions stirs the red hlood. We have not long been using seven figures in our missionary reckoning. Many of us remember how we were startled when Chaplain McCabe raised the slogan, "A million for missions," in the M. E. Church twenty-five years ago. We remember, too, the enthusiasm it created. They got it. Now they are close to $2,000,000, exclusive of the Woman's Board.

We have quietly crept up close to a million, including what the women raise—so close we ought to reach it this year. It looks more and more as if we shall. The Conferences that have met are showing progress, and those yet to meet report encouragement. It is a great year financially. Farmers are getting record-breaking prices for a heavy yield. Prosperity smiles on our Southland. If we dld well when the financial storm cloud lowered, what may we not do when the skies are serene and sunny, and plenty smiles on every hand? If there was ever a time when we should go out on a full tide, it is now. Shall we not unite to do it?

The Church is meeting the challenge. A preacher writes: "Unless some calamity happens, thls Conference is going way beyond anything it has ever done."

Another writes: "I am with you for the million. Am going to turn in my Sunday school money as a special."

A presiding elder says: "My district paid seventy per cent of the assessments last year. We have nlnety per cent already and expect to make it one hundred."

Another elder: "My district will pay out on everything. We shall then want you to help us put on a worthy special."

We are ahead of last year on all the regular sources of income. We should keep ahead and get further ahead.

Think of what it will mean to raise a round million in one year for forelgn missions! It will begin to look as if we are in earnest. Not so desperately in earnest, but getting out of the play stage. It will be only fifty cents apiece on an average for our blg, husky 2,000,000 people, but what a lot of these 2,000,000 half-dollars will do! Therefore, let's gather them in from the churches, Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, Missionary Societies—then send them in before they run any risk of nestling into a cozy, neglected corner.

After all, big things like this are never done till some loyal souls with full-grown ideals give more than their share. They are the make-sure contingent. When you call out the reserves they fall into line. They are those of whom the Apostle could write: "For to their power I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves." It has always been so. It was so last year—it will be so this year. A thousand people will read these lines into whose hearts there will come a great, glad desire and prayer that we may cross the million line. That will mean a call to search and see if there are not means in their keeping that would help make sure. If the good impulse is obeyed, that one little thousand—you and 999 others—will turn a beautiful hope into a glad realization. So before you lay down this paper make up your mind how much you wish us to get our million. Then make a check and send it in for the "Milloin Dollar Fund." Last year the Emergency Contributions saved the day. The same loyalty this year will crown the day.

I am almost afraid to mention what it will take to reach thls figure. It is almost too good to be true; it will do so many things that will have to wait unless we get the million.

Pray that you and we aud all the Church may be led to do His will and do it now.

IN THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

I have just received a letter from Dr. Rawlings, and, with it, a copy of the resolutions passed at the recent Conference of laymen at Junaluska. To my great delight and pleasure, the resolution passed here at our District Conference urging the pastors to use their laymen more, especially in the near-by places, was adopted there. I sent Dr. Rawlings a letter about what we had done here. I am anxious to visit all the churches in the district each year, but the pastors are slow about making an appointment for me. I hope this little hint will suggest to a pastor who has promised a date but failed to make it, that he must not wait too long.

I have visited many places, and everywhere the people were most kind and cordial. They listened attentively to the message that I brought, and even the children heard of things beyond the seas without restlessness. Dr. Meek, I was so glad to see the children attending church everywhere—except one place. It is a splendid habit for parents to form in their children, and over this district it looked so beautiful to me to see the father, mother and children in their pews, listening to the reading of the Word.

I do not think any one could be more popular than our elder—Dr. Jones. He is loved everywhere for his splendid ability and sweet spirit. Bishop Atkins could not have made a happier selection. Privately, I may add that Dr. Jones is just a "wee bit" proud of his nicely renovated parsonage, and we hope he will occupy it for the next three years.

Doctor, accept my thanks for the nice personal note in the Advocate of recent date. Unfortunately it was my brother—Dr. George C. Ballard—a member of the "Reserve Officers' Corps," who was needed and ordered to active duty. He is at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, now, and delighted with his work. I served many years, and was commended for my work, but so far they have not indicated that I would be used in the near future.

This is the prize district in the Conference, and we hope to keep up the high standard we have always made. I hope to visit many more places before Conference, and do all that I can to get laymen interested in God's work. Dr. Meek, had you ever thought of the fact that the very first recorded words of the blessed Master indicated activity? "I must be about my Father's business." He never tired, and took no vacations, but was always at work, and not once did he teach any negative religion. His whole teaching was work—"Do," was the keynote of his life. And I may add that I never saw a lazy Christian! Lots of lazy church members, but Christianity means activity, and a busy Christian is the only happy one.

With best wishes,

Biloxi, Miss. J. C. BALLARD, Lay Leader.

MORE PEAS ON THE STICK.

Marion Foss.

While dining one day in the country
With some very good friends of mine,
They served, with other good things to eat,
Fresh corn from their garden so fine.
It afforded us great amusement
When their dear little son named "Nick,"
Having finished one ear, said: "Daddy,
Please put some more peas on this stick."

We laugbed at the cute little fellow,
For the wonderful faith he had
That all of his wants could be supplied
By voicing them thus to his dad.
Then I thougbt of God's earthly children,
Whose clouds of despair would be thick
If they couldn't depend on their Father
To put all their "peas on a stick!"

A BEAUTIFUL SECRET.

Visiting a great factory one day, I went through a room where young girls were fastening hooks and eyes upon cardboard. Their fingers fairly flew!

Among them I noticed an old woman busy at the same work. Her fingers were crooked and worn by bard work. I knew she could not keep pace with the nimble young fingers about her: and I wondered why she was there. I think you, too, would like to know.

Months before she came begging for work. She sadly needed it, for she had a sick husband to support. Seeing the girls at their work, she said she could do what they were doing. The superintendent knew that she would be awkward and slow, and he tried to discourage her. But she begged for a chance; so he gave her a place at the long bench with the girls. It was slow work, and, as she was paid by the piece, she could earn but little. Yet she persevered. And after a while her pile of finished work began to grow strangely fast. There was a beautiful secret about it.

Some of the girls, pitying her, were slipping some of their cards onto her pile; and it was wonderful how they enjoyed seeing it grow. Of course, her pay increased. Soon she was receiving almost as much as the others, and she was able to keep her little home in comfort. When Christmas came the girls gave her a purse with $20 in it. "Is all this mine?" she said. "I never had so much money in my life!"

The story made me think of that verse, "Bear ye one another's burdens."—Frank T. Bayley.

LIGHT IN DARK PLACES.

They sat so near me in the car that I could not help hearing what was said—that pale, sweet-faced little woman and her fair-haired little boy of perhaps seven or eight summers. She was dressed in plain black, and as I am fond of making out histories in my mind of those with whom I am brought in contact in traveling, I imagined her to be a widow, and this winsome boy her only child. I was interested to watch the two, and I seemed to feel in my own heart the strong cord of love which bound them together. He had been looking out at the window, making remarks on what he saw in passing, when his attention was attracted to one of the train hands, who came in with his step-ladder and, mounting upon it, began to light the lamps.

"Why see, mamma," said the child, "what is he lighting lamps for? The sun is shining, and it is bright day. Why does he light lamps now?"

"Perhaps there is a dark place ahead, and he wants to be prepared for it," was the reply.

"Is there a dark place ahead? Have you seen it?" said the child.

"I don't know, dear; I have never traveled on this road before, but I presume that man has many a time. Some of these men almost live in the cars, and they know all about the road, the dark places and all."

"Perhaps he's made a mistake, mamma; I don't see any dark place at all."

"Wait, my boy, and we shall see."

The boy was quiet for a few moments, intently watching "for the dark to come," as he expressed it. Soon the train began to move into a tunnel. At first the darkness was hardly perceptible, but it increased until everything outside the train was quite shut out from view.

"Yes, it has come; he did know," said the boy. "Isn't it nice to travel with somebody who has gone the same way before, and who knows all about the dark places, so he can make a light before we get to them?"

"Yes, dear, mamma has found it so all her life," said the mother, with a sweet smile irradiating her face; "and see, darling, now we are coming out into the light and can see the houses and trees again."

The child clapped his hands softly and said, "Yes, but I didn't know you had traveled so very much, mamma; you have so often been sick since I can remember."

"My dear," said the mother, "I was thinking of my life journey. You know we are not to live here forever; we are simply on a journey through this world, in which there are many dark places—on a journey to our heavenly home. And I was thinking how Jesus, 'the light of the world,' whom we sing about, had always lighted up all the dark places for me, even when dear papa was taken so suddenly away from us."

"Has he always done it for you, mamma?"

"Yes, always darling, and I was praying that He might light up the dark places for my boy, as He has for me. He will, if you let Him."

"I will let Him, mamma; I will, indeed," said the boy. And he put his hand confidingly in hers. "I should have been afraid to go through that long tunnel in the dark, but I wasn't a bit afraid when the lamps were lighted. I hope Jesus will light up the dark places for me."

"God grant it," said the mother; and my own heart echoed her earnest prayer.

"Jesus will light up the dark places if we will let Him." How many times I thought of those words in the coming weeks; for I was on my way to care for a loved one who was going down into the valley of the shadow of death; and how beautifully did Jesus light up all the way till she left us to "shine in the light of God!"

The first dark place Jesus wants to light up for us is our own dark hearts. We must repent of our sins; we must seek forgiveness; we must bid Jesus come in and make the place all clean for himself, so he can dwell there. And then we must "walk in the light," following Jesus, doing just as we think Jesus would have us. We must welcome the light, too. We must listen and obey. As we listen and obey we have fellowship with Jesus. We live with him, and often—for all must be told—we suffer with him. But, oh! how sweetly and blessedly he lights up all the dark places; yes, lights them up before we get there, and then our souls are glad in the Lord, and we learn to sing:

Oh! wondrous bliss, oh! joy sublime,
I've Jesus with me all the time.

It is impossible to have fellowship with Jesus and yet walk in darkness (1 John 1:6), and we only walk in fellowship as we walk in the light, with his precious blood cleansing us from all sin (1 John 1:7), and we only walk in the light as we are in a position of sonship before God, "by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost."—Times of Refresbing.

THE LITTLE BOY AND THE BIG UMBRELLA.

By Susan M. Griffitb.

The little boy stepped out of the school building just as it began to rain, and the big umbrella went up over bim like a small tent. You could hardly see the little boy under it, for he was so very little and the umbrella was so very big; but if you took pains to stoop down and take a peep at him, you would see a very nice boy with apple-red cheeks and such dear blue eyes, and a mouth that knew how to smile instead of to pout.

"Halloo, Edgar," said somebody; "where'd you get so much umbrella?"

"It belongs to my Grandpa Gray," said the little boy proudly. "He lent it to me cause my mother can't afford to buy me one. Ain't it nice? It never leaks a speck, no matter how hard it rains, and it covers me all over."

"I should say it did," said another little somebody. "You look like a toad under a cabbage leaf."

"You be another toad and get under my cabbage leaf with me, then," said the little boy generously. "You haven't any umbrella at all and neither has Davy Wilson. It's plenty big enough for all of us, my Grandpa Gray's umbrella is, and those two little girls who haven't got any, they can walk in under it, too, right along in front of us, so' It'll cover every one of us, you see'"

And so it did, and pretty soon the big umbrella moved down the sidewalk sheltering five little people from the storm, and the teachers stood watching it and saying to each other. "That dear little Edgar Gray is the kindest, most thoughtful little boy I ever saw."

The little boy and the big umbrella had to go a good deal out of their way in order to leave the little people at their homes.

But, by-and-by, the little boy and the big umbrella were left alone, and then they started home, bobbing and whistling. But they had not gone far when the little boy saw a young lady, with her arms full of packages, waiting for a street car. It was raining pretty hard and the young lady had no umbrella, and she was greatly astonished to see one approaching her and a sweet, little voice under it saying, "If you please, ma'am, if you'll hold it, I'll hold the packages for you. I can't reach your hat, and it'll be all spoiled."

"You certainly are the very nicest little boy I ever saw in all my life," said the young lady, "and this is the best umbrella." And she gave the little boy a kiss and the umbrella a bright silver dime for their kindly service; but, of course, the little boy had to take care of the dime.

Now, what do you think of the little boy and the big umbrella?"—The Child's Hour.

"I can't find any old clothes to put on the scarecrow," said the farmer. "You might use some of the fancy duds our boy Josh brought home from college," suggested his wife. "I'm only tryin' to scare the crows; not to make 'em laugh themselves to death."—Harvard Lampoon

A GREAT OCCASION.

From a personal note from Bishop W. A. Candler, we take the liberty of extracting the following:

"The formal opening of the Lamar School of Law of Emory University was a pronounced success. All the courts in the city of Atlanta, including every tribunal from the Supreme Bench to the Trial Justices, adjourned, and went in bodies to the campus. Multitudes were gathered there, embracing people from all over Georgia and from many other Southern States. The address of the Hon. Cone Johnson, the Solicitor of the State Department at Washington, was very fine; and, best of all, he declared himself unequivocably in favor of denominational education, and insisted that it is the hope of the country in the educational field. His utterances impressed every one who heard him, and I was particularly pleased because it gives our Law School a religious impulse at the outset."

The opening of this department of our new eastern University marks another forward step in the establishment of that fast-growing institution which is so close to the hearts of Southern Mehodists, and we heartily congratulate the distinguished Chancellor and his co-laborers upon this splendid achievement. This event is one of special interest to Mississippians, since the Emory Law School hears the honored name of L. Q. C. Lamar, one of the most illustrious statesmen and publicists that their commonwealth has given to the Nation. They cannot hut feel highly gratified that this department with which his fame is inseparably linked has hegun its career under circumstances so auspicious, and they will cherish an imperishable pride in it through the coming years.

As most of our readers perhaps know, the Lamar School of Law is splendidly housed in one of the wings of a magnificent new building which has just been erected on the new Emory Campus in Atlanta, and Mississippi has assumed the privilege of raising $50,000 to cover the cost of this part of this handsome new structure. The work of securing this money has been committed to Rev. Robert Selby, who is giving his whole time to the undertaking, and whose address is 726 N. Jefferson Street, Jackson, Miss. It ought to he raised at an early date, and to this end all our pastors and people should speediiy lend him a helping hand. Open your pulpits to him, brethren, and assist him in bringing this meritorious cause to the attention of the public. The Mississippi laymen in particular should take an active part in consummating this nohle endeavor. That it will succeed there is no doubt; but why dilly-dally with it? Such a course is unnecessary, and so patriotic and appealing a call should he promptly and generously met. Why not sit down and write Commissioner Selhy on the suhject at once? It would greatly please him to have you do so.

Some may ask, Why should a Church concern itself with the maintenance of a law school? We answer, because every form of proper education needs to be conducted under religious auspices. If we are to have lawyers at all, society will he immensely advantaged by having them to be Christian lawyers, dominated hy sound principles and possessed of high ideals. Such a class of citizens can exert an immeasurahle influence for good.

A VIGOROUS AND SUGGESTIVE ARTICLE.

In our opinion, nothing more suggestive has heen written on the union question for our Church press than the article by Rev. J. H. Felts, which we are puhlishing this week. Brother Felts is a wide-awake and capahle presiding elder and is in direct touch with a considerahle number of our people. He knows how they feel and what they are saying, and he therefore speaks from a first-hand knowledge. We ourself were in North Mississippi a part of week hefore last and the information which reached us from every direction was in perfect accord with Brother Felts' representation. Even ministers with a strong leaning toward the unification movement frankly told us that the sentiment of the people was overwhelmingly against any form of union which would not completely protect the integrity and autonomy of the Church, South, and the same information has come to us reliably from several other sections of the Church.

Under these circumstances nothing could be more hurtful than for a few visionary leaders who are hut little in touch with the masses of Southern Methodism to try to enter into an agreement to unite with the Northern Church upon such terms as would precipitate a wrangle among our people that could not but have a divisive and disintegrating influence upon our heloved Zion, which we have heen striving to huild up for decades. No plan of union which would not command the well-nigh undivided support of our membership ought to be considered seriously hy our Commissioners, who have been appointed not to act for themselves, hut for the Southern Church. One of the ahlest of our connectional officers said to us not long since that if our Commissioners should agree to unite with the Northern Methodists upon a plan approximating that laid down at Saratoga Springs, the struggle which would ensue throughout the Connection would mean nothing less than ruin. For our part, we helieve such an attempt would meet with an overwhelming defeat, but we concur in the view that it would likely result in great harm.

It is to he earnestly hoped that nothing rash will be attempted at this crucial time. The views of the great hody of our peopie must certainly he reckoned with, though they may not have the right to vote in the General and Annual Conferences; and woe he unto our Church in the end if an effort is made to override their convictions!

Well may we heed the lesson taught by the mournful chapter pertaining to union in the history of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. As is well known, it was riven almost exactly in twain, nearly one-half its members refusing to stand by the compact the leaders had made with the Northern Preshyterians. The Christian Guardian (Toronto) stated some time ago that it was not expected that the union movement in Canada would carry with it all the memhers of the Churches embraced in it, hut that it was felt that they could carry as many of them now as they likely could do in the next twenty or twenty-five years. And there is in that country no sectional issue and no puzzling Negro problem to complicate and aggravate the situation, as there is in the case of the Methodisms of the United States.

A very strong unionist Southern Methodist preacher said to us some time since that he would not stand for any form of the union movement unless 90 percent of our members would fall in with it. Even the loss of ten per cent would mean the throwing overboard of more than 200,000 Southern Methodists. And who that is informed believes that with the manifest temper of the Northern Church it will be easy to frame a plan of union that will command the following of 90 per cent of our people? Surely, we need to be careful as to our course in a matter that is so delicate and which is fraught with such grave consequences. The brethren along the border or elsewhere who seem disposed to deal recklessly with this grave issue and plunge forward with but little regard for consequences are, we fear, sowing to the wind, and may soon find themselves reaping the whirlwind. And especially ought our leaders to be sure that they comprehend all that may be involved in this stupendous project before they seek to dispose of it. This is no undertaking for dreamers and vagarists to experiment with.

OUR ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

Saturday, October 15, will be Work Day for hoth our Louisiana and Mississippi Orphanages, and we trust that it will be generally observed by our people. Certainly it ought to be, for we have no institution among us that is doing a nobler work for humanity and for the Master than these. We have lately carried in the Advocate statements from Brothers Vaughan and Randolph, which we hope have heen given a careful reading. The latter has written us that for some time the receipts of the Mississippi Orphans' Home have not been equal to the expenses and that there are repairs that urgently need to be made. Surely the great Methodism of the Magnolia State will respond generously to this appealing call.

Let all our pastors and Sunday school superintendents in Louisiana and Mississippi call special attention to Work Day next Sunday and make arrangements for its observance, if they have not already done so. We have little doubt that our people will give liberally to our Orphanages if their claims are properly laid upon their hearts, and it devolves upon our leaders in every congregation to see that this is faithfully done.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. S. R. Steele, of Helena, Montana, orders his paper to come to him at Baltimore, Md., where he will study for a Ph.D. degree in Johns Hopkins University.

Under date of September 25, Rev. J. H. Jolly writes as follows: "I arrived at Seminary, Miss., last Thursday to take Brother Harrison's place. The people received me very kindly."

From Benton, Miss., Rev. J. F. Campbell sounds the following optimistic note: "Everything is moving along nicely with us, and we are working to send up to Conference a good report."

Rev. A. J. Beasley, of Longview, Miss., states that his health is improving with the coming of cooler weather. His friends will be pleased to have this cheering message from Brother Beasley.

We take off our hat to Rev. J. L. Lay, of Indian Bayou, La., who has given us 2 renewal and 9 new subscriptions. We pray that the Advocate may be a great blessing to the homes into which he has been instrumental in sending it.

Rev. M. M. Black, our scholarly pastor at Canton, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for an additional club of 8 subscriptions—6 of them new on our trial offer. No interest of the Church suffers in Brother Black's charge.

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, who after an absence of several months in the North has returned to New Orleans, the place of his episcopal residence, was sceduled to preach twice in the city last Sunday. He is a fluent and forceful pulpit orator.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of Zachary, La., has our thanks for three subscriptions to the Advocate. He states that he hopes to make a good report to the Annual Conference at Baton Rouge. The Editor is grateful to Brother Fulton for commendatory words.

Rev. Robert Randle, of Harrisonburg, La., reports that his work is moving along smoothly. We have in hand from the pen of Brother Randle a strong article on the proposed unification of the Methodisms of the United States, which will appear in our next issue.

Mr. J. M. Brooks, of McComh City, Miss., and Miss Stenniss Griffin, of Jackson, Miss., were united in marriage in Jackson on September 25, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., the grandfather of the bride, officiating. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple.

A press dispatch from Crystal Springs, Miss., to the New Orleans Item on September 29 reads as follows: "At its annual reception the Susie Liddell Bible Class of the Methodist Church pledged a fourth of the money that is being raised by the congregation for a new house of worship."

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., has forwarded to us 6 additional subscriptions, bringing his total of new subscribers for the year to 87. He is now nearing this goal of 100. The Advocate has no better friend than Brother Perry, who is one of the livest pastors in Southern Methodism.

The Presbyterians and Methodists of Starkville, Miss., will unite in a revival meeting, which is to commence on October 15. The local pastors will be assisted by an extension worker from the Moody Bible Institute, who is highly recommended as an efficient leader in evangelistic services.

In a business note to our office, written on September 27, Brother C. W. Campbell says: "We are in the midst of the greatest spiritual uplift that the city of Meridian has ever known. Praise God!" Brother Campbell orders his Advocate sent to Greenville, Miss., where he expects to be for a while.

Mr. D. R. Barbee, the gifted Managing Editor of the Mobile Register, passed through New Orleans the latter part of last week and looked in on us in our sanctum. He was accompanied to the city by Mrs. Barbee and his little daughter, Mary, and was en route home after a brief vacation that had ben spent in Memphis, Tenn., and at Greenville, Miss.

The Carroll News, a weekly, published at Vaiden, Miss., where Rev. H. M. Young is the faithful pastor of our church, in its issue of September 29, says: "Much interest was taken in the revival meeting at the Methodist Church this week. The messages of the pastor, Mr. Young, were strong appeals which will result in more earnest Christian work in the future."

As is stated elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Dr. H. B. Bartlett, the well known New Orleans dentist, has moved his office from Canal and Camp Streets to Canal and Bourbon Streets, over Worner's Drug Store. Dr. Bartlett ranks with the best men to be found in his profession and is a Methodist and most superior Christian gentleman. He deserves and has a large practice.

Rev. C. A. Parks, of the Kosciusko (Miss.) Circuit, sends us two subscriptions, for which he has our thanks. In his business letter, he adds the following note: "Despite the discouragement brought on by the hard times, I am working with the hope of being able to make a good report at Conference. It is my earnest conviction that you are standing for what is right on the union question."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., Madison Station, Miss., 3; Rev. W. H. Mounger, Charleston, Miss., 3; Rev. H. C. Castles, Vimville, Miss., 4 (trial); Rev. J. H. Grice, Glancy, Miss., 2; Rev. M. A. Burns, Nettleton Ct., N. Miss., 7; Rev. W. A. Terry, Hattiesburg, Miss., 2.

From Dallas, Texas, Rev. R. A. Bozeman sends us the following note: "I have just closed my round of revival meetings with Brother Rousseaux at Greenwood, La., where the Lord gave us a great victory, and I am now enrolling in Southern Methodist University, hoping to finish next spring." Brother Bozeman is a young minister of much promise, and he is right in seeking to equip himself fully for his life-work.

Dr. G. L. Douglas, of Meridian, Miss., instructs us to send his Advocate to Cambridge, Mass., where he will be for some time studying in the Harvard Graduate Medical School. Dr. Douglas, who has been officially connected with the East Mississippi Insane Hospital, is a physician of superior attainments and a loyal Southern Methodist. He feels that he must have his Church paper to follow him to New England.

Dr. G. W. Young, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Emily Walker-Herr, the superintendent of the Mary Werlein Mission of this city, were pleasant callers at the Advocate office last Saturday. Dr. Young who is connected with the National Anti-Saloon League, and who for some days has been campaigning against the liquor traffic in Louisiana, delivered a temperance address at a men's meeting at the Mary Werlein Mission on Saturday night.

We received last Monday morning the following dispatch from Brother W. E. Upchurch, of Ruston, La.: "Rally Day, Promotion Day, and Work Day observed at Trinity Church here, in a combined service, on Sunday, October 1. Attendance, by actual count, 752. Collection for Orphanage, $226." This is indeed a fine showing. We congratulate Dr. J. M. Henry, Brother Upchurch, and all others who had a hand in making this occasion so pronounced a success.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the Editor-in-Chief of the Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.), has sold his interest in that journal to Rev. W. A. Swift, the Associate Editor. Dr. Mann's retirement from the tripod will be a great loss to the Church; especially so at this time when sound and virile editors are none too plentiful. We say this without meaning to disparage Brother Swift, of whom we have a high appreciation and who has a most creditable record as a journalist.

Bishop E. E. Hoss is at present giving attention to his work in the Baltimore Conference, which is under his episcopal supervision. He states that he will scarcely be able to reach Louisiana again before November, but that he hopes to devote the two weeks immediately preceding the Annual Conference to the work in this State. The Bishop's health is reported to be holding up well. This will be good news to his host of friends throughout the Church.

See the notice concerning the New Prospect Camp Meeting, on the Vancleave (Miss.) Circuit, which appears on Page 15 of this issue of the Advocate. It will commence on October 12, and continue for five days. Referring to the work of his charge, Rev. W. L. Blackwell, under whose direction this camp meeting will be held, says: "I think our work is progressing very nicely. We keep on improving things by repairing buildings, organizing Sunday schools, etc."

Rev. T. H. Morris, of Monroe, La., writes: "I preached last Sunday, Sept. 24, on "Good Literature," and as a result have secured to date two subscriptions to the New Orleans Advocate. I also sold two sets of the 'Founder's Series,' and took one subscription to the Nashville Advocate and one to the Methodist Review." There are few things more needed than wholesome reading matter in the homes of our people, and the pastor who is wise will not fail to do what he can to place in them the publications of our Church.

Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, spent Sunday, September 24, at Starkville, Miss., in the interest of the campaign for funds for the Lamar Law School Building. He was greeted by a good congregation. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the pastor, says that his message was a strong and appealing one. Notwithstanding the very unfavorable conditions now prevailing in North Mississippi, the audience gave Brother Selby $234.50, $112.50 of this being in cash. Brother Selby has secured for this cause up to the present something over $12,000.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions.

Fraternally,
CHAS. O. CHALMERS,
Publisher.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground was held in Biloxi, Miss., last week. The press dispatches state that the question of having a Chautauqua on the grounds next year was considered at this meeting. We see no objection to the Chautauqua idea if it is not allowed to interfere with the schedule of religious meetings that are annually conducted at this historic place; and we think that the camp meeting also should be kept up. The secular papers stated that a committee was named to inquire into the proposal to arrange for a Chautauqua.

Rev. H. G. Roberts, of Coldwater, Miss., writes: "On last Friday, Sept. 22, we buried Brother A. H. Christy, one of the oldest and most consecrated members of our church at Coldwater, as well as one of the most honorable citizens of this section. Brother Christy was a Confederate soldier, having enlisted in Barksdale's Brigade of the 17th Mississippi Regiment, and served the full four years, six months of which time were spent in prison. He was seventy-four years old and leaves a wife, two sons, and three daughters." We regret to learn of the death of this good man and extend sympathy to the bereaved.

From the Sardis (Miss.) Reporter of September 22, we take the following: "The many friends of Rev. J. H. Holder and family are glad to know that Mrs. Holder has recovered her health and returned from a stay at Asheville, N. C. The district parsonage having been rented for the present year, the Holder family will occupy the Short cottage, on Pearl Street, until January." We are indeed pleased to have this good news concerning Sister Holder, who has been battling for health in the mountains of the Old North State for several months. We trust that her physical vigor will soon be completely restored, if it has not already been.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, of the Williamsburg charge, Mississippi Conference, writes: "I am through with my protracted meetings—four in number. I was assisted by Brothers W. A. Terry, P. H. Howse, J. M. Lewis, and H. E. Carter. These brethren all did good preaching and my people were delighted with their services. Up to the present, I have this year received 37 people into the Church, have baptized 28 infants, and have secured 28 subscriptions to our Conference organ. I have also assisted in five revival meetings. I am now looking after the collections ordered by the Conference." We are please to see that the labors of our long-time friend have been so fruitful.

Last Sunday was a fine day with our First Church congregations at Baton Rouge, La. It was an "EVERY MEMBER PRESENT SERVICE," and Rev. C. A. Battle, the energetic pastor, had mailed a card to every family connected with this large flock, urging all to be certain to attend. The results were most gratifying, the congregation overflowed the church and extra chairs had to be brought in, and the offering for the poor, which was not at all stressed, amounted to $17.30. The attendance upon the Sunday school was also excellent, more than 300 being present. The pastor's theme at the 11 o'clock hour was "Doers of the Word," and his message was a direct and forceful one.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of our Main Street Church of Hattiesburg, Miss., in a personal note to the Editor, says: "We are rounding out a very successful year's work and expect to go to Conference with the best report in the history of this congregation. The attendance upon public worship is good and there is an encouraging interest in every department of the work." Brother Crisler is in his fourth year in his present pastorate, where he has wrought nobly for the Master and for Methodism.

Rev. J. B. King, of Bay Springs, Miss., writes: "I am just home from Meridian, Miss., where I assisted the pastor of Seventh Avenue Church, Rev. H. S. Westbrook, in a great meeting. This was the most successful revival I have ever held. There were about 140 professions of faith, and 70 united with the Church. We had some of the brightest conversions I have ever witnessed. We were in the fight eleven days, and God gave us the victory. To Him we give the glory!" Such a meeting is quite enough to make happy the hearts of the ministers who held it. A demonstration of the Divine presence and approval so marked as this is worth vastly more than money or high place in the Church.

Mrs. Miller, the accomplished wife of Rev. C. C. Miller, our pastor at Lake Providence, La., sends us the following clipping from the Banner Democrat of that progressive city. "Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Hattiesburg, Miss., who conducted the recent revival at the Methodist Church here, left for his home last Monday. Mr. Crisler is one of the ablest ministers in the Mississippi Conference. He is earnest in his work, uses the most refined language in his sermons, and always impresses his hearers with the profound depth of the thought and truth that lie back of his utterances. He is a popular divine with the Methodist people of Lake Providence. As a result of the series of services held, there were several accessions to the Church."

Dr. J. W. Beeson, President of Meridian College, reports that that institution had the best opening it has had in a number of years on September 20. A new chair, that of Pedagogy, has been added to the courses of study, which will be filled by Prof. C. V. McKee, A. B. The student body includes a number of young men preparing for the work of the ministry. Having been called to the deathbed of his mother-in-law in Pennsylvania, the pastor, Rev. J. A. Smith, could not be present at the opening, but appropriate brief addresses were made on that occasion by Rev. Dan Kelly of Hattiesburg, Dr. Albert Sidney Johnston of Birmingham, Dr. Scanlon, pastor of one of the Meridian Churches, and by Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Meridian District.

Hope is a fountain. Faith draws the water and drinks. Love distributes the water to others.—Jowett.

MARY NELL DANIEL, the golden-haired, brown-eyed baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Daniel, of Crowville, La., was born on Nov. 4, 1914, and on the morning of Jnly 28, 1916, after a brief illness, her little body succumbed to that dreadful disease, cholera-infantum, and she passed into the joys of the life eternal. All the summer long she had smiled and played, bringing into that happy home just the needed sunshine to make it a place of Elysian sweetness. The little lips had just begun to lisp "Mamma's baby," "Papa's lady"—yet, God in his wisdom saw fit to pluck this little flower, and in submission we realize He doeth all things well." God has prepared a bright and beautiful home beyond the grave, and the spirit of our dear little Mary Nell will only wait a brief period, when in sweetness and in love she will meet us to depart no more. On Saturday morning, with Brother Thomason officiating, the little body was laid to rest in the beautiful green cemetery at Crowville, La., to await the resurrection.

"And the hope, how sweet, again to meet,
As we look to a distant strand,
Where heart meets heart, and no more they part,
Who meet in that better land."

F. M. GLASS was born in Holmes County, Miss., on April 3, 1834, and died at his home in Attala County, near Sallis, Miss., on July 28, 1916. When he was ten years of age he moved with his parents to Texas, and about four years thereafter his father died leaving him the responsibility of taking care of a widowed mother, three sisters, and two younger brothers. In 1853 he moved back to Mississippi, bought a farm in Attala County, and lived on it until he was called to his reward in heaven. In 1855 he was happily married to Miss Minerva Wade. Of this union 12 children were born, nine of whom preceded their father to the grave. Brother Glass leaves three children—two girls and one son—an aged wife of 76 years, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. He represented his county in the State Legislature for two terms. He entered the Southern Army in 1861 and served as a loyal soldier until the close of the Civil War. He was a lifelong member of the M. E. Church, South, and served as district and recording steward for a number of years. He was a delegate to the Annual Conference several times. Earth has been made poorer by his departure and heaven has been made richer; for he was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith. He was liberal and charitable and was always ready to do what he could to help humanity. His pastor,

W. F. ROGERS.

MRS. TEMPIE ROBERTSON HODGES, of Booneville, Miss., died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Whitley, on Sunday, Sept. 10, 1916. She was born in Prentiss County, Miss., on Feb. 24, 1845, of substantial, godly parentage. In 1862 she was happily married to Mr. John C. Hodges, a useful man, splendid citizen and devoted husband, who preceded her to the better land in 1878, leaving to her devoted care and pious training seven children. These all lived to be grown, and to reflect honor upon the now sainted mother, whose crown of pride and rejoicing they were. Early in life, she joined the Methodist Church, giving herself unreservedly to the Master, and kept the sacred fires burning brightly on the altar of her heart, even down to the end, when the light celestial burst upon her glorified vision as she neared the 'Valley of the Shadow.' We doubt not its shadows were all dispelled by Him who had led her into green pastures of usefulness and beside the still waters of the hidden things of God, for He was with her verifying the Psalmist's words: "Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

Mrs. Hodges was a typical daughter of the Old South, modest and refined as a flower; yet possessing those rugged virtues which seem to flourish best in an atmosphere of storm and stress, such as prevailed in the Southland during and immediately after the Civil War. Her life was a strong tower of Christian graces, and a heavenly benediction to all who knew her. But she has fallen on sleep. Peace to her ashes—rest to her immortal soul in the blessed Paradise of God!

One who loved her,
MARY GORE WYATT.

Mrs. EUDORA CASSELL CAMERON passed to her heavenly home from the city of Canton, Miss., at eleven p. m., September 14th, 1916, and was laid to rest in the city cemetery on Friday, the 15th. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. M. Black. Early in life Mrs. Cameron joined the Methodist Church, and as far as opportunity offered took part in all its activities. During the past few years domestic obligations made heavy drafts upon her time and energies, but the Church's claims were not ignored. Two incidents in her life will show her readiness to serve better than mere statements. Several years ago there was great need for missionary leadership among the young people of her church, and at her pastor's request she spent a summer at Asheville, North Carolina in attendance upon the Young People's Missionary Conference qualifying for this position, and for several years conducted the most successful Young People's Missionary Society Canton has ever had. Both Jews and Gentiles were in it, and many lives are purer, and many homes brighter and happier for those years of service. Later, feeling keenly the imperative need for some restraining influence among the boys of her city, she organized a "Knights of the Legion of Honor" among them, prepared a Constitution and Ritual, and while most of us were taking our Sunday afternoon rest she was with her boys, instilling manly principles and Christian virtues. Mrs. Cameron was not a woman to be turned about by every wind that blew. Her course was directed by her sense of duty, but she was always ready and willing to follow intelligent leadership. She was a devoted wife, a self-sacrificing sister, a faithful friend, an influential member of society, and a Christian woman.

B. F. LEWIS.

The company of the "shining ones" grows by the loss of friends below. July 10, 1916, AUGUSTUS DAVID SADLER passed from this life, the large number of his friends, and the closer circle of his loved ones, and into the larger life beyond. At Booneville, Miss., I knew him first—a Sunday school teacher remarkable for his grasp of the Word. To the end I maintained an increasing appreciation of the splendid intellect, the iron purpose, the warm and tender heart, and the high, clean soul that, in his deeply pious nature, harmonized into the man of God he was. He was born in Alabama of Augustus and Lucretia Owen Sadler, on August 12, 1842. His parents soon removed to Madison County, Mississippi, where he grew to manhood. In 1860 he was among the first to respond to the call of the South, and marched to Virgina with the Madison Guards, 21st Mississippi. At Fredericksburg he was terribly wounded, losing both feet. Then began a Homeric struggle. Thus maimed, with earthly possessions swept away, and a widowed mother and two small sisters, he faced the stormy times of Reconstruction, and by energy and faith and dauntless courage won for his loved ones and himself a place in the sun. In 1868 he was married to Mrs. Lucie Tarrant Owen, who, with two daughters and two sons, one of the latter a pastor in the Kentucky Conference, survives him. Between 1874 and 1891 he resided in Galveston and in Austin, Texas; but he was always at heart a Mississippian, and died a citizen of that State. The end came quietly, after long illness, in the home of his oldest child, Mrs. W. D. Crockett, of Chapel Hill, Texas. His friends rejoice in the memory of his virtues and in the certain hope of meeting him above. His children rise up in the gates to call him blessed. WALTER G. HARBIN.

on your hair. It is too strongly alkaline and will do a great deal of damage. The hair should be of a soft and silken texture. Each individual hair is of delicate construction and requires scientific, careful treatment. If your hair is harsh, dry, course and scanty, then you are not giving it proper treatment. The hair needs food just as the rest of your body, and in order to keep your scalp nourished and your hair plentiful and beautiful, you should supply it with the proper food and treatment. The Creoles of Louisiana possessed a formula for keeping the hair beautiful and for many years kept the secret to themselves, but now you may enjoy their discovery by using "La Creole" Hair Color Restorer, the same recipe which the Creoles used. PROMOTION DAY AT HAZLEHURST, MISS.

Last spring the Sunday school at Hazelhurst was reorganized and graded on the department plan as far as the first year Junior Department. The increase in interest and attendance soon demanded additional quarters, and a large room was built for the Elementary Division, where they could be alone for their work. This division now has a full complement of officers and teachers, and is thoroughly supplied with the graded literature. The room has a blackboard, an organ, tables and chairs suitable for the little folk, pictures, charts, and the various designs calculated to make the room attractive to the pupils.

Sunday, September 24, was "Promotion Day" for all Graded Sunday schools. This day was observed at Hazlehurst. About fifty pupils in the graded departments received promotion cards from lower classes to higher, and diplomas from a lower department to a higher. Four members of the Cradle Roll, having reached the age of four, came regularly into the Beginners Department. One interesting item of the program was the giving of a tiny basket of flowers to the youngest baby on the cradle roll, and a larger basket to the pupil of the main school who had been longest in regular, uninterrupted attendance. This latter went to our very faithful librarian, Miss Dora Burdett.

The church was tastefully decorated with flags, flowers, pictures, charts, designs, and hand-work of the pupils, all of which was left for inspection. The closing moments of the Sunday school hour were devoted to this service, and the Secretary reported an attendance of 175. With the present organization and equipment, a bright future is before this school.

B. F. LEWIS, Pastor.

OAK GROVE, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: Suffer a few words from away up here in West Carroll Parish, almost out of the State. We began the year with a fine appointment, and made our first round and found out that Midway belonged to my good friend and brother, V. D. Skipper. So I gave way and he took charge. After having "pastored" the flock for a period of three months he gave it back to me; so I put one of my local preachers in charge—as I have four, having made one, Brother Geo. W. Warren, and having taken one from the M. P.s'. All are doing well. One of them, Rev. P. B. Reneau, was 90 last Monday, Sept. 11, 1916. We have finished our protracted meeting season. Our first revival was here, with Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., doing the preaching. Our second meeting was at Pioneer, with Dr. I. L. Peebles, of Wesson, Miss., as my helper. He is one of the finest gospel preachers I have ever listen to, being clear and as Scriptural as a man could be, and giving book, chapter, and verse in all his references. He is a lovable man and as fine help as can be found anywhere. At Floyd I had Brother Roy, of Gilbert. He is a fine preacher and good help in a meeting. At Forest I had Brother Bamburg, of Eros, La. Brother Bamburg preaches well and is full of the earnestness that should be found in a messenger sent from God. I have received into our Church to date 130 members. We have built one new church at Forest, and it is a beauty. Brother Lutz, our most excellent presiding elder, will dedicate it on Nov. 13. Our Pioneer church will be finished in a few days and Brother V. D. Skipper will dedicate it for us on Oct. 8. We are going to commence a brick church here before Conference. It will contain two Sunday school rooms, a pastor's study, and a main auditorium of 200 seating capacity. We are now on the homestretch, and we are trying to make a good record. I have secured 36 subscriptions to the Advocate, and there are more to follow.—W. T. Woodward, P. C.

SEASHORE DISTRICT NOTES.

Notwithstanding the fact that there have been some reverses, this has so far been a good year in the Seashore District. We are now at the beginning of the last quarter, and from all appearances shall be able to finish at all points with reports for which we may well be thankful.

October 5 has been set apart by the ladies as "District Parsonage Shower Day," when it is hoped each charge will send some article that can be used in the furnishing of our new district parsonage.

The District Sunday School Institute was held at Wiggins late in August, and was the first meeting of its kind ever convened in the Mississippi Conference. The attendance was encouraging, and the addresses of Sister Nelli and Brothers Dietrich and Neill were very helpful. It did us good to learn that our district is leading in Children's Day work.

Brother Jones, our well loved presiding elder, has been busy all the year, but will be especially so during the remaining weeks before Conference. Last Sunday he preached at Kiln, Miss., a sawmill town just recently come into being. He reports a very encouraging outlook there for another year. This week he begins a camp-meeting campaign which will take him into new fields of labor. He is well able to meet all the demands that are placed upon him.

There have been some real revivals among us this year. From Baxterville, one of the points on the Huh Circuit, Brother Claude Jones, the pastor, reports 40 conversions in a series of services which closed last week. Seventeen were received into the Church by baptism. A collection on the Conference assessments was taken and more than $100 was raised. Rev. Gus Harmon, of Poplarville, did the preaching in this meeting. With so wide awake a pastor and so consecrated a helper, we are not surprised to hear of good results.

Rev. John Carter is doing faithful work on the Americus charge.

On the North Gulfport and Lyman charge, Brother Darsey is making full proof of his ministry. He has two meetings scheduled for next month, and is expecting large results from both.

Dr. LaPrade, our pastor at Gulfport, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation, spent with his son, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., pastor of the Inman Park Church in Atlanta, Ga. He reports a pleasant trip.

Brother Griffin has taken over the work of Brother Alsworth, who was lately stationed at Richton.

Several churches were blown down during the July storm, nearly all of which have either been replaced or are now in process of being rebuilt. On the Mentorum charge, Brother Paul Grice had two of his best churches demolished, but with tireless energy and large faith he has, we hear, succeeded in rebuilding them to the extent that they are now better than they were before the storm.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid disease, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due, in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was cured."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism or any chronic disease, accept the guarantee offered below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the Shivar Spring.

Box 17-S, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I derive no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

GLAD TIDINGS FROM THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Mrs. Harrell: Did you think us dead or idle? About two months ago we went to Forest and organized an intelligent band of young people. They shall be especially remembered for their systematic study of the Bible. Their leader, Mrs. Joe Beeman, uses a system that all of us would do well to follow. We must study God's Word or else be ignorant, even though we hold several college diplomas. "His truth shall be my shield," let us never forget.

D'Lo will report for the first time this quarter. Mr. Cunningham, the young leader, is awake to the fact that the forces of God must be courageous and zealous in this city of phenomenal growth.

While attending the Meridian District meeting we went on down to Waynesboro to see our young people there.

"A face to face meeting
Has a pen and ink greeting
Beat a mile."

We wanted to see the girls who had not only paid up in full all dues, but had paid $100 of the $115 pledged. These young people always report on time, with every question answered, too. They sent a delegate across the State to the annual meeting at Vicksburg and a number to their district meeting, and are planning to send several to Gulfport and on to the Council meeting in New Orleans in the springtime. The fact that one of their number has given $100 this year shows that the missionary spirit is abroad in the hearts of our young people.

We were so glad to organize at Vosburg, our old home—the greatest place in the world, of course—the land of life-giving waters. God himself was the pharmacist that mixed this matchless medicine, as it flows from the everlasting hills to bless the nations—from Stafford Springs. May the young people there so fulfill the law of Christ that they, too, shall be a blessing!

I wish we had lots of space to tell of Eucutta, for there they "do" things. Their young people will report this quarter, too, for the first time. Among their number is a very enthusiastic young girl anxious to be about the Master's business. Several years ago the adult society sent this girl to Vashti, and could you see her and hear her talk you would get such an inspiration that you would all be on the alert to find a girl whom you, too, could send to Vashti. Then, too, the little blind girl is ever glad to do "what her hands find to do" for Him, since she was sent by these people to Jackson to school where the light came into her mind and soul. Only eternity will reveal the good that Mrs. McNeil, the young people's leader, is doing with her home and influence. Would there were more like her!

Next we went to the Hattiesburg District meeting. The Spirit of God was invited, expected, and received there. Mrs. McMullan is an ideal leader. It was inspiring to see so many of our young people taking such an active interest. Several dear girls were there who expect to give their lives for special work in the Master's vineyard. There are others who should make this decision. The Master has need of you. He has called you and is counting on you.

One item of interest from the Ellisville adult society was that, although they have only fourteen members, they have forty subscribers to The Voice. Can any of you beat that record? My friend and hostess, Mrs. Tom Hand, is the agent there. She realized the importance of her office, as some of us have failed to do. Without information, we can not be awake to the calls of our Master; so she placed The Voice in every Methodist home, as well as in some other homes. As she went about to take subscriptions she also "did good," since she visited the sick and strangers, carried words of cheer, dainties or flowers as a true follower of the lowly Nazarene knows so well how to do.

The Kingston young people will also be in our reporting ranks next quarter. How gladly we welcome all these young people!

The "Whirlwind Campaign" for the Mississippi Conference will open here at Mendenhall the first week in October. As Mrs. Harris goes from district to district we want the young people to make it a point to attend every meeting that they can possibly reach. Now, while dear Mrs. Johnson is sad and lonely since her father has gone to the mansions prepared for him in our Father's courts above, may we cheer her by rallying more zealously to the cause, as we all strive together to carry out the "Great Commission."

Mrs. H. O. MIDDLETON,
First Vice President.

LOVE AND SYMPATHY FOR MISS KEARNEY.

The Brookhaven District Secretary, Miss Bessie Kearney, has recently lost her aged grandmother. Not only do the women of her district, but those throughout the Conference, unite in expressing their sympathy for her during these days of sadness. Some are taken in early life, some in middle age, and to some few are permitted long years—the candle of life burns to the very end. So it was with this departed saint, and the remembrance of her life will ever be a benediction to those whom she left behind. May the Father's comforting arms be closely placed around our sister in her sorrow, and may her sweetest solace be found in him!

WHERE ARE THE BABIES?

Not in the Baby Roll Division; for at the end of the first quarter the report showed only 84 babies enrolled. The second quarter no note was made of them, so we infer there was no increase in their ranks. Is it possible that that number fairly represents our great Conference? Such figures indicate that it is high time for some one to get very busy and gather the little ones into the fold.

Perhaps some are not familiar with our baby division and do not know the conditions upon which it can be organized. In the Helps for Missionary Societies we read: "Every child in the church under six years of age is entitled to membership in the Baby Division. Names are to be enrolled upon the payment of 25 cents, and all names should be carefully kept in a Baby Division Roll Book showing dates of birth and enrollment. Each member should be given a certificate of membership and a mite box. The enrollment fee is paid but once during the six years, and if a child should move from one place to another the membership certificate will serve as a transfer.

Let us see how many Baby divisions we can organize during the next three months, and please do not let the year close with that same pitiful number to our credit. We have stressed the children's work and also the work of the young people, but somehow we have forgotten the babies—in God's sight our most precious treasures. Do not longer neglect them, but begin now to gather them in and train them from earliest infancy along missionary lines, and in years to come their lives will yield harvests an hundred fold.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS.

To the Mississippi Conference Pastors and Sunday School Superintendents.

Dear Brethren: Below I give you the names of all of our District Sunday school officers. I am sure that no Conference in our entire Church has a better corps of workers. These men and women are energetic, intelligent, and consecrated. They are all busy people, but none of them so busy that they are not willing to do all they can to further the Kingdom of God through building up the Sunday schools of our Conference.

Our Sunday School Board wish that they had the funds to pay the expense of these officers so that they might visit your schools in person, but this they have not at present. Of necessity then most of the work done by these officers must be by correspondence. Hence this letter to you.

It is discouraging enough to one who is being paid to do the work, and is paid the same amount whether you answer his letters or not, to have you to fail to respond promptly to correspondence. But these officers are not paid. They are serving you through love for God and an earnest desire to be of help to you. So please when you hear from any of them give their letters a prompt and prayerful reply. It is to your interest and not theirs that this be done.

If you will at anytime provide the traveling expense to and from your place, any one of them will gladly give you a personal visit, and be of great help to you in this important work.

So let us pray for, co-operate with, and assist in every possible way these faithful and unselfish workers.

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Bad blood is responsible for more ailments than anything else. It causes catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been wonderfully successful in purifying and enriching the blood, removing scrofula and other humors, and building up the whole system. Take it—give it to all the family so as to avoid illness. Get it to-day.

Ladies! Take Dr. Welch's Cotton Root Compound Pills. Sure relief for suppression. Sent in plain wrapper for $2.00. Welch Medicine Company. Jacksonville, Florida.

Good Old Home-Made Family Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind—Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

your chances for defeating this dreaded affection depend largely on your ability to restore normal body functions.

To do this, one requirement is proper attention to diet and pure food. Also rest and fresh air, day and night.

Where the system is run down and likelihood of serious consequences thus increased, Eckman's Alterative may prove beneficial, as it has in many cases.

This is a lime treatment—but unlike any other. For here the lime content is so combined with other ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

A trial can do no harm, since Eckman's Alterative contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

THE GULF DIVISION SECRETARIES AT LAKE JUNALUSKA.

Reading from left to right, they are: Rev. J. L. Neill, of the Mississippi Conference; Rev. C. Wolford, of the North Alabama Conference; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of the North Mississippi Conference; Rev. C. N. Baker, of the Little Rock Conference; Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, of the Louisiana Conference. The one kneeling, whose face shows the effect of too much sunsbine (not moonshine) is Divisional Secretary Dietrich.

The readers of the Advocate should be interested in one or the other of three of these men, and of them I want the privilege of saying a few things.

Rev. J. L. Neili, who is Field Secretary for the Mississippi Conference Sunday School and Mission Boards, is the good-looking young man at the left end of the line, who was nineteen years old before he rode on a railroad train; he may also be the same one who said he was ninteen years old before he knew a chicken bad any parts but a neck. Neiil likes to walk as well as talk, but I fear he can't make his record at the former job equal his last year's record at the latter. However, from my observation and from what I hear, Brother Neili is doing some of the finest work for the futnre good of the Kingdom that is being done in our Southland. I cannot too earnestiy or too insistently appeal to both preachers and laymen of the Mississippi Conference to co-operate enthusiastically with their Conference Board in maintaining Brother Neili and his work. It is foundation work, and if you all help him, as I beiieve you are doing and will do, our beloved Church will grow in numbers, influence and spirituality as it has not before. His record the past year shows an almost unbeiievabie amount of work—but it has been done, and weli done, too.

The second man Advocate readers will be interested in is the nice little man in the center of those standing—the one with the palm beach suit on. This is Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the hustling Field Secretary for the North Mississippi Conference. He is nearing the end of his second year in this office, and from the way he "works" the Divisional Secretary whenever the said Divisionai Secretary strays over into his territory, you may safely conclude that Gladney is keeping things going in North Mississippi. No more enthusiastic, devoted worker is to be found in the ranks of our Church than our sturdy Irish friend from Sardis.

Third on our list is the bashful-looking chap on the extreme right of the line. That is Rev. C. V. Breithoupt, Field Secretary for the Louisiana Conference. In point of length of service, Breithaupt is the "baby" of the "bunch;" but let me tell you the feliow who picks him for an "infant" has another guess coming to him. Breithaupt likes to climb mountains, but he's not real sure what a mountain is yet. Ask him about it.

Brother Breithaupt was for several years in charge of the Houma Mission, and through his untiring energy, fine organizing genius, and tactful executive ability, built that work up in a truly wonderful way. And from the splendid manner in which he has taken hold of our Sunday school interests in Louisiana, I predict that he will in less than the six or seven years he spent on the Houma work lift the Methodist Sunday schools of Louisiana to a much higher piane of usefulness than he found them on. He is already planning for a Louisiana Wesley Bible Ciass Federation next year—watch it "come to pass."

I would like to say more about these three fine fellows who are giving their lives' best energies to the work of the Church in the territory ministered to by the Advocate, but I must not use too much space. They are true specimens of God's noblemen, and my prayer is that all three of them will be kept at this work and that they may see some of the fruits of their faithful labors. A. L. DIETRICH.

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor lers than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxuated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous rundown people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fifteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctored for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M.D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

From the Field

Many, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Just a few lines to let you know that I am still in the land of the living, and, as our fathers used to say, that I am still "on praying ground and pleading terms" with the Lord, for which I am very thankful. Our revival meeting at New Hope has passed into history. Rev. F. R. Power did the preaching and did it well. He is fine help. We had 4 accessions to the Church.

I have not held my meeting here this year, but I hope to do so between now and the time at which the Annual Conference will convene. Our beloved and efficient presiding elder held my third quarterly conference on September 9-11—that is, he preached Saturday night and Sunday at 11 a.m. at New Hope, and at 3:30 p.m. at Old Fort Jessup, and again at New Hope at 7:30 p. m. He also held the business session on Monday at 10 a. m. Brother Atkinson's sermons were all of a high type and were well received. Our work is making some progress. We have made some improvements on the parsonage. I am hoping to be able to close the year in good shape. The Lord bless the Advocate and all that are connected with it!—S. D. Howard, P. C.

Woodville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: My revival meetings are all over. Hence, I send you an acount of them in order to report the result of them through the Advocate. My first meeting was held at Hay's Chapel, and, as we have only a few people there, I did my own preaching. My next meeting was at Mars Hill, commencing the third Sunday in July. We closed on Thursday. There were no accessions at either of these places, but the church at Mars Hill was greatly revived, as is shown by the renewed interest in the Sunday school work at that place. Also another mark of improvement in this particular neighborhood, which is due to the meeting, is the fact that our young people have about abandoned the dance. Our next meeting commenced on the first Sunday in August, with Brothers M. B. Sharbrough and W. E. McGahagin to do the preaching. This meeting was held at Percy Creek and lasted ten days. The visible results were 5 accessions by profession of faith, and the Sunday school, which had been allowed to die down, was reorganized. My fourth meeting commenced on the second Sunday in August at Friendship. Again our presiding elder, Brother M. B. Sharbrough, was with us for two days and gave us two excellent sermons. Brother McGahagin came to us on Monday and stayed until Thursday night. The congregations were good and the interest the very best. The results of this meeting were five accessions. Our next meeting was held during the fourth week in August at White's Schoolhouse. The congregations were good and the interest fine. We closed on Tuesday evening with 12 accessions on profession of faith. This makes 24 accessions by profession of faith on the Woodville Circuit during this year. We are growing in grace, but there is much that needs to be accomplished before we are what we ought to be. All who know Brother Sharbrough recognize him as one of our very best preachers. Brother McGahagin is a student and a local preacher, and as a revivalist among the young people I think he is fine.—C. H. Herring, P. C.

Scotland Charge, Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: Just a word about the Scotland charge. We have been moving along this year as smooth as you please—not making much noise, but we have been working. We have had some good meetings and have been organizing and building up in other ways. Our first meeting was at Bethesda Church. After several vain efforts to secure help I had to meet the enemy single-handed, so far as preaching was concerned, and, besides, Jupiter Pluvius took a hand and we were completely routed on two days. But in spite of everything, we succeeded in a measure in having a revival. It is a small church, which had only about 30 members in the beginning of the year, but we have received 14 on profession of faith—we have bought a nice Epworth organ, have done some repairing on the church, and the congregation has already paid its assessment for the pastor in full and will pay in full the Conference collections.

The next meeting was at New Hope with no help. Here we had a good meeting. We received 19 members and had a marked increase of interest in the work of the Church. We are expecting the finances at this place to be paid in full.

We next came to the Caseyville Camp Meeting, with our dear Brother Dan Kelly; and oh, what a time we had! Brother Dan was at his best, and my, how he is growing! It is just wonderful. He is evidently at work with that quaint motto of his: "Good, better, best—never let it rest till your good is better and your better best."

From present indications, I don't think there is any doubt of our getting on the Conference honor roll by having "All finances all in full." It has been a year of blessed privilege, of gracious associations, and of unremitting labor—God has shown himself gracious, and to him be the glory!

Yes, and I was about to forget to mention our dear brother and colaborer, Dr. C. W. Grafton, whose life has been such a benediction to this country around here. He is ready in every good word and work, and I esteem it a great privilege to have been associated with him.

We are all with you on the "unity," or Jonah and the whale proposition.

Yours in Him,
HUGH K. McKEE.

Centerville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I will send you a few lines about our two meetings on the Centerville work. Three weeks ago we started revival services at Macedonia. Brother Sharbrough, our presiding elder, was with us two days during the meeting and preached some very strong sermons. The pastor carried the work on the balance of the time. Considerable interest was manifested and a number came forward and gave their hearts to God. There were added to the Church 17 by profession of faith.

Our meeting at Centerville has just closed, having run three days longer than we expected as a result of the interest manifested and the large attendance. Brother Sharbrough was with us eight days of the ten that the meeting lasted. He did some high-class preaching, both from an intellectual and from a spiritual standpoint. His manner and the spiritual nature of his preaching made a deep impression and lasting good will result. The night before the elder came we had an old-fashioned love feast; it seemed to be just the thing needed to start the meeting off right. At some of the services the spiritual fervor was at the high-tide stage, and many of the Church members came forward as an evidence of their determination to live a more consecrated life. Emotion played its part during the services, but never reached the stage of fanaticism or excitement. It was the moving kind, the stirring type, the determining quality. Brother Clarence Massey came down from Port Gibson to help in the singing and was of valuable assistance in many respects. He sings and leads well. We had a fine choir made up of home talent. The attendance at the night services was fine—at times the crowds would overflow the house. Brother Williams, of Gloster, came down one night and preached for us. We had 14 additions to our Church on profession of faith and 3 joined the Presbyterian Church, making a total of 17 during the meeting. One of the best evidences of the good the meeting accomplished was the large number who came forward on the last night and pledged to have family and daily prayers and Bible readings. I voice the sentiments of my people, as well as my own, when I say, we had a "great meeting."—R. F. Harrell, P. C.

NEW PROSPECT CAMP MEETING.

The New Prospect Camp Meeting of the Vancleave Circuit will begin October 12, at eleven o'clock, and continue for about five days. You are invited.

Any of the preacher-brethren expecting to attend should let me know at once if they expect me to provide a conveyance for them from the railroad out to the camp ground, which I can do at a fairly cheap rate.

All visiting preachers will be entertained free of any cost while at our camp meeting. So, just come along.

The camp ground here is noted for its scenery, the kind hospitality of the people, and good fellowship. COME.

We are expecting to have a good time and a "refreshing from the presence of the Lord."

By the time our camp meeting begins, we will have completed one of the best tabernacles that doubtless has ever been on that camp ground.

Brethren, we desire a special interest in your prayers, that our camp meeting may be a great success, that souls may be saved from sin, and God glorified. Sincerely yours,

W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.

FROM CANTON, MISS.

The Jackson District Sunday School Institute, which was held here on the 6th and 7th of September, was a great success. The total registration was ninety-one, and the Institute, conducted by Brothers Dietrich and Neill, assisted by Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. E., and others, was of vast benefit in an educational and inspirational way. It was an occasion also of goodly fellowship.

Evangelist J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, will be with us for ten or twelve days early next month, and we are praying for and expecting a gracious revival. I am serving a kind-hearted and appreciative people, who are thoroughly loyal to every interest of the Church.

M. M. BLACK, Pastor.

THE NATIONAL DENTAL PARLORS OCCUPY NEW OFFICES.

The National Dental Parlor which Dr. H. B. Bartlett has operated for 16 years at the corner of Camp and Canal Streets has been moved to Canal and Bourbon Streets, over Worner's Drug Store. Dr. Bartlett's new dental office will occupy the entire second floor of the building. It will be modern in every respect, being equipped with all conveniences for the comfort of the patients, with elevator service at the entrance, No. 109 Bourbon Street. Dr. Bartlett invites his friends and patrons to call and inspect the new quarters. He will gladly make examinations and give dental advice free of cost, and strongly recommends, as a preventive measure, that such examinations be made about twice a year.

SOME SUGGESTIONS.

Get up right in the morning. Go to bed right at night. Start with joy in your heart, hope in the future, kindness in your purpose.

If it is a dark day, never mind, you will lighten it up. If it is a bright day you will add to the brightness. Give a word of cheer, a kindly greeting, and a warm handshake to your friends.

If all of us would only think how much of human happiness is made in ourselves, there would be less of human misery.

If all of us would bear in mind that happiness is from within and not from without, there would be a wellspring of joy in every human heart and the sun would shine forever.

Try it!—Southern Churchman.

TWO OUTGOING STREAMS.

America is called a Christiau nation, and the various Churches that exist within its bounds are endeavoring to do missionary work among the heathen peoples of the earth. Such activity is in harmony with the commandment of our Lord and is much to be commended. It is stated that the amount raised for missions in the United States and Canada last year was $19,951,362.73—a considerable sum as compared with what was raised for this purpose in former decades, though it is small in comparison with what the people of these two countries spend for needless self-indulgence. And before we feiicitate ourselves too heartlly upon having given this amount to spread the Gospel we should remember that wealth in this western world is a thing of very recent creation and that we are much more able to contribute now than we were even a very few years ago. If the question of the proportion of what we have to what we give were considered, it is likely we would be less disposed to boast of our generosity as far outstripping that of the Church in the days agone. The truth is, we are yet but playing at the great task of Christianizing the world.

Nor is it only a good influence that our Nation is exerting upon the pagan peoples of the globe. Evil as well as uplifting forces are reaching out from our shores. A dependable authority says: "The distillers and brewers of the United States are sending every year not less than 20,000,000 gallons of rum, whiskey, and beer, into lands where our missionaries are at work. Boston sends its rum, Baltimore its rye and bourbon whiskey, and Peoria its carloads of liquor." So it will be seen that if a money value is put upon these exports of intoxicants, our country is, after all, contributing more to debauch and injure the inhabitants of unchristian lands than it is to enlighten and save them. In commenting upon this fact The Christian Herald observes that, though the missionaries unite in declaring rum to be the greatest foe of missions, practically no funds are being raised in America for missionary temperance work in heathen lands. If we profess to be a Christian people, we ought speedily to wipe out this iniquitous traffic beneath our flag, and thereby stop the visitation of this awful curse upon the needy and suffering millions in other portions of the earth that know not our Lord. Perhaps the blackest chapter in the history of Great Britain was her establishment and maintenance of the opium trade in the Orient, and we seem to be incurring equal guilt by extending the sale of ruinous intoxicants among nations that are morally benighted and which are in no condition to withstand temptation of this kind.

Such are the two streams that are now going forth from our land. The first we should strengthen and swell until the story of redeeming love is known everywhere. The other, as we have said, we should suppress with the least delay that we can, even hiding, as far as possible, the very memory of it out of sight as a thing of which we should be humiliatingly ashamed.

AN OLD PROBLEM NEWLY STATED.

A recent Washington communication from Daisy Fitzhugh Ayres to the New Orleans Times-Picayune raises an old and perplexing question in rather a quaint and striking way. She says:

"There's a funny, pop-eyed, antique doll baby in the National Museum in Washington that went into mourning for General Washington at his death. That's how old she is, and that's how patriotic. For a hundred years or so the stiff little wooden lady, who was the joy of the heart of a little New England girl, has been arrayed in a faded, plain, green silk frock, having doffed her weeds for the father of her country upon the expiration of the prescribed period for court mourning. Men and women pass away and the foolish old faded things they played with when they were kids go on lasting through the centuries. That's the grim, sardonic thing about life. Dust for a hundred years have been the hands that first daudied the ridiculous doll that looks at you through her painted eyes as 'peart' almost as when she first came from the factory. The inanimate reigns triumphant over the animate."

This statement by the brilliant correspondent of our distinguished contemporary brings us face to face with the fact that the immortality of the soul—a future existence—is the only rational and satisfactory explanation of the mysteries of human life an death. That matter should outlast spirit, which dominates aud controls it; that emanations of the human intellect should continue to exist long after the mind that sent them forth has ceased to be; that "Paradise Lost" should outlive Milton; the dramas of Shakespeare, the matchless Bard of Avon; and the Journal of Wesley, the masterful and saintly personality whose labors it records, are all propositions against which the human reason instinctly protests. Well-nigh universal is the faith voiced in the lines of the great Tennyson, England's philosopher-poet:

"Thou wilt not leave us in the dust:
Thou madest man, he knows not why;
He thinks he was not made to die;
And thou hast made him—thou art just."

THE RAYNE MEMORIAL OPENING.

The Rayne Memorial Church of this city, which was greatly damaged by the severe equinoctial storm a year ago and which had been repaired and overhauled at a cost of $20,000, was formally reopened last Sunday. The congregation was a large one and the exercises of the occasion were appropriate and interesting. The popular pastor, Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., was the master of ceremonies, and on the pulpit platform with him were Rev. W. W. Holmes, the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of Dallas, Texas, who was the preacher for the day. In making the announcements Dr. Hill read a telegram of congratulation to the congregation from Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Henry, of Ruston, La., which was much appreciated. Bishop Mouzon preached from Jude 1:3, and the audience gave him close attention. He also filled the Rayne pulpit at the vesper service at 5 o'clock p. m.

Those who are familiar with this historic edifice will be interested to know that its external appearance has not been altered. it looks to-day from the outside very much as it did when it was called the St. Charles Street Church, and its arches rang with the matchless eloquence of the renowned Dr. William E. Munsey, who was its pastor for two years. The interior, however, has been rearranged to a very great advantage, and it now presents quite an attractive appearance. The windows, pews, and wood work in general are beautiful. Dr. Hill and his flock have wrought well, and we congratulate them upon the reoccupancy of their house of worship and readiness to take up with improved facilities the work of the autumn.

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY.

The June Bulletin of Southern Methodist University is on our table. It contains the record of the last session and the announcements for the session of 1916-17. The total enrollment at this institution last year—its initial session—was 706, which is certainly a very remarkable showing. The School of Theology had 90 students in attendance.

SUGGESTIVE.

We take the following from the Raleigh Christian Advocate: "It is said that after Whitefield had preached more than three hundred times a sermon on the text, 'Ye must be born again,' he was asked why he preached so often on that text. His reply was, 'Because ye must be born again.'" It is quite possible that our Churches in this day would be helped if this great theme were oftener discussed from their pulpits.

SHOULD NOT BE NEGLECTED.

No part of public worship should be neglected. Important as it is, the sermon is not everything. There are other features to which ministers should give careful antecedent attention. Among these is the selection of the Scripture lessons and hymns. They should fit the theme of the hour and should be read over several times in advance in order that the preacher may be able to read them impressively to the congregation. If this is rightly done, they may be made to help the service immensely. It should never be forgotten that there may be persons in our audiences who seldom read the Bible or hear it read except from the pulpit.

The mark of a saint is not perfection, but consecration. A saint is not a man without faults, but a man who has given himself without reserve to God.—B. F. Westcott.

IMMORTAL.

Mrs. David Weston Gates.

Die! no, God's children never die;
But after this brief life is spent
They live 'mid possibilities
Made perfect, and with power to grasp
The infinite. They live amid
The genial, glowing fires of love,
Which wane not, but which brighter grow
Throughout the eternal ages—
That love which bears the signet, pure
And white, of heaven's perfection.
There, with mind expanded, they do
Grasp the meaning of eternity.
Nor is this all: when the green sod
Hath hid from mortal eye the form
Of clay, they still live, by impress
They have made on lives of others—
Lives made purer by reflected
Whiteness of their character.
Yes, they live in thoughts which they have
Breathed and prayers which they have offered;
They live in pulses quickened by
The daring of their deeds, or may be
(I blush to say it) that they live
In hearts made timid by their own
Mean cowardice.
Then, if to live meaneth so much,
How should we strive to reach all that
Most high and holy is, nor count
Too great the cost of any act
Which bears us upward into that
Clear, upper ether of soul-calm
Which always seals the approval
Of our conscience and our God.

THE SIMPLE GOSPEL.

A satirical writer once said: "When children meet in the dining-room hungry, they want dinner, not a lecture on albuminoids." It is equally true that when people meet in churches hungry for truth and thirsting for God they want the Gospel, not a discourse on science or the higher criticism. There is no nourishment in these subjects for hungering, famishing souls. Their place is in the lecture hall where scholars meet, not in the pulpit to which the common people look for the words of life from lips inspired by the Holy Spirit and from hearts that glow with the love of Christ and that feel the Gospel message proclaimed.—The Lutheran.

THE HIGHEST AMBITION.

There is a loftier ambition than merely to stand high in the world. It is to stoop down and lift mankind a little higher. There is a nobler character than that which is merely incorruptible. It is the character which acts as an antidote and preventive of corruption. Fearlessly to speak the words which bear witness to righteousness and truth and purity; patiently to do the deeds which strengthen virtue and kindle hope in your fellow men; generously to lend a hand to those who are trying to climb upward; faithfully to give your support and your personal help to the efforts which are making to elevate and purify the social life of the world—that is what it means to have salt in your character.—Henry Van Dyke.

ASK GREAT THINGS.

The story goes that Sir Walter Raleigh one day asked a favor from Queen Elizabeth, whereupon the latter said to him: "Raleigh, when will you leave off begging?" To which the ambitious courtier replied: "When your Majesty leaves off giving." This was a shrewd answer from a worldly point of view, and it is not without its spiritual application. God, who is the King of kings, is actuated by a royal generosity. He loves to be asked in a humble, trustful way for the best of things, and he should be approached by every believer in the spirit of ample expectancy. "Thou art coming to a King, large petitions with thee bring." It will be time to leave off asking when God leaves off giving.—Daily Bible.

My heart with sin and fear defiled—
Come Thou and cast the tempter out,
And make me as a little child.

THE USES OF AFFLICTION.

By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

Very sad words are those which the burial service has made familiar to our ears: "Man that is born of woman is of a few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not." In the buoyancy of our inexperienced youth, when the earth is a garden of delight to our eyes, and the heavens bend above us with appealing beauty, the significance of such language is beyond our comprehension. Reveling in health and strength, intoxicated with the joy of present existence, and looking forward with boundless hope to still better and happier conditions, we can not understand why any poet should sing the psalm of life in a minor key.

But advancing years insensibly alter the complexion of our views. As we grow older we learn to look upon all things through soberer eyes. With some men the process of disenchantment is more rapid than with others, but the case is rare in which one reaches the age of 50 without having suffered a heart-breaking sorrow of this sort or of that: the loss of fortune, the collapse of reputation, the alienation of trusted friends, the ingratitude of much-loved children, the keen anguish of a social disgrace, or the still bitterer woe of a great bereavement. It is scarcely too much to say that all life is tragedy, or at least has a tragical element in it. The most commonplace man that walks the streets, looking to all outward appearances as if he had never had a thought beyond what he should eat, or what he should drink, or wherewithal he should be cothed, may hold in his memory experiences almost as bitter as those out of which Shakespeare wrought "Hamlet," "King Lear" and "Macbeth." Suffering is the law of the world. There are no exemptions from it. Or at any rate, as a thoughtful friend once said to me: "Every man that is fit to carry a load has one to carry."

The man who believes that there is a moral order in the universe and that our human life is the scene of a probationary struggle, can not doubt that all these sufferings have a beneficient purpose hidden in them. Nor to such an one is it less a matter of certainty that this purpose is the development and perfecting of human character. The educative power of affliction is both distinctly taught in the Holy Scriptures and fully recognized by all thoughtful minds. "We are heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ: if so be that we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified together." In perfect harmony with this great utterance of St. Paul, is the prayer with which St. Peter closes his first Epistle: "But the God of all grace, who hath called us into eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, establish, strengthen, settle you."

Now God may have some other way of perfecting His saints than the way of suffering, but if so, He has not disclosed it to us. The philosophy of the whole matter is contained in the exhortation of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him, for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." He is not a foolish or indulgent parent, allowing the sins and follies of His children to go unrebuked or unpunished. Though never in wrath, yet often in mercy, He lays the scorpion lash upon their backs, and brings them to their senses by the force of His severest strokes.

If it be said that this last statement has no application to those afflictions that come upon us through the instigation of Satan or the machinations of evil men, the answer is that even things could not reach us but by the permission of God. Satan was unable to smite Job till the Lord had spoken the word of consent. What God allows, as well as what He directly inflicts, is not without some beneficient design. We may even venture to believe that it lies within the scope of providential wisdom to make our own blunders and follies, bitter as they are in their immediate consequences, to bear some fruits in the correction of our spiritual blindness and the chastening of our self-assertive wills.

On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that God's purpose in visiting us with sore trials, or in allowing them to come upon us, will be largely defeated unless we receive these trials in the right spirit. If we take them stubbornly and defiantly, bowing our necks to them simply because we cannot help ourselves, and at the same time registering an impious mental protest against them, nothing is more sure than that they will coarsen and harden the fiber of our moral nature, and dry up the fountain of all gracious and gentle tempers within us. "Our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," but they do this only "while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are unseen," that is to say, while we interpret all the events of our lives as means and appliances which God is using to make us "meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." They do us no good as long as we take the short and narrow view that is bounded by the horizon of time, and leaves out of consideration the sweep of the eternities that lie beyond.

To be more specific, there are at least three graces which afflictions, if rightly endured, never fail to produce:

1. GREATER CONFIDENCE IN GOD. When a good friend has stood by us in one trouble we know that he is not likely to desert us in another, and when God has helped us time and again to "run through a troop or leap over a wall," we learn to lean with perfect serenity of soul upon His promise that He will "never leave us nor forsake us." "Experienced worketh hope." What Christian is there that has not expressed his own assurance in the language of the Psalmist: "Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterspouts; all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me. Yet the Lord will command His loving kindness in the daytime, and in the night His song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life."

2. INCREASED HUMILITY OF SOUL. The foolish confidence that goeth before a fall is often mortified by the painful consequences that follow after it. The most notable example of this fact that the Scriptures contain is found in the case of the Apostle Peter. On the night before the crucifixion he vaunted himself above the rest of the disciples: "Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended." In spite of this boastfulness, he the same night made a shameful denial of his Lord. But a few weeks later he was so much humbled by painful recollection of his cowardly weakness and unfaithfulness, so much bowed down by the keen remorse that he felt, that when called upon by the risen Lord on the shore of the lake to answer the direct question, "Lovest thou me more than these?" he did not dare to give a full affirmative answer nor to bring himself into comparison with his brethren, but ventured only so far as to say: "Thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love Thee."

3. A DEEPER AND MORE INTELLIGENT SYMPATHY FOR OUR FELLOW-MEN. Only those who have passed through the fire know how it burns. But the man who has any germ of nobleness in his nature cannot fail to feel a thrill of compassion for his brethren whom he sees borne down by the same distresses from which he himself has only lately emerged. I once heard a great-souled woman who in her measure had drunk the cup of Christ, and been baptized with His baptism, say with the emphasis of a deep emotion: "Hereafter I shall be more charitable to all God's creatures." There are many others that have learned the same lesson of gentleness in the same school of sorrow. How often does the hard face soften and the harsh voice grow gentle and the cold heart grow warm under the disciplinary tuition of our Father which is in heaven.—The Commercial Appeal.

A JEWISH NEW YEAR'S SYNAGOGUE SERVICE.

Having received, along with other Christian leaders of the town, a most cordial invitation to do so, the writer attended the recent Jewish New Year's service in the synagogue at Donaldsonville, La., on Sept. 29, and it occurs to me that the Advocate's readers might appreciate a note as to the doings of these modern sons and daughters of Abraham. This being the first synagogue service of any consequence that I ever attended, it was interesting to me in both its novelty and in its program.

The Jewish congregation here numbers about a hundred members, and from an intellectual and social standpoint there is not an interior one among them. They do practically all of the local dry-goods business, own a great deal of the real estate in and around Donaldsonville, and their influence is felt in more ways than one, the mayor being one of their leaders. And, among other points of interest in them to me is their friendship for Protestantism in general, and for Methodism in particular.

On this occasion they had just expended something like $1000 in renovating and beautifying their house of worship, and their pride in what they had done was freely expressed to their friends, and has meaning in that it indicates the faith that they still have in their national religion. Before the worshiper, in this, as in all synagogues, was hung just over the pulpit the two tables of the law containing the "ten words" that have been the foundation of all moral and political legislation that was for the betterment of mankind since the days of Moses; and "the seven golden candlesticks" were represented in seven artistic electric lights arranged in the red, white, and blue colors of the United States. Just back of the pulpit was imitation brass or gold doors that opened into the room where the ark of the covenant was kept. A large pulpit Bible was used in the regular Scripture reading, which was in English, and which on this occasion was the Ninetieth Psalm.

In the conduct of the service it was noticed that the congregation was becomingly reverent in behavior—about as a Methodist congregation of worshipers, except that the "orthodox" men kept their hats on—but at the same time the social fellowship had a large part in the evident pleasure of the occasion to these children of a common and unbroken stock back to the "father of the faithful." Their racial consciousness and solidarity seemed to be to them a source of much pride, and an onlooker could see with what self-gratulation they held each other's kinship, and how each could count on the loyal support of the fraternity of the whole. Having no rabbi, the president of the synagogue, as a lay leader, led the services. (Being a traveling man and well read in all matters pertaining to Judaism, the writer on several occasions has made use of the tender of his latest and choicest books.) The service of worship on this occasion consisted in various responsive readings from a prayer-book, in which the congregation took an important part, in various liturgical prayers, and in an extemporaneous prayer by the leader, all of which were reverent and orderly, reminding one perhaps of the services of a Roman Catholic congregation more than any other. Quite a good deal of the leader's part of the responsive readings was in Hebrew; but before the congregation responded he read the same in English, and so the younger as well as the older members understood all that was said. The organ was in a loft to the back of the congregation, and the music was all by the choir, composed of trained and gifted female voices. It was noticed that during one part of the service one of the elders, who ocupied the platform, stood with open prayer-book facing the holy of holies, where was kept the ark of the covenant—or at least what represents these things to the modern Jewish congregation.

Dominant notes in the written, as well as in the impromptu, words of the service were prayers for peace among all nations, and implied or expressed declarations of national loyalty. Prayer for deliverance "from sickness, war, and famine" were prominent, and praise was a dominant note; but little was said about sin or its consequences. The sermon also was by a layman, who is a talented lawyer and mayor of the town. His text was "Here is the altar and the wood, but where is the lamb?" And he spiritualized the historical incident of Abraham offering up Isaac in a polished and finished essay on how people should commit their future, with its uncertainty, to God who does all things well.

Among other thoughts uppermost in my mind as I looked upon this strong-bodied, superior-minded, peculiar and distinct people, was that as to the power they would be if converted to Jesus Christ, whom their forefathers "slew and hanged on a tree," and I breathed a prayer that the day might not be far distant when many of them would become the message-bearers to the lost world of the gospel of Him who "came unto his own and his own received him not." And at the same time I had a new sense of how much better it is that they should hold to their one God without his Christ, than that they should reject him and turn to infidelity. Therefore, I congratulated them upon their beautiful house of worship and upon their reverent, ritualistic service, where God is still recognized and his precepts feared.

In conclusion, how many ministers of the gospel, or denominations or individual Christians, can render a blameless account in having done his best in endeavoring to bring to him these who are Christ's own brethren? If the Apostles and early Christians should have made them special objects of evangelistic zeal, what excuse can we give for not even making a prayerful effort to get them into our Sunday schools, or to attend our preaching services?

The New Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss., Now Being Erected.

This is a picture of the new Methodist Church at Brookhaven, now being constructed. The ground was broken for the beginning of this splendid enterprise on September 12, with appropriate ceremonies. Rev. J. M. Morse, the popular pastor, was in charge of the exercises, the principal features of which were the giving of a history of Methodism in Brookhaven by Mr. W. B. Davis, and an eloquent address by Dr. I. W. Cooper. This handsome edifice will be modern in every respect, having a large number of Sunday school classrooms, a ladies' parlor, a pastor's study, and all other up-to-date facilities for the best order of Christian work. The structure, when fully completed, will cost between $40,000 and $45,000, and it is expected to be ready for use by January 1, 1917. The following compose the excellent Building Committee, under whose capable supervision this new temple of worship is being built: S. E. Morton, President; Dr. C. R. Ripley, Vice President, B. S. Cato, Secretary, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Presiding Elder of the Brookhaven District, C. S. Butterfield, Treasurer, C. D. Smith, Dr. W. H. Frizel, Dr. J. T. Butler, S. E. Penn, E. B. Guess, W. D. Davis, Dr. Henry Flowers, C. E. Day, J. M. Wood, Garnet Hoffman, and A. B. Furlow. Great credit is due Rev. J. M. Morse for the inauguration of this movement and the fine progress which it has made. As a wise and tactful leader he scarcely has a superior in his Conference, as has been evidenced by promotion of like enterprises elsewhere. The erection of the beautiful Capitol Street Church at Jackson, Miss., was consummated while he was pastor of that congregation. In view of the fact that Whitworth College is located at Brookhaven, the Methodists of South Mississippi in general will feel a special interest in the new church project in that city. It is a matter of much importance for a Christian denomination to be well equipped and fitted to do the best possible work at the seats of institutions of learning, where opportunities to render a far-reaching service for the Master exist.

SOME WORDS FROM BROTHER SELBY.

Dear Doctor Meek: The report of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., of my work with his congregation, and your reference to it in an editorial regarding the opening of the Lamar School of Law last week, stimulates me to say some things that I would like the Methodist people of Mississippi to know. I thank you for the very generous and hearty exhortation you give all our people respecting this most important work of our Church at this time.

In the first place, I wish to say that Brother Lipscomb gave me two full days, with the strongest endorsement he could of my work. His introduction of me to his congregation was not fulsome, but was filled with the conviction that he believes this great undertaking of the Church should have the practical support of all our people. I had a large number of subscriptions at Starkville, and the cause is upon the hearts of his membership.

Secondly, I would greatly appreciate the brethren responding to your very timely exhortation, in giving me a letter of invitation to visit their charges, opening the way for me to feet at home among their people. They may be sure that this will not hurt any other cause, and more than this, I shall not embarrass pastor or people in any way.

In the third place, I am sure that we should not be long in making the contribution of $50,000 to the Lamar School of Law building. This is a worthy and laudable enterprise, and I am doing my best to have every member of the Church in Mississippi make a contribution to it. We should complete the work in less time than twelve months, and it would be done if every man would throw himself into its accomplisment.

I thank you for your very kindly words.

Jackson, Miss. ROBT. SELBY.

DISTINCT LINES DEMANDED.

By Rev Robert Randle.

The strength of the corporate body depends upon the strength and identity of the individual and divisional units composing the body. When the blending of the incorporation destroys the larger or lesser unit measure until the individual is lost sight of, then the power of the individual is lost, and the whole corporation is weakened and often destroyed. Mr. Whitaker and Mr. Williams form a partnership; the intention is that the section to which each belongs shall give support to its friend and thus sustain and build up the business. So long as both parties are seen in the business things prosper—the constituency clings to the firm. But if Mr. Whitaker simply wishes Mr. Williams' influence and capital to build up his own business and pushes him out of view and eliminates his name, he then loses his hold upon the Williams' section and followers. The distinct lines of corporation must be preserved.

Methodism has been entrusted with a very great work. She started out as one united Church. She ran thus for seventy-six years. Her work was well accomplished and established her throughout this continent. No Church had the same strength and influence that she did. But her very prosperity was her peril. All sections sought her influence and demanded conformity to their conditions and institutions. As a united body this could not be. The individual asserted itself and the power of the corporation was lost. A separation was demanded by the circumstances and granted by the corporation. The power of the one body divided into two, and, thus restored, the sections were satisfied, and thus was the individuality recognized and did not destroy the demands of the original body. For 72 years she has been running on this plan and wonderful has been her success; and her prospects are still as promising as in years past, if she will adhere to her principles and integrity as she should.

But there is a strong effort to bring the severed members together again. The important question is, Can it be done? Yes, if both parties are in the condition to be united. One unfortunate feature of the case is that some of the leaders of the parties are foolishly in a hurry on the subject. They seem to be afraid that there never will be another chance to get the two together and are producing conditions that will be hard to overcome. I agree with you, Doctor, that our good Senior Bishop was very precipitate in his action or rush at the Saratoga Conference and that our Connectional Editor and others have been unwise in the compromising spirit that they have expressed in this discussion. I sustain Bishops Hoss and Candler, with you and others, in the view that the plan suggested by the Joint Commission and approved with a slight amendment by the Southern General Conference is very different in its import from the recommendations suggested by the Saratoga Conference, and I fear that the position taken by Bishop Hendrix, Dr. Ivey, and others of that line will greatly militate against the adjustment of the two plans.

I have always favored co-operation, but not organic union. I fear that the time will never come for the union in one unidentified body of the different bodies of Methodism in the United States. I have had this view since I have thought anything upon the subject, and the last two years, and especially the last six months, have most thoroughly settled me in this conviction.

It is said that we are, in doctrine and polity, the same. I answer that as far as the statement in the Disciple is concerned, that may be near the truth, with reference to doctrine. And yet their Bishops teach their preachers that there is a vast difference between the two Churches in doctrine. I had one of the Northern preachers, of several years' experience, to sit down to give me a lecture on the heterodoxy of the Southern Methodist Church—not to discuss it—but he took the floor, and did not intend for me to have anything to say. He asserted that "we (Northern Methodists) have a fight to occupy this country; that Bishop Mallalieu in his lecture to the young preachers had said that "the Church, South, was not Wesleyan in her teaching, and that the Northern Church should hold this field to correct such things, and this is the mind of many of their preachers. They have introduced many things into their oral creed and some into their written that are not consonant with our views.

As to polity, we are far apart and have been since the separation. That was the point of contention then that brought the separation, and not slavery. Slavery might have been managed then, had it not have been for their contention that a Bishop was an officer of the General Conference and could be dealt with as any other officer of the Conference—left out or let in. The Southern wing contended that, while he was elected by the Conference, that body did it as the Church or representative of the Church, and he was an officer of the Church and could only be dealt with by it. Thus they minided the office of Bishop and enlarged the function of the General Conference, which forced the separation. And accepting their views, the Church can be deprived of the administration of all Bishops from the South or with Southern affinities in a few years, if the North should determine so. I mean under the Saratoga suggestions.

But it is said that they would not do such a thing. May be not; but they once tried that very thing. But it is urged that the cause is removed. There is the mistake of too many. The cause is not gone—the provocation is removed, and all that is necessary is that another opportunity, with the provocation, should occur, and that may not be far off after you are bound by unification. Look at 1844, 1866, and every opportunity that has been presented. Make your compact clear and binding. With the plan suggested by the Joint Commission, as amended by the Oklahoma General Conference, there would be less opportunity for such a thing. Why do our Northern brethren demur in the least? They have nothing to lose. And why are they suggesting a difference in the Divisional Conferences? Just to have something to say in the conversation? Maybe so. "O," says one, "you are too suspicious. We must trust them." Yes: If a child walks through ashes two, three, four times and gets burnt every time, don't you think that he would be careful to examine the next pile that he came to before he stepped into it? We were burned in 1844, in 1847, by the refusal to abide by the terms of separation; in 1866, in 1885, if I mistake not the time of the Cape May Conference, and at many other times have they disregarded our rights.

But it is urged that we have transgressed theirs also. So much the more necessary that the lines be distinct. If we are transgressors also, then the restrictions will rest upon us. Let us not be in haste or loose about this matter.

But it is urged that Christ intended that his Church should be one body. One organic, visible body (denomination)? Who can prove such a thing? That Christ intended such a union to the destruction of personality and individuality? No one need contend for such a thing, for there is nothing more personal and individual than the profession of Christ. His interest was and is that the spirit of grace should so permeate the spiritual body, the invisible Church, that every member should be joined to him and to each other, that thus they would constitute one body, though recognizing their different families, communities, States, Nations, and tongues, churches and creeds, etc., producing oneness of interest, oneness of purpose, oneness of work, and oneness of heart—thus producing unity throughout the spiritual—the invisible body (Church) of Christ. But the Spirit has diversity of subjects to deal with as well as diversity of gifts to bestow, and these subjects have to be met in their diversity of ways, so that all things "are done to edification." This demands the smaller and larger units, classes, societies, churches, conferences, denominations, and grouping of denominations. And if God had demanded or intended a visible organic union of the whole of his confessors and professors, he would certainly have ordered it when there were only a few and they were close together. Could he not have made this essential to union with himself? That was his best opportunity to do this? But this he did not do. Nor has he ever ordered such a thing since. But, on the contrary, he has defended and sustained the multiplicity of denominations. It is unnecessary to specify cases as an argument. The thing is so universal that no one will raise a question. At different times have men tried to impress the masses that God demanded one visible Church and that they were the appointed instruments to accomplish that work. There is a kind of infatuation—fanaticism—about it, that has caused it to be repeated over and over; but they have ever failed, and will fail, while States, Nations, and tongues remain, and men are to be saved. God allows the apparent division to exist for the protection of the invisible unity, union, throughout the whole body. I admit that it has been abused, but so has the lust for one undivided visible Church.

"But the Church would be more successful as one united body than as two, three, or four, or more bodies." Well, that is an assumption, and, with all the lights behind us and the experience of the ages, it is hardly feasible, though two General Conferences and a "Joint Commission" have said so and I do not know how many more have joined them. The fact is, they have said a great many things that have never been realized. The judgment of Bede demanded another Church, the judgment of Luther demanded another Church, and the Lord blessed him in it. The work of Mr. Wesley, even against his own judgment, demanded another church, and God wonderfully blessed the outcome. The conditions that confronted Soule, Hamline, Elliot, the Pierces, and others in 1844 demanded another Church, which has been wonderfully blessed, and we cannot tell what the tangle of 1916, etc., will demand—not less Churches to say the least of it, for every effort in these United States to unite two or more Churches has left one or more behind.

The Mother Conference of 1844 found that continued union was very infeasible—that they not only could not be more useful, but that they could not live together. And the first General Conference of the Northern Church sanctioned it with a "vim" by telling Dr. Pierce that as a representative of the Southern Conference he could not come in; that they would admit him as a gentleman and a Christian, but not as a representative of the Southern Conference, and for many years they followed the same course.

The Southern Church has had enough experience to put her on her guard and cause us to demand such a compact as will be a perpetual protection. When the Mother Conference of 1844 had by a good majority passed the act of separation, the Northern Church refused to carry out the terms stipulated by the Conference; some of the members who voted for the act joined the opposition and forced the Southern Church to sue and get their property by law, thus troubling us

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

for years. When the Civil War ended they occupied some of our churches and other property and had to be forced by law to yield it. They utterly disregarded the lines territorially and otherwise; yet we are told we should implicitly trust them; that these things do not belong to the present generation. No, but they approve of their fathers' doings. They are facts that have their bearing upon the question now before us, and demand attention in this discussion, especially with the recommendations of the Saratoga Conference before us, obliterating personality, and destroying divisional lines. With identity gone, influence and responsibility would be destroyed.

The Church had a work to do in the South in 1844 that demanded personality and individuality, and she took the stand that enabled her to do it; and, under God, she has done it well. Shall she now give her "birthright" away for a mess of pottage—a mere phantom never to be realized? May the Master in his wisdom deliver us from it!

"Why dig up doings of the past?" Unfortunately they do not have to be digged after. They are right on the surface and have been kept there by our Northern brethren at every turn of the wheel. In most of the prominent cities, they now show the same spirit to dominate, and in the country where they are allowed.

There are many other things that I would like to speak of, but I will rest the case with a rejoinder to two or three other points.

The effort is made to make it appear that we oppose unification. I answer not as suggested by the Joint Commission and the Oklahoma Conference, but according to the Saratoga suggestions. But the Church, North, had as much right to make suggestions as we had. And we have just as much right to object to them as she to make them.

It is said "that there is no perceptible difference in the workings of the two General Conferences, North and South." The past workings of the Conferences is not the question. Have they the same restrictive rules? A horse may drive for miles in the road without a bridle, hut suppose he decides to go some other way—we then want reins and bits. So, deliberative bodies and administrative bodies may reach the point that they need very strong restrictive rules.

We "have totally misapprehended the plan and expressions relating to it." This is the get-off of Dr. Ivey and others. So much the more is it necessary that we place ourselves in an attitude to understand what is being done and to protect ourselves. The Joint Commission and Oklahoma suggestions are comprehensive and protective; so we earnestly desire this. It is remarkable that all the concessions to be made are demanded of us, and that by our own men, and some of them our commissioners.

"Neither body has attempted to formulate a plan, but wisely left all of the details to be worked out by the Joint Commission." No, but both sides attempted to show the ground upon which they would accept union, or unification, and the difference is so great that if the Commissioners stand to their principles, it will be hard to adjust the matter.

There is a great deal said about the rank and file desiring union. Such is not the case where my work lies. Few persons outside the ministry are taking much interest in the matter, but when an expression is given it is that nothing short of the Joint Commission's suggestions as amended by the Oklahoma Conference ought to be accepted. and if the representatives of the Church should act differently some sanguine persons would be greatly surprised. The great body of our people may feel that they have no chance to speak in this matter, and they will hold the Conferences responsible for the results, and should the South come, by organic union or otherwise, under the domination of the North, they will step down and out. The Southern Church cannot do less than to adhere to the Joint Commission's suggestions, as amended by the Oklahoma Conference, if she expects to hold her membership.

On June 1, 1915, there were said to be 2,000,000 automobiles in the United States, and the motoring bill of the country for that year was estimated at $1,180,000,000.

The expenditure for highway and bridge building in the United States, according to the Government statistics, increased from $80,000,000 a year in 1914, to $282,000,000 in 1915.

Benjamin Kidd, the well known author of works on social evolution, which were translated into many languages, died at South Croydon, Engiand, on October 2. He was born in 1858.

The population of Russia has increased 53,000,000 since 1897, a gain of 42 per cent. It increased 3,800,000, about 2 per cent, during the year 1915. The total population of the Empire, according to the latest available figures, is a little above 182,000,000.

A plebiscite to determine whether the Danish West Indies Islands shall be sold to the United States will be held in Denmark in November. The plebiscite will also include the question of the sale of the Faroe Islands, but not of Iceland and Greenland.

The Mississippi A. and M. College, near Starkville, has matriculated approximately 1200 students this fall. This surpasses any former enrollment by about 150. President W. H. Smith, the official head of this great institution, is a prominent Methodist layman.

In a summary of the national political situation in its issue of October 1, the New York Herald stated that the pending contest for the Presidency between Wilson and Hughes promises to be the closest election held in twenty-eight years, and affirmed the outcome to be very doubtful.

Governor R. I. Manning, of South Carolina, and a party of agricultural experts from that State have lately visited Louisiana for the purpose of informing themselves concerning the depredations of the boll weevil, and how best to combat that formidable pest while growing cotton. This great enemy of the cotton industry is now said to be within 45 miles of the Palmetto State.

According to the New Orleans Item, a medical magazine published in Chicago, which was formerly edited hy Dr. John B. Murphy, the renowned surgeon, who died some months ago, is desirous of securing the services of Dr. Rudolph Matas of New Orleans as editor at a large salary. This journal is said to have recently referred to Dr. Matas as "America's greatest surgeon."

It is stated that a movement is under way in Germany to utilize a plant known as typha, a sort of cat tail which grows plentifully in the marshes of that country, as a substitute for cotton, jute, and wool. It is estimated that this year's crop of this plant will amount to about 1,500,000 tons gross. As gathered, it is said to yield about 10 per cent in the way of a finished product.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison recently declared that the National Government ought to establish and maintain a Research Plant to encourage the development of industries that are based upon chemical discoveries, such as dye-stuffs, etc. At the same meeting, Dr. Raymond F. Bacon, who is an authority on petroleum products, expressed the conviction that not more than 50 per cent of the efficiency of gasoline is now utilizable in automobiles.

A Petrograd dispatch declares that hereafter the Jews will enjoy greater educational advantages in Russia, high schools and technical schools having been established especially for them at some places. Of the 807 matriculates at the University of Petrograd, 94, more than 11 per cent, are Jewish students, while at the Woman's Institute in the same city more than 12 per cent of the attendants are from Jewish homes. These figures are significant, as the Jews constitute only 3 per cent of the population.

United States Senator James P. Clarke, of Arkansas, died at his home at Little Rock on October 1. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1903 and was President pro tem of that body. He was born at Yazoo City, Miss., August 18, 1854. Among those attending his obsequies were Senator Vardaman and Congressman Collier of Mississippi and Senator Ransdell of Louisiana. Senator Clarke was a Methodist and the funeral service was conducted by Dr. Forney Hutchinson, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Little Rock.

The cost of living continues to mount higher in the United States, especially in the cities. The Agricultural Department of the Federal Government a few days ago reported potatoes to be 116 per cent higher than they were at this time last year; cheese, 28 per cent; hogs, 25 per cent; beef cattle, 7 per cent; veal calves, 10 per cent; sheep, 8 per cent; lambs, 20 per cent; onions, 50 per cent; beans, 70 per cent; and cabbages, 40 per cent. There has also been a decided advance in the price of butter and eggs, while flour is selling higher than at any time since the Civil War.

A GREAT DAY AT RUSTON.

Dear Dr. Meek: Sunday, October 1, was Rally Day in the Ruston Methodist Church. The Sunday school was at its best, with 750 present. All departments were represented, including the Cradle Roll and the Home Department. The program was attractive and instructive. An offering was taken for the Orphanage which amounted to $226. A former offering for this institution makes the total for the Church and Sunday school something over $675 for this Conference year. Our people are interested in the Orphanage, and have evidenced their interest in this substantial manner. The institution is doing a great work. There is urgent need of increased capacity. Some one of means ought to add a new building to accommodate those who have to be turned away because there is no place to house them.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

To the Auxiliary Superintendents of Social Service in the Woman's Missionary Society of Louisiana.

Dear Friends: Please send your reports to me at the address given below not later than Oct. 5, as I shall be in New York until after the fifteenth. It is very necessary to have a full report of the work at this time and I earnestly ask that you will not fail to be prompt in responding to this request. Sincerely and cordially yours,

Mrs. E. R. KENNEDY.

228 Rich Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

(This notice has been delayed; so it would perhaps be best to send those reports to Mrs. Kennedy at Lafayette, La.)

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will he withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

The Florida Christian Advocate has announced that the cost of the paper upon which it is printed has doubled within the past twelve months, and that an increase of its subscription price from $1.50 to $2 now seems inevitable. The scarcity and high cost of print paper is troubling more and more all publications, both secular and religious.

The Publishing Board of the Texas Christian Advocate will commemorate the half-century of service of the present Publisher, Mr. Louis Blaylock, by inaugurating on December 3 a "Publisher's Jubilee Campaign" to extend the circulation of the Texas Christian Advocate. There are 400,000 Methodists in the territory of that journal and it is hoped to increase the number of its subscribers to 40,000, the present circulation being around 25,000.

After a severe spell of illness lasting eight weeks, Rev. H. M. Blair, the editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, is again at his desk. We are pleased to know that our confrere has recovered and is able to resume his work. Brother Blair states that the plan of having the journal with which he is connected issued as an 8-page paper three times a month and one time as a 16-page paper has not given satisfaction, and that hereafter every issue will be full size, notwithstanding the serious difficulties in the way.

SHALL WE LONGER NEGLECT THEM?

A Plea for the Louisiana Orphanage.

"The summer is past, the harvest is ended," and alas! so many are yet unsaved. We worship in our beautiful churches, brick and stone, and we feel a certain pride in having a fine building, for our homes are costly; hence we feel somewhat uncomfortable worshiping God in a plain, little old house. Therefore, we must build, and then we will build so that future generations may enjoy the work of our hands. But what about that other crowd—sons and daughters, not our own, motherless, fatherless, no home, no friends, hungry and cold, who are asking for a building, who timidly knock at the door of our Methodist Orphanage, only to be turned away because there is no more room? "Lord when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst or a stranger, or naked or sick, or in prison, and did not minister to thee? Then shall he answer them saying, verily I say unto you, in as much as ye did it not to one of tha least of these, ye did it not to me." "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment."

But, stop! The Book does not say anything about building orphanages. No, not in exact words; but how are we to feed and shelter these little outcasts unless we build and maintain these institutions, and, failing herein, how shall we escape the sentence of the damned in that day when "before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them"? Listen! we don't have to fail to provide for the whole crowd, in order to come under the sentence, for He says, "Ye did it not to ONE of the least of these."

O, that these words of our Lord could be hung up where our eyes would rest upon them as we rise from our comfortable beds in our cozy homes every morning; that we could stamp them on the shields of our automobiles, that we might read them each day! We need convincing and convicting along these lines. That part of the Bible, is as plain as the light of day, and there is no other way to read its meaning but just as it is. Then why do we wait to build the needed dormitory? The money is in the hands of Methodist people, while prayer is made daily for God to give this building, and an endowment fund (which I am told should be about $250,000) to run the Orphanage. This could easily be raised among our Christian people. Surely some man or woman with a large faith will make a generous offering, for God surely blesses all such deeds. He repays all that is done for Him: He owns "the cattle on a thousand hills." Come now, let us open up our poor old hearts, and cut the strings to our purses (they are too tight to ever be untied) and hold a family caucus to see how much we can spare for this building. How much can I give, and you, and YOU—not next year, but NOW, for oh, so many little forlorn mites of humanity are constantly turned away—to we know not what! When shall the patter of their tired feet cease to be heard on cold streets and country highways? How long shall we wait to pluck these buds from the thorns of cold and hunger and plant them where they can blossom for the Master's garden? Let us give now, for our own hands may be too still to write the check ere long. May God bless those who shall help to provide more room at our orphanages.

BY ONE WHO LOVES THESE NEEDY ONES.

A LETTER FROM MERIDIAN, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: You will rejoice to hear, I am sure, of the revival that has come to Meridian. Last summer the Protestant pastors agreed that during September they would inaugurate a city-wide simultaneous evangelistic campaign. This was an experimental step for most of us, as we had always thought it took us all together to have one good meeting. Twelve churches of the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, and Christian denominations entered heartily into this work. South Side, Central, East End, and Seventh Avenue were the Methodist Churches taking part. South Side began two weeks earlier and closed as the others began, with a most gracious revival led by Rev. Dan E. Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Boyd. In some respects this revival has been wonderful and fairly set Meridian on fire. Brother Kelly and the Boyds then came to Central Church, where we opened our campaign in the beautiful City Hall, which can seat 1000 people, and which many times was crowded. At East End was Rev. J. A. Bowen, and at Seventh Avenue Rev. J. B. King. In the other churches were strong, vigorous preachers and singers. Our hearts are rejoiced greatly that Methodism was in the thick of the fight, and gave a splendid account of herself. Every church reports a gracious meeting. The surprising feature to us was the attendance, which, in every church, seemed to be as large as could be accommodated.

The other pastors will doubtless write you, but I will say there were 225 added to the Methodist churches by profession of faith, the total in the whole city being about 600.

At Central there were 64 accessions by profession of faith, which we think great when we consider the great ingathering last year. The conversions included people from the tiniest to some of the most prominent men in the city. Brother Kelly and the Boyds did us great work. Leaving out the matter of church buildings (which we hope to see greatly improved soon), Methodism in Meridian is great and has a great future. May the Lord continue his blessings upon us!

Rev. R. F. Witt and his family are a happy feature of our Meridian circle. Sister E. A. Smythe and her family are welcome members of Central. Sister Smythe is feeble, but happy in her Lord.

Sister S. Wadsworth (mother of Mrs. I. W. Cooper) has recently moved to Meridian. Meridian has no better citizen and no more useful preacher than Revt C. W. Campbell (now a local elder), who is well known throughout our Conference. In our recent revivals he was a great blessing.

Our efficient presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, has recently found time from his arduous labors to assist in a meeting at Georgetown, Miss. Brother Leggett is always in demand.

Going back to our revival, let me say that we were very proud of our Methodist campaigners—Brothers Kelly, Bowen, and King, and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd; and, as they left us, we felt like Methodism and the Kingdom of God are being greatly promoted by these workers. Our prayers shall follow them all.

AN EVENING REVERIE.

Marvin K. Miller.

I stood and watched the sunset's glow
Fade out beyond the western hills;
The twilight shadows darker grow,
And all the world seems hushed and still.

Another day is past and gone—
No more we'll see its cheering light;
Not long it seemed from early dawn
'Till fell the dark'ning shades of night.

Each day is but a stepping stone,
A mile-post on the road to God;
On Heaven's books our lives are shown
In all the paths that we have trod.

There is a time—I know not when—
Perhaps before another dawn,
When I the journey must begin
That leads into the Great Beyond.

God grant that I, when comes that day,
May leave a record clean and pure,
To cheer my comrades on the way,
And make my home in heaven sure.

Soso, Miss.

A BRAVE LITTLE SOLDIER.

Francis McKinnon Morton.

A great surgeon from across the sea was visiting in a small Southern city, and because he knew so much about some kinds of disease all of the hospitals and doctors within reach wanted his help.

One morning he was visiting, with a doctor, the different wards of a children's hospital. The morning was close and warm and the sky outside was heavy and gray, as if a storm might break at any minute.

The sick children were nervous and restless and fretful, while the crippled ones complained of everything and soon grew tired of books and pictures.

The hospital was not out in the green fields or down by the seashore, but right in the heart of the city, where low roofs and other houses and a strip of blue sky made up the outlook from the windows.

Even the house-doctors and the nurses looked fagged out and tired and the great surgeon seemed depressed by it all.

"You've no business with a hospital down here in the city," he said sharply, "and especially a hospital for children!"

"Well, you mustn't blame me for that!" said the doctor irritably, and they might have gone on and said more that was quite as useless, only just then a wonderful mocking-bird poured out his rich whistling song all through the dark building.

The surgeon stopped short and listened, and soft lights came into his steely blue eyes and little tender smiles began settling down on his rugged face. "A nightingale, here in this country?" he said wonderingly. "No, it must be your Southern mocking-bird that I've read so much about. How wonderful it is! It makes one believe in angels!"

"It's a little human bird," answered the doctor with a tender softness in his voice. "That's our Little Soldier."

"A soldier in a children's hospital?" asked the surgeon. "I don't understand that."

"Well, you know there are two kinds of soldiers," said the doctor. "One kind wear bright uniforms with gold lace and shining swords and go marching off to war; and the other kind wear no uniforms at all, but just stay at home and face their duty every day as it comes along. Our Little Soldier is one of this kind."

Then the doctor led the way to where a small boy with a thin white face sat by an open window. One leg was all bound up in an iron brace and little twinges of pain now and then flew over his sensitive face, but a brave light shone out of his true blue eyes, and the most beautiful bird music came out of his little whistling throat.

The great surgeon tiptoed softly over to where the Little Soldier sat, and touching him gently on the arm said, "How do you do it, my lad?"

"Oh, said the boy, smiling as best he could, "it's the pain that makes me do it so much. You know when you are hurting very, very much you just can't be quiet, and if you don't whistle you have to groan, and whistling seems much braver, and then it's much nicer for other people who have to listen to you. On days when the leg doesn't hurt so much I can read to the other fellows in here or I can paint pictures, but when the pain is too bad I can't do anything but whistle or groan, and whistling seems better!"

Then the great surgeon from over seas threw his head back to keep some tears from spilling out of his steely blue eyes, and taking a small iron cross from the inside of his coat he stooped over and pinned it on the shabby little coat of the brave Little Soldier.

"There, my boy," he said tenderly, "there's the Cross of the Legion of Honor from my country. My king gave it to me for a trifling service, and I thought I was proud of it; but to-day I have met one who shames my courage and deserves it more than I."

The Little Soldier said, "Thank you!" very sweetly, and then as the two men left the building they noticed the other children had quit fretting, and the house-doctors and nurses were smiling or chatting good-naturedly together, while the golden music filled the place with happiness.

"It's always that way," said the doctor, with a little choke in his voice. "We are doing what we can for the little chap and hoping and praying for him to get well, but all we can do isn't half what he does for us."—Sunday School Times.

HOW LONGFELLOW WROTE HIS BEST KNOWN POEM.

"I will tell you first how I came to write the 'Psalm of Life.' I was a young man then. I well recall the time. It was a bright day and the trees were blooming, and I felt an impulse to write out my aim and progress in the world. I wrote the poem and put it in my pocket. I wrote it for myself. I did not intend it for publication. Some months afterward I was asked for a poem by a papular magazine. I recalled my 'Psalm of Life.' I copied it and sent it to the periodical. It saw the light, took wings, and flew over the world. There you may see it, written on a Japanese screen!"

He pointed to a high, richly ornamented screen that stood before a great fireplace. He added an anecdote that I always regarded as a true picture of his soul.

"When I was in England I was honored by receiving an invitation from the queen. As I was leaving the palace yard my carriage was hindered by the crowd of vehicles. There came to the door of the coach a noble-looking workingman.

"'Are you Prof. Longfellow?' he said.

"I bowed.

"'May I ask, sir, if you wrote the "Psalm of Life?"'

"I answered that I did.

"'Would you be willing, sir, to take a workingman by the hand?'

"I extended my hand to him, he clasped it, and never in my life have I received a compliment that gave me so much satisfaction."—Hezekiah Butterworth.

BEWILDERED BOYS.

By Rev. J. Marvin Nichols.

These are days of substitutes—the boy is all befuddled by substitutes for the good old "mother days." Now, it is the hired nurse, it is the governess, it is the private tutor—anything but "maw." The reputed father is down town bucking at the stock exchange, head and ears under financial tides. The mother has gone to meet with the "Mother's Club" to discuss the vexing problem of other folks' children. In the meantime, the boy is doing his level best to find a bosom friend. Just anywhere—just anywhere—just to find, perchance, a bosom whose heart is big enough to hold his childish sorrows. And all the while the boy grows more and more conscious that the old home is no more than a mere boarding place—a place where he may eat and sleep. What a boon—just a passing acquaintance with his father and mother! The crash comes. At once the daddy and mammy of a well-dressed street waif enter a protest against the evil influences of somebody's boy. The boy laughs in his sleeve—he has a right to. He knows—yes, he understands. What fools—what mortal fools! The last one of us are fools. This old world needs no institution half so much as the homes of the long ago. We speak far back of our times, but we've seen the output of the homes of forty years ago. Real greatness was rocked in the cradle of those hearthstones.

ELEPHANTS ASSISTED AT MARY'S EXECUTION.

Mary, the big circus elephant which killed her trainer at Kingsport, Tenn., Tuesday, Sept. 12, 1916, was hanged at Erwin, Tenn., on September 15. A railroad derrick car was used in the execution. The animal was forced to the tracks by other elephants, heavy chains were tied over her neck, and she was hoisted in the air. She was valued at $20,000.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

Little Blanche Coker, the three year old daughter of our Brother E. J. Coker, died in the parsonage at Topisaw, Miss., at about eleven o'clock on Friday night, Sept. 29. She was laid away in the cemetery at Topisaw Church on Saturday afternoon. Brother Guinn, of McComb, Miss., and I held the funeral service. Blanche was much loved by all who knew her. She was unusually bright for her age and attracted attention wherever she went by her friendliness and beauty. Her death was caused by diphtheria. Though Brother and Sister Coker are sad, they are submissive to the will of the Father and they have the comfort of the heartfelt sympathy of the people of the Topisaw charge, who love them so well, and a host of other brethren and friends.

THE NEED AND VALUE OF PRAYER.

It is worth while to note that during his earthly career Christ kept in constant touch with the Father through the channel of prayer, and to this fact we think the successful accomplishment of his stupendous task was in a considerable measure due. Spiritual warfare is like earthly warfare in that, if not strengthened, it can have too much strain put upon it, and in that, no matter how great a leader is, his communication with the seat of his base of supplies must be kept open. Nothing could have changed the character of our Lord, but if the forces of darkness with whom he contended could have cut off his communication with heaven, he might have been overwhelmed, so that the plan of salvation would never have been successfully carried out. This fact ought to give us some idea of the value of prayer. A great duty lies before us which concerns ourselves directly and our fellowmen indirectly. It is this, as Paul expressed it: we are to "work out our own salvation with fear and trembling." The outcome concerns us directly, in that our souls are at stake, and others indirectly, in that our influence upon them will as a result be for good or for evil. In this instance the decision of the hour is not for a few years, nor for a lifetime, but for eternity.

The task which lies before us is a very great one and must not be trifled with. So far as we are concerned as individuals, upon its success or failure the final decision concerning the value of what Christ has accomplished must rest. God has done all that he could for us through the sacrifice of his Son and through the sending of the Holy Spirit into the world to continue the work in the hearts and lives of men after the departure of Jesus, and it now remains for each one of us to do his part. If Christ, the divine Son of God, needed to pray, and we know that he did and never neglected to do so, why then should we fail to lift up our voices and thoughts to heaven and to God for the wisdom that we need in order to "work out our own salvation" and for the divine assistance that must be ours if we resist the temptations that confront us on every hand in a sinful world? It is to be feared that most of us do not put the right emphasis on true, earnest, conscientious prayer. It is a great aid in enabling a soul that is struggling blindly and desperately in the dark to obtain light, and after conversion it is found to be a great power, for is it not written that "the prayer of a righteous man availeth much?"

Let us talk with God as did the patriarchs of old; then shall we know Him whom to know is life eternal, and it shall be said of each of us, as it was said of Abraham, "He was called the Friend of God." And as we reflect upon our earthly pilgrimage, we shall be able to say with the Psalmist, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Having so true and loving a Friend with us always, what do the hard things of life or the terrors of death and the grave amount to? In the day of life evil shall not smite us, and in the "night of death" we shall fall into a peaceful sleep from which we shall awake on the resurrection morn. ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

DR. IVEY'S ASTOUNDING UTTERANCE.

Dear Mr. Editor: In an editorial in the Nashville Christian Advocate of September 22, entitled "No Cause for Alarm," there appeared the following utterance:

"It would be naturally possible to start a propaganda for creating an impression among Southern Methodists that the Northern Methodists are preparing to swallow the Southern Church, that social equality will be established, that negroes will become our lawmakers, etc., all in the name of unification. Such talk, while it might have an unfortunate influence on our Northern Commissioners, fortunately could not influence that minority of our Church who read the Church papers and keep up with what is going on. They would not believe such stuff. They know better. But unfortunately the Southern Methodists who never see a Church paper, much less read one, who know practically nothing of unification, and would not be greatly interested if they knew, are in an overwhelming majority. It is estimated that only one Methodist family in ten is visited by a Church paper. To scatter such wild talk as that which has been mentioned among that overwhelming majority who never see a Church paper and not often a preacher and consequently know no better would indeed be a calamity. It would unleash a force which would be highly destructive. But is such an event morally possible? Those who know our Methodist preachers and Methodist laymen, no matter what their views on unification may be, know that such a propaganda as has been referred to is impossible in Southern Methodism. It is an awful thing to awaken a mob spirit either outside or INSIDE OF THE ECCLESIASTICAL FOLD. We have none down here who would, if they could, do such a thing." (Italics mine.)

There have, in my opinion, been some things written on both sides of the unification question that it would have been better had they never been penned; but this utterance of Dr. Ivey is to my mind the most astounding deliverance that has come under my observation. I regard it as such for several reasons:

1. The Doctor says that there is nobody down this way who would do such a thing, and that such an occurrence is impossible in Southern Methodism. Why, then, does he waste his valuable time and space combating a thing which he is sure can never happen? I hope that he will take us into his confidence enough to give us the reason he has seen fit to write against a purely imaginary impossible possibility—which does not now exist and which he declares never can. Believing the Doctor to be a thoroughly good and sincere man, and that he would not state anything that he does not believe to be true, I confess that my curiosity is considerably aroused as to what object he had in view in making the deliverance which I have quoted, which to me seems at some points to be quite contradictory.

2. He affirms that our people who read Church papers "would not believe such stuff;" that "they know better." How does he expect this propaganda to be carried on among those who see no Church paper? Does he expect them to be reached through the secular press or by means of circulars? So far as my observation has extended, practically all of the campaigning of that kind that has taken place has been carried on by the ardent unionists, as, for instance, the copyrighted interview with Bishop Cranston which appeared in the Memphis Commercial Appeal some weeks ago, and the pamphlet giving a handshaking picture of Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Cranston and calling attention to the million and three-quarter dollars that some unknown party is alleged to have a purpose to give to the superannuate endowment fund of the two communions when they are made one, which was scattered over the country. I wonder if Brother Ivey thinks that this kind of "a propaganda" is desirable and commendable.

3. In representing nine-tenths of the two million Methodists of the South as being so weak and illiterate, as he clearly does by implication, as to be susceptible of having almost any sort of a tale palmed off on them in a manner to work them up into a fury, the Doctor reflects upon the membership of our Church to an extent which, as I see it, is highly reprehensible. Think of his declaring that an "overwhelming majority" of Southern Methodists care nothing about unification, and that they would not do so even if they understood the matter! And think of his insinuating, as he does, that it would be easy to "awaken a mob spirit" among a majority of our people. And this from the Editor of the General Organ of our Church which is supposed to be maintained to defend the interests and honor of our denomination! Surely, we have fallen upon strange times when such a development as this can take place.

As a plain, old-fashioned Methodist, I wish to express my resentment at this unjust and misleading characterization of nine-tenths of our communicants. When in the history of Southern Methodism have the rank and file of our people ever exhibited "a mob spirit?" They are not told that they are ignorant and incapable of acting intelligently when their money is solicited for the various enterprises of the Church. "Upon what meat hath this our Caesar fed that he hath grown so great" that he can thus disparage the great body of the Church, whose servant he was elected and is paid to be?

Apparently the view is beginning to prevail to some degree that only those who are scholarly, cultured, and high up are fit to have a voice in determining the affairs of Southern Methodism, and that the great masses of our people are incompetent to exercise the functions of self-government. Do you not think, Mr. Editor, that it is about time to correct this ill-conceived notion? I certainly do, for, taking them member for member, the Methodists of the South will compare very favorably in point of intelligence and character with any equal number of Church people that can be found in the United States or anywhere else on the globe. And they are fully capable of discriminating between representations that are true and untrue and of settling the "unification question" or any other issue that may arise. They do not need to have editors, connectional officers, boards, commissions, or any other class of persons to stand guard over them and censor what they may hear or read as if they were a body of children, or a herd of mercurial incompetents in whom there is liable to be "unleashed a force that would be highly destructive." They are, for the most part, followers of Christ, and, though many of them, like their Lord, may be poor and humble, they are not "a mob;" nor are they susceptible of being converted into one.

B. J. DODSON.

A NOTABLE OCCASION.

One of the great (if not the greatest) occasions of my life was the opening of the Lamar School of Law of Emory University on the morning of September 27, 1916.

Bishop Candler, as Chancellor of the University, was at his best in presiding at this first and formal opening of the Department of Law. He faced a striking audience, and the scene was thrilling to all the people. The great congregation was asked to sing one of the great hymns of the Church, led by the Emory quartette. Bishop Candler conferred upon me the very great privilege of offering the prayer. His remarks were full of wisdom and prophecy as to the founding of this great institution of learning for our Church. His introduction of the speaker, one of the leading citizens of the South, a native of Georgia, a citizen of the great State of Texas, and serving his Government in the State Department at Washington, was altogether appropriate and beautiful. Among the many splendid things that he said was this: "I am happy to-day"; and he expressed the feeling of thousands of Methodists and others all over the South. It was an occasion for happiness as a result of the achievements of the Church in the almost miraculous growth of the University founded by the Church in the summer of 1914. The fact that the building was not begun until the first of 1916 makes it a notable achievement.

I thought, if I had the leaders of Mississippi Methodism with me to-day to look upon these massive buildings—absolutely fire-proof—and altogether adequate so far, I would only have to present the opportunity to them and they would be glad to make their contribution to the Lamar School of Law building without any strain or stress. The Church never had such an opportunity to strengthen her forces as now, and it will be a great day for Mississippi when our people have contributed every cent that they should to have the building as her memorial to the great citizen whose memory we should delight to honor in this way.

Great is Emory, and still greater will it be with the passing of the years. Let us make haste to do our part, and not be satisfied until we have done all that we should do.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. A. Hall is conducting a revival meeting at Greenwood, Miss. The singing is being led by the Wisdom Sisters of Macon, Mo.

Miss Gibson, formerly of St. Louis, but who has been designated to succeed Miss Martha Nutt as Superintendent of St. Mark's Hall of this city, reached New Orleans and took up her work last week.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in since our last issue: Rev. R. E. Rutledge, Vaughan, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. Abney, Bucatunna, Miss., 3.

Remember that next Saturday is Orphanage "Work Day" in both Louisiana and Mississippi, and the next day, Sunday, is Harvest Day, to gather in the proceeds. Let every church and Sunday school be heard from at Ruston or Jackson.

Rev. S. H. Caffey orders his paper to come to him hereafter at the University of Mississippi. He reports everything as progressing favorably on the Red Banks charge (N. Miss. Conf.), and states that he hopes to secure all the collections in full.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Rayville, La., says: "I have grave doubts as to the wisdom of organic union. How can two walk together except they be agreed?" Brother Harrison is having a successful pastorate in his present field.

We have in hand an interesting communication from Rev. J. M. Alford, of Columbia, La., which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. He is making things hum up his way and will carry an excellent report to Conference.

Concerning the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, Rev. J. B. Randolph, the Superintendent, writes as follows: "The home is full to its capacity and we have a number of applicants that we cannot possibly receive." Such a condition of affairs ought to stir the Methodists of Mississippi to action.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Alexandria, La., has sent us an interesting account of his work in the important field under his supervision, which we are printing on another page. Brother Coleman is pure gold, and his efficiency as a pastor is widely recognized. Any charge is fortunate to have his services.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Donaldsonville, La., sends us a copy of the program for his Sunday school "Rally Day," which was admirably arranged. The occasion, we dare say, was one of much interest. Brother Lowrey is a hard worker and spares no pains to carry forward the interests of the Kingdom where he is in charge.

A Forward Movement Sunday School Campaign, led by Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, the Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, is now under way in New Orleans and will last more than a week. Brother Breithaupt will have the active co-operation of the city pastors and other trained workers in executing this campaign.

Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, of Hattiesburg, Treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference, sends us the following note: "Please state that in my report as treasurer, which appeared in last week's Advocate, the following items were overlooked: Magnolia, Miss., Foreign Missions, $100; Home Missions, $60."

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., will assist Rev. L. A. Darsey in a series of revival services at Lyman, Miss., during the third week in this month. Brother Saunders informs us that Dr. Louis Albert Banks, of Ohio, the well known minister and evangelist, will deliver an address at Fernwood on the evening of October 15.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Ida, La., is having a good measure of success in his present charge. He says: "We have had good revivals. Our Sunday school work especially has been wonderfully built up; four teacher-training classes having been organized. We have built two churches in the main and repainted one. Everything is in fine shape."

Bishop W. P. Thirkield, of New Orleans, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Thursday. He and the Editor had a frank but pleasant conversation on the subject of Methodist unification. The Bishop expects to leave soon to meet engagements in the North. We were pleased to observe that he seemed to be in excellent health.

Miss Mary V. Duval, of Shelby, Miss., who is well known as a teacher and authoress, in renewing her subscription, says: "I am certainly with you on the Church union question. When we are absorbed into the Methodist Episcopal Church we shall lose not only 'our local habitation and a name,' but also our identity as a denomination altogether."

Rev. J. L. Sutton, of this city, who is Superintendent of the Home for destitute Orphan Boys and Secretary of the Louisiana Prison Reform Association, left Thursday of last week for Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the National Prison Congress which opened there last Saturday. Rev. H. S. Johns, Chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, accompanied Brother Sutton on this trip.

Rev. J. L. Cady reports a fine meeting, recently held, at Hipkins Chapel, in which he had the assistance of Rev. J. E. Craig, who preached with telling earnestness. The church was revived and there were eleven additions to its membership.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions.

Fraternally,
CHAS. O. CHALMERS,
Publisher.

Brother Cady was in New Orleans on October 6 and favored the Advocate office with a call. He stated that his wife, whom he had brought to the city for medical treatment some time before, was nearly well and that he had come to take her home.

We noticed in a recent issue of the Memphis Commercial Appeal a picture of Mr. William Finger, of Ripley, Miss., who last year while attending the University of Mississippi was awarded a Cecil Rhodes Scholarship, and who left last week for Oxford, England. This gifted young man is a son of Mr. M. L. Finger, a prominent member of our Church at Ripley, and a brother of Mr. H. E. Finger, who is the capable superintendent of our Sunday school at that place. The distinction which he has won is one of which his friends are justly proud.

By request we publish the following statement: "All those acquainted with the needs of Mary Wertein Mission know how hard it is to meet the various calls that are made upon it for service. A friend has agreed to give half of the proceeds from the sale of four dozen chrysanthemums to the cause. These are very fine flowers, measuring from 5 to 8 inches in diameter. They may be had for All Souls' Day, and now is the time to place orders. Phone Rev. W. E. Thomas, of New Orleans, Main 2995, or address a note to him at Room 203, Queen and Crescent Building."

Writing from Marion, Va., on October 7, Rev. M. L. Burton says: "I came to these hills of Southwest Virgina, hoping to gain strength. So far, I have been disappointed in the results. I hope to return to Mississippi in the next few weeks, and expect to be at Crystal Springs, Miss., during the winter." We deeply regret that Brother Burton has made less progress toward recovery than he had hoped, and we earnestly pray that his improvement may soon begin to be more rapid. Brother Burton's letter brought us a communication, which we will let our readers see in the near future.

Miss Minnie Kennedy, the Superintendent of Elementary Sunday school work in our Church, is scheduled to conduct a series of institutes in North Mississippi early in November. She is stated to be equal to the best as a specialist in her department, and doubtless a rare treat is in store for those who may have the privilige of hearing her. All elementary teachers who possibly can should be certain to attend the nearest institute conducted by this gifted worker. For any information that may be desired concerning this series of meetings write Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Supreme Court of Mississippi has dissolved the injunction which temporarily had arrested the movemnt to have a referendum on the recently enacted prohibition legislation in that State; so the enactment in question will have to be voted on by the people in November. The law now to be passed upon at the polls limits the shipment of liquor into the State to any one person to a quart of whiskey or 24 pints of beer every fifteen days and forbids the advertising of liquors in the State. It now behooves the prohibitionists of Mississippi to bestir themselves and see that this law is upheld by the suffrages of the people.

The Advocate carried last week a notice of the death of Prof. E. H. Randle, of Hernando, Miss., a highly esteemed citizen of the Magnolia State, who was widely known in educational circles. Since then we have received the following touching note from Mrs. Ella Roberts Randle, written from Hernando on October 9: "E. H. Randle, A. M., LL.D., died at his home at Hernando, Miss., Wednesday afternoon, September 27, 1916. We are greatly bereaved. Our house is left unto us desolate." We deeply sympathize with these stricken ones and pray that the Heavenly Father may have them in his tender keeping in this trying hour.

Of his work, Rev. R. P. Neblett, pastor of the Ripley and Blue Mountain charge (N. Miss. Conf.), says: "Things are booming at Blue Mountain this year. There are 43 at the Mississippi Heights Academy for Boys and Young Men, Prof. J. E. Brown's school, this year who are either Methodists or from Methodist homes, and 32 young ladies attending Blue Mountain College are enrolled in a class maintained for them in our Sunday school. We will have Rally Day next Sunday, October 8; then will follow Work Day for the Orphanage, and toward the last of the month we will have Adult Bible Class Day. We have five organized Bible classes."

We take the following from the Sardis (Miss.) Reporter of October 6: "Rev. S. C. Stone, who was at one time a citizen of Panola County, but who for many years had lived at Belen, Quitman County, died at his home there on Tuesday of last week, after an illness of several weeks' duration. Mr. Stone was twice married, and he is survived by his second wife, and two sons, Dr. J. Boone Stone, of Memphis, and Mr. Pat Stone, of Lyon. The sympathies of many friends go out to these in their sorrow. Mr. Stone was in his 71st year at the time of his death." We regret to learn of the decease of Brother Stone, who was generally known throughout North Mississippi, and we pray that God may comfort and sustain the bereaved.

Rev. G. P. McKeown, of Edwards, Miss., writes: "Our church is mourning because of the untimely deaths of Brother T. A. Chichester, Mrs. T. A. Chichester, and Miss Gertrude Chichester, and the serious injury of Miss Georgia Chichester, Miss Ethlyn Luster, and Miss Clemie Colmery. These tragedies came as the result of a collision between the auto of Brother Chichester and the A. & V. train at a crossing near Edwards on September 21. We buried Brother Chichester and his daughter, Miss Gertrude, on September 22, and a few days later, September 28, we laid to rest the consecrated wife and faithful mother. The remaining loved ones, though crushed, are leaning upon the strong arm of God and are faithfully trusting him in this sad hour. They have the sympathy and prayers of the entire community."

NOTICE.

Anyone desiring a personal worker, soloist, and chorus leader for evangelistic services, please write Geo. Avery, Jr., 416 Elmer St., Biloxi, Miss. For refrence write Rev. J. L. Sells, Wiggins, Miss., or Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, Athens, La.

CAROLINE BRUMFIELD (nee Chapman) was born in Jones County, Miss., on November 29, 1827, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. Donald, near Johns, Miss., on June 16, 1916. She was married to C. W. Brumfield in 1845; and to them were born 12 children, 7 of whom preceded her to the other shore. She united with the Methodist Church in early life and remained a true and loyal member until the day of her death. She was a good Christian, wife, and mother. She loved her Church, and, although feebleness prevented her regular attendance at the services, she never lost her interest in the Church. She expressed her readiness to depart and requested that the song, "Weep Not for Me When I Am Gone," be sung at her burial. The writer visited her just a few days before her death, and, though she was sick, she seemed to enjoy a service held in the home and got happy while we were singing some of the old hymns. She leaves behind her a number of friends and relatives to mourn her death.

W. W. MURRAY.

NANNIE MAY LYON (nee Fonville) was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fonville, of Holcomb, Miss. She was born on March 3, 1881, near Lexington, Holmes County, Miss. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early childhood; and she loved her Church. Her comparatively short life of thirty-four years was full of serene and joyful devotion to her loved ones and friends, and her zeal in works of charity gave daily demonstrations of her Christianity. Though she possessed all the Christian graces, none was more impressive than the beautiful fortitude with which she bore her long nerve-exhausting illness. Despite the most careful nursing, she succumbed to the inevitable on December 28. On the night of December 25, she asked her husband to read the Twenty-third Psalm. She said: "I am willing and ready to die. I am so happy. You have been so good to me. Do not grieve for me." The funeral services were held on Jan. 1, 1916, at Liberty Chapel, near Lexington, being conducted by Rev. J. W. O'Bryant. A great number of friends and relatives were present to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed one. May our Heavenly Father consecrate us all to his service! One who loved her, N. B.

Miss MAUD WILLIAMS, one of our most estimable members, passed to her reward on the night of August 4, surrounded by her brothers and sister and a few friends. She had been a great sufferer, having gone to Colorado about a year ago in search of health. All that the skill of physicians could do was done for her, but early in August she returned to Como to the home of her sister, Mrs. Clyde Phillips, where she sweetly fell asleep. Miss Maud was left in charge of the home and the younger brothers and sister at the tender age of twelve or thirteen years. She met the responsibilities thus placed upon her and became a mother to the orphan children, rearing them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. She was a quiet, unassuming Christian woman who loved God and the Church with all of her heart and considered it a great privilege to attend the services of God's house. She was an intelligent listener and a devout worshiper. The whole community loved Miss Maud because of her beautiful Christian life and heroic struggle during the last years of her life. It has been a gracious privilege to be her pastor. She has left this world, but she has taken up residence in the City of God to live through the endless ages. The influence of her life will linger behind to bless all who live in this community for all time to come.

W. D. WENDEL.

Little ALLIE MILDRED CHATHAM was the daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Peyton Chatham, of Rose Hill, Miss. She was born on October 26, 1914, and lived 2 years, 6 months, and 6 days to beautify their home. She was sick for only a few days with cholera infantum and died on May 1, 1916. When with my little girl of about the same age, I often think of the home over the way without the baby. For this home has lost its best source of comfort, so far as this world's things are concerned. Mother now has no one to care for as her own dear little girl. While she was making a beautiful dress for her little girl, the child, in the spirit of pride and gladness found only in those of that young age, said to the mother, "Who is going to be a pretty little girl on Sunday at Children's Day?" Of course, she knew that her mother would say, "Why, you, darling." But little did the mother think that she would be pretty sure enough as one of the beautiful angels around the throne of God, and on that Children's Day be with the One who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of God." Thanks be unto God for the consciousness of the fact that our loss is Heaven's gain. May the father and the mother be faithful so that they can meet her at the gate one more time—at the pearly gate which is the entrance to that home that Christ said he went to prepare for those who are faithful, for there they will find Allie Mildred to greet them.

H. R. McKEE.

We are heirs to many things in this life that are most unpleasant. Yea, some things could not be borne at all but for the sustaining grace of God—a realization of the sympathy of "the love of the Son of man" who himself trod the path of sorrow and of the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit. Death, how terrible it is! This dread monster and last great enemy is yet in the land and claimed for his victim on September 7, 1916, JOHN WAINRIGHT YOUNG, aged 16 years, 11 months, and 23 days. Wainright was sick only 17 hours before he passed into the great beyond. He leaves a heart-broken widowed mother, two sisters, and one brother. His father's departure to the better world occurred some three years ago. John was the stay and comfort of his dear mother and younger sister, the other sister having married. Of the three composing the household, his mother and sister came first in everything with him. Wainright was loved by all who knew him. As his pastor I knew him when he was a bright, manly little boy of 7 or 8 years of age, being brought up in a real "Christian home." He grew to young manhood with high ideals and with the wholesome purposes in his heart and mind which really count for something in this life and which will abide in the life which is to come. Wainright joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at New Salem, on the Boyle charge, two years ago under the ministry of Rev. J. J. Brooks. He was the son of Thomas J. Wainright and Susie E. Young. May the mother, sisters, and brothers find sustaining grace in their sorrowful hours!

D. M. GEAN.

MRS. CALLIE CALHOUN (nee Davis) was born on March 8, 1866, in Rankin County, Mississippi. She was the daughter of Rev. Jas. J. Davis, lately deceased, long a member of the Northwest Texas Conference. She moved to Texas with her parents in 1871, where in 1875 her father joined the Northwest Texas Conference. He remained a faithful member of this Conference until he passed away at Stephenville in 1908. She was converted in childhood and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained an earnest and consecrated Christian till her death. She was married on November 20, 1887, to Mr. W. L. Calhoun, in Erath County, Texas. In 1897 they moved from Eastland, Texas, and came to Rayville, La., where they resided until her departure for the land of everlasting life.

While visiting relatives in Meridian, Miss., Sister Calhoun was seized with a severe malady which necessitated her removal to the Meridian Sanitarium. This was in August, 1916. Her husband and relatives joined her there, and, though the most skillful and careful treatment was given her, she did not rally against the disease and died on Sept. 22, 1916. Her remains were brought to Rayville, La., where in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends they were deposited under a great wealth of beautiful flowers. Here she rests in the sure hope of a joyous resurrection. Sister Calhoun is survived by her husband, three sons, John, William, and Joseph; two minor daughters, Frances and Caroline; by her brothers, Jas. E. and Rev. W. F. Davis of the Northwest Texas Conference, and by three half sisters.

Sister Calhoun bore her sufferings with steady patience and fortitude. Her lamp was trimmed and burning, and shone clear and bright. She was a Methodist always, and, being a daughter of the parsonage, she was the preacher's unfailing friend. A devoted wife, a true mother and faithful friend, she is gone from us, but her leaf shall not wither. Her name and influence will abide, and the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. A large number of relatives and friends will sadly miss her, but can never forget her, and some sweet day when the mists have rolled away they will meet again at Jesus' feet in the better land.

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Never Neglect Colds; Treat Them Promptly

Often they lead to those pulmonary troubles which are responsible for more than one-tenth of all lives lost through illness.

Heavy colds which develop deep-seated coughs or cause inflammation of the air-passages and persist in spite of medication, weaken the system to a point where resistance easily is overcome—and asthma, bronchial and pulmonary troubles are the result. To renew normal resistance, Eckman's Alterative has been found highly beneficial in many instances.

Its lime content is so combined with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person—and it contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs of any sort. So it's safe to try. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

He that falls into sin is a man; that grieves at it is a saint; that boasteth of it is a devil.—St. Augustine.

FROM REV. E. D. SIMPSON.

Dear Brother Meek: I feel it my duty to give some account of my work this year, which has been done hy the co-operation of these nohle Christian people and outside ministerial help. The only way the Conference had of promoting me in the material sense was to send me to the highest point in North Mississippi geographically. I soon found myself going long distances to seven churches over these hills and Winton County's pine poles. However, most of Winston County is grading for good roads, and she can now dispose of her old material to Neshoba, Choctaw and Webster Counties. We found the people rather cold and indifferent, hut hegan working in hope of success; so, praying with faith and preaching by the direction of the Spirit, we moved along progressivcly. Brother J. J. Garner came to High Point and his sweet and plain gospel preaching yielded results. Then I went to Owens Chapel with God, and we had the first revival and additions (14 in numher) since the Church was established five years ago. Brother Alhert Bennett, a student volunteer, went to Rural Hill with me. He is thoroughly consecrated and aflame for the salvation of the lost world; so it is needless to say that good results were accomplished. Rev. J. D. Simpson went out to White Hall with me and held the most profitable series of revival services I have ever attended. Brother Tommie Halfacre came to our relief at New Hope, his home church, and that cold and hackslidden membership was reclaimed and there were 13 additions. Brother Simpson was with me again at Center Ridge. A good revival was held and as a result there were some additions to the Church. Brother J. C. Long, the well beloved man and preacher in this section, took charge of Macedonia, after Brother Sam Vowels joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and held a great revival there, adding 6 persons to the Church. Our total number of additions this year is 86—nearly all on profession of faith.

Brother W. W. Mitchell has just held our fourth quarterly conference. Our finances were really hetter than we expected at this early date. Brother Mitchell is a wise leader, for he knows human nature. He stands high as a presiding elder and preacher throughout this section.—E. D. Simpson, P. C.

"THE SOUTH TO-DAY."

A most interesting hook has lately heen issued, "The South To-Day," from the pen of Dr. John M. Moore, Secretary Department of Home Missions in our own Church. It is distinctly a home mission study, as indicated hy the title, and will he of interest not only to the people of the South but to the whole nation. It will be used during the coming season as a textbook in all sections of the country. Prof. R. E. Gaines, of Richmond College, Richmond, Va., has written a quite comprehensive review of the book from which we quote as follows:

"The author not only gives a vast amount of information about that section of our country as he tells the story of the South's rehabilitation since the close of the Civil War and of its rapid progress in recent years, hut he sets forth also the stupendous tasks which confront the South and the grave and urgent problems which are calling so insistently for solution and which constitute such a challenge to Southern leadership.

While the primary object of the book is to portray the present South and with a distinct forward look to estimate her potentialities and her obligations, still the author gives his readers at least a glimpse of the Old South and reveals something of its picturesqueness and charm. Indeed, this is necessary to the main purpose of the book, since in order to understand what it is we need to know how it came to be. No one can fully appreciate the South to-day without knowing something of the spirit of the South of yesterday.

The book appears at a most appropriate time, in view of the fact that for the next year there will he in the various Protestant communions and throughout the whole of our country a concerted movement for home mission studies as a part of the theme, "The Two Americas."

"The South To-Day" will prove to be a very teachable book. One distinct merit which it possesses in this direction is the facilities which it has for provokng discussion. It will from the very outset hring to light sharp differences of opinion in almost any group of persons, either North or South, because the subject which the hook presents is one about which we all have some knowledge and a great deal of ignorance."

Mission Study groups in our own Church should make a careful study of Dr. Moore's splendid book this year.

"SOUTH AMERICAN NEIGHBORS."

Smith & Lamar, Agents, Nashville, Dallas, Richmond. Cloth, 60 cts.; paper, 40 cents. Prepaid.

Bishop Stuntz has rendered the student world a much needed service in the preparation of this modest but attractivo volume. It appears at an opportune time, when the attention of the world is drawn to this neglected continent with a growing appreciation of its great future. A real factor in the backwardness of missionary enterprise in Latin-America has been the failure of men to grasp this future and prepare to take advantage of it.

Rev. Frank K. Sanders, Director of the Board of Missionary Preparation, says of the book: "Few leaders of to-day have had better opportunities than Bishop Stuntz for viewing at first hand the great Southern continent and for testing in the alembic of experience his missionary theories. Four years of administration on the field have given him an optimism and an eagerness which are contagious. The reader of the book develops a growing enthusiasm for Latin-American missions and a serener confidence in their progress.

Within the scope of two hundred pages the author reviews the resources of the Southern continent, its fascinating history, the factors which explain its slowness of development, some of the great pioneering heroes who made possible the Christian activity of to-day, and the outstanding problems which confront the statesman and the missionary alike. He brings out very clearly the baneful, even paralyzing, effect of the system of vast landed estates and of the position assigned to womanhood in society and presents many instructive differences between North American society and life and those of Latin America.

The volume covers only South America, but serves as a capital introduction to the further study of the continent or to an enlightened discussion of its important problems, political, educational, and religious. It will help to clarify the thoughts of many concerning the ten republics south of Panama and arouse a fresh interest in their needs and possibilities.

The questions raised by the volume deserve careful study, yet they are virtually unknown to the great majority of our people, young or old. Dr. Stuntz is to be commended for placing them within the reach of those who are eager to see with clearness the great forward steps which remain to be taken by the generation now preparing to win the world for Christ."

"South American Neighbors" will be the leading Foreign Mission Study Course for our churches for this year.

Sunday School

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The District Sunday School Institutes to he conducted hy Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, our Superintendent of Elementary Work, are intended chiefly for the teachers of children under thirteen years of age; but the instruction that she will give will be of incalculable benefit to parents, pastors, superintendents, and others that are likely to teach in the future.

Have we had any meetings this year that promise to reach out into the future with an influence for good, and that will grow bigger in blessings as the years go on other than these institutes, which propose to deal with and shape the unwarped, unspoiled, young life of the Church? I make bold to say that these institutes are the most vital of anything we have undertaken as yet.

For one day let our God have use of the automobiles and bring in the teachers from every school near the place where these institutes are to be held. We are aiming to have at least a hundred at each institute. So far as I can learn, Tupelo means to lead the other places in getting out the largest number of teachers. One of our enterprising preachers writes, "Ten of our teachers expect to be with you at Tupelo." Good, let them come.

Take note of the time and places of meetings: Corinth District at Booneville, Friday, Nov. 3, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Rev. J. M. Wyatt, pastor, and Mrs. Jake Taylor, Superintendent Elementary Division.

Aberdeen District, at Tupelo, Saturday, Nov. 4, also Sunday. Mrs. M. M. Miller, Shannon, Superintendent Elementary Division. Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor.

Holly Springs District, at Holly Springs, Monday, Nov. 6, Tuesday 7th, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. each day. Dr. H. G. Henderson, pastor, and Rev. W. A. Lott, assistant pastor; Mrs. L. G. Fant, Superintendent Elementary Division.

Sardis District, at Sardis, Wednesday, Nov. 8, Thursday, Nov. 9, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Rev. J. C. Park, pastor; Mrs P. C. Wall, Superintendent Elementary Division.

Durant District, at Durant, Friday, Nov. 10, and Saturday, Nov. 11, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Rev. T. M. Bradley, pastor, and Mrs. A. Y. Woodward, of Louisville, Superintendent Elementary Division.

Columbus District, at West Point, Sunday and Monday, Nov. 12, 13, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., on Monday. Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor, and Mrs. B. M. Howorth, Superintendent Elementary Division.

Helpful hooks, pictures, songbooks, samples of graded lessons, and other material needed by the elementary teacher will he on exhibition. One more time let me say, do not fail to hear Miss Kennedy at one of these institutes.

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT

Elders' Sanitarium, located at 513 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

THE LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

The Louisiana Anti-Saloon League held a meeting in Alexandria, La., on Wednesday and Thursday, October 4 and 5, with a good interest and attendance. The following were some of the addresses delivered: "Local Option without the Option," by Rev. A. W. Turner; "Liquor and Life Insurance," by Henry Walker of New Orleans; "Prohibition an Educational Measure," by President C. Cottingham, of Louisiana College; "The Public Interest," by W. H. Managan, of Westlake; "The Logic of Prohibition," by Bishop W. P. Thirkield.

An educational program was outlined, of which some of the features are as follows:

1. That the League inaugurate an earnest campaign for funds to create and circulate literature designed to set forth conditions as they exist in Louisiana to-day. This will involve an examination of public records, a comparison of the situation in "wet" and dry territory, the relation of the liquor traffic to the foreigner, the negro, crime, insanity, etc.

2. That the League use every means at its command to secure systematic temperance instruction in the schools of the State.

3. That an effort be made to obtain two advances in Legislation: (a) the enactment of a law requiring Police Juries to suhmit to the voters of a parish the question of prohibition when one-third of the legal voters petition for the same; (b) an act making Congressional Districts the units for a vote on the suppression of the traffic within their bounds.

The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: Rev. E. O. Ware, of Alexandria, President; Vice Presidents: First Congressional District, M. B. De Pass, New Orleans; Second District, W. O. Hart, New Orleans; Third District, Crow Girard, Lafayette; Fourth District, W. W. Wright, Minden; Fifth District, W. P. Gains, Rayville; Sixth District, J. R. Ables, Ponchatoula; Seventh District, A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles; Eighth District, B. F. Thompson, Alexandria. There were sixty persons selected to compose the Board of Trustees from different sections of the State.

NOTES FROM ALEXANDRIA, LA.

The present pastor of First Church, Alexandria, began his pastorate here on the second Sunday in March, succeeding Dr. Chandler, who had to be relieved of the work on account of failing health. Since that time we have received into the Church 58 adult members. We have held no revival and have not yet observed Decision Day in the Sunday school.

During the summer, notwithstanding the absence of many of our leading members and the intense heat, we had large congregations at all the preaching services and the Sunday school work held up remarkably well. Last Sunday, Oct. 1, was Rally Day, which was observed with interest and enthusiasm and renewed inspiration for greater things. We now have 29 classes and are facing the necessity of erecting a new Sunday school hulding. On Sunday evening our Epworth League was reorganized, with a large attendance and good interest. Our Woman's Missionary Society is one of the best to he found anywhere and is diligent in good works, with larger plans for coming days.

Our Official Board met last evening and made out their budget for the coming year, making considerable advance over anything of the past and laying plans for greater achievements in every department of the work.

Our Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, who is proving himself to be a skilled workman in this important field, and his most capahle assistant, Miss Richardson, reside in our city and are an additional inspiration to us in the work. We only catch occasional glimpses of the Secretary, whose zealous activity, wisely directed, cannot fail to produce good fruits throughout the entire Conference, hut he always does us good whenever he drops in on us.

We face many difficulties here in reaping the white harvest-field about us, but with the loyal co-operation of a faithful Church, and trusting in Him who has never falled us, we are, with gratitude for the progress already made, expecting still greater success.

WM. H. COLEMAN, Pastor.

CALLED HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: I write to have you announce in the Advocate the death of Mrs. Melissa Foster, widow of the late Dr. D. W. Foster, who died at the home of her son, Dr. Paul Foster, near Opelousas on Friday night, September 29, and who was huried on the next day in the Protestant cemetery in Opelousas. Mrs. Foster was in the eightieth year of her age, and had been a Christian perhaps all of her life. For sixty years or more she had been a memher of the Church. Her home was always the home of the preachers. She was a life member of the Women's Missionary Society, and in every way lived the Christian life. Rev. J. D. Harper visited her in her last sudden illness, and officiated at her funeral. She was ripe for heaven, and has joined her loved ones. A suitahle ohituary will be prepared later. Yours in Christ,

H. S. JOHNS.

REV. G. H. THOMPSON COMMENDED.

The following resolutions were adopted in the fourth quarterly conference of the McLain charge, Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder of this district, will be removed from the district by the limitation imposed by the law of the Church at the close of the Conference year; therefore he it resolved:

1. That he has made a faithful and efficient presiding officer.

2. That he is a brotherly, affahle Christian gentleman.

3. That we heartily commend him to any charge or district to which the Bishop may appoint him, and that our prayers will attend him.

Signed: P. H. Howse, for the Conference.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

AN ACTIVE DISTRICT WORKER.

The following paragraphs are from a letter that I have just received from Brother J. A. Vanderwall, of Moss Point, Miss., Wesley Bible Class Superintendent for the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, and is published with his consent:

"Dear Brother Dietrich:

"The reason I did not answer your letter earlier is that I wanted to be able to report some successful work done which I had in view; and so I am writing you about the work done yesterday.

"I had arranged with my pastor to see each member of my class during the week in the interest of the organized Wesley Bible Class, and then come to my class Sunday and organize it. This program was carried out successfully, and, too, while I had gone to Pascagoula in the morning to effect the organization of a Wesley Bible Class there.

"Pascagoula has one organized class of young ladies, and after I talked to that Sunday school the Superintendent, Brother S: P. Walker, who is also superintendent of schools, told me that he will make a strong effort to have another class organized. I spoke also in the interest of the Teacher-Training Department, and as a result the school will get the books and start a teacher-training class before Conference.

"In Moss Point, too, after I returned from the Wiggins Institute and made my report to the school, I made a special appeal to the young men and ladies of the school to consecrate themselves to the work of teaching NOW, so that they could take the places of the old teachers when they pass off the stage of life, and there we were also successful in getting fifteen young people to come forward and pledge themselves to study the course and train themselves for teaching. This class will be led by Prof. R. A. Peets, who also is the superintendent of schools in Moss Point. The books have been sent for and I hope to see them begin their work early in October.

"Yesterday afternoon I went to South Pascagoula, on the beach front, where there is a union Sunday school. Of course, I did not do anything there, it being promotion day; but this was the largest Sunday school I have seen in a long time, and the promotion exercises were carried out in an interesting manner. Rome has had complete control of that section for years; but there are now many Catholic children in that school. It surely was good to be there.

"I wish to state that whenever I work in the interest of the Wesley Bible Class I always make an effort to start a teacher-training class at the same time, thereby assisting Brother G. L. Pou, the superintendent of that department. Brother Pou does as much for my department in his section of the work. This, I believe, will not result in any conflicts, and at the same time it helps both departments."

I do not publish these paragraphs especially to call attention to Brother Vanderwall (though he deserves all the praise and credit you can give him), but because I wish our Mississippi Conference people and especially the district officers to take note of what is being done in this district, and also because of the splendid plan of co-operation Brother Vanderwall and Brother Pou have arranged for their work. Perhaps other district superintendents might do the same way.

And then, too, we all like to be encouraged by knowing that the work is going forward and that things are being done. A. L. DIETRICH.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Dr. Meek: Some weeks ago Brother R. H. B. Gladney, the Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, stated through your columns that Water Valley was the banner charge of the Holly Springs District in Children's Day collections, having paid $30. This was a mistake made by the undersigned in transcribing the list from the treasurer's books for Brother Gladney. This honor belongs to Byhalia since that enterprising charge has paid $34.40. All honor to both Byhalia and Water Valley! We hope others will imitate their example.

Protection Against Infection.

If you bruise, cut, or burn yourself or get a splinter in your flesh, do not neglect the wound just because it is slight. Many deaths from blood poison have resulted from neglecting just such slight wounds. For nearly a century Gray's Ointment has been used as a protection against such infection. You will find a box of this ointment in thousands of homes. It costs only 25c and will last indefinitely. You cannot afford to be without it. Get a box from your druggist to-day. Well-Expanded Lungs Not Enough.

Pure blood is indispensable to the health and strength of the lungs. The delicate structure of these organs makes it necessary. When the blood is impure the lungs lose their tone, and even if they are permitted to expand freely, they have not the power fully to perform their important work. The fact is, there is nothing more necessary in our physical economy than pure blood—the kind of blood that Hood's Sarsaparilla makes. This medicine is the good old reliable family remedy for diseases of the blood, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, and low or run-down conditions of the system. At this time, when coughs and colds are so prevalent, Hood's Sarsaparilla is an invaluable tonic. Get it to-day, and begin to take it at once. Accept no substitute.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. PERSONALS FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

It is with pleasure that we announce the appointment of Mrs. F. B. Patton, of Oxford, as District Secretary of the Holly Springs District. We feel that no better choice could have been made, and in behalf of our Conference officers, we extend to her a hearty welcome to our midst.

We regret to note the fact that one of our most efficient Secretaries has become so popular that she has landed a larger, but we will not say better, job. We refer to Miss Willingham of the Durant District, who has recently been appointed Traveling Secretary of the Illiteracy Commission for our State. We feel sure that wherever Miss Willingham goes her path will still be strewn with the many good deeds that have characterized it in the past.

Letters, which have been a joy, have been received by the many friends of Deaconess Mary Daniels from her new far-away home in California. She gives a most interesting account of her days spent in the Mary Elizabeth Inn in San Francisco. She has found that while girls may differ very much in externals, the girl's heart is very much the same the world over.—N. Mississippi Conference Bulletin.

OPENING OF BREVARD INSTITUTE.

"School opened yesterday, September 7, with the largest opening day enrollment of any time during the past nine years. Every seat in the assembly room was occupied. We did not take time to make an accurate count of those who are students, but the estimate was 132. Ninety-six is the highest record for the first day of any previous year. We have room in the girls' dormitory for only three more girls and have accepted their applications. We expect them within a few days. Probably by the first of October we will have the forty boys whom we can accommodate. One boy who fully expected to come has died this week from blood poison."

A GENEROUS GIFT FOR BREVARD.

Brevard Institute has recently been the recipient of a gift of $1000 from a friend who withholds her name. It is not the first time a gift has been received from this friend, for she has helped much in late years with the building and vocational work of the school. This beautiful act of hers endears her to the heart of every woman in Southern Methodism. May we not fail to rightly appreciate her and her gift, and may God's richest blessings fill her life!

In the letter accompanying the gift she says: "I never forget to pray for this school, and, in fact, all schools; for I feel that the future of the country depends upon the rearing of the youth, and the steps taken to accomplish this task are in the schools—mostly the industrial schools, which make it possible for the boys and girls who thirst for education to have a chance. Such a school I think Brevard Institute is. I am enclosing a check for $1000, and hope I may always be able to help Brevard."

WEEK OF PRAYER.

November 5-11, 1916.

Observe the Week of Prayer in your auxiliary and so help to swell the number of auxillaries in your Conference, observing this special season. It is possible for every auxiliary in the three Conferences to observe this time set apart by the women of the Council. Perhaps it isn't possible for the smaller auxiliaries in the country charges to observe the Week of Prayer as fully as others do, but do not let that deter you from making some special use of the time. Each auxiliary should adapt the program to its own peculiar surroundings.

Why are we asked to observe this season every year?

1. Because there is inspiration and uplift to the membership. You cannot come together daily and spend an hour in prayer and study for the work and not catch a great vision of the needs of that work. Then there is the blessing which comes when two or three are gathered together in His name.

2. Because the growth of the kingdom is dependent upon the prayers of the children of God. It is a well known fact that every forward movement is the result of earnest prayer; so by observing the Week of Prayer in the truest, highest sense, we prepare the way for our Council to move forward to greater success than ever before and to mightily overcome obstacles of indifference and unbelief.

3. Because the offering of love which will accompany our earnest prayers will make this advance possible. Many open doors are waiting for some one to enter them, and places already entered, are in need of enlargement. The work grows faster than we supply means for its growth.

After prayer and study of the field, the Council has selected the two points most needing attention just now—Holding Institute, at Laredo, Texas, and the school to be established in Rio, Brazil. The study of the needs and apportunities of these two points will be gained from the daily program as we observe the Week of Prayer.

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY PLAN FOR THE WEEK OF PRAYER PROGRAM.

1. Gain the enthusiastic interest of your society. Then form into a circle, or circles, of prayer. At a certain hour every day pray for the success of the Week of Prayer, that it may fulfil its mission. Pray that interest may be rekindled in the hearts of some of our women, and that the indifferent way be aroused from their state of lethargy. Pray for a large offering—one of real self-denial.

2. Lay your plans right now and do not wait until November 1.

3. Put the program into the hands of a special committee who shall arrange for everything in connection with the carrying out of the same. Whatever this committee plans, stand by them and do your part faithfully, and God will bless the results. The literature will be sent out in advance so that the leaders appointed for each day will have time to study it and carefully plan for the wisest and brightest presentation of its facts.

4. Do not forget to give the work the widest publicity. If it is at all worth while, it is worth telling about. Secure space in your local paper and let your town people know something of your work. Give invitations through the press as well as from the Church pulpits. Personal invitations are not to be despised. In fact, it is the personal work that counts. Use an attractive poster in your church vestibule, placing it there two weeks in advance. Plan, Pray, Work!

5. Get the women in your church so interested that they will promise to put aside all social engagements for that one week, and let nothing, except the unavoidable, prevent them from being in their places at the appointed time—not once, or twice, but every day. It will not prove a hardship, but a season of deep spiritual blessing. Let us all unite to make this the very best Week of Prayer we have ever observed.

"Brethren, the most important of all knowledge and all wealth is to know that the kingdom of heaven is ours. All else dwindles into insignificant nothings."

The more accurately we search into the human mind, the stronger traces we everywhere find of the wisdom of Him who made it.—Burke.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. Frank Knobl, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yost, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. Clementina Duerring, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential

From the Field

Laurel, Miss. (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Brother Meek: The revival meeting at the 14th Avenue Church began on the second Sunday in September and continued until Friday night before the fourth Sunday. Rev. James V. Bennett, of Monticello, Miss., did the preaching. The Church was revived and built up. Brother Bennett captivated the people from the very beginning of the meeting. He is a successful revivalist. His sermons were forcible, clear-cut, and deeply spiritual. We had several children's services during the meeting, which were very interesting and helpful. The results of this meeting were 30 accessions to the Church, ranging from nine to forty years of age. We are glad to say that all were more than pleased with the work accomplished.

We have about completed the repairing of our church at a cost of something like $1000; and I am glad to say that we are out of debt and ready for the dedication service. My work is moving along very well.—A. A. Simms, P. C.

Gunnison, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I made an engagement in July with Rev. J. H. Bell, one of our Conference evangelists, to hold a meeting at Gunnison beginning the fourth Sunday in September. Brother Bell came on the evening of the fourth Sunday, but unfortunately the time conflicted with the Tri-State Fair at Memphis, which made it impossible to continue the meeting longer than Tuesday night. But in the short time he was here Brother Bell completely won the hearts of the people, and I am sure that much good was done. The people want him for a meeting next year. I am fully convinced by this, my first, association with Brother Bell that he is peculiarly fitted for evangelistic work, and that if he continues in this field the Church will reap a large and rich harvest from his labors.

I am in perfect agreement with you on the question of unification, and I have grave fears that without the fullest and freest discussion, it is not only possible, but probable, that a union may be consummated that would prove disastrous to Methodism in the South and turn back the wheels of progress in the kingdom of God for at least a quarter of a century.—R. W. Evans, P. C.

Vaughan Charge (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Brother Meek: Some progress is being made on the Vaughan charge. We have four churches, three of which are very well grouped, but the fourth one is quite a long distance from the parsonage. Quite a number of our men, women, and young people are spiritually-minded and are ready to assist the pastor in any way that they can. Up to date 35 persons have been added to the Church membership. We have 5 Sunday schools, all of which are doing work now, and in these schools there are some earnest helpers. Brother J. L. Neill is expected to hold our Sunday School Institute on Nov. 2 and 3, from which we look for large things.

This is the fourth year for our presiding elder and we regret very much to have to let him go. Brother Hardin is a good, strong man, and it will take a big man to fill his place.

The good ladies said that they were going to give a shower at the parsonage. So it came last week; but it seemed to be a rain rather than a shower. They came on Thursday with many nice things. We all had a good time. There are some of the best people on earth right here in the Vaughan charge. The Lord be praised!—R. E. Rutledge, P. C.

Nettleton Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am closing out my summer meetings, which, on the whole, have been very satisfactory. I have been assisted by Rev. W. M. Young, of Pontotoc, Miss., and Rev. R. L. Ellis, of Mayhew, Miss. Both of these brethren rendered valuable service, for which we are very grateful indeed. Their preaching was of such a high order as to "stir up the pure minds of the people" and to bring results. We have had almost 50 additions to the Church so far, with the prospect of good results from this week's work, which is the last for the season. I have held five of my own meetings and three away with other brethren, besides the two in which I had help. In all of these series of services the loving Father has very graciously manifested Himself to us, for which we are very grateful indeed. This has been, so far, the best of my four years' labors in this growing field. The Lord has some very faithful men and women not a few in this favored charge that can be depended upon to do His work. As a whole, no better people are to be found anywhere. Having labored among them for four years, they have endeared themselves to us by their many tokens of love and devotion to God and His Church. We predict for them a very bright future, and commend them to their next pastor as a faithful, devout, and God-loving people.

Our Sunday school work has been exceptionally good this year. Through the efforts of our very efficient Sunday School Secretary for the charge, Brother Norbin Sumner, we have maintained schools at each appointment on the charge and besides have schools at three schoolhouse appointments in our bounds, making nine schools in all. We have made some much needed repairs on the parsonage and some on church buildings also. We are doing our best to close out the year in good shape for Conference.

We heartily commend the stand you have taken on the "unification" question, and trust that our Church may win out on the plan adopted at the Oklahoma General Conference. Trusting that the year may end well with each pastor and that the Advocate and all its readers may have the blessings of the loving Father, I am, yours fraternally, M. A. BURNS, P. C.

TETTERINE WHEN OTHERS FAIL

That's the great thing about Tetterine skin remedy. It does insist upon relieving the severest cases of Tetter, Ringworm, Eczema, Itch, Acne, Pimples, etc., when others fall down. Mrs. S. E. Hart, Cross Trails, Ala., says: "I used Tetterine for tetter which has been running for 5 years. Nothing gave relief until I used your remedy and one box made a final cure." 50c at druggist's or by mail from Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

AT MORGAN CITY, LA.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Morgan City and Berwick charges of the Lafayatte District was held yesterday afternoon, Oct. 2, at 5 p. m., at Pharr's Chapel, under the presidency of the presiding older, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir. • • •

All reports showed the charges to be in a flourishing condition, with a general advancement on all lines, and it was further reported that $4500 had been contributed for material improvements. This being the last conference for both the presiding elder and the pastor in charge, they having served four years, the following resolution was offered and unanimously adopted by the quarterly conference:

Be it resolved, That the Boards of Stewards and Trustees of the Morgan City-Berwick charge hereby express their appreciation of the services of our presiding elder, Brother Hoffpauir, during the last four years. Also, that we regret that our pastor, C. C. Weir, will be compelled to leave us at the end of this year, having served this charge four years. That we appreciate his services and aid, and wish him success in any field to which he may be sent.—Morgan City Daily Review.

Iron the Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous Rundown People 200 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Week's Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone down into inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

The twenty-first session opened on the morning of September 13 with a large attendance. The presiding elder, Rev. P. D. Hardin, read the Scripture lesson and prayer was offered by Dr. W. A. Borum, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Addresses were made by the President of the College, Dr. A. F. Watkins; the Dean of the Law School, Judge Edward Mayes; Judge A. H. Whitfield, Professor of Law; Mr. Friederick Sullens, Editor of the Jackson Daily News, and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, and others.

The enrollment at the present time is greatly in excess of that of last year and students are coming in every few days.

The Junior and Senior classes are larger than for years. This is a good sign. When an institution can hold to matriculates through the four years it is doing good work.

The students are entering upon the various phases of college life with great enthusiasm and there is promise of the best year of several recent years in the Literary Societies, Y. M. C. A., and the various forms of athletics.

Upon the suggestion of the Superintendent of the city schools, Professor E. L. Bailey, formerly a teacher in Millsaps, about forty of the teachers of the city schools are taking a course in education in the newly established Department of Education.

Rev. W. G. Henry, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church and host of the approaching Annual Conference, is registered as a student in the Law School.

There is given free of charge in the college chapel each week an evening with moving pictures of the educational variety. The Department of Science has recently purchased a fine machine for that purpose. It will be used also in the open lecture course offered by the faculty each year in illustrating their lectures. The first lecture of the year will be delivered by Professor Harrell on the subject of Astronomy early in November.

Oct. 6, 1916. G. L. HARRELL.

SHORT PASTORATES WITHOUT A TIME LIMIT.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate says: "The Congregationalist Year Book reveals the fact that in the Eastern States about one-third of the Congregationalist pastors remain two years or less on an average in a pastorate, while in the States west of the Atlantic seaboard more than one-half the pastors change every two years." This is a thought-provoking disclosure. We commend it to the consideration of Southern Methodists who think that frequent moving upon the part of preachers is an evil, which the repeal of our time limit would cure. The ministry of the Congregational Church, it should be remembered, is perhaps as well educated as any in tho country. A lack of equipment is by no means the cause of all brief pastorates.

Editorial

LET THE LAW BE UPHELD.

We are carrying on another page an address to pastors in Mississippi from the pen of Dr. T. J. Bailey, the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League work in that State, which deals with a matter of great importance. The Mississippi Supreme Court has decided that the petition filed with the Secretary of State for a referendum on the liquor bill passed by the last Legislature comports with the law in the case, and that that enactment will now have to be passed upon by the voters of the commonwealth in the general November election, which is only a little over two weeks off. This presents a situation in Mississippi that is serious and which should stir to immediate action all our pastors and every other friend of the prohibition cause within its bounds.

What is this law which the anti-prohibitionists are endeavoring to annul? It forbids the shipment to any one person in the State of more than a quart of whiskey or 24 pints of beer within fifteen days, and makes illegal the advertising of liquors. The chief purpose of the measure was to stop blind tigers, boot legging, and every other form of the illicit sale of intoxicants, and that it has been effective in doing this is beyond question. Indeed, its effectiveness is generally understood to be the cause of this attack upon it, which is said to have been inspired by the wholesale liquor dealers in other States, who are reported to have defrayed the expenses incurred in working up the petitions for the pending referendum.

Will the people of Mississippi permit a backward step to be taken in the movement to suppress the illegal sale of liquor in their State? We shall be surprised if they do. The present law permits the shipment of an ample amount of stimulants for all reasonable purposes, and there can be no just complaint on this ground. As a beverage whiskey is an awful curse, and only harm can result from opening the way for blind tigers in the State, and wholesale liquor dealers out of the State, to carry on their nefarious business. It behooves every good citizen to bestir himself to see that this is not done.

We are informed that an effort is being made to prejudice the people against the prohibition enactment in question by trying to link it with the game law, which is said to be generally unpopular with the people, and thus excite prejudice against it. There is not the slightest connection between these two measures, and each should be allowed to stand upon its own merits.

We urge our pastors and the laymen in every charge to respond promptly to this call of Dr. Bailey and give him and his co-workers all the assistance in their power. And they should at once bestir themselves to awaken the people in their communities to a full realization of the vast importance of upholding the present prohibition law.

THE CALL TO ACTION.

In a recent issue of the Times-Picayune, Prof. Stockton Axson, of Rice Institute at Houston, Texas, who was a brother of the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and who was associated with his distinguished brother-in-law at Princeton University and maintained very close relations with him for thirty-five years, writes very entertainingly and informingly, under the caption, "Mr. Wilson as Seen by One of His Home Circle." Among the many impressive statements contained in this article, the following especially riveted our attention:

"A change came over him at just about the time that great and sweeping changes were taking place in our conceptions of nationality in those important years that lie between 1896 and 1906. Absurd as it may appear, previous to that I used to feel that he and I were mentally somewhat alike. There was ten years' difference in our ages, and another difference of some moment, the difference between genius and the lack of it. But, with all that, there was some remote resemblance in the workings of our minds—even my perceptive sister used to see it. He and I would talk together for hours, our conversations being largely speculative.

"But gradually I felt that a change was taking place. For one thing, he had been through an illness, from which he emerged more vigorous than before. He had always been a purposeful man, but now he was a man of fixed and resolute purpose. He was as affectionate and companionable as ever, but he did not have time now for such prolonged and "drifting" conversations. The task was calling him. And I must believe that besides the merely personal change his own nature was unconsciously reflecting the big and basic changes which were taking place in the nation and in national conceptions, changes that were leading America out of isolation into world-relationship. Perhaps he was, all unconsciously, enduring his vigils, preparatory to the great conflict that lay ahead of him in the dim mists of futurity. He grew more and more impatient of merely theoretical discussions; he must handle facts in all their difficult reality. I often heard him exclaim, I am so tired of a merely talking profession! I want to do something!"

The last sentences of this quotation are to us especially suggestive. Speculation and theories are needful and are valuable in their place, but they should ever be regarded as means to an end. They must be put into action if they are to be of real service to the world. If we were asked to point out the most outstanding defect of the Christianity of this age, we are inclined to think that we should say it is too largely theoretical. We wonder if the Heavenly Father does not sometimes become weary of the vast amount of talk that goes on about setting up the kingdom of Christ on earth and saving humanity, when proportionately there is so little being actually done toward the accomplishment of this great end. "Doers of the Word" are what are needed everywhere. They are Christianity's best exponents and most eloquent advocates. When a human life speaks through the medium of generous and noble deeds the world never fails to hear and heed.

It is not surprising that Mr. Wilson grew tired of theorizing and felt a more earnest call to grapple with the tasks of life in a more practical way as the years were passing. This call of duty to greater activity as time speeds swiftly by is not unusual to men of thoughtful mind. They realize that the days of opportunity will soon be gone and that they must be up and doing if they would achieve anything of large significance. Who has not been startled by the reflection that much of his strength and capacity is being expended upon things of little value and that he needs to break away from matters of small importance and concentrate his energies in work that tends to effect results that are lasting and truly serviceable to society? But too often it is the case that this yearning to lay hold of essential things is but a momentary passion that quickly passes away, eventuating in nothing. It is a lack of definite and worthy aims that makes so many lives barren and empty. They are literally frittered away upon inconsequential trivialities.

It is worth noting that Prof. Axson states that Mr. Wilson's increased seriousness and earnestness came after a spell of illness. How great is the debt that mankind owes to afflictions! They teach us many of our best lessons and furnish the spur to not a few of our loftiest undertakings.

CONCERNING CHOIRS.

A recent issue of The Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.) contained the following thought-provoking utterance:

"We believe that the character of a person who sings in the church choir should be above worldly reproach. If he or she does not openly profess to be a Christian, they at least should not follow the world. No regular theater-goer, card-player, dancer, etc., should be permitted to sing in the choir. If they are permitted to do so it will sooner or later bring the Church into disrepute. It will bring a reproach, and justly so. We should not allow such a thing. If we do, we will make for the Church a hard row to weed. 'Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.'"

That the choirs in many of our churches, so far as the attitude of those composing them toward spiritual religion is concerned, are a positive discredit, is a fact which cannot be gainsaid. And too often it is the case that choirs of this character are allowed to take almost complete control of the music and singing in public worship. Such a practice is wholly indefensible, and when this is permitted to be done it indicates a culpable weakness upon the part of the governing body of a congregation. The object of singing in a church is to strengthen and help the people spiritually, and the songs used should be of a kind to do this, and the lives of those who lead in them should be such that they can sing the truths embodied in them "with the spirit and understanding." A church that is in the grip of an irreligious choir is greatly handicapped in the work that it ought to do. That a reform in this respect needs to be TACTFULLY effected in many congregations is painfully obvious. The true ministry of sacred song is too potent and valuable a factor in the making and developing of Christians to be lightly surrendered.

THE HUNGRY HEART.

By Georgia M. Cook.

I saw them lavish roses
O'er a cold and silent face;
They covered, too, the senseless earth
Above her resting-place;
And I wondered would some one I love
Strew roses on my brow;
And my hungry heart, rebellious, said,
"I want no roses when I'm dead,
I want my roses, sweet and red;
I love them; give them now."

I heard them sing, so sweetly,
Unto silent, heedless ears,
And the sweet, low notes kept rhythm
With the mourners' falling tears.
I wondered would some song I loved
Be sung when I lay low;
And my hungry soul, song-loving, said,
"I want no song when I am dead,
I want my songs while blood flows red;
I love them; sing them now."

They whispered loving praises,
But the silent one slept on,
And the kindly words meant naught to her
Whose face they looked upon.
I wondered would some voice I loved
Speak words I would not hear;
And my hungry heart, with longing, said,
"Give not your praises when I'm dead,
I want your kind words now instead,
I need them; say them here."

POWER OF PRAYER.

The Bible account of the power of prayer is the best we can have. Jacob prays—Esau's revenge is changed to fraternal love. Joseph prays—he is delivered from the prison of Egypt. Moses prays—Amalek is discomfited; Israel triumphs. David prays—Ahitophel goes out and hangs himself. Asa prays—Israel gains a glorious victory. Jehosaphat prays—God turns away His anger and smiles. Elisha prays—a child is restored to life. Isaiah prays—one hundred and eighty-four thousand Assyrians are dead. Hezekiah prays—the sun-dial is turned back. Mordecai prays—Haman is hanged; Israel is free. Nehemiah prays—the king's heart is softened in a moment. Ezra prays—the walls of Jerusalem begin to rise. The Church prays—the Holy Ghost is poured out. Paul and Silas pray—the prison shakes; the doors open, and everyone's hands are loosed.—Unidentified.

"THE SIN OF SATISFACTION."

The "Wall Street Journal" recently related a story and adorned a moral, after the fashion of that financial sheet, which is worth repeating. The story was of a dairyman from the Middle West, who went to North Carolina, and there made such a success of his creamery that he was asked why the local farmers did not use to better advantage the same opportunites. His answer was, that the Southern farmers were "too satisfied"—only he used a word to describe the quality of their satisaction which we do not care to reprint, though the "Journal" says it goes in such a connection, swear-word as it is, because "it expresses the condemnatory attitude toward listless content, which is only laziness." The "Journal" further moralizes: "Nothing short of perfection will ever satisfy some people, which is perhaps as well in a most imperfect world. There is a discontent that is divine, and also another kind. But the bettering of things as a part of our nature belongs to the law of growth. The satisfied sense as a static quality is the sign of arrested development." The "sin of satisfaction" is what the "Journal" calls the attitude it here condemns. But do we not read: "Having food and raiment, let us therewith be content?" Is not the satisfaction of the native Carolinians as reputable as the anxiety of those dwellers in Gotham who are mainly concerned for more food and clothes than are needed? There is a vast deal of discontent and anxiety which is also sin.

Yet there is a deep truth underlying what the "Journal" says. The kind of contentment which accompanies godliness is not related to laziness. Godliness is an eminently active quality or trait of character. It may be satisfied with comparatively little of some things, and is never feverishly active to get as much as others have because they have it. But godliness aspires for a perfection which will keep it on the go forever.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE POWER OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE IN THE PROPOSED UNIFICATION OF METHODISM IN AMERICA.

By Judge E. V. Hughston.

In a recent article under the caption, "Bishop Candler and the Constitution," Rev. J. W. Moore, of Chattanooga, Tenn., took Bishop Candler severely to task for presuming to say, in advance of any call upon the College of Bishops for a judicial opinion, that the "Constitution of our Church requires that such a matter (unification) be submitted to the Annual Conferences." He says that this is a very remarkable utterance in more ways than one. Aside from the fact that the brother differs from the good Bishop on the question of submission to the Annual Conferences, he thinks that, since it is probable that the question may reach the College of Bishops for final judicial determination, this prejudgment is in bad taste, and refers to the conduct of Justice Hughes, who, while on the United States Supreme Bench, refused to say anything on matters political. The good brother is assuming a great deal when he considers that the question before the Church at present is a matter political, in the sense that Justice Hughes refused to discuss politics. Such matters were party and personal politics. The matter under discussion with us now reaches down to the organization of the Church and affects every branch of its government and polity. While Bishop Candler is one of the Supreme Court of the Church, he is also one of its executive and administrative heads; he is a general superintendent, a general overseer, and, as such, it is not only his privilege but his duty to advise the Church and its people in all matters affecting its management and government. President Wilson has not refrained from expressing his views on all matters affecting the interest of the country; then why should a Bishop refrain from expressing himself on all matters of Church polity?

Dr. Moore in Error.

The good brother uses the following language: "The College of Bishops may decide this question in line with Bishop Candler's hasty and ill-timed deliverance; but if they do so decide, it will be in the teeth of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, by which we came into the possession of millions of dollars worth of property." He again says, "If Bishop Candler's view be true, we owe the Northern Methodists several millions of dollars. The General Conference divided the Church and the General Conferences can unite the Churches."

He bases these statements on the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the case of Smith, et al., vs. Swormstedt, et al. (16 Howard U. S.), page 288, 14 Law, Ed. page 942.), to which case he refers. The brother claims that the General Conference of 1844 divided the Church according to this authority and that this fact was the basis of the distribution of the funds of the old Church between the new Churches, and that we are now holding this property by virtue of the power of the Conference of 1844. The United States Court did not so decide in the case above referred to. The matter involved in the litigation of the above case was the fund called the "Book Concern," which the Court held to be a trust fund, raised by voluntary contributions from the traveling preachers, both North and South, and placed under the care and superintendence of the General Conference; that after the erection of two distinct Churches out of the old Church, the traveling preachers in each were entitled to an equitable division of the funds, and this was so whether the separation was legal or not, although the Court held that the division was made with proper authority.

The brother was wrong when he said that the General Conference divided the Church, and the above case does not so state; yet it gives a full history of the separation so far as it affected the property of the Church, and in doing this the Court uses the following language, to-wit:

"In the year 1844 the traveling preachers in General Conference assembled, for causes to which it is not important particularly to refer, agreed upon a plan for a division of the Methodist Episcopal Church in case the Annual Conferences in the slave-holding States should deem it necessary; and to the erection of two separate and distinct ecclesiastic organizations. And according to this plan, it was agreed that all the societies, stations and Conferences adhering to the Church, South, by a majority of its members, should remain under the pastoral care of that Church; and all of these several bodies adhering, by a majority of its members, to the Church, North, should remain under the pastoral care of that Church; and, further, that the ministers, local and traveling, should, as they might prefer, attach themselves, without blame, to the Church, North, or South. It was also agreed that the common property of the Church, including this Book Concern, that belonged specially to the body of traveling preachers, should, in case the separation took place, be divided between the two Churches in proportion to the number of traveling preachers falling within the respective divisions. This was in 1844. In the following year the Southern Annual Conferences met in convention, in pursuance of the plan of separation, and determined upon a division, and resolved that the Annual Conferences should be constituted into a separate ecclesiastical connection, and based upon the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprehending the doctrines and entire moral, ecclesiastical and economical rules and regulations of said Discipline, except only so far as verbal alterations might be necessary; and to be known by the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"The division of the Church, as originally constituted, thus BECAME complete; and from this time two separate and distinct organizations have taken the place of the one previously existing."

General Conference Alone Did Not Divde Church.

It will be observed from this judicial statement of fact that it was not the General Conference that divided the Church, but that it was the action of the Annual Conferences of the South, acting in pursuance of a plan submitted to them by the General Conference; furthermore, this division did not bind any Conference, society, station or traveling preacher; but these were to accept the Church of their choice. In fact Bishop Soule, a native of Maine, cast his lot with the Southern Church. This action on the part of the General Conference, in allowing the individual preacher and the various Conferences, societies and stations to choose their own allegiance, was eminently proper, since the Church is a voluntary organization and has no power to transfer the allegiance of any member from its own to another and distinct organization. When the member promised to be subject to the Discipline of our Church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions, he only promised these things to the M. E. Church, South, and not to any other Church in America; the same is true of those in the traveling connection and the vows made as deacons and elders. These promises are made to the particular Church, and neither the General Conference nor any other power can transfer that allegiance to any other Church without their consent and authority. The General Conference of 1844 recognized its lack of power in that behalf and left it to the various Conferences, etc., and only submitted to them plans and agreements for their action. If, our General Conference, in the event of its agreement with the Northern Church, should follow the precedent of the Conference of 1844, it will submit the question of agreement to the Annual Conferences of the Church for its final action on the matter, AND THEN TO THE VARIOUS SOCIE-

TIES, STATIONS, AND TRAVELING PREACHERS IN THE CONNECTION.

The brother further says, "Surely the power that separated can unite!" He is mistaken in his statement. The power to separate cannot unite. Hatred separates, love unites; antagonism of interests separates, community of interest unites; disagreement separates, agreeing together unites. The power that separates is adverse to the power that unites. Disagreement as to the power of the General Conference separated us in 1844—do we not still disagree?

Some Glaring Misconceptions.

It seems that the ultra-unionists have altogether misconceived the duties and power and source of the General Conference. This Conference derives its power from the constitution; the constitution was established by a convention of all the Annual Conferences in 1845, and it remains to-day, as it was then, except as it has been amended with the consent and concurrence of three-fourths of all the members of the Annual Conferences. The General Conference is vested with full power to make rules and regulations for the Church with certain limitations and restrictions, one of which restrictions is that it cannot adopt any rule or regulation contrary to the constitution without the concurrence of the Annual Conferences, in other words, its power is limited by the constitution to all legislation consistent with the constitution; it can make laws, but not constitutions. In the proposed union a new constitution will be necessary, and it is nowhere and in no manner vested with the power to make a new constitution. It can only, in connection with the Annual Conferences, amend the constitution already made. It can only make rules and regulations for our Church; is not vested with the power to destroy our Church and establish the organic law of another Church. This power is only vested in the Annual Conferences, the preachers and church membership. The rule of the consent of the governed here applies with full force. When the General Conference surrenders its powers and the trust reposed in it, it must surrender them to the Conferences of the Church giving them these powers, and not to another Church or organization, as will be done if they shall organize a new Church without the concurrence of our Annual Conferences. The proposition of unification is to destroy the Churches, North and South, and set up in their stead a united Church. The brother may deny that this will be the effect of unification. If he does, he will do so in the teeth of the decision he refers to as the basis of his opinion. In the case referred to above, the Northern Church contended that it was the old M. E. Church, and that their traveling preachers were the preachers, in connection with the M. E. Church as organized and established in the United States at the time of the foundation of the fund of the Book Concern. The Supreme Court held differently and the Court said with reference to these traveling preachers, "It can no more be affirmed, either in point of fact or of law, that they are traveling preachers in connection with the Methodist Church as originally constituted, since the division, than of those in connection with the Church, South. Their organization covers but about half of the territory embraced within that of the former Church; and includes within it but a little over two-thirds of the traveling preachers. Their General Conference is not the General Conference of the old Church, nor does it represent the interests or possess, territorially, the authority of the same; nor are they the body under whose care this fund was placed by its founders. It may be admitted that, within the restricted limits, the organization and authority are the same as the former Church. But the same is equally true in respect to the organization of the Church, South."

Here were two Churches organized in every respect like the old Church, the only difference being that the territory of the old Church was divided between the two, yet the Court held they were separate and distinct organizations from the old Church. If such were the case in that instance, how much more truly would it be the case in the plans submitted for this unification!

New Constitution Would Be Required.

The proposed union from the most favorable standpoint would necessarily require a different constitution from that of our Church. In the Oklahoma City plan, even if our autonomy were preserved and the Southern Annual Conferences were all placed into one Quadrennial Conference, it would affect the power of our General Conference as now constituted by taking away from it the power of general legislation, and giving it only the power of local legislation. This plan would also deny to the General Conference the power of local legislation; it would also curtail the power of the Annual Conferences, in that their delegates to the General Conference would be only a small minority of that body when now their delegates have complete control. This plan also proposes to constitute the General Conference differently from the present; aside from the proposed two houses, the constitution of the Conference would be such that not more than one-third of its members would be representatives of the Southern Church. Our College of Bishops and our General Conferences have uniformly held that any legislation affecting the powers and membership of the General and Annual Conferences were constitutional matters, and that it was necessary to submit such matters to the Annual Conferences.

If the General Conference, in the event of perfect agreement with the Northern General Conference, should follow the precedents of that body in the past and the laws recognized by all, the College of Bishops would not be called upon to pass on the question, but the Conference upon its motion would submit the new constitution and agreement to the Annual Conferences for their concurrence.

It would, therefore, appear, that the deliverance of Bishop Candler was not hasty, and, if any considerable number of the Church entertain the views stated by our good Brother Moore, his deliverance was not ill-timed.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PASTORS IN MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brother: By order of the Headquarters Committee of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, I am addressing you this communication. This morning the Supreme Court handed down a decision which requires our anti-liquor and anti-advertising laws to be submitted to a vote of the people in the general election in November. The situation is grave. It calls for the best thought and action on the part of our citizens. The time is short, and quick action is imperative. The Committee feels that the preachers in the State can save the day by proper leadership; but that indifference will surely lose it. The Committee earnestly craves two things at the hands of the ministry: First, to keep things red-hot on this subject from now until the election, both in and out of the pulpit. Second, that every pastor in the State raise some money from his people and send it at once to the undersigned at Jackson, Mississippi, making the contribution as large as possible.

Your Committee feels that, if you will heed their call, we can save the day. So we, as your servants and watchmen on the walls, put the matter squarely up to you.

Please let us hear from you at the earliest possible moment. Delay at this juncture is dangerous; it might be fatal. The League is bound to have money to meet this emergency, or it cannot meet it. We await the action of the pastors of the State.

The time in which we have to work is so short that this office, with no money at its command, cannot have a typewritten letter sent to each preacher and prominent prohibitionist, and we beg you to give this printed letter the same consideration that you would one written with my own hand T. J. BAILEY, Jackson, Miss.,

Sup't of Mississippi Anti-Saloon League.

A MESSAGE TO PREACHERS.

I am a Methodist, and I am a member of a class. When I am at home, I go to a class meeting and pay my class money. It was a sorry day for Methodism in this country when you let away with the class-meeting, and the sooner you get it back the better. I am a member of a class meeting, am an accredited local preacher, and for three years past I have been a member of the British Conference. I am a Methodist. I don't parade that except when I am among Methodists, others don't know what I am, because I preach Christ.

What a magnificent theme we Methodists have—Christ! And what that means for this sinful world! Whatever theme you talk about, you will never beat that, and nothing you talk about will so attract and satisfy the hungry hearts of men as Jesus Christ. And may I suggest to you that the people coming to your churches morning and evening on Sundays deeply in their hearts need Christ. Christ alone is the answer for human need. And the people will leave your churches with more rest and satisfaction in their hearts if you talk Christ than if you discuss any other problem under the sun. We have a wonderful theme, and we can not exhaust it. Preach it. I wonder if we are as loyal to Christ as preachers as we ought to be? You will never preach him as you ought until you are loyal to him. You will never preach him as you might until you love him with all your heart. People know when you are preaching about him and when he is talking with you. Intimate association with Christ is the secret of success in preaching. Unbroken fellowship with him is the power of all preaching. We know when you are simply chattering. It is Christ in us that is to be the power. You need not defend Christ. He doesn't need patronage. Be loyal to him. He will defend himself. He is capable of doing it. A gospel with Christ at the center, pulsating, vibrating, moving, throbbing, loving—you will never find that gospel played out.

I have heard so many of your brethren during the past few months say, "Brother Smith, I am going to preach Christ as I have never preached him before." You may play with the sun and the moon and the stars, and speculate on science, but if you want to heal broken hearts, turn night into day, sin into grace, you must preach Christ. What the pulpit of to-day lacks is the old, ringing, certain evangel of the Cross.

My brethren, you can preach it as well as I can, and some better; for there is an evangelist in every one of you. Let him have a resurrection.

You have heard the lovely story of the artist who painted the picture of Jesus on the Cross—the crucifixion—and then called in a lady friend to see it, and, pulling the curtain aside, withdrew into the shade that he might see the effect on her face. He saw the tears running down her cheeks as bubbles on the mountain stream, and, turning to the artist, she said: "You must love him to paint him like that." It took hold of him, and he said: "I hope I do; but as I love him more I shall paint him better."

There; I have no more to say. All I desire to say is:

"Happy if with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name;
Preach him to all, and cry in death:
'Behold, behold the Lamb'"

A REVIVAL AT CRYSTAL SPRINGS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Saying all the good things about a brother that can be said denies one the privilege and grateful surprise of discovering those delightful qualities of mind and heart that always make the finer impressions upon us when we come face to face with the individual. Shortly after his appointment to the work of an evangelist in the North Mississippi Conference, in commending the Rev. J. H. Bell to the brethren, through the columns of the Advocate, you made mention of his excellent gifts and graces, assuring us of the wisdom of the Conference in making the appointment. That Brother Bell was well qualified for the work to which he had been assigned, we felt quite sure, and yet we did not know his real worth until he had served us.

Brother Bell conducted our recent revival services at Crystal Springs. We began on the first day in October, and continued until the evening of the 9th. I do not remember to have heard a more satisfactory series of sermons at any time. There was nothing sensational or spectacular about his preaching. His sermons were clear, strong, and to the point. Grave and dignified in his manner, his denunciations of sin were fearless and terrific. With the gentleness and tenderness of a heart overflowing with love, he pointed sinners to a compassionate, forgiving Savior.

The meeting increased in interest until the final service. Some were saved, many resolved upon a better life, and, with an increased membership, the church is upon a higher plane, as a result of the meeting. Bell is a deeply consecrated man, fraternal in his bearing, and withal a choice spirit. If you need efficient help in a meeting, set about it at once and secure his service.

What I have said about Rev. J. H. Bell as an evangelist applies also to Rev. John W. Robertson as a singer and director of music.

AN INTERESTING GIFT TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

A copy of the Koran on vellum, all hand printed, a beautiful volume, more than a thousand years old and which is in perfect condition, has recently been given to Emory University by Mrs. T. T. Hillman, of Birmingham. A Ledger representative has had the pleasure of examining this book, which is perhaps the oldest in Alabama and one of the handsomest. This choice volume is handwritten and hand-embellished. The leaves are of the finest vellum, or parchment. The art of making this parchment has been lost since the Eighth Century. It is almost transparent, and as a work of art, the parchment itself is truly wonderful. The writing is in Arabic, and as perfect as print, and in style is like the written Bibles to be seen in museums, and in some private libraries. The ink is as clear and distinct as when made, and it compels us to acknowledge that our paper is not so good as this parchment and that our print is no prettier than the old handwriting, and that we have nothing so durable.

Students who have examined this Koran say that it was written in the Eighth Century, and is one of the rare volumes of the world. The Arabic characters lend themselves handsomely to the pages, and the whole book is a work of art. The Koran as everybody knows, is the sacred book of the Mohamedan religion, and this work of some pious scholar of 1000 years ago is exceedingly interesting.

This volume has been rebound, but it is well done, in embellished Morocco with tooled ornaments and all done by hand in a manner rarely seen.

In 1862, Rev. I. C. Armstrong, a missionary of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, purchased this Koran from a hodji, a converted Turk, and it had to be done secretly, as there was, and is now, a severe penalty against the sale or transmission of such a sacred volume.—Birmingham Ledger.

A DIALOGUE.

By Rev. E. H. Cooley.

Steward: "Good morning, Brother Little."

Little: "Good morning."

Steward: "Fine morning, isn't it?"

Little: "Yes."

Steward: "Well, Brother Little, I came to see you on a little business."

Little: (Who guesses what the steward's business is.) "Well, I'm in a hurry. What is it?"

Steward: "Our preacher is in need, and—"

Little: "I'm in need, too."

Steward: "Our preacher is out of meat and lard and I know that you have a surplus of both and as you haven't paid the preacher anything I thought that I would ask you to help us some in this way."

Little: "Well, I have the meat and lard, but I have none to give away; nobody is giving me anything. I'll sell it for the money and you may tell him that he can get it at the market price for cash. Go in and stay awhile if you will; wife is in there; she'll talk to you; I've got to go."

With this, Little drives away leaving the steward standing at the gate with his hands in his pockets, looking down the road at the receding figure of the incorrigible.

What should be done with a member of the Church who exhibits such a spirit as that shown by Mr. A. Little? How can he reconcile such conduct with the vows that he assumed when he connected himself with the visible body of Christ?

A REMINISCENCE.

In the endeavor to recall these past events, I shall not hope to arrange them with as much propriety and intelligence as my superiors; but I shall fear no criticism from those "who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity;" so I shall proceed to give them in a manner in accord with my limited sphere of education.

It becomes necessary that I first speak of my father and mother, who were good old-time Methodists and godly people; and who endeavored with much anxiety to lead their children in paths of righteousness, and to "bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord." So I never knew anything otherwise than to love God and trust him for all my needs. Mother's precept and example early taught me to lisp a prayer and distilled into my heart the true purpose of God in the creation of man.

There were eleven children—six sons and five daughters. Two of the oldest sones died while quite young; the rest survived to manhood and womanhood. Two of the older sons served through the War between the States. The Lord was gracious, and, though the fierce conflicts were many, they came through without a wound. All were members of the Church, and all have passed over the river except myself and the older brother, who now resides in St. James Parish, Louisiana.

My father owned a rich and desirable little farm, situated in what is now Clay County, Miss., and we lived on a beautiful high hill overlooking a swamp, the north and west sides sloping abruptly down into a creek bottom. Down on this low, rich level lay most of the farm, from which we principally lived, raising nearly all our supplies—corn, wheat, oats, rye, cotton, and hay, with a goodly herd of cattle, hogs and sheep, fruits and vegetables of all kinds; up on the plateau was a large orchard of many kinds of fruit. On the north side, near the foot of this hill, was a delightful spring of everflowing water, and among the growth that covered the hillside could be found many kinds of fruits—wild plums, tame plums, peaches, crabapples, red haws, black haws, summer and winter grapes, gooseberries, dewberries, mulberries, and walnuts. It was quite a delightful resort for us children. We had no slaves or servants, but the Lord blessed our labors, and we never "lacked for any good thing"—his precious promises were verified to us.

At that time we were far in the country, our nearest towns (except a cross-road store) being river towns, ten and eighteen miles away. It meant something then to go to town. The river was not navigable all the year; during the dry season, some people would run short of sugar, coffee, molasses, and salt, and have to wait for a rise in the river to get supplies; but we were neighborly and would divide with each other. Father would always lay in a supply while the river was up.

There was a Baptist Church at a distance of two miles, which we often attended. It was a large house and constructed so as to accommodate both masters and servants; the servants occupying the rear end of the house, which was cut off from the whites by a railing extending across the room. After the close of the war, this house was sold to the colored people for a house of worship.

To get to a Methodist Church, we had to travel seven or eight miles; but the distance was not considered in the going proposition; we attended Church services regularly; father and mother would take me in the buggy with them, while the older ones would ride horseback. Sometimes mother would get happy and shout a little; I did not understand it then, as I now do; but I always sat with father on the men's side, and as long as he kept quiet I thought it was all right with mother; so I never raised any disturbance. They had love feasts and experience meetings in those days, and they were times of rejoicing with the saints. Up to this time, pride and skepticism had not put Christians (I prefer to say Church members, as pride and skepticism do not affect the true Christian) under restraint. There was no abridgment of Christian privilege and liberty; if the Spirit moved upon some and caused their cup to run over, and they felt like shouting, they were at liberty to do so. It never disturbed the preacher nor the congregation. It's a disgrace in these latter days to manifest any feeling of emotion; they have found a name for it, and call it fanaticism or religious frenzy.

At home mother had her altar of prayer and meditation; it consisted of a small table containing a Bible, which sat at the head of her bed, the bed being removed just far enough from the wall to give room. To this place she would resort at least once every day for prayer, reading, and meditation. This was near a doorway; so in passing through we children would tip by very softly so as not to disturb mother. I had an unrecanting faith in mother's prayers, that God would hear and answer them.

In the year 1866, after we had established a good neighborhood school, and built a house, some of the old people concluded to have preaching once a month at the schoolhouse, and employed a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher, whose name I will here give as Rev. A. C. Harris. He was a good man and served us until the summer months; then he proposed to hold a protracted meeting, which was agreeable with the community. Now, the young people all loved to dance, and were in the habit of having storm parties from house to house, and seemed to have a jolly time; but when the announcement was made that there would be a protracted meeting, we agreed among ourselves to do all our dancing beforehand, and that when the meeting came on we would all get religion and join the Church. We kept our promise, and had a few parties, and then the meeting came on, and the preachers came in. It was a union meeting; there were present two Presbyterian preachers, one Methodist, and one Baptist. In the meantime, we made a large bush arbor adjoining the schoolhouse, sufficient to accommodate all the people that might come. The meeting continued two weeks; nearly every nonprofessor in the community professed religion and joined the Church—some joining one Church and some another; it was conducted in the good old-fashioned style, with earnestness and zeal; penitents and seekers were invited to the front seats for prayer and instruction; the seats were crowded from day to day, all secular labor for the time being suspended, except that which was very necessary; many were daily finding the Lord, and that "He is precious," and there was great rejoicing.

Whenever the call was made for seekers to come forward, I was first among the number. I felt that I must do something, yet I did not experience any real conviction of sin; I could not realize the fact that I was an actual transgressor; I felt that I loved everybody, especially those who were of the household of faith; I felt that I still loved God. The fact was, I had not yet discarded my childhood training, but perhaps was falling in doubt and getting more distant from my Savior. No doubt but "in many things I offended, yet it was not I that did it, but sin that dwelleth in me; for I knew that in me (that is in my flesh) dwelt no good thing; the good which I desired to do, I did not, but that which I would not, that I did." I truly felt a delight in the law of God after the inward man. So, "with the mind I myself served the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin," (See Rom. 7:18-25). "The judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offenses unto justification." (Rom. 5:16.) I continued for a week to answer the call to come forward for prayer; mother would come and talk with me, and ask if I felt no change; I would answer, no; then she asked me to try to improve what grace I had.

One night, while the preliminary services were being held, and prayer was being offered by the ministers, I, too, was trying to pray. I could think of nothing to say but, "O Lord draw nigh unto me." That seemed to be the burden of my prayer. Just then, in a kind of vision, I saw away in the heights above a beautiful and shining blue scroll rolled back, and stretching across the [illegible]. and one came and sat thereon resembling the Son of man, who spake and said unto me, "What aileth thee; why hast thou doubted? thy Redeemer liveth." O, what a glorious vision was this! It was not a delusive imagination of a troubled mind; but a grand and sublime reality, a real vision. Shall I ever forget it? It is as real and vivid in my mind to-day as it was that blessed night. The presence of my Savior was enough. It filled my soul with everlasting joy and blessed assurance; doubt forever fled, and the peace of God that passeth all understanding has ever since kept my heart and mind through Christ Jesus.

This, then, was the fork of the road, when I had to choose for myself "whom I would serve," and make manifest the savor of his grace, which I gladly did, choosing the good. His law became my delight, and the sweet hour of twilight prayer the joy of my soul, which sank the groveling things of earth into insignificance.

At the end of two weeks, the meeting came to a close, with about 35 converts. All received baptism, and gave testimony of the work of the Holy Spirit. We organized a Cumberland Presbyterian Church at the schoolhouse, and called the name of it "Concord." This name well represented the neighborhood, for it became one of peace and happiness. I was ordained one of the three ruling elders, and made clerk of the session. We also organized a mid-week prayer-meeting, which was attended with enthusiasm, all the members leading in public prayer. one was appointed to conduct the services, who in turn would appoint a successor. One among the number, a young man, John A. Ellis, was early ordained to the ministry, and became a prominent minister of the gospel.

In the course of time, the new church consolidated with that of West Point. I still hold in my possession all the records of the little Concord Church. It is interesting now to review these old records and minutes.

"Bring up a child in the way he should go, and when he comes to years of maturity and accountability he will not depart from it." It is only the godly, pious, praying mother, one who fears God and eschews evil, that is able to bring her children up in the right way. The sacrifice must be well salted. The father's influence is not as weighty as the mother's; the training must come chiefly through the influence of the mother. It is the mother's influence that counts for most.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Gipsy Smitb wiii he in France from November to March to do evangeiistic work in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association. He will go as the representative of the British Wesleyan Church.

Tbe Nortbern Methodist Church is planning for a nation-wide campaign to raise $15,000,000 as a pension fund for its superaunuated preachers. It is to be hoped that tbey will succeed in this worthy endeavor.

A late number of the Southern Christian Advocate carried a stenographic report of an address recently made to South Carolina laymen by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Georgia. It was a forceful and suggestive utterance.

Pope Benedict is quoted as saying that he has done everything in his power during the last two years to restore peace and diminish the horrors of war, and that be is gratefui to God that something has been accomplished.

Bisbop J. H. McCoy, of Birmingham, was scheduied to deliver the address at the iaying of the corner-stone of the new dormitory of the Woman's College at Montgomery, Ala., on October 11. This institution is said to be making steady progress under the presidency of Dr. M. W. Swartz.

The Hon. W. J. Bryan has accepted an invitation to deliver a series of down-town noon addresses at the quadrennial session of the Federai Council of tbe Churches of Christ, to be held in St. Louis next December. Mr. Bryan wiii be a delegate to this gatbering from tbe Presbyterian Church.

The Florida Christian Advocate of October 5 carried its editorials on the last page. That is the regular arrangement of The Richmond Virginian, a well known secular daiiy. This plan, if adhered to, would at least make our Florida Christian Advocate a unique publication among Church journals.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist says: "October might appropriately be caiied 'Bishops' month' in Washington City, for Bishop Hoss will preach at the formal opening of tbe New Mt. Pleasant Church on October 8; Bishop Denny wiii dedicate Calvary Church on October 15, and Bishop A. W. Wilson will preach at Mt. Vernon Place Church on October 22."

The State of South Carolina has a Reiigious Press Association, which embraces in its membership representatives of aii the Protestant bodies that issue journals in that commonwealth. This organization recentiy held a meeting at Due West, at which the chief question considered was, "How to Increase the Circulation of Church Periodicals." Mr. J. F. Jacohs, wbo handies the advertisements for so many religious weeklies, was one of the principal speakers.

As many as 150 ministers representing various denominations met together in New York City on Monday, October 9, to hear reports of Biliy Sunday's work at other places. Among those who commended the evangelist enthusiastically was Dr. J. H. Jowett, the famous pastor of the Fifth Avenue Preshyterian Church. Dr. Charies P. Tinker, head of the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, gave assurance that 10,000 Episcopalians in the great metropolis wiii co-operate in the Sunday meeting, which is to be heid there next April, May, and June.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix has been announced as one of tbe preachers at the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the old John Street Cburch in New York City, which is soon to take place. One of the services will be in the interest of Methodist union. and Bishops Hendrix and Cranston will be the principal figures in it. This will be the third meeting of the kind that they have participated in, the other two having been at Saratoga and Buii Run. Though not on the Commission, Bishop Hendrix is generally understood to be the real leader of the ultra-unionists of the Southern Methodist Church, being far and away the ablest man among them.

PREDESTINATION AND WHAT IT IS.

Tbe word "predestination" does not occur at ali in our Bible, but "predestinate" occurs twice (Rom. 8:29, 30) and "predestinated" twice (Eph. 1:5, 11). From these Scriptures one can see that the word in the two forms only occurs hut four times, while the Greek from which "predestinate" and "predestinated" came, Proorizo, occurs six times and oniy in tbe New Testament. (Acts 4: 28, Rom. 8:29, 30, 1 Cor. 2:7, and Eph. 1:5, 11.) Proorizo, translated "predestinate" twice in our Bibie and "predestinated" twice, is translated "determined before" in Acts 4:28 and "ordained before" in 1 Cor. 2:7. So the Greek for predestinate, Proorizo, occurs six times in the New Testament and not at all in tbe Old Testament, for the reason, likely, that it was not in use during that period.

Our word "predestinate" consists of two Latin words; pre, before, and destinare, to fix, to choose, to ordain, to determine—literally meaning predetermined, or determined before, and hence the question pertinently arises, "What did God predetermine or predestinate? We should not forget that the first use of Proorizo is in Acts 4:28, which is: "For to do whatsoever thy hand and tby counsel determined before (predestinated) to be done." In order to understand its meaning in this verse, it is nccessary to quote the 27th verse and it, togetber, which are as follows: "For of a truth against thy holy chiid Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israei, were gathered together, for to do whatever thy hand and thy counsei determined before to be done." The doctrine of these verses is not that of God's determining before, or predestinating that Herod, Pontius Pilate and others should be against Christ and take his life—not at aii, but it is this: that God had determined before, or predestinated, that Christ should be crucified for the world's redemption. Paul wrote of God and said: "For whom he did foreknow, he aiso did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." (Rom. 8: 29.) Perhaps every one wiii concede that if God foreknew one, that he also foreknew aii, and therefore predestinated that ali should be conformed to the image of his Son in order to become his. In the next verse, the 30th, Paul wrote: "Moreover whom he did predestinate, tbem he aiso caiied, and whom he caiied, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he aiso giorified." In this verse Paul grants that in a sense ali are caiied, but in the case of those who make God's cali effectual by heeding it, God justifies them, that is, makes them right with him, or as Paul puts it, "conforms them to the image of his Son." and then makes them biessed or happy as to this life, and also, shouid they remain true to God, they shall be giorified in the higher sense of the Greek edoxasen, an aorist of doxazo, which carries the twofold meaning, that of this iife, and also, that of eternity.

Paul wrote the Corinthians: "But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our giory." (Cor. 2:7). "World" in the Bihie is used to mean the Jewish state, and likely that is its meaning in this verse and aiso in Eph. 1:4: "Chosen us in him before the foundation of the world," and in 1 Pet. 1:20, "Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world."

"World" is also used for the Christian dispensation, as when John said: "Of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." (Rev. 13:8.) Now the Scripturai conciusion about predestination is this: That after men sinned, and, of course, before the foundation of the Jewish dispensation, God determined to give Christ to make an atonement for our race of such a nature that God could justly save those who are incapable of responsibility, and also to save the responsible ones conditionaiiy.

OUR EDUCATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.

A Word to Louisiana Methodists.

Most of the charges of our Conference aro in the midst of the "Annuai Tug" to secure the Conference coiiections. Oniy a few weeks remain to complete the work upon whicb tho success of sacred interests of the Church depends. It may not be out of place for the Conference Secretary of Education, who is charged with speciai responsibility for one of these interests, to remind pastors and people of the importance of that cause.

Our assessment for Conference Education is tbe necessary foundation upon which the maintenance of our own coiieges at present depends, and a large proportion of the fuii assessment is piedged to meet imperative ciaims, in which the honor and credit of tbe Conference are involved. The payment of the assessment in fuii for the Conference is reaiiy necessary to so maintain and equip these institutions as to meet, even for the present, their pressing needs.

We are face to face with the question, Is Christian Education worth while? If not, then no plea need be made. But if we answer, yes, nothing short of our assessment in full is a respectable answer to the chaiienge of the cause and the hour.

Both Centenary and Mansfieid havo had encouraging openings and offer opportunities that must not be negiected through any failing short. On the other hand, any plea of hard times among Louisiana Methodists would sound ridiculous at the present time.

About one-sixth of the totai assessment for our Conference is the General Conference Assessment, an anaiysis of which wiii indicate its importance. Of tho entire $95,000 assessed upon the Church, the proceeds of $20,000 is for theological education and is divided between our two theological schools. These institutions are in urgent need of the fuii amount. The Generai Board also assists twenty-one other institutions—among them our own Mansfield College. These schools depend upon the coiiection of this assessment to meet their obligations. Our sacred duty toward the education of leaders in the Colored Methodist Church is met, in so far as the Board is conserned, by the appropriation of $12,000 to Paino and Lane Coileges out of this generai educational assessment.

That when we enthusiasticaiiy beiieve in any cause, we can raise an assessment in full, is amply evident, when we remember that last year we levied an assessment of $10,000 for tho orpbanage, and raised more than $12,000 Why? Because we believe in our orphanage.

Referring to the records, we find that in 1914, 54 per cent of our educationai assessment was raised. In 1915 oniy 41 per cent was paid, probably due to a special extra assessment, for that year oniy, for Centenary Coiiege.

Two other astounding facts stare at us from the pages of iast year's minutes, viz.: (1) That only 18 charges paid this assessment in full; and (2) that 37 charges paid nothing on it. It is hard to believe that any pastor or charge ignored this claim, hut there are the figures. This record is not by any means creditable. Let us use every effort in the time that is ieft to us to improve it for this year.

Another suggestion may not be out of order. In perhaps most of our charges, the assessments are lumped together and the amount raised is divided among the claims by the pastor. In cases where this is done, the oniy fair method of division is to pro rate in proportion to the amounts of the several assessments; and a pastor has no right to discriminate in favor of one or against another.

Let us duiy emphasize the assessment for Christian Education, and give to this and to every other claim its fair share in the division of iump coiiections. Respectfully,

Minden, La. W. WINANS DRAKE.

OCTOBER DAYS

By Mrs. H. L. Parris

I love to sit in the beautiful lull
Of these bright October days
The sun shines soft with mist-filled
With gold and purple haze

Soft, feathery clouds of snowy white
Are floating here and there
They deepen the hue of the heavenly blue
And make it wondrous fair

The wind blows gently among the trees
The leaves drift softly down
The vines still cling around the trees
All green and gold and brown

The summer lifts its scarlet bow
Where drowns the faded golden-rod
Stirred by the wind the sere grasses sway
And the fluffy asters nod

The bob-white calls to his loving mate
I hear his whistle soft and low
He creeps along the low brushwood
And wanders happily to and fro

A brooding peace comes o'er my soul
A sense of awe and praise
To God who rules above and sends
These bright October days

A POINT OF HONOR

It all happened—well it really must have been a dozen years ago. At any rate it is five years this June since Harry Bourke established himself in his profession at Albany, and as for Nell Gale—it used to be—but, as Kipling would say that is another story.

Never, in all the annals of Green Township had there been such goings on. For fully six weeks the whole neighborhood had been in a flutter of excitement, and there had been an unusual whirring of sewing machines and basting and fluting of lawns and laces.

For a good many years Green Township had boasted of the banner school in that section. Not only were the pupils better behaved, but they were further advanced than those in the schools around them. The last teacher, Mr. Willis Marks had outstripped all his predecessors by organizing classes in some of the higher branches not usually taught in country schools. A little over a month ago he had announced his plans for a grand exhibition, with which they were to close the year's work. Prof. Grant, the president of the academy down at Lawson had consented to be present. Mr. Marks was one of his former scholars; therefore, he had manifested a great interest in the school, and had offered a scholarship in the academy to the pupil who should write the best composition on a subject that he had selected. The prospect of a visit from this great man who in the eyes of Green Township was second only to the Governor himself was exciting enough. The prize lay between two of Mr. Marks' scholars Harry Bourke, who could write the most graceful things, and always with a spark of wit about them, and Helen Gale whose strong point was earnestness and logic.

"If there were only two prizes," people would say regretfully. Not that Harry Bourke had the least need that any one should present him with a scholarship. His father was the master of broad acres, and the cattle on many of the hillsides were his. Still, this did not make the winning of the prize less tempting. The Gales though were poor people, and the little gray farmhouse seemed to be literally running over with small Gales. Helen was a born student and had all her life longed for the opportunity that until now had seemed beyond her reach.

All of the afternoon the boys had been unloosening flowers at the schoolhouse and running hither and thither with ladders and hammers and wreaths and festoons of myrtle.

"There! I call that perfect," Frank Thomas said, putting the finishing touches to a wreath of red roses that hung directly over the stage.

"Wait till you see Helen Gale walking from the platform with the prize," one of the girls interposed.

"Do you really mean to capture it, Nell?" Harry Bourke questioned, looking up from his work.

"Really, sir, I hope," Helen replied, bowing mockingly.

"Prof. Grant must have a poor idea of originality in human nature," Frank Thomas went on a little later, as he was filling Dorothy Wallis' hands together "because of course he has no means of knowing that any of the compositions are original."

"Rubbish," Willis returned. "Anybody could tell Helen Gale's composition was not in her own words. As for Nell Gale and one could tell the last one she wouldn't for all the world read it first, as I have ever that some of it might be written."

Helen was a little distance in front of them, but she heard quite distinctly. Life was right, it seemed. She had always prided herself on her honor, but what was it that sent the blood up to her cheek and made her heart beat so rapidly for a moment? Nothing but the pale little scrap of paper that she wished herself now she had never seen. On her way to school six weeks ago she had picked it up. It had attracted her notice because it looked like the page from some book, and was printed on but one side. The astonishing thing had been that it bore directly on the subject on which she had been writing and seemed to furnish the powerful ending that her composition needed. To summon up the whole subject so beautifully that she could not bear to run now without ruining everything. "Oh, how can I help it?" she groaned. "But then I will shutting her lips very tight, "it is small every thing."

Perhaps there would be time to write something else she reflected, but there wasn't a minute. There were so many extra things to do at home and before she had fairly gotten into her white dress her father was calling to her that it was time to go.

Harry Bourke had read his paper and there had been a good deal of laughing and clapping, still Helen was undecided. "Only I will do right," she kept saying in her heart over and over after she ascended the steps and began to read. When she reached the last page she hesitated a moment, then lifting her eyes said bravely: "I wish I knew the author of this quotation, but I do not. To tell everything as I found it impossible to tell it. There was another burst of applause and almost before she knew it she was being called back to the platform. After that everybody crowded about to congratulate her, and Harry Bourke declared that he was glad of it as his father had promised to send him to the academy, and there would be two of them instead of one.

The next morning as she sat idly swinging in the little parlor she saw Prof. Grant coming up the walk.

"I came to talk a little with you, Helen," he said kindly. "But first tell me about the quotation you used last night."

"You noticed then," she said blushing a good deal; "I've been thinking about it all the morning and it seems quite like a story book."

"Oh, you are going to hear what and taking out a crumpled piece of paper. There was a queer little smile on the professor's face as he took it, who only said:

"I believe this belongs to me."

"Oh!"

"Yes; I am publishing a book on that subject and this is one of the proof sheets I sent to Harper to read and which I seem to have

"Oh, I am so glad!"

"Yes; I am glad too but we will not talk of that now."

Then there was a long delightful talk about the meadows and the rose bushes and when at last he went away Helen stood for a long time looking after him, shading her eyes with her hand.

"I am glad I did stand up for honor," she said softly to herself as she started to go into the house. "But I hope I'll never come so near not doing it again." Mattie W. Davies, in Christian

THE STATE'S WAY.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Mississippi, near Starkville, has matriculated about 1200 students, and Governor Bilho is said to he sounding the members of the State Legislature to know whether when they are again in session they would he willing to make good a loan of $40,000 to increase the dormitory facilities of that institution. The Governor is, we think, to be commended for his active interest in this great school and the promptness with which he is seeking to come to its assistance, in which undertaking we hope that he will be successful. The State certainly has an immense advantage of the Church when it comes to making provision for the increased needs of its educational institutions, in that it has power to exercise its right of taxation, while the Church can only ohtain funds hy means of voluntary contributions. When the latter has to have a new dormitory it must generally put on a canvass and can hope to secure it only hy strenuous and extended effort.

Yet there are those who inslst that, amid its struggles to maintain its educational system, the Church should assume the addltional hurden of providlng the facillties (huildings and teachers) for courses of religious instructions in connecton wth the State Colleges and Universities. Such a procedure under existing conditions, we thlnk, would he very unwise. To he sure, the Church ought to he very much interested in the moral and splritual influences that ohtain in the schools of the State, and through well equipped local churches she should seek to reach and impress religiously the student hody; but, in view of the extent of her resources, we do not think it practicahle for her to attempt to do an extended work of academic religious instruction in connection with these institutions. If this is desirahle, let the State bear the expense of it, as has hithierto been done hy some commonwealths for their schools ln providing chaplains for them. The Christian people of a State pay taxes to keep up its schools, and hence have a right to insist that its youth shall he properly taught and trained with the money raised for this purpose. In our opinion, there has heen too much of a disposition upon the part of Christian citizens to surrender what is due them in this respect, under the influence of the wrong notion that the Christian rellgion must in the United States stand upon the same plane with all other kinds of faiths. Such a conception is in conflict with numerous decisions of the Federal Supreme Court and is at war with the fundamental ideals of our Government, which from its beginning has held Christianity to he in close and vital relation with it and "a part of the common law of the land."

ENGLAND'S ANSWER.

The following utterance by Lloyd George, considered hy many of Great Britain's foremost statesmen, is England's answer to the talk of intervention in the European war in the interest of peace, and it looks as if Germany has entangled herself in a struggle from which there is no way of escape and that she is doomed to a crushing defeat:

"Under the circumstances the British, now that the fortunes of the game have turned a hit, are not disposed to stop because of the squealing done hy the Germans, or for the Germans hy well-meaning, hut misguided, sympathizers and humanitarians. . . . Germany elected to make it a finish fight with England. . . . Now we intend to see that Germany has her way; the fight must he to a finish—to a knockout. . . . The whole world, including neutrals of the highest purpose and humanitarians with the hest motives, must know that there can be no outside interference at this stage. Britain asked no intervention when she was not prepared to fight. She will tolerate none, now that she is prepared, until Prussian military despotism ls hroken heyond repair. . . . Peace now or at any time before the final and complete elimination of thls menace is unthinkable. No man and no nation with the slightest understanding of the temper of this cltizen army of Britain's . . . will attempt to call a halt at this stage."

JUDGE HUGHSTON'S DISCUSSION.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate a discussion of the legal aspects of the question of the unification of the two Episcopal Methodisms of the United States by Judge E. V. Huhgston, a prominent lawyer at Greenwood, Miss., who is the present Lay Leader of the North Mississippi Conference and who was a delegate to our last General Conference. As will he seen, he differs very materially from Dr. J. W. Moore, of Chattanooga, Tenn., as to the significance of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the lltigation that we had with the Church, North, back in the forties to secure our proportionate part of the Publishing House Fund. His argument is certainly a very interesting one, and, in view of the issue which has been raised concerning the power of the General Conferences, North and South, in the handling of the pending union project, it is quite pertinent.

Two things have particularly impressed us in reading Judge Hughston's striklng article: 1. That in the dlvision of the Methodist Church in 1844 there was not the slightest disposltion to overrid̀e or ignore the will of the rank and file of its membership. On the contrary, there was manifested an earnest desire to let the people speak and act for themselves. There seemed to he no suggestlon that they were incompetent to do this, or that they cared nothlng about the vast interests that were at stake. The due regard which was shown for the will of the great body of the Methodist communicants of that day is very much to the credit of our fathers, and if the unification movement now on should assume a definite shape, our General Conference would display sound wisdom and a commendable spirit of democracy if it should refer the question at issue to every congregatlon, and allow it to keep its property ln case it should decide not to go with the new organization.

2. That those who think it will be easy to merge the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with other denominations are liahle to find themselves very much mistaken unless the terms are such as to command the assent of practically all our people. Our correspondent's paper seems to us to lndicate that there are legal harriers not a few that might be invoked if an effort should be made to jam throngh a scheme of union that a large percentage of Southern Methodists do not want, and that in that event a possible outcome would be the development of lawsuits all over the country. Surely the possibility of thls should glve the extreme unlonists among us pause and make them cautious ahout what they may attempt to do, if they care anything for the Church, South. The proper course to pursue in the settlement of this proposed undertaking ls to deal openly and unreservedly with the entire membership of the Church and to let their will govern. What is done should he just, equitable, and right, giving their full due to all the interests and every person involved. Thus only can ruinous strife he avoided and our Church command the respect of the Chrlstian world.

Give Judge Hughston's communication a careful reading. It is well worth it.

ENCOURAGING.

Mr. Gill, the well known New Orleans librarian, is quoted as having stated a few days ago that the public of this city has lately heen doing much more "serious readlng" than usual. This is encouraging. There is always hope for people who take a sober-minded view of life. To get men and women really to consider the true significance of living is a large part of the work that the Christian minister has to do in effecting their salvation. The gay and thoughtless seldom make any progress of consequence, either individually or collectively. Back of attainments of value of every kind lies honest, earnest thinking.

A POINT TO BE GUARDED.

A pastor should not allow anything to form a gulf hetween him and any class of the people among whom he lives. Many things may do this —dress, education, his manner of living, too exclusive an association with the better-to-do citizens of the community, etc. Though they may often he needed in Christian work, we have wondered if there is not sometimes peril at this point for a minister in the ownership of an automobile. If he would reach and impress the population ahout him, a preacher must keep up points contact with all the persons composing it—he must he positively identified with them, must make them feel that he has much in common with them, must have access to their hearts. Nothing can compensate an ambassador of Christ for the loss of this recognized community of interests.

THE METHODIST REVIEW.

The October number of the Methodist Review Quarterly is before us, with a most interesting table of contents. The opening contribution, "Reminiscences of Dr. Gross Alexander," by Rev. Gross W. Alexander, his son, is a most readable and entertaining paper. Other impressive articles are "The Pastoral Epistles," by the Editor, Dr. Du Bose; "The Failure of Secularism," by Rev. William Harrison, D.D., of Canada; "The Christian, the Final Religion," by J. F. G. Finney, D.D., of California; "Luke, the Physician: A Gospel for the Times," by R. O. Armstrong, of Canada; "Shakespeare's Tercentenary," by Edwin Ridley, of Buffalo, N. Y.; and "The Bicentennial of Thomas Gray," by Rev James Mudge, S. T. D., of Malden, Mass. We note two suggestive discussions by writers from this section of the Church: "Irwin Russell and His Environment," by Prof. A. A. Kern, of Millsaps College, and "The Rights of Laymen in American Methodism," by Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Donaldsonville, La. The issue contains the usual number of book reviews.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. George Stuart has been transferred from the Holston to the North Alabama Conference and stationed at First Church, Birmingham.

At the late session of the St. Louis Conference, Dr. J. W. Lee, who had been presiding elder of the St. Louis District, was made chaplain of the Barnes Hospital.

Rev. H. T. Young, our popular pastor at Amite City, La., was in New Orleans last Monday and paid the Advocate office an appreciated visit. The Editor, not being in, missed seeing him, much to his regret.

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, who for some time has been sojourning at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., expects to return to her home at Lafayette, La., this month. Her many friends and associate workers in the missionary society will be delighted to have her among them again.

Dr. J. W. Beeson, President of Meridian College, has announced that Rev. C. M. Dunaway, of Georgia, will conduct a revival at the institution of which he is the official head, November 3-10. Dr. Beeson extends an invitation to all who are within reach to attend.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. T. E. Gregory, of Caledonia, Miss., says: "Rev. W. W. Woollard, our presiding elder, was with us last Saturday and Sunday and gave us three excellent sermons." Brother Woollard has not spared himself in promoting the work of his district this year.

Brother W. L. Tucker, of Tucker, La., was in New Orleans last week and looked in on us in our sanctum on Friday. Brother Tucker always brings good cheer with him, and we appreciate his visits. He is a traveling man who does not fail to keep in touch with the Master in his wanderings to and fro.

We are indebted to the following friends to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. L. Stormont, Coffeeville, Miss., 2; Rev. Robert Randle, Harrisonburg, La., 5 (trial); Rev. W. W. Perry, Boyce, La., 6; Rev. T. B. Holloman, Vicksburg, Miss., 2.

Rev. M. M. Black, our pastor at Canton, Miss., and his family were the surprised but grateful recipients of a generous "pounding" at the hands of the elect ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society and other members of his flock one evening last week. Brother Black has lately had Evangelist J. A. Bowen with him in a notably successful meeting.

From the Sunflower (Miss.) Tocsin of September 28, we take the following: "Last Sunday evening, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona District, filled the Methodist pulpit at this place and preached one of the greatest sermons ever heard in Indianola. It was a masterful effort and was given close attention by a large audience."

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, writing on October 11, says: "Rev. W. M. Campbell of Shelby, has the honor of being the first to make a remittance to cover his assessment for Education—$71, which paid it in full." Good for Brother Campbell and the live town of Shelby!

In a personal note to the Editor, Dr. J. W. Bps well states that his health has been much better of late, and that he hopes to attend the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference at Winona. The brethren will be delighted to see Dr. Boswell, holding him, as they do, in the highest esteem. There is no truer, worthier man in Southern Methodism.

The Columbus (Miss.) District, of which Rev. W. W. Woollard is the active and efficient presiding elder, reported for the quarter ending September 1, 234 additions to the Church on profession of faith, and 117 by certificate and otherwise. Three young preacher, from the district—Nat Golding, S. E. Ashmore, and F. L. Ivey—are attending Millsaps College.

A card from Chaplain J. A. Randolph instructs us to change the address of his Advocate from "Chaplain of 6th Infantry, El Paso, Texas, to Chaplain Second Engineers, Columbus, New Mexico." It would seem from this that Brother Randolph's place of work has been shifted. He adds: "The weather is fine in Mexico now. The rainy season is over and the health of the troops is good."

Rev. E. P. Craddock writes us as follows from Iuka, Miss.: "We have just bought one of the best homes here, which is about an hour-and-a-half drive from our plantation in our car. We hope to remain here, and not move any more until the Lord calls us to our eternal home." We are pleased to have this cheering message from Brother Craddock. May the Lord richly bless him and his family!

In a letter, written from Jackson, Miss., on October 13, Sister S. M. Thames says: "Mr. Thames is in very good health now and I trust that he will be strong enough to attend the Conference at Winona. Dr. W. G. Henry is now doing the best preaching that he has done since he has been in Jackson, and he is having large congregations. I hope that the Bishop will let him alone for another year."

Rev. J. C. Price, of Ida, La., has brought us under obligations to him for a club of 9 trial subscriptions. Referring to his work, Brother Price says: "I preached the first sermon in our beautiful new church at Hosston on Sunday, October 8. The prospects are flattering there. We have had a great year on this charge. Our Sunday schools have almost doubled in attendance. We are very proud of our two new churches." This is indeed a fine record.

The program of the New Orleans Methodist Sunday School Union is on our table. The order of exercises, which is now in progress, looks interesting and inviting. The series of meetings began Monday evening and is due to end with a general rally next Sunday afternoon. Among the speakers we note the names of Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, Dr. George A. Oliver, of Virginia, and Mr. L. P. Leavell, of Meridian.

Brother W. A. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., was a highly appreciated visitor at our office last Saturday. He and his wife had come to New Orleans with their daughter, Mrs. J. P. Cruise, and her little daughter, Mary, who expected to sail from here to Spanish Honduras, where Mr. Cruise (the husband and father), is the manager of a banana farm. Brother Price is a steward in our church at Carpenter and the superintendent of our Sunday school at that place. He spoke in terms of appreciation of his pastor, Rev. C. H. Strait, and impressed us as being a remarkably choice lay man.

Rev. J. A. McKee, of Pueblo, Colo., writes us as follows: "We were returned to this appointment for our second year and all is going on well. We have a delightful station and are happy in the Master's work. I am contemplating a visit to Mississippi this winter, during the session of the North Mississippi Conference at Winona. What about the Millsaps College celebration? I have seen very little mention of it so far. Brother McKee's friends in Mississippi would be delighted to look into his face and grip his hand again. As to the celebration referred to, doubtless it will soon begin to take shape."

Read the message of Rev. W. W. Drake to the pastors of the Louisiana Conference concerning the Educational Assessment, which appears on another page. The point which he makes concerning an equitable apportionment to the various causes when the collections are taken together is timely and cannot be successfully controverted. If we mistake not, Bishop McCoy once ruled that a pastor has no right to discriminate in favor of any particular claim under such circumstances. Members of other Conferences might, in our opinion, read what Brother Drake has to say in this connection with profit.

Rev. J. A. Hall, our capable pastor at Greenwood, Miss., writes us as follows: "Inclosed you will find 31 six months' subscriptions and 3 renewals for a year. Credit for these is not due me, but to a committee, headed by that sweet-spirited, faithful follower of Christ, Dr. W. T. Johnson. We are in the midst of a meeting. We have the Wisdom Sisters and Rev. A. C. Curtis with us. Quite a good interest is being manifested." We scarcely need to say that we are grateful to Brother Hall and the committee referred to for this good work in behalf of the Conference organ. May the blessings of the Heavenly Father rest richly upon them!

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of The Spectator, the official weekly of the student body of the Mississippi Industrial Institute and College, at Columbus, Miss., which is a most interesting and highly creditable publication. Its Editor-in-Chief is Miss Mattie M. Pegues, a member of the Senior Class, who is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Pegues, of Columbus. It seems scarcely possible to us that this young lady who is now finishing her college course and who is wearing so worthily her distinguished honors is the little one that we knew in Tupelo, Miss., when we were pastor there. We take pride in the fine record which she is making.

An esteemed friend, concerning whose views on the unification question we are not informed, suggested in a letter to us a few days ago that we restrict the discussion of this issue to one or two articles a week, giving proportionate space to the other side. We desire to say that we realize the importance of having a variety in the contents of our paper and that we shall try to keep this fact in mind. We are aware that most of the discussions that we have lately published have been against union on any other than the Organic Unity basis, but this has been because only these have come to our office. We have published every scrap advocating union in a general way that we have received from our patronizing territory. The Editor is resolutely against any form of union that would not preserve substantially the integrity and autonomy of the Church. South. That he has no desire to shut the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi out of their Conference organ whatever may be their views, so long as they write in a proper spirit. He has insisted from the beginning that the wishes of the whole of our Louisiana members should be consulted concerning this momentous issue.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions.

Fraternally,
CHAS. O. CHALMERS,
Publisher.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EVANGELISTS

Dear Dr. Mees: Our North Mississippi Conference evangelists, Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., and Rev. J. P. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., have made full proof of their ministry this year. They have been abounding in labors. They have been steadily at work almost the whole of the Conference year up to this time. They have operated separately and both have held many meetings. Perhaps if any criticism should be offered at all it would be that they have held too many meetings. Yet they have been very successful. Some meetings have been great and in my last communication Brother Bell stated that he hoped to report a thousand conversions by Conference. Their reports at Conference will show the wisdom of the Conference action in naming these efficient men for evangelistic work. Such work is the most strenuous and nerve-breaking of any in the ministry. It calls for a greater outlay of nerve energy than any other character of service that a minister may perform. Besides, the evangelist must be away from some three of his time. The men who do this work faithfully will live out their time much faster than they would in the pastorate. I have held meetings enough to feel a genuine sympathy for the faithful Conference evangelist.

I have not heard so much from our local evangelists, but Brother W. L. Lowe has had to give much time and attention this year to his aged and invalid mother and has not done as much work as in some other years. These brethren will all have good reports at the Annual Conference, for which we rejoice. W. M. YOUNG, Secretary.

Pontotoc, Miss., For Committee.

We take the following from the Northwestern Christian Advocate (Chicago): Dr. John R. Mott states that all the Latin countries are more influenced by what takes place in France than in any other country in the world. This at once lifts French Protestantism into immense importance. His testimony is that no Protestant Church in Europe or America in proportion to its membership and resources is doing more for foreign missions than is the Protestant Church of France. This Church is now, because of the war, sadly in need of assistance to maintain its work, and an effort is being made to raise $[illegible] toward its relief in the United States. Any one wishing to contribute to this fund, $60,000 of which has been raised, may send his remittance to the General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City.

Until the world takes to heart the lesson of the Sermon on the Mount, it will be a world of endless strife.—Ave Maria.

HARRIET ELIZABETH BUCK was born on May 5, 1850; was married to John L. McRae on August 24, 1870, and went to heaven on September 14, 1916. In the year 1866, Mrs. McRae became a member of the old Sweetwater Church, this church at that time being a part of the Black Hawk Circuit. On the organization of the Acona Church, a few years afterward, her membership was transferred to it. She lived and died a faithful follower of Him who gave Himself for her. In years agone she "sat at the feet" of such pastors as Kenneth Jones, J. S. Oakley and W. T. J. Sullivan. In her life all the Christian virtues blossomed. An enduring monument to the life she lived—a life hid with Christ in God—is to be found in the Christian characters of the husband, the sons, and daughters whom she has left behind. Her life was a perpetual evangel and a perennial benediction.

Acona, Miss. HER PASTOR.

BLANCHE COKER, daughter of Rev. E. J. Coker and wife, was born in the parsonage at Sbaron, Miss., on June 1, 1913, and died in the parsonage at Topisaw, September 29, 1916. These data bound the beautiful life of one of my parsonage pets; and none that I have loved and petted were lovelier than she. Born amidst the bloomings of May and June, she caught the spirit and beauty of the season and lived and laughed and prattled it to the joy of all who knew her. We were sweethearts, she and I—she loved me, and I loved her as if she were a baby angel. Everybody loved her, because ber beauty and brightness were so very attractive. Jesus loved her, too, and has taken her to his human flower garden beyond the sky where millions of babies are. "Tbe Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord!" The sorrow in that parsonage home at Topisaw is also my sorrow; and the faith and hope that look far forward is ours. I treasure the beautiful memory of her.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

CHARLES SCHARBORGH was born August 2, 1857, and died at his residence, near Angie, La., on Sept. 26, 1916. He was first married to Miss Sarah Powell on Feb. 10, 1887. This union was blessed with eight children; two preceded him to the grave, and six are still living—four sons and two daughters. He was married the second time to Miss Sarah Baxton on March 2, 1902, witb whom he lived happily until deatb separated them. Brother Scharborgh joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a young man and he always led a consistent Christian life. He was ever ready to lend his influence and help to any good cause of his community or Church. He said but little, being of a quiet disposition, but everybody loved and respected him for his Christian character. His home was tbe preacher's home. He was afflicted with cancer. All was done that could be done for his recovery. He bore his affliction with patience. Just before he passed away he extended one hand to Brother John Bateman and the other to his wife and bade them good-by, and went on to glory. God bless the faithful wife and children!

F. N. SWEENEY.

Mrs. EMILY C. BELL was born in Neshoba County, Miss., on Dec. 17, 1850, and died in the triumph of a living faith in God at her home near Kosciusko, Attala County, Miss., on Sept. 25, 1916. On Oct. 20, 1869, she was married to Mr. G. C. Bell, and from this happy union came five children—three of whom, with her husband, still survive her. Sister Bell joined the Methodist Church at an early age and lived a consecrated Christian life until God saw fit to call her home. A noble woman has been called to her reward. Not only her loved ones, but all wbo knew her cannot but feel the loss of the sweet and gentle influence whicb always follows a Christian mother. Her ambition was not to have the praise of man except it came through the fulfilling of her duty. Not only bas she left a noble family of Christians to bless the world, but, like her Lord, she touched the hearts and lives of tbose around her in such a way that when the summons came many felt that their best friend was gone. She came to her end in great peace. One of eartb's choicest, purest spirits, she was untiring in her devotion as a wife, a mother, and a grandmotber. She was loyal in love and faithful in service to her Lord. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.....that tbey may have rest from their labors." Sister Bell has gone to join that angelic host who wait to welcome their loved ones home. Her pastor,

C. A. PARKS.

The subject of this sketch, Dr. W. S. BANKS, was born on April 9, 1838, in Saint Clair County, Alabama, where he grew to manhood. He gave his heart to God when a small boy and joined the Baptist Churcb with his parents; but in later years united with the Methodist Church, in which he lived a consistent Christian life until death came on June 24, 1916. He was happily married to Miss Sarah Mosley, in Tippah County, Mississippi, on May 26, 1869, and of this union were born 7 children, 4 sons and 3 daughters. He is survived by a wife and six children to mourn their loss. His death was not unexpected, as he had a severe stroke of paralysis in the fall of 1914, after wbich he was confined to the house. The children are all doing well in life.

Dr. Banks began the study of medicine when quite a young man, and served the last two years of the Civil War as an assistant surgeon. He took his first course of lectures at Richmond, Va., and finished at Vanderbilt, after his service in the war. He was considered an able physician and he practiced his profession more than fifty years, making it a rule to respond to calls of tbe sick, regardless of money or color. His skill as pbysician, his sweet Christian spirit, his loyalty to his Church, and to his lodge as a Master Mason (which he had been a member of for many years), had won for him the highest respect of the people for many miles the country over. Therefore, we can say tbat a good man has gone from us.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor from tbe Banks residence in Abbeville on June 25, after which the Abbeville Lodge took charge and laid his body to rest in the Abbeville cemetery with Masonic honors. Peace to him evermore!

His pastor, J. R. JAMES.

MRS. SYRENA HOLYFIELD BOYLES was born in Perry County, Alabama, on Nov. 26, 1830. When a girl of sixteen, she married James Anderson Boyles, of Alabama. From tbis union there were eleven children. Her husband died about 1866. She remained a widow and moved to Mississippi about 1870, and kept her children with her until they were married. She then lived among them as long as she was able to go about, and afterwards sbe resided with her son, Joe, until her deatb, which occurred at Homewood, Miss., on May 11, 1916. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen, and lived a devout Cbristian life until God saw fit to call her home at the age of 86 years, 5 montbs, and 15 days.

She leaves of her 11 children 7 living. Of her 87 grandchildren, 74 are living; of the 154 great-grandchildren, 135 are living; and of her 252 descendants, 216 are living. Sbe was buried at Homewood, Miss., on May 12, 1916. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. L. White, assisted by Rev. F. A. Lane. The funeral procession was a touching scene when her grandsons, desiring to show ber the last tribute of love and respect, with their tender hands, carried her body from the church to the grave, where she sleeps and awaits the trumpet call which shall awake first those wbo sleep in Christ.

Grandmother was a great force for good, being always ready to cheer and to speak words of comfort to all. Her true worth to the Church will never be known, for she leaves 5 grandsons preparing for tbe ministry in the M. E. Church, South, who will labor to forward the cause of Christ, which she so faithfully represented, and then died in great peace, with a smile.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Made at Home

Costs Very Little and Easily Made, but is Remarkably Effective.

You'll never really know what a fine cough syrup you can make until you prepare this famous home-made remedy. You not only save $2 as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a more effective and dependable remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat or chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) from any good drug store, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Here you have a full pint—a family supply—of the most effective cough syrup that money can buy—at a cost of only 54 cents or less. It never spoils.

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting cough syrup have caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis, croup and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"Believing right has everything to do with feeling right."

FROM SEVENTH AVE., MERIDIAN

Dr. Jno. D. Neely: Will you please allow me space in the columns of the Advocate to give a report of our splendid work here at Seventh Avenue Church? I have served the good people of the Waynesboro Circuit for four years as their humble pastor and to say that I esteem the glorious privilege of serving them and partaking of their kind hospitalities does not begin to express my feeling. We had some great and good times together in the service of our Lord and Master in that field of labor, and, notwithstanding the fact that I made blunders, I feel persuaded to say that in a measure the Master used my humble efforts in the leading of some souls to Christ Jesus and into the experience of perfect love. That the smiles of Divine approval from the Heavenly Father may be upon the saints on the Waynesboro Circuit is my prayer, for Jesus' sake.

Upon the arrival of myself and my family here at Seventh Avenue, from the seat of our Annual Conference on Dec. 1, 1915, we were met at the depot by our beloved presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, and a host of friends from our congregation, and as there was no parsonage to carry the pastor and his family to at that time, we were carried to the Wesley House and comfortably domiciled there with our efficient deaconess, Miss Mollie Wimmack. And in the evening of the same day we were greeted enthusiastically by a large concourse of people, and, to our surprise, after the crowd had dispersed, we found that the pantry had been well filled with all kinds of good things to eat. Our work here with this excellent people from the start has been admirable. We had no parsonage when we came on the work, but through the untiring efforts of our noble-hearted presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, and the hearty cooperation of the pastor and his people, and other friends, plans were laid and the money was raised to construct a home for the preacher, and this noble enterprise was pushed to completion, and to-day the pastor of the Seventh Avenue congregation is domiciled in a beautiful little parsonage by the side of the church.

The services throughout the entire year have all been fruitful and inspiring, bringing new life and hope to us all. We held our first revival meeting in the spring, beginning March 27, with Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Waynesboro, Miss., to do the preaching. Brother Loyd is a man with a happy and jubilant experience, and a burdened soul for the salvation of the lost. And he is a preacher of unusual force and ability. We had no ingathering in this meeting, but about 35 persons professed conversion, and the entire membership of the Church was stimulated under this man of God's wholesome preaching. . . . We opened up fire against the enemy of all that is good and pure on the third Sunday in July. Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Mathersville, Miss., came to us and did the preaching for me throughout the meeting, which was of a lucid type. We had no additions from this meeting, though much good was doubtless done. We regret to state that our church at Marion was struck by lightning a few days since and was badly damaged, but we hope to soon be able to repair the church within a short time. We have some splendid people in this congregation. . . . We began our second revival meeting here at the Seventh Avenue Church on the third Sunday in September. The meeting was a success from the first service to the closing hour. Rev. J. B. King, of Bay Springs, Miss., assisted me. Joe certainly does know how to dig up sin in all of its odiousness. His messages from day to day were clear, forceful and orthodox, and were seasoned with spiritual fervor. According to my way of thinking, he is a splendid exegete. Sinners were awakened and brought under deep conviction of sin during this revival, and they came to the altar weeping and begging God to take them back into his fold. And those who proved their love through repentance and a godly sorrow and a fruitful testimony. It was good to be present and to watch the dealings of those new converts, as they told at the seeking power in the gospel. We had some altogether Methodist shouting in this fine meeting. The visible results were great. As we were best able to judge we had about 145 conversions and reclamations, and there were 71 accessions to our Church. We had one of the best revivals that I have been in since God for Christ's sake kissed away my sins and gave me beauty for ashes. We were in the fight against the enemy of souls for eleven days, and God gave us the victory. To Him we give all the glory. Such a revival meeting as this is enough to gladden any faithful pastor's heart. Yes, and glory be to God, I am a happy man to-day.

This has been the most fruitful and satisfactory year with me as a pastor since I joined the Conference on Dec. 6, 1905, at Vazoo City, Miss. And I attribute it largely to the fact that I have used more "theology" than ever before in my work. I have found that it pays to take time to be alone with God and let him talk with and to us. The total number of accessions to the Church to date during the year is 137. As we can best tell the total number of conversions and reclamations during the year is about 208. And the end is not yet. The congregations are growing all the time. And the prayer-meetings are being well attended. Our Sunday school is on the upward grade, we had 194 present on last Sunday, and the interest manifested was superb. We will have a fine report to give in from the little church here at the approaching session of our Annual Conference at Jackson.

You can hear it whispered among the true saints here that the religious pendulum of the old clock is swinging back to the good old days of long ago, and that God is calling many souls from a life of sin and worldliness to the higher and better life. Yes, I am singing from the great deep of my heart to-day:

"I'm abiding in the Lord,
And confiding in His word,
And I'm hiding, safely hiding,
In the bosom of his love."

mean that your hair is not receiving proper attention, and yet a gray hair will do more to make you look old than anything else. Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food, and unless you give your hair the proper attention you cannot expect it to retain its lustre and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original lustre. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Don't use strong alkaline soaps as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. CHURCH DEDICATION.

Dear Brother Meek: I am writing to tell you of the dedication of our church edifice at Pioneer, La., on October 8, 1916, at the conclusion of the morning preaching service by Rev. V. D. Skipper, of Delhi, La., and of the beautiful and inspiring sermon he preached at 7:30 p. m. The text for the morning hour was from Genesis 28:10-22. Immediately after the sermon your correspondent, in behalf of the building committee (being a member thereof), gave an historical outline of the church; after which, as chairman, which position he has held since February, 1880, and upon the part of the Board of Trustees, he advanced to the chancel and presented the house of worship to Brother Skipper, handing him at the same time a crimson and a white rosebud, also a sprig of evergreen, emblematic as an "earnest" of faith in the atonement, purity of the Spirit, and of hope in the life everlasting, who proceeded formally to dedicate it according to the Discipline with an appropriate talk, earnest prayer, and hallowed benediction.

The text for the evening hour was Job 14:14, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Brother Skipper seemed at his best and held his congregation entranced for fully one hour with his true interpretation of the Scriptures, his sound theology, and his forceful logic and beautiful rhetoric. He was catchy, inspiring, transporting, and sublime. I had heard him at Rayville during the District Conference in July last and I thought it grand, and I was anxious to hear him again and I did, and it was grander and more soul-stirring than ever. Oh, how I do wish that every man, woman, and child in West Carroll, Louisiana—yea, in these United States; aye, even in the whole world—might have the privilege of hearing so learned, and so zealous a divine. What a treat; what a rare privilege it would afford! May God bless Brother Skipper, Brother Woodward, and all of God's faithful ambassadors of whatever clime or denomination, and you, Brother Meek, and the dear old Advocate of New Orleans, ever zealous of good works and so watchful, faithful, and true.

S. TAYLOR JACKSON.

P. S. On Nov. 11-12, our fourth and last quarterly conference for the year will be held at this place, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 12, Brother A. S. Lutz, presiding elder, will dedicate our new church at Forest, which has just been completed. S. T. J.

Forest Home, La.

CALLED TO HER REWARD.

Dear Brother Meek: Mrs. Lou Flournoy, of Pontotoc, Miss., died this afternoon after a ten days' illness at the home of her son-in-law, J. W. Bell. She was past 78 years. Sister Flournoy was one of the best members of our church. A great woman has gone to her reward. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. J. W. Bell, and numerous other kindred to mourn their loss. Her funeral services will be conducted tomorrow. W. M. YOUNG, P. C.

Pontotoc, Miss., Oct. 9, 1916.

BYHALIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: A few weeks ago our people at Byhalia were made glad by the presence of Rev. R. A. Tucker, who was formerly presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, but who now occupies the pulpit at Grenada. The sermons during the week were very superior, being instructive and heart-searching efforts, which the congregations enjoyed thoroughly and the spiritual uplift of which was manifest. At the great revival two years ago, under the preaching of our beloved pastor, Rev. L. A. McKeown, there was such a general spiritual wave that there were few left outside of the Church. Hence, at this meeting only six were added to the Church, but these thoughtful sermons were a great benefit to the membership. We were glad to have Brother Tucker with us and we hope that he may be able to come again. We observed last Sunday as "Rally Day" in the Sunday school, and it was a success in every way. The church was beautifully decorated, and the program was a splendid one. The singing was everything that could be desired and the way the pupils acquitted themselves was great. Near the close of the exercises Prof. Brunson spoke earnestly and forcibly on Sunday school work, stressing the fact that "men need God." We feel that this community is extremely fortunate in having at the head of its school so high-toned a Christian gentleman as Prof. Brunson, who is not only teaching the "young idea how to shoot," but who is also trying to lead the young on the way to a better world than this—the land of eternal happiness. Brother McKeown followed Prof. Brunson's address with a talk that touched the hearts of all present. —Marcus D. Herring.

McDONALD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I will send you a line or two to let you know that the McDonald charge is still existing. We have been moving along nicely, even if we are scattered over a territory extending from nine miles west of Philadelphia to almost Meridian. All our revivals are over and we did have a good time. Brother Edgar Hillman came to me on the third Sunday in July and we began our revivals by going to Collinsville. Owing to the rainy weather, the crowds were not as large as they would have been otherwise. However, we had a faithful and attentive audience at each service and Brother Hillman did do some most excellent preaching. We closed out on Thursday afternoon, and we made it back across to Old Campground, near Beech Springs, where Brother Edgar gave us eight days more of his time. Then on the first Sunday in August we began at Scotland Chapel, where Brother Clay Hillman did the preaching. Brother Clay is a fine young man. This was the first time he ever held a revival, but every one said that they thought he was an old hand at the work. Brother M. L. White then came next to McDonald and gave us five days of faithful work. Brother White is just as kind and lovable as he was when he was my pastor years ago at Decatur. Dr. Hunt met us at Suqualena on the third Sunday in August, where we opened up with full force. Dr. Hunt gave us some of as fine things to listen to as I ever had the privilege of hearing. Lastly, Brother J. C. Long gave us five days' faithful work at Hope. Brother Long is an experienced man and knows how to get hold of the people. The visible results were 13 accessions by profession of faith and 3 by letter.—W. D. Barrett, P. C.

SOME INTERESTING DISCOURSES.

Dear Advocate: I feel constrained to say a few words relative to some sermons delivered at Oak Ridge, Miss., on Oct. 2-4, by Rev. Roy H. Kieiser of Satartia. On account of the pastor and engaged helper being sick at the time, the regular summer meeting could not be held when it was expected to be; so Brother Kieiser had a few days he could give me later and we both thought a line of instructive preaching would be better for just a few days, especially since he preached a series of revival sermons here last year.

The following are the subjects he discussed: "The Fullness of the Times," "Human Development to the Perfect Christian Day," "The Christian Scheme of Universal Redemption," "Truth and Freedom," Bridging the Unbridgable Chasm Between God and Man," and "What Is Man?"

I cannot mention each subject as it impressed me, but will just briefly touch upon two or three of his discourses. His discussion of "The Fulness of the Times" was a masterpiece of modern thought and truth. It made clear the relationship that existed between the heathen world, beginning with pre-historic man, and the Hebrews until Christ came.

"Bridging the Unbridgable Chasm Between God and Man" should be preached in every college and university in the land, and especially should every skeptic, infidel and consciously lost sinner hear it.

I am unable to do justice to the discourse on "What is Man?" After asking chemistry, physiology, psychology, and Christanity, and noting that all of them answer in the language of Paul, "now we see through a glass darkly — now we know in part," he gave a partial history of the one perfect man, Christ Jesus, after whom we are to pattern our lives, the one who is altogether lovely, and the one we will be like when we shall see him as he is.

One noticeable feature of these discourses was that Jesus was the central figure. He came in "the fullness of time;" He gave the law regulating the "human development to the Perfect Day;" He is "the Christian scheme of universal redemption;" He bridges "the unbridgable gulf between God and man;" He is "Truth and Freedom," and He is the one perfect man.

After hearing these marvelous sermons I feel like falling at our Lord's feet and saying:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name;
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all."

In His name,

J. A. WELLS.

NEW ORLEANS LEAGUE UNION.

The Union Epworth League of New Orleans held its regular monthly meeting at St. Mark's Hall, headquarters of the Methodist Italian Work, on Tuesday, Oct. 10. The usual routine business was attended to and encouraging reports were received from all the Leagues represented. The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: L. R. Bock, President; J. Barwick, Vice President; Miss Thelma Cayaud, Secretary; M. Singleton, Treasurer; Miss H. Beail, Corresponding Secretary, and Miss C. C. Veith, Era Agent.

Miss S. Kuntz, of the Carrollton Avenue League, gave a spirited and helpful talk on "What the Era Has Done for Our League." A count of the five Leagues represented developed the fact that they carried 45 subscriptions to the Era. Miss E. Clauset, of Carrollton, challenged the Algiers League to a debate on the question, "Resolved, That civilization is a blessing to the poor," which was accepted by the Algiers League's President, Mr. L. T. Dunn, the debate to take place at our next meeting.

The event of the evening was an address by Rev. Robert I. Bell, of Southwestern Virginia, who for three years has been and is doing missionary work among the mountaineers of the Cumberlands and is familiarly known among them as "The Sky Pilot" and "Brother Bob." He gave some picturesque descriptions of the typical mountaineer, their customs and practices, both the old and younger generations, making them seem very real and near by his use of the mountain vernacular.

Mr. Barwick, the newly elected Vice President, gave a very pleasing and earnest talk as to our responsibilities as Leaguers, and Miss Gibson, the new resident at St. Mark's, expressed her pleasure at being in New Orleans and her most satisfactory introduction to League work in this city.

The attendance count awarded the banner to the Mary Werlein Mission League for the third consecutive time. The meeting was closed with a short prayer by Rev. W. W. Holmes, our presiding elder. L. R. BOCK.

MRS. HARRIS AT GLOSTER.

Mrs. Harris began her itinerary of the Mississippi Conference the first of the month. On account of the length of the Port Gibson District it was deemed advisable to have more than one meeting in the district. Accordingly, four points were selected: Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, Fayette, Gloster, and Liberty.

Mrs. Harris arrived in Gloster Saturday, Oct. 7, and those who met her felt instinctively that they were going to hear messages worth while, for there is something about this woman which impresses you deeply even on first acquaintance. Our little District Secretary, Miss Porter, whispered to us, "She is wonderful;" a fact we soon had verified for ourselves.

In the afternoon Mrs. Harris conducted, in a very informal manner, an institute on the organization of our work. Every phase of the work upon which the women wanted more or special information she was prepared to discuss, and in such a manner that her words were indelibly impressed upon her hearers. She urged the observance of the Week of Prayer, calling special attention to the literature prepared for use at that time. The object of the "Whirlwind Campaign" received attention, too; and the reasons why the women all over the Southland should be won for this cause were set forth with wonderful directness and power. How any woman could remain indifferent after hearing Mrs. Harris is beyond our comprehension.

Mission Study was stressed and brief reviews given of each book in the mission study course. Mrs. Harris recommended very highly "World Missions and World Peace," by Caroline Alivater Mason. In this book Mrs. Mason answers the time-worn argument that only through war can the heroic and sacrificial in men be developed. She shows in a most effective way how foreign missions can supply the motives for heroism and sacrifice. A set of charts as well as a book of suggestions for conducting the study of this book have been prepared, and no study class should attempt the book without having both helps. "Old Spain in New America" was the home mission book recommended, though Dr. Moore's "The South To-Day" contains such valuable information about the social, industrial, political, educational and religious conditons in the South that no one can really afford to fail to read it.

Sunday was given over to inspirational meetings, and we feel sure they were indeed inspirations to all who attended them. In the afternoon, Mrs. Harris presented the work of the women in the Orient. She is eminently fitted for the task, having spent five and a half years in China, making a special study of our work there. Several months of the time were spent in Korea and Japan. Her words were words of wisdom and came, as it were, direct from the field. As she told of the great needs of the work over there and how the Council has to turn deaf ears to plea upon plea, our hearts were stirred to their very depths and we prayed that God would press home upon every woman present the awful responsibility resting upon her. Mrs. Harris brought out the fact that each Christian woman in the world is responsible for twenty Christless ones. As she stood there and told of the lives of those with whom she had come in contact and tried to make us see something of how our twenty are living, we realized that we were failing to be His "witnesses in all Judea and Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

At night Mrs. Harris gave something of the political, religious and educational conditions in China, and presented her subject in a wonderfully illuminating way. She spoke of the great reverence of the Chinese for learning, and gave many instances of how the educational work has proved an entering wedge into the lives of the people, and how quickly the missionaries take advantage of every such opportunity to press home the truths of "the beautiful Jesus doctrine." The great revolutions that have taken place in China during the past ten years are nothing short of miraculous. They show the wonderful transforming power of the Holy Spirit when it dwells in an individual or hovers over a nation.

Mrs. Harris still has a number of places to visit and we would urge your attendance upon any meeting in your locality. It is an opportunity you may never have again and one which you cannot afford to lightly throw aside.

The Growth of Bible and Mission Study in the North Mississippi Conference And Its Value as an Asset In the Auxiliary.

When a few faithful women banded themselves together in a Foreign Mission Society, and later when practically the same women formed the Home Mission Society, it was from an instinctive desire to pass on something of the blessing they themselves had received than from any real or definite knowledge of the great field for service. But in this, as in all things else, unity is strength and this working together of the few created a desire for a more definite knowledge of conditions and thus men and women began a more systematic study of the fields at home and abroad. Newspaper articles, pamphlets, and books were written, giving to us a clearer understanding, and with this broader vision, the result of which is our present missionary society with its thousands of women and children.

In our own Conference Mission Study has proved the entering wedge to many an hitherto uninterested heart.

At the beginning of the second year of the united Missionary Society, from reports received, the Mission Study Class was the exception and not the rule, but with the combination of the Publicity Department with the Mission Study Department it has had a steady growth. Before people will read missionary literature or attend a mission study class they must be awakened to some interest in the subject and this the Publicity Superintendent, if she be wide awake, must accomplish by means of maps, charts, posters, articles from the press and her own enthusiasm.

Reports show the auxiliaries that have carried on systematic mission and Bible study classes to be the auxiliaries that the Conference can regard as its backbone and support, and the auxiliary knows it is upon the members who are interested in Bible and mission study that it can depend for attendance and service, and from cut these auxillaries are coming our volunteers for service as foreign missionaries, deaconesses, pastors' helpers, and Conference officers.

Let me plead that every auxiliary in the North Mississippi Conference have a mission study class and a Bible study class during the fall and winter of 1916-17, thereby giving ourselves an opportunity to measure up to our possibilities.

Mrs. WALTER CAMPBELL.

A NOTEWORTHY INCIDENT.

"Arkadelphia, Sept. 29.—The 'Squirrel Head Club,' composed of business and professional men of this city, are on their annual encampment and hunting trip. They will have a camp on Ouachita River, south of the city, and will be gone a week. In the party are: W. E. Adams, J. M. Adams, W. N. Adams, H. C. Couch, R. W. Huie, Jr., Will Huie, Jim Callaway, Josiah Hardage, L. Goodloe, George Echels, W. Moore, M. G. Ferguson, C. McDaniel, R. C. McDaniel."

Dear Dr. Meek: The above from the Little Rock Gazette of September 30, 1916, is noteworthy on account of the personnel of the crowd and the fact that, in addition to rod and reel and gun and bag, each carried his Sunday School Magazine and Quarterly, and on Sunday, while our great Sunday school in Arkadelphia, presided over by Hon. Will Huie, was in session under the direction of another, he was leading another session on the banks of the beautiful Ouachita in the foothills of the Ozarks. Announcement to this effect was made at the service in Arkadelphia by the pastor, Rev. A. O. Evans.

From the Field

Indianola, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We closed a meeting at Indianola on October 4 which had continued for eleven days. Rev. J. A. Bowen and Brother Jack Brokaw assisted us, Bowen doing the preaching and Brokaw doing the singing. The people were well pleased with both of them. The congregations were good and the attention given the sermons was excellent. I think that if the meeting could have continued a few days uonger the results would have been much greater. We received into the Church eight members. Indianola is a growing charge. In a short time it will be one of the best appointments in the Conference. I have never served a kinder people. We have spent about $1000 on the parsonage this year; so we now have a home about equal to any in the Conference. I expect nothing else but for the finances to be paid in full. We have a fine Sunday school, including a men's class of 60 members.—J. H. Mitchell, P. C.

Plain Dealing, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Just a few words from this portion of the field. I would like to say that we have had a very good year. I note with interest that my work will be in advance of what it was at the close of the previous year. I am very sure that the interest is much better; my congregations have been good the entire year, and are not falliug off any at present. I have organized one church, or rather reorganized it, with about 21 members. The Sunday school work is in a fine condition, especially at this point, Plain Dealing. As to my Conference collections, I hope to have things in hand by Conference. There is one thing which does my heart good, and that is, I feel as though I have been instrumental in the Master's hands in leading souls to Christ this year. I also greatly appreciate the fact that some have given to the cause of Christ this year that never did give before. These thoughts are very inspiring to me. The Ruston District will have to give up its present presiding elder this fall, and I, for one, am very sorry; yet I shall loyally welcome another instead. Pray for me and mine.—C. B. Powell, P. C.

Tishomingo, Miss.

Dear Advocate: After an absence of eight years in Arkansas, I am glad to get back to Mississippi, and to get a place to live and work again in the North Mississippi Conference. While Arkansas is a great State and has some of the best people that can be found anywhere, and as fine a body of preachers as the Church produces, yet I had a very strong desire to come back home. So at the last session of our Conference I got Bishop Morrison to transfer me from the North Arkansas Conference to the North Mississippi Conference, and I was sent to the Tishomingo charge. Since coming here about $200 worth of improvements has been made on the parsonage, and about $75 has been spent on one of the churches of the charge. At present the carpenters are at work on a $1000 church at this place.

We have had some good meetings this summer. I have received about 20 members into the Church, I have preached 115 times, have walked 500 miles, and have ridden 475 miles. I have baptized one infant, have visited 275 families, and have grown in weight from 149 pounds to 175 pounds.

Our regular finances are short and I do not know what may be the final result, but I hope that all will be well. —R. S. Lawson, P. C.

Columbia, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Just a word to let you know what we are doing up here in Caldwell Parish. The Columbia Church debt is a thing of the past. We are now ready for Bishop Hoss to dedicate two churches—Columbia and Grayson—the indebtedness having been paid on both. The first year of our pastorate here we raised the money, erected and dedicated a church, which was out of debt and a few dollars ahead, by the fourth Sunday in April. Bishop Hoss will be here just before Conference to dedicate two others for us.

During the past three years it has been my privilege to see over 600 members received into our Church, having done some evangelistic work. About half of this number came in on the Columbia charge. During these years of floods and other disasters the Lord has been blessing us in more ways than one. Our Grayson people have purchased a fine bell for their church, and the ladies at Columbia have installed a new light plant in the church at a considerable cost.

We have a loyal people here, and they feel justly proud of their recent victory in eliminating the large debt, which our bank had been carrying without interest. The good work goes on, as we are collecting funds to make some repairs and put a new coat of paint on the church. The prospects are bright and our people are hopeful. —J. M. Alford, Pastor.

Lula, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just read with great interest the article by Brother Felts on the "Union Question." I think he takes a common sense view of the matter. I fear that our "leaders" are getting ahead of the Holy Spirit in this matter. As I see it, we need much preparation for the unification of the two great Methodist Churches. I believe that God will lead us to it, if it is in His great plan. When men try to force the things of the Kingdom of God—well, it does not take a philosopher to predict results.

It would be a great pleasure to us to have you visit this charge. You would find many of the people you knew still here. Some have moved away and others have gone to the home of the soul.

Some substantial repairs have been made on the parsonage. The church at Dubbs has recently been repaired by the Insurance Company that issued a tornado policy on it. They necessarily had to make some changes in it, which add to the ontward appearance as well as the interior. You would not have to pull off your boots and wade from the parsonage in Lula now (I hear you once did this when you were a presiding elder), as we have a brick walk above high-water mark. We have purchased a handsome organ for the church at Lula. Uncle Ab Rainey gave us a good acetylene light outfit for the church. The town is building some. New residences and business houses are now under construction, improvements have been made on the streets, and we are soon to have an electric light plant installed. We are highly pleased with the people here. They are liberal. A more social set of big boys yon would never meet. They are talking of increasing the pastor's salary. They say it will "take more." We are not bothering about it, for these fellows will look after that part of it. We are succeeding in getting up the collections and have no donbt of getting everything in full.

If you want to keep us in a good humor you had better not pass us up when traveling over the Y. & M. V., but stop and spend a night or two, at least, at the parsonage. We have had some good men to visit us this year: Jaco, Countiss, Ellis, Gaines, McLain, Wasson, Stephens, and others of like dimensions. Of course, the presiding elder comes. He is a capital fellow and a perfect gentleman, but we will have to let him go this fall.—Walter W. Jones.

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Saner, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test of all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin, another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In some cases it is worse than foolish to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your flagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron iron acetate etc. often ruined people's teeth upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron for example is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

Ruptured?—Throw Away Your Truss!

For Many Years We Have Been Telling You That No Truss Will Ever Help You---We Have Told You The Harm That Trusses Are Doing. We Have Told You That the Only Truly Comfortable and Scientific Device for Holding Rupture is the Brooks Rupture Appliance---and That It Is Sent on Trial to Prove It

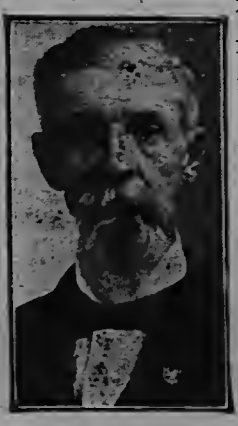
If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon to-day and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge, and, once having seen my illustrated book and read it, you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who is now giving others the benefit of his experience. If ruptured, write him to-day, at Marshall, Mich.

"Cured by the Brooks Discovery"

At the Age of 76



Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:

I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 1905. On November 20, 1905, I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks Discovery, which, considering my age, 76 years, I regard as remarkable.

Very sincerely yours,
SAM A. HOOVER.

Cured Without Operation

"Was Sure He Would be a Cripple"

Ada, Minn.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Enclosed is a picture of my children, and the little man you see seated on the chair is the one who was cured by your Appliance.

He had been ruptured quite a while before we wrote you, and I was sure that he would be a cripple the rest of his life. However, some helping hand showed me an ad. in a newspaper, with the result that he was in perfect health through the wearing of a Brooks Appliance for just three months.

The doctor advised an operation, which I would not consent to. Your advice was to put an Air Cushion Appliance on him, and I must say that it is worth ten times what it cost.

I wish you could have seen him before we used the Appliance and now, when he is fully as sound as anyone could be.

I cannot thank you too much for what you have done for my boy.

Yours respectfully,
OLIVER HANSON.

Child Cured in Four Months

21 Jansen St., Dubuque, Iowa.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your Appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner, our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months.

Yours very truly,
ANDREW EGGENBERGER.

Cured in Three Months

Salem, Ohio.
430 Cleveland Av.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Mr. Brooks:

I am sending you a small picture of my son, who is now five years old.

We ordered your Appliance for him when he was only two months old, and yet want to say in about three months all signs of rupture were gone, and he is some boy to-day.

I shall be very glad to say a good word for you whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Yours very truly,
T. A. McLAIN.

Veteran Cured

Commerce, Ga., R. F. D. No. 11.

Mr. C. E. Brooks.

Dear Sir:—I am glad to tell you that I am now sound and well and can plow or do any heavy work. I can say your Appliance has effected a permanent cure. Before getting your Appliance I was in a terrible condition and had given up all hope of ever being any better. If it hadn't been for your Appliance I would never have been cured. I am sixty-eight years old and served three years in Eckle's Artillery, Oglethorp Co. I hope God will reward you for the good you are doing for suffering humanity.

Yours sincerely,
H. D. BANKS.

Doctor Pronounces Him Cured

119 Towle Avenue,
Mishawaka, Ind.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Mr. Brooks:—

Answering your letter, will say we need no more Appliances, as our son has been completely cured by wearing your Appliance.

We recently had him examined, and the doctor said the opening was entirely closed and that it wasn't necessary to wear it longer.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am,

Yours very truly,
MRS. H. TOLLMAN.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

Ten Reasons Why

You Should Send for Brooks Rupture Appliance

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market to-day, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.

2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.

3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.

4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.

5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.

6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.

7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.

8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.

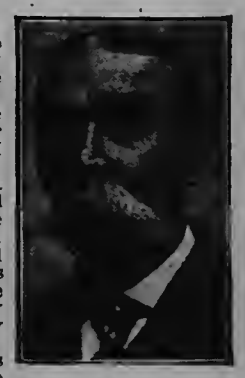
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.

10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon to-day.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on: it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.



It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol 63—No. 43. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3166

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1916. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"The little pool, in street or field apart,
Glasses the deep heavens and the rushing storm;
And into the silent depths of every heart,
The eternal throws its awful shadow-form."

Christianity cannot afford to despise any arm of service that will help it to uplift fallen humanity. But the lifting power upon which it must most rely is the Divine Arm.

There is much more in true Christian missions than the mere publication of the Gospel. The "Great Commission" which our risen Lord gave his disciples did not stop with so easy a task as that. Our charge to evangelize the nations includes the following words: "Teaching them TO OBSERVE all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The mission work that Jesus has ordered to he done is to convert the heathen not into merely nominal, but real Christians.

The Christian Intelligencer says: "If we read the Word of God aright, we shall learn that deliverance from sin includes both forgiveness and cleansing." This is quite true. God not only pardons the penitent and believing soul, but through the Holy Spirit he purifies, quickens, and strengthens it. This work wrought within the moral nature of man is indispensable to his salvation, and the necessity of it cannot be too strongly stressed. This was precisely what our Lord meant when he said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." This birth of the Spirit is still the only gateway into the Kingdom.

The Outlook tells of a Baptist "Soul-Saving Station" in New York City which has displayed in a window in large letters the following statement: "JESUS WALKED 72 MILES TO BE BAPTIZED." It is strange that any denomination would thus parade our Lord's baptism as an incentive to people to be baptized, when his baptism is clearly shown in the Nineteenth Chapter of Acts not to have been Christian baptism. But this appeal is catchy and influences many persons. The fact is, a taking fallacy is sometimes more potent in commanding the support of those who have not been trained to think clearly than is the real truth.

In a sermon last Sunday we heard a gifted minister, in dwelling upon the point that, whether he recognizes it or not, every man is under obligation to serve God and humanity in this present life, throw out the suggestion that if he does not seek, as best he can, to pay this debt which his Creator has imposed upon him, he will owe it throughout all eternity. This is a most startling thought. A human being cannot really escape the responsibilities that spring out of his relations to his Maker and his fellow-creatures. He may evade them for a time, but he will have to reckon with them in the Judgment. The wise thing to do is faithfully to endeavor to discharge this indebtedness now.

WHY NOT TURN TO ACCOUNT THE LOCAL RESOURCES?

A few days ago one hundred and fifty preachers gathered in the Marble Collegiate Church in New York City to hear reports of Billy Sunday's work at other places with a view to awakening interest and confidence in the revival meeting which he is to hold in the Nation's great metropolis next April, May, and June. A number of clergymen made remarks telling of what they had seen take place under the ministry of the renowned evangelist and of what might be expected from his labors among them, when suddenly an unexpected development took place in the proceedings, which was thus described by The New York Tribune:

"But the climax of the meeting came with the conversion of the first trail-hitter. He was a spare old man, rather shabbily though neatly dressed, who rose in a pew, and in a weak, quavering voice, asked to he heard. 'No man needs to come to Christ more than I,' said he, 'and I'm afraid if I wait for Billy Sunday it will be too late. I have been a sinner, and now I seek the light, so I say, pray for me, gentlemen, pray for me!'"

"'Amen,' chorused the congregation of clergymen.

"As the church emptied itself a group of the latter gathered about the old man and knelt with him in prayer."

Is there not a lesson to he learned from this occurrence? We are inclined to think so. We have nothing to say depreciatory of Mr. Sunday, who seems to he a man sent from God and whose achievements as an ambassador of Christ are the most remarkable of this age. That preachers in the great wicked centers of population where evil seems to he unshakably entrenched should desire to bring this new Whitefield to the scene that the trailing banner of their Lord may be lifted out of the dust, is, we think, entirely natural and proper; but there is but one Billy Sunday, and, since he gives two or three months to a meeting, he can reach but a few places. The thought awakened in our mind by the New York incident is that the pastors in our towns and cities may make a great mistake by putting too low an estimate upon what they themselves and the Christian members of their congregations might accomplish for the Master if they would set themselves to the task earnestly and with an expectant faith. The Holy Spirit is at work in human hearts everywhere and there is scarcely any community in which there is not some grain ripe for the harvest. What is needed is for some one faithfully to thrust in the sickle and garner it for our glorious Lord. Though a man may have no great gifts, if he will lay himself out unsparingly in this work, enlisting such assistance as can he had close about him, he may effect results that will make his own heart well-nigh burst with joy and set the angels to singing on high.

And, furthermore, there is peril in delay—the mature and precious grain may he lost by waiting. There was something pathetic, and something which we think should have also been taken in the nature of a rebuke or warning, in the words that the old man uttered in the great church in New York: "I am afraid if I wait for Billy Sunday it will be too late."

The following, which we take from The Methodist Recorder (Pittsburgh) bears impressively upon the point that we are seeking to emphasize:

"Gipsy Smith was conducting an evangelistic campaign in Chicago. Each noon the Great Northern Theater was filled within seven minutes of the time the doors were opened. Each day the Gipsy evangelist was preceded by a Chicago preacher who took half the time. Men who had not been called evangelistic gave wonderful messages. Near the close of the week, after we had listened to the most stirring appeal we had yet heard, Gipsy Smith came forward holding a bundle of letters in his hands. 'These,' he said, 'are protests from some of you who think I ought to occupy all of this brief noon hour. Do you know why I have insisted on your own preachers dividing the time? First, because the Lord did not send me over here to commit suicide. Secondly, and chiefly, I wanted you to know that if you will support your own preacher as loyally and as enthusiastically as you do me, and as you have just supported this man, you will not have to send to England for a Gipsy to preach the gospel.'"

A prevailing feeling of spiritual impotency upon the part of a pastor and his congregation is a state of things much to be feared and dreaded. And, like some cases of physical paralysis, it is in many instances due to a mere hallucination, for which his Satanic Majesty may be responsible. "We are able to go up and possess it," was the spirit that gave the Promised Land to the Israellites. And such is the only spirit which can bring success to Christian workers in this day. The faith that dares to try, with an expectancy of results, is an antecedent prerequisite to noteworthy triumphs in setting up the Kingdom of Christ anywhere and everywhere.

GREATER THINGS MAY BE IN STORE.

What God may have in store for humanity even in this present life none can tell. Look at what marvelous forces have been harnessed and brought into the service of man within the last half-century. This is a very different world from what it was a hundred years ago, and nature may still have stored up in her secret places, waiting to be discovered and utilized, agencies far more wonderful than any that have yet been brought into requisition. This has been called "the age of splendor," and such it surely is compared with the eras of the past; but if the earth shall continue to exist, its glories may pale into insignificance alongside what will be developed in the coming decades. The human race is making dazzling progress along scientific and industrial lines; its danger-point seems to he as to the security of the moral foundations of the social order. If these can he preserved intact, the future seems to be luminous with promise.

We can never heal the needs we do not feel. Tearless hearts can never he the heralds of the Passion. We must pity if we would redeem. We must bleed if we would he ministers of the saving blood.—Jowett.

A COMFORTING REFLECTION.

It is sweet to know,
When we are tired, and when the hand of pain
Lies on our hearts, and when we look in vain
For human comfort, that the Heart Divine
Still understands these cares of yours and mine.
—British Weekly.

HE IS ALL-SUFFICIENT.

He is more than the delivering God; he is the keeping and sustaining God. He is not simply the God of the great crisis, he is the God of every day. He will provide for the journey. He will keep our feet from falling. He will impart strength according to the day. Here is the antidote for all anxiety and fear.—J. D. Jones.

ENRICHING OUR SABBATHS.

We can enrich our Sabbaths by preparing for them the day before. It is astonishing how many mental tasks are left till Sabbath morning. Some people are so busy Sabbath morning that they cannot get to church service on time. The best rule for Sabbath enrichment is "to be in the Spirit on the Lord's Day;" to do nothing that could have been done the day before, and to enrich the spiritual life by Christian service and thought.—A. J. S., in The Presbyterian.

THE CURSE OF IDLENESS.

"My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." And I work! Say that, too. If you destroy the sequence, life loses heart and joy and meaning and value. Swing into line with the eternal energy, be a force among forces, a toiler, a producer, a factor, and life never loses its tone and flavor, its bead or glamour. There is no real taste to bread nor bliss in sleep for the idler. He is the doubter, the skeptic, the unhappy man. His idleness proclaims him diseased and decaying.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

BUILDING UP THE CHURCH.

How is it to be done? The preacher can help hy his faithful preaching; the class-leader can help by his intelligent and sympatbetic leadership; the Sunday school officers and teachers can do mucb by tbeir careful study of the Bible and their equally careful study of the Sunday school scholars; and the average church member can do not a little by his honest and earnest living; but the chief agent in the work is ever the Holy Spirit, and tbe rapldity and permanence of tbe work depends upon the extent to which the pastor and people allow the Spirit of God the right of way in beart and life. Human effort is absolutely essential; but more, much more, depends upon the Spirit of God. The Church grows best when men are willing to let God work through tbem, and the Spirit of God never fails to use every avenue which humanity may open to Him.—Christian Guardian.

THE SECRET OF IT.

Let it be remembered that we have a responsibility to others. Some years ago on the Irish sea a terrible storm was raging. It was known that just off the coast a vessel was going to pieces. Suddenly two men, an old sea captain and his son, put out through the storm. Everybody tried to persuade them not to do so, for it seemed to be absolutely useless. Over tbe waves, which appeared almost mountain high, they pushed along, until at last, amid tbe cheers of the waiting throng, they returned with their little boat filled with those who had been all but lost upon the ship. When the minister said to the old sea captain, "Why do you do thls? Why take such a risk?" he answered, "I have been there myself, and I know the danger." It is because we have been once in sin and now are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ that we may say something to those who are about us.—Dr. Chapman.

NOMINAL CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

We mean by this that class all too large among us who have tbeir names enrolled on the Church register, but who live as though it were not there. This type of Churcb membership is the bane of our Churcb life to-day. It may be that this has been true of every age, and certainly in every community where the general sentiment considers it the proper thing to belong to the Churcb this practice will in some measure prevail; but the extent of this practice in present-day Church life calls for serious consideration.

There are a number of causes that have conspired to bring about this condition. One of these is tbe absence of outspoken and pronounced opposition to Christianity. Tbis does not mean that the world has become a friend to vital religion, but it is a popular thing to be a member of the Church. As a result of this it frequently happens that those who simply drift witb the tide are swept into the Churcb, but continue to live the life of conformity to the world. And then sensational metbods of evangelism have helped to swell the ranks of this class. These evangelists create an atmosphere of levity and lightness, and in that atmosphere the obligation to accept Christ is so presented that the outward step is often taken without any serious conviction for past sin, and without any serious purpose to live a changed life.

It is not surprising that people who are thus floated into the Church should also float witb tbe other crowd when they are thrown with it. And the pressure to carry them the other way will surely come. The heart of the world is no more the friend of Christ now than it was when the opposition to Him manifested itself in more violent forms. No life is exempt from tbe testing processes. Whatever sort of foundation the house may be built upon, the rains will descend, the floods will come, and the winds will blow and beat upon it. This is a part of the discipline of life, and it always discovers the difference between the merely nominal Christian and the man whose heart is with Him—between tbose who simply say, Lord, Lord, and those who do tbe things which He commands.

But there are perils in merely nominal Church membership. Not only will it fail to give one an entrance into the kingdom of beaven, but the tendency of the thing is to keep him out. It hardens the conscience. It is a perilous thing to character to assume a solemn obligation with no serious purpose of keeping it. It is entirely true that the Church does not create obligations. It makes no quality of conduct wrong that was previously right and we owe no more to God, or to our fellow-man, after we join the Church than we did before. The solemn vows which the Church administers to its applicants for membership are vows that are inherent in our relations to God and to one another. They are upon us whether we recognize them or not; but the solemn promise to abide by them made without a very serious purpose to keep that promise cannot do otherwise than harden the conscience and make it more difficult for the appeal of truth to reach us.

And then the merely nominal church member has hedged himself against the usual agencies that seek to bring him to Christ. Since his profession puts him among Christian people, it is almost like charging him with falsehood to approach him personally upon the subject of religion. It is true that frequent appeals are made to backsliders, and men who recognize the situation of the Church to-day, do not hesitate, and properly do not hestitate, to wipe out the distinction between church members and those who are not in inviting men to Christ. Yet there is in the individual himself the consciousness that he is a church member, and this creates the feeling that for him to respond is in some measure to repudiate his standing as a member of the Church. All these things serve to make his position a perilous one, and emphasizes the call to genulneness in our professions of faith in Christ.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

THE UNIFICATION OF METHODISM.

By Rev. J. W. Boswell, D.D.

I do not understand that the General Conference of 1914 committed our Church either to organic union or to unification. It adopted a plan of unification to be submitted to a Joint Commission of fifty men—twenty-five from our Church and twenty-five from the Methodist Episcopal Church. That Commission will have before it the matter of "unification by reorganization," will work out tbe details of the plan, and submit the result of their labors to tbe respective General Conferences, which in turn, if the work of the Commission is indorsed, will submit it to the Annual Conferences. But all this does not commit either branch of the Church to the plan before us or to any other plan that may be adopted. Our General Conference has no authority to commit the Church to any plan tbat would disrupt it, or tie it in any way to another body. A General Conference with supreme legislative, judicial and executive functions might do a thing of that sort, but not ours.

As one of the many interested Methodists, I am willing to accept tbe plan of our Oklahoma General Conference, including the recommendations respecting the colored membership, and the limitations placed on the General Conference, which are the leading issues involved. Or, I may vote for some other plan of unification (not organic union), if it includes no radical changes. In committing myself, I make two reservations: I shall vote for nothing that will shade the honor of Southern Methodism, or that casts reflections on the intelligence and conduct of our fathers, no matter how much my brethren may deplore the bringing to light so-called dead issues. Nor will I vote to eliminate tbe only word in our name that designates our polity as Methodists. I cannot surrender the term "Episcopal" and consent to the abbreviated name, "Methodist Church." To do so would be to concede the last demand of the radicals in 1828. We have already conceded lay representation, the principal thing for which tbey contended—the refusal to grant which resulted in the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church. We can grant no further concessions in that direction. Besides, to eliminate the term "Episcopal" would be to take the first step, so far as Southern Methodists are concerned, to undermine our Third Restrictive Rule, which forbids the General Conference to "change or alter any part or rule of our government, so as to do away Episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency." Our Northern brethren have gone very far in that direction by authorizing "Missionary Bishops" who are not "General Superintendents," and also by assigning their Bishops to Episcopal districts. Under the restrictive rule the General Conference is without authority to assign Bisbops. The Episcopacy does the assigning.

The way before us is not very smooth. There are too many conflicting opinions. And not a few are opposed to the whole scheme. Some ardent friends of it are disposed to be discouraged; among these is Dr. Wallace, editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate. In a recent issue of his paper occur the following words: "The action of our General Conference at Saratoga Springs, so far from being hailed by Southern Methodists as an earnest of approaching oneness and a far-reaching step in that direction, has provoked a controversy which has cast a sombre cloud over the whole movement." Tho controversy is a very natural thing, and Dr. Wallace could not reasonably have expected anything else. The Saratoga General Conference adopted the report of its Committee of Sixty, which incorporated at least two recommendations, the very opposite of the recommendations adopted by our General Conference at Oklahoma City. There was real ground for controversy. Dr. Wallace was more than ordinarily optimistic if he supposed that Southern Methodists would accept tbe Saratoga suggestions as substitutes for those proposed by their own

General Conference. Consider the proposals of the two bodies:

The General Conference of our Church recommended that the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church be organized into a separate and independent jurisdiction. The proposition, it is admitted, is a radical one. It contemplates the elimination of a large per cent—something near one-sixth—of their membership. In making this proposition there was in mind the action of our General Conference in setting apart our colored membership under the name of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, an action that has resulted in no harm to this good day. The Saratoga action proposes to organize the colored membership into one of the Jurisdictional or Quadrennial Conferences. This is a slight concession, but it does not wipe out the color line. It rather blends the colors. It would give us a proportionate number of colored delegates in the General Conference, which in the future, as in the past, would be composed of both men and women. Our people in the South are not ready to sit in the General Conference and have laws made for them by a mixed element of that character. This is what Dr. Wallace of the Pittsburgh Advocate would call a "root difficulty."

All this suggests prejudice, but it is not prejudice born of hate. The Southern white man does not hate the negro, but he feels that he belongs to a superior race and has no idea of placing himself on an equal footing with negroes in any law-making body, especially in a body that would have power to send a colored General Superintendent to preside over a Conference of Southern white men.

The Saratoga recommendation concerning the functions of the General Conference is another "root difficulty." That recommendation is, "that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive and judicial body of the Church under constitutional provisions and restrictions." The recommendation of our General Conference is that none of the Conferences, Quadrennial or General, be the judge of the constitutionality of its own actions. This recommendation is in keeping with the polity and practice of our Church, while the Saratoga recommendation is in keeping with the polity and practice of the Northern Church. The dominant party in the General Conference of 1844 asserted this view. This was the real cause of the division of the Church.

It is easy to see the difference between the two propositions. The Southern proposition would have some other body than the legislative determine the constitutionality of its acts. The Saratoga proposition would allow the General Conference to enact legislation, and then, if the legislation is called in question, would allow the same men and women to sit in judgment on its constitutionality. A fine court that would be! To adopt the recommendation would place the reunified Church precisely where the original body was in 1844, the North still in the majority, and with the added strength of its colored membership. And, should one of the Bishops, North or South, unfortunately incur the displeasure of any section of the Church, whether guilty of a crime or not, a majority of the General Conference would suffice to suspend or depose him from the Episcopacy. More than that: with supreme executive and judicial authority it could expel him from the Church.

The two propositions afford no ground for compromise. The two cannot be blended. The South does not expect our Northern brethren to surrender unconditionally, though it seems to me that nothing is easier or wiser than to make the Bishops, not one, but the whole number, the challenging body, and either abide their judgment or send the challenged legislation down to the Annual Conference for final adjudication. Nor can the North with good grace ask us to abandon that which was accepted as a fact at the organization of the Church in 1784, and which has been held by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, through all the years of its existence, viz.: that our Episcopacy is not a creation of the General Conference, but a co-ordinate branch of the Church. But, while the two recommendations are irreconcilable, it may be that the Joint Commission will be able to devise a way out of the difficulty that will prove satisfactory. If so, there will be rejoicing in Israel.

In the meantime there will be controversy. So be it. Some may deplore it—nobody can stop it. Nor can any one stop the appeal to history. It is part of the life of both Churches. Appeal to it is demanded by the very nature of the case. Both the Oklahoma and Saratoga recommendations respecting the General Conference naturally revive the principal issue of 1844, and it will have to be settled. Every proposition for fraternity, union, federation, or unification was founded on the fact that there were differences to be settled. How the differences now before us are to be settled without appeal to the past we leave for others to say. There is such a thing as a weaker body putting a halter around its neck and saying to a stronger: "Here's your mule;" but the Church, South, is not ready for making such a humiliating concession.

A WHIRLWIND EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

Grenada College Commissioner Makes 600 Miles in a Ford Car and Raises Thousands for the School.

On Saturday, Sept. 30, the Commissioner, in a Ford car, carrying a well-packed suitcase, left Grenada, pausing at the river bridge until Brother Will Hill could finish placing the floor, when he pushed on for Scobey until he found a fellow-autoist, like certain noted New Testament women, without oil in the vessel; so he halted to give him gasoline. The journey was resumed, only to have a rare ride down a long hill, when the brake could not work on account of a split board in the car floor. The steering wheel, however, worked well, and it required less gasoline to go up the next hill. A fine ride brought the college man into Charleston, where a small boy got before the car and a large auto behind it, so that between the two there was some quick acting, and the boy escaped, while the cars only bumped. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Mounger, was still laughing when last seen.

Five hours later the Ford was cooling at Coahoma, having made Tippo, Strathmore, Swan Lake, Webb, Sumner, Tutwiler, Dublin, Mattson, Clarksdale, and Lyon, with stops for greetings. Sunday was spent at Lyon and Bobo, where the college cause was presented, and nice contributions were made by the good people.

On the way to Bobo our road gave out, so the Ford took to a bayou, and, coming out at a cabin, reached a by-way and later crossed a high railroad dump into a good road, which soon put us at a fine dinner in the home of Brother Humphreys. Here, after preaching, the College was represented. On the way back we took up the elder, Rev. H. S. Spragins, who is a fine preacher and very popular over his district. He also makes speeches for the College.

A day at Friar's Point gave a splendid chance to share a liberal hospitality at the hands of Rev. J. R. Bright and call at the homes of some of his Delta planters. I am going back there to get some large contributions soon. A day at Clarksdale was pleasantly spent with Rev. R. O. Brown and his delightful family. Here several gentlemen assured us of help soon. They are building a fine church, but they want to help educate our Methodist girls, too. Touching at Cottondale and Doddsville, we got ready help from Mr. G. H. Kirkland and Dr. J. E. Coleman. The Sunday morning was given to Ruleville, where Eugene Stancill, A. L. Marshall, W. F. Wilson and others responded in liberal amounts. At night we worshiped at Shelby, talked for the College, and had fine responses. Here was developed a plan which, if followed out, will make Grenada College a great institution in a short while. Here it is: Mr. H. L. Wilkerson, a good Methodist, thoughtfully considered the movement to improve the College. His pastor talked to him about it and secured a promise to help. The gentleman discussed it with his wife, made up his mind, and gave us $1000, paying one-fourth cash. Now, when all the pastors take an interest and work like Campbell, it will not be long until our people will give, because they want to, and commissioners will lose their jobs. God speed the day!

At Shipman's Chapel, Cleveland, Shelby, and Rosedale, there were added to the elder and commissioner, Gladney and Dietrich, and these days were rich, indeed, in spiritual fellowship and fine work for the Kingdom. They talked Sunday school, and I talked College and took collections. A night service at Duncan was good in that Brother Gladney gave us a fine address, and I got a liberal donation from Mrs. L. E. Alford.

Brother Campbell is very proud of his wife's accomplishments, and took pleasure in exhibiting to Mr. Dietrich a piece of drawn work which he always carries on the top of his head.

Our return soon to Cleveland and Rosedale will add hundreds to our funds. A short canvass around Schlater brought us to Minter City and Philipp's, where we worshiped Sunday with Rev. A. A. Martin and his noble people, who are treating him royally. Here the College was treated liberally. Mr. W. H. Dix, only a few years a resident, but a fine Christian gentleman, made a liberal contribution. On Monday my Ford took water and gasoline and ran nicely into Grenada for dinner, having never broken down nor even having had a puncture in the 17 days.

Only $12,000 more is needed to complete our $50,000, and 120 persons giving $100 each will complete it. Let every pastor seek for one or two, and let all of our well-to-do laymen divide their tithe with Grenada College, as does Brother E. M. Fant of Coahoma, and we will have finished our canvass by the time we meet in Annual Conference at Winona. Who will be one to give $100 cash, or in four yearly payments? Send in your name quickly. Who will divide his tithe and give for our girls $1000 or $500?

Doctor, everywhere I go in the Greenville District, the folks say they love you. I think you should come up and spend a week with me visiting them in my Ford and helping me to finish up this twelve thousand. BEN P. JACO

CHURCH EXTENSION IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brethren: It would be useless for me to take time to tell you what Church Extension has done in our Conference. This is known by all of us. I am writing to ask you not to forget this important claim among your people, especially this year. The demands upon your Board will be heavy, and many of them will be urgent; and we are anxious to do what we can for all of them. The full assessment would greatly relieve the needy churches and would be an inspiration to this great cause in our Conference. Let the churches we have helped come to our rescue. This part of our church work needs no argument in its behalf, except to show what it has done and its great promise for the future.

There will be a mass-meeting in the interest of Church Extension during the session of the Annual Conference at Winona, on Saturday evening at 8 p. m. We are expecting Dr. W. F. McMurry, our General Secretary, to be at this meeting, and he will bring us a helpful and cheering message concerning Church Extension. He is as full of it as any man ever was on any subject. Don't fail to hear him.

Drew, Miss. W. S. LAGRONE.

A contemporary says: "An anonymous Frenchman has offered a $10,000 prize for a mechanical apparatus that will supply the place of a missing human hand." That will be a difficult thing to do. The human hand is a marvelous instrument. It is, in fact, one of the signatures of man's greatness.

Dr. Horace T. Burrows, of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, claims to have discovered the germ of infantile paralysis. He holds that this germ exists only in the colon, and that the disease is spread by some uncooked food or drink —most likely in the case of infants by milk or water.

One thing has become increasingly evident as the pending political contest for the Presidency of the United States has gone on, and that is, that the peace sentiment of the Nation is very strong. Both of the leading candidates seem to be fully cognizant of this fact, and are shaping their utterances accordingly.

At present the United States is stated to be the greatest creditor nation in the world, but as its great lead in this respect is due largely to war conditions, things will likely even up when the cannons have ceased to roar in Europe. As it is now, the balance of trade with tropical countries is against us, our imports from them during the last fiscal year amounting to about a billion dollars, while our exports to them were valued at approximately half that amount.

The press dispatches say that Mr. J. P. Morgan and Mr. H. P. Davidson will lead in floating another loan to Great Britain of $250,000,000. Counting the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan as a British obligation, which it really was, this new loan will bring the amount loaned England since the outbreak of the great war to a round billion dollars. Besides this, Canada has borrowed more than $250,000,000 from our country. In this day to go to war seems to mean to go in debt.

Governor Pleasant is visiting parish fairs and making addresses in behalf of the proposed amendment to the Louisiana Constitution which provides for creating a State Board of Affairs. Some of the constitutional amendments to be voted on in November deal with matters of much importance and should have careful consideration at the hands of the people of the commonwealth. The one designed to make it possible for women to serve on the boards of public institutions ought, we think, by all means to be adopted.

East St. Louis reports the sale of 225,000 war horses since the raging European conflict began, which brought the sum of $40,000,000. About 7000 mules have been sold for a total of $995,000. The Italian government has recently made a contract for 3000 horses, to be filled within 30 days. The British, French, and Belgian buyers in the United States are taking 2000 horses a week. From the foregoing, it would seem that motor vehicles, while they are playing a large part in the great war, have not by any means set the war steed aside.

A State-wide prohibition mass-meeting was held at Jackson, Miss., on the night of October 17, with a view to starting a movement to uphold the present prohibition law of Mississippi in the approaching referendum election. Among the speakers of the occasion were Miss Anna Gordon, of Evanston, Ill., President of the National W. C. T. U.; Senator J. K. Vardaman, Governor Bilbo, and Congressman Collier. Senator Vardaman declared himself against the present Mississippi referendum law, which we were pleased to see—especially so, since that measure allows so small a percentage of the voters to bring on an election. Much enthusiasm was manifested at the gathering.

AN ADDRESS TO MISSISSIPPIANS.

(The statement given below has been issued by the Citizens' Prohibition Committee of the Magnolia State, which was created at the recent mass-meeting held in Jackson. It is to be hoped that it will be generally read and that it will arouse the citizenship of that commonwealth to immediate and aggressive action.—Editor of Advocate.)

"To the People of Mississippi:

"By petition of 6850 voters out of 160,000 voters, the two prohibition laws enacted at the last session of the Legislature must undergo the test of an election. The cost of getting signatures to these petitions was borne largely by the whiskey houses of Memphis. We resent the act of outsiders precipitating a contest on these measures, which are so beneficient in their purpose and so helpful in their accomplishments. The attempt to repeal these laws is deserving of the most severe condemnation, and should meet with the most determined resistance.

We regard it as the highest and most sacred duty to maintain intact our present carefully prepared and highly efficient laws on the subject of temperance, and to that end we earnestly call upon all good citizens without regard to creed, faction or political alignment, to oppose their repeal, not only by going to the polls and voting against the change, but by using every proper influence to secure the votes of others, to the end that what we regard as a harmful and iniquitous movement may be defeated by the most overwhelming majority.

"We regard apathy and indifference and the possible failure to go to the polls and vote as the most serious danger which confronts the people, and therefore we recommend that local organizations throughout the State shall be had to the end that the greatest publicity shall be given of the danger which confronts the people and the necessity for arousing them to prompt and determined action in this crisis.

"To those who place home, and boys and girls above money, we appeal to work incessantly from now until the polls are closed, to prevent the repeal of these laws. Mississippi must go forward morally, and not backward. Vote for these two bills.

"CITIZENS' PROHIBITION COMMITTEE."

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT NOTES.

Dear Brother Meek: As the interesting and fertile scribe of the Hill City has been silent, while some things in the upper part of our district have been happening, this writer will make a brief report.

At the first quarterly conference of the fourth round, held at Silver City, where Brother Foreman is the faithful and appreciated pastor, the work as a whole reported salaries up to date, while the churches at Holly Bluff and Louise had paid up for the full year, thus doing honor to themselves, and setting a worthy example which I trust others may follow.

At Mayersville, which came next in order, the pastor was hard at work holding revivals and trying to raise the Conference collections. Hopper has always been a worker, and puts conscience and heart into his work. He was being assisted in a meeting by Brother W. T. Griffin, which promised to be a real revival. Griffin is well known and equally well loved in the Delta portion of our Conference. While the salaries are not up at Mayersville, we are hoping that between now and the Annual Conference the stewards will bring things to pass.

At Oak Ridge, the place of our last meeting, things looked hopeful despite the almost failure of crops. A full quarter's salary was in hand, and Bradley's Chapel reported as having paid up for the year. While the benevolences are behind, the pastor and some of the laymen are interested in bringing up a full report. The charge is also raising money to buy a Ford for the use of its pastor, and the car has already been ordered. It seems to be the universal desire that Brother Wells be returned to the charge for the next year, and it is the opinion of the presiding elder that he ought to have at least the first year's use of that new car.

While at Oak Ridge it was my privilege to visit the widow of our brother, Rev. F. M. Williams, who resides there with her daughter, Mrs. S. P. Grant. Sister Williams is now 85 years old, and, though abounding in delightful memories of the past beyond the recollection of most persons, she yet takes a lively interest in the present. Her health is good for one of her age, but she was not able to attend the services of the church. She is a remarkable woman.

While passing, I called on both Brothers Roberts and Chapman. I found Chapman's little girl very sick from what proved to be appendicitis. She was carried to Vicksburg the next day for an operation, from which I learn she is recovering. The hope is that after this her health may be better than it has ever been, as she has never been strong.

Roberts, with the help of the Lewis Brothers, the quartette of the Conference, was holding a meeting, which was just closing. It resulted in about 35 accessions to the Church, and in a general quickening of the spiritual life among the membership. Roberts is now encouraged to attempt the raising of the church debt, by which the congregation at Gibson Memorial has been handicapped. He will need some help from the outside, and ought to have it. Any who are able to help him, can hardly assist in a more worthy church enterprise, nor cheer a more diligent and faithful worker.

I did not get to see Brother Holloman, as both he and his good wife were absent from the city visiting a very sick daughter, whose life I trust may be spared and her health soon be restored.

CONCERNING "WORK DAY."

Dear Brother Meek: The returns from Work Day are coming in by every mail and we are very much encouraged with the results. However, comparatively few have responded as yet. Will you please let me call the attention of the pastors, superintendents, and individuals, throughout the State to the fact that it is not too late yet to observe Work Day, and urge them all to see that each community is given an opportunity to do so and send the proceeds to the Methodist Orphanage, and thus help to clothe, feed, educate, and train the 225 children committed to our care?

Thanking you for many past kindnesses and for space in your valuable paper, I am

CHURCH EXTENSION FACTS IN A NUTSHELL.

Gathered from the Church Extension Hand Book, the Discipline, and from Personal Correspondence with the Corresponding Secretary

By Rev. H. H. Smith, of the Virginia Conference.

I. What is the Board of Church Extension?

"The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized for the purpose of providing in part the means for the building of churches and parsonages in eligible and needy localities where the people are not able to build for themselves." The Board consists of a President, Vice President, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer, and twenty Managers elected quadrenially by the General Conference. The Bishops and the Secretary of the Board of Missions are ex-officio members of the Board.

II. What has it accomplished in the past?

From its organization, in 1882, to March, 1916, this Board has loaned to churches and parsonages $1,760,801.50; donated to churches and parsonages $3,212,993.34; making a total investment in churches and parsonages of $4,973,794.84.

It has aided in the building of 9488 churches, and 2532 parsonages. The churches and parsonages aided represent 53 Conferences and 31 States. The largest number of churches aided in any one State was that of Texas, where 1364 churches and 544 parsonages received help from this Board. Georgia comes second with 868 churches and 172 parsonages aided. Appropriations were also made to our work in seven foreign countries, giving aid to 145 churches in our mission fields.

III. What are the needs of the Board for the future?

At the annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension in 1916 there were applications for donations for churches and parsonages amounting to $205,784.78; and the Board felt it necessary to carry over unpaid grants from the preceding year amounting to $53,114.96, which makes a total of $258,899.74 needed in donations. Of this amount the Board was able to grant only $132,509.25, a little more than one-half.

The amount asked for in loans for churches and parsonages at this meeting was $278,418.60. The amount carried over, unpaid grants, amounted to $35,750, or a total need in loan money of $314,168.60. Of this amount the Board could grant only $127,750, less than one-half. These figures will give some idea of the needs of the Board. It means that the Board could more than double its usefulness if it had the funds. There are 2470 congregations in Southern Methodism without houses of worship, and 1124 preachers without parsonages. The assessment for Church Extension in 1916 for the whole Church was $300,000, or only about fifteen cents per member.

There is great need for an immediate increase in the Loan Fund Capital. "Through the constant accumulation of interest and added contributions to the capital, these Loan Funds are ever increasing. By a process of evolution, they carry their benefits to churches that need assistance, returning with added power, to go forth again with larger benefits. The funds themselves remain unexhausted and imperishable. Whatever may be said of other investments, here, by every token, money becomes a moral force and immortal. It works forever for God and for humanity."

The following figures will show how important is the work of the Loan Fund: For the year ending March 31, 1916, the amount received on Loan Funds was, in round numbers, $118,000; annual interest earned, less annuities, etc., $14,900; increase of Loan Fund capital during the year $133,000; Loan Fund capital at the close of the year $804,000.

The Board of Church Extension is prepared to pay annuities on loans made by persons who are unable to get along without the income from their property. By this means a person "administers upon his own estate, and has the satisfaction of seeing the results of his own investments."

A very popular form of investment with the Board of Church Extension is the Memorial Loan Fund. The donor establishes this fund in the name of those whose memory it is desired to honor and perpetuate. "These Memorial Loan Funds become in a peculiar sense living monuments, more lasting than brass or granite, more precious than gold or silver. Unlike all other monuments, they are imperishable, everlasting, going forth to help and bless mankind in the highest possible sense. No man of wealth can do a nobler thing, or use his substance to better purpose, or honor those dear to him in a more effective way, than to establish such a Loan Fund in memory of a loved one." To those who have not investigated the matter, it seems impossible that a Loan Fund should be able to accomplish so much good. Take for instance a Loan Fund of $2,500. A fund of this amount will assist ten churches to the amount of $7000 in five years, and at the same time the working capital of the Loan Fund is increased to the amount of $3000. To make possible the building of ten churches! Who would not covet such a privilege?

No one can imagine the possibilities of good growing out of the erection of even the most humble church building. The Christian Observer published the following interesting incident: "In 1835 the American Sunday School Union organized a Sunday school in the mountains of Kentucky. From this little school in the backwoods there have gone out seven ministers of the Gospel, one missionary of the American Sunday School Union, one candidate for Vice President of the United States, one Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky, seventy-two school teachers, thirteen merchants, ten lawyers, thirteen practicing physicians. In their youth, 200 scholars of this school united with the Church, and no person connected with this Sunday school has ever been convicted of any crime. Some who received their moral training here now occupy important positions in other States—in colleges, in banks, and as successful business men."

The New York Christian Advocate stated in a recent issue that there is a little Wesleyan Church in a village in England which has never had a membership of more than one hundred, and yet it has sent out into the Christian ministry fifteen men. Several became very prominent preachers, among them was Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

Let every man who has some of the Lord's money to dispose of ponder these significant facts; and let every pastor realize that as he raises funds for the Board of Church Extension he is helping very materially in the extension of the Kingdom of God.

SHUBUTA METHODISM PROSPERING.

The Lord has graciously blessed us this year, for which we are grateful. We had a great revival meeting in June with our own Conference Evangelist, Dan Kelly, assisting us. The membership was greatly revived, many were converted and 22 were added to the Church, 20 of them on profession of faith. For many years Shubuta has had no Epworth League, but after the meeting the need for one was so apparent that steps were taken to organize, or, rather, reorganize the League. A very fine League with a membership of about 35 was started and continues to do excellent service. We have some choice young people in our Church.

Last Sunday, Oct. 15, was a great day for Shubuta Methodism and the Kingdom. Our Sunday school rally day service was held Sunday morning. We had a record-breaking attendance and an interesting program. Enthusiastic interest was manifested. We greatly missed the presence of our beloved superintendent, Brother T. A. Ledyard, who was kept away on account of the extreme illness of his wife.

Sunday evening we had the most interesting service I have ever witnessed in Shubuta. The service was in charge of two railroad engineers, Brothers Gray and Delabar, loaned to us by Brother Broadfoot, of South Side, Meridian. The auditorium was crowded with Baptists, Methodists, and non-members, and all listened eagerly to the heart-burning messages of these earnest men of God. Charts were effectively used to illustrate their messages. The power of God was upon the congregation. The presence of another railroad man, Mr. Homer Jenkins, recently converted, and who was reared in Shubuta, added greatly to the good of the meeting. When the proposition was made for all who were determined to travel "Life's Railway to Heaven" and desired to know the Lord as these men knew Him to come forward, practically every one in the house came and grasped hands with these men who so often have gripped the throttles of their engines. It was a glorious scene, and many were the hearts made glad and encouraged. It is easier now to talk religion in Shubuta. We face the future with greater confidence. To God be all the glory. Praise His Holy Name! O. S. LEWIS, Pastor.

Shubuta, Miss.

REV. J. N. FLYNN DEAD.

Rev. J. W. Raper, our pastor at Houston, Miss., writes us as follows: "We buried Rev. J. N. Flynn a few days ago. A good and true man has passed from among us. He was ready to go and he died a triumphant death. He sustained a severe accident some time since in having one of his legs pierced by a pitchfork, which caused him to have to come to a hospital in Houston and have it amputated. This painful injury culminated in his regrettable death."

We are grieved to learn of the demise of this faithful and useful servant of the Master, and our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to the bereaved. May the Heavenly Father have them in his gracious keeping! We trust that some one will furnish the Advocate with a fitting memoir of the deceased.

BROTHER DAVIS AT HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: Rev. R. M. Davis, so well known and loved by Mississippi Methodism, is now at home in Byhalia, confined to his room—having lately returned from a Memphis hospital. Notwithstanding the fact that he is suffering physically, his spirits are on top, and he discusses current subjects as if he were well. He accepts his afflictions, although severe, with resignation, and trusts in Christ for spiritual blessings each day. Hence he meets one with a smile and a hearty handshake and puts his soul into conversation. It is a great pleasure to me to visit him and listen to his wise utterances. The church and Sunday school greatly miss this soldier of the Cross, for, when able to walk, he was always in place at these meetings.

Byhalia, Miss. MARCUS D. HERRING.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during Augnst, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Church News

Rev. J. M. Culbreth has been transferred from the North Carolina to the St. Louis Conference and stationed at University Church, St. Louis.

It is stated that Drs. Alexander White, George Adam Smith, James Stalker, and F. B. Meyer have all lost sons in the present terrible war in Europe.

Bishop Morrison has recently been spending some time within the bounds of the West Oklahoma Conference, which is under his episcopal supervision.

Bishop W. A. Candler was a visitor to the recent session of the Tennessee Conference at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., where he ably represented Emory University.

According to Dr. Thomas N. Potts, Missionary Secretary of the Virginia Conference, of 833 Sunday schools in that Conference, 800 are carrying missionary specials.

There are said to be already "75,000 volumes in the main library and departmental libraries of Emory University." And the several collections are steadily growing.

Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, of Tennessee, was chosen Chairman of the House of Bishops at the late Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, held in St. Louis.

The Billy Sunday tabernacle in Boston is said to be about finished. It will be interesting to watch the work of this modern son of thunder in the cultured home of Unitarianism.

The Lutheran Churches of Sweden have sent a communication to the Lutheran bodies of the United States asking them to join in the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the Reformation, in 1917.

Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, the well known Southern Methodist layman, was born at Elliston (then called Big Springs), Montgomery County, Va. This is within the bounds of the Baltimore Conference.

Dr. James Cannon, Jr., attended the late session of the Holston Conference and delivered an address in the interest of the Anti-Saloon League work. Dr. Cannon claims that no State in the union has enacted better prohibition legislation than Virginia.

At a meeting held at Waco on October 4, the Board of Directors of the Texas Methodist Orphanage re-elected Rev. R. A. Burroughs Manager of that institution. Brother Burroughs seems to be meeting the responsibilities of this important position with much acceptability.

Rev. S. Stephen McKenney, Field Agent for the Representative Southern Methodist Church at Washington City, reports encouragingly of the progress of his work. Brother McKenney has charge of a most important cause—one which should appeal strongly to our people.

The Bluefield District of the Holston Conference paid this year for foreign missions on an assessment of $1412, the sum of $1502, and on assessment of $890 for home missions, $1200 was paid. It was the banner district, though some of the other districts paid the assessments in full.

We are indebted to the Baltimore Southern Methodist for the following note of interest: "The Commission on Unification, composed of 25 Commissioners from each Episcopal Methodism, will meet in Baltimore, Md., on December 28. The opening sermon will be preached in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, and the business sessions will be held in our Trinity Church. Bishop A. W. Wilson has been asked to preach the opening sermon."

Judging by the service which he has been rendering and the vigor of the utterances which have emanated from him of late, Bishop A. W. Wilson yet lacks a great deal of being a worn-out man. There is not a more majectic minister and leader in Southern Methodism than is this great son of the State of Maryland. The Church, South, is most fortunate in having him on its Unification Commission, and we pray that he may be spared to see the end of the labors of that body.

THE BEAUTY AND VALUE OF LAW.

(We give below the mesage which Bishop A. W. Wilson sent to Bishop Candler on the occasion of the opening of the L. Q. C. Lamar Law School of Emory University. Having himself studied law before his entrance into the Christian ministry, these words of Bishop Wilson are entitled to all the more weight.—Editor of Advocate.)

I congratulate you upon the Law School of the University. Saturated as I hope and believe our great Methodist institution will be with the spirit of our gospel, no department will be of more value to the Church and the world. I would that not only the students who have in view the practice of the profession, but all who matriculate in any department, might have the advantage of a course in this school. Rightly taught and understood, it conduces to clearness of thought, intenseness of mental effort and loftiness of purpose. Old Blackstone, who was in my day the beginner of the students' course, declared law to be the perfection of reason. But no one has more nobly expressed its true meaning and worth than the "Judicious Hooker" in that classic and most eloquent sentence: "Of law there can be no less acknowledged than that her seat is in the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; all things in heaven and earth do her homage, the very least as feeling her care, and the greatest as not exempted from her power, both angels and men and creatures of what condition soever, though each in a different sort and manner, yet all with uniform consent, admiring her as the mother of their peace and joy."

If I could have my way I would put every minister of our Church through a legal course.

A. W. WILSON.

CONCERNING THE UNION ISSUE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Since the 1st of July I have been very busy, but at times have had rest. In these times I have tried to read. I have read books and papers, the Church papers especially. I have, with more or less care, read all the articles I have seen for and against organic union. I have never believed in ghosts, but since my earliest childhood I have had a kind of fear of the dark, and still want light on every subject that I am forced to consider.

Many things have been said in the discussion that might have been left unsaid. That there is a lack of unanimity of sentiment among the writers on the subject, is easy of discovery. There are very few men who can see both sides of an object at the same time. Acting on this principle, "Lovie Mary" made the trousers for the little boy of two colors of cloth, for "the people couldn't see him coming and going at the same time." Carlisle is reputed to have said that "no two men agree in everything, unless one is a fool." Men have differed in all ages, and will differ. Good men can differ without harm to either, and I trust that all who are engaging in this controversy are good men. If so, out of the discussion will come great good to the Church.

Personally, I am not scared yet. Organic union is a long way off. It is impossible for any one to say how long. There will be ample opportunity to discuss the matter, from all angles, before the consummation. I was born at the close of the war, and have had opportunities to observe conditions in the Church, North and South. Some of my close kin are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church—they have grown up in the Church, North, and I in the Church, South. I am opposed to organic union, and have been since I was old enough to consider the subject. I believe the great majority of the membership of both Churches would be slow to advocate it. I have (and do now) believed in a positive federation—a federation that means a closer relationship between the two Churches. The Northern Methodists, coming into Southern territory, are not infrequently perfectly indifferent as to what Church they join, going as readily to the Presbyterians and Baptists as to the Southern Methodists. Some of their Church papers advise them not to form alliances with other churches, but to retain their loyalty to the Church, North. This explains why there are certain churches in Texas, Louisiana, and Florida. How can two walk together except they be agreed? You can no more unite the two Churches, unless there is unity of feeling, than you could mix oil and water.

The advocates of organic union quote the prayer of our Lord for his disciples. So have others, ministers claiming to be of THE Church—inviting us to come in with them, that thereby the prayer might be fulfilled. We are told of what a great influence the united body would have. It seems never to have impressed the brethren that numbers do not count much with the Lord. He tells us that one can put a thousand to flight, and two, ten thousand. Gideon, with his 300 faithful followers, made the mighty hosts of the enemy flee in utter defeat. We ought not to lose sight of the fact that "it is not by might, nor power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

I can understand how Methodism in the United States, eight million strong, could be infinitely weaker than one-third that number, consecrated to the service of God. Some one will ask, What virtue is there in staying separated? I answer, none, provided there can be a union of heart as well as head. The question, then, may be asked, What will you do if the matter is sent down to the Annual Conferences for a vote? Before answering the question, I would have to know definitely what I am to vote on. I can understand a plan that would get my affirmative vote quickly. But there is nothing before me now. There is a Commission appointed. When that Commission reports, it will be time for us to take another tack. The question may then come, What will you do if the Churches unite, and you do not favor the plan? I will go with the majority; I will stay by the old ship. I would not object to joining the good Bishop in the Salvation Army work, but I am afraid I would not be able to beat the tambourine or blow the horn successfully. The thing for us to do now is to leave the matter with the Commission, and put forth every effort to be faithful laborers in the vineyard.

GOOD ADVICE.

Vacation days are over,
It's time for school once more,
And troops of merry playmates
Return from farm or shore.
The sun has tanned your faces,
The breeze has blown your hair;
The big outdoors has filled you
With health and strength to dare.
So just attack your lessons
With all your might and main
And make your teachers happy
To see you back again!

—Christian Intelligencer.

WHY ARE YOU IN SCHOOL?

One day as the venerable Duke of Wellington passed the cricket fields of Eton, where the boys were engaged in spirited play, he exclaimed forcefully, "It was there that the battle of Waterloo was won!" The boys of a former generation who had struggled for athletic victories on those same fields had there been trained to respond to the commander's summons when in the full tide of real battle he had said, "Now, gentlemen, we'll see who'll pound longest."

Boys and girls go to school to train faculties that are to be of service in later life. School is not so much an end in itself as it is a preparation for what comes later. We attend classes and submit to instruction for a number of years and then comes commencement—the commencement that is of an active career, when school days are to be left behind.

The writer heard a boy telling how he passed a test in arithmetic. Through the help of a classmate and by sly peeps at the answers in the back of the book he "got by," as he said, and seemed very proud of his accomplishment.

But what possible good did that test do him? What employer is ever going to ask him whether he passed it or not? He had cheated the teacher—but far worse than that, he had miserably cheated himself.

In later years when all these school-boy expedients have been forgotten the only thing that will count is that discipline of mind and will that school is meant to give. The answers that one got for himself and not those he stole from another are the answers that are going to tell for success. The world demands, "What can you do?" and not, "Show me your diploma." Let us remember that we are in school to gain power and resource for life, and that if these precious, fleeting hours are wasted the heaviest loss comes on ourselves.—Comrade.

SOME BOYS' MISTAKES.

It is a mistake for a boy to think that a dashing, swaggering manner will commend him to others. The fact is, that the quiet, modest boy is much more in demand than the boy of the swaggering type. Modesty is as admirable a trait in a man as in a woman, and the wise boy will find it to his distinct advantage to be quiet and modest and gentlemanly in manner.

It is a mistake for a boy to put too high an estimate on his own wisdom. He will find it to be to his advantage to rely on the far greater wisdom of those much older than himself. And he will find it still more to his advantage to rely on God's Word for direction in all the affairs of life.

It is a mistake for a boy to feel at any time in all of the days of boyhood that it is not his duty to be respectful to his father and mother. The noblest men in the world have felt this to be their duty and it never has proven a handicap to anyone.

It is a mistake for a boy to feel that there is any better way of acquiring a dollar than by honestly earning it. The real "royal road to fortune" is by the road that requires honest toil and the giving of the very best one has to give in return for money received.

It is a mistake for a boy to feel that religion is something intended for women and girls, and that it is unmanly for him to go to Church and Sunday school. The world has never known better or manlier men than those who have been faithful attendants at both Church and Sunday school. Real piety is the foundation of all character, and the scoffer at religion is never respected by those whose respect is worth having.

It is a mistake for a boy to do anything "on the sly." The sly boy is sure to be found out, and when he has once lost the confidence of his friends it is extremely difficult for him to regain it. The wise boy will be "as honest as the day." Woe to him if he is not!—The American Boy.

HIS FAITHFUL HORSE.

One Sunday morning an aged man was leading an old horse across the commons of the city, and out toward the suburbs, when a passer-by asked him where he was going.

"I am looking for a little green grass and some fresh water for the old fellow here," he answered, stroking his companion gently on the neck.

"I would send him to the boneyard or the glue factory, if I were you," said the stranger with a sneer.

"Would you?" asked the old man in a trembling voice, "if he had been the best friend you had in the world, and had helped you to earn food for your family for nearly twenty-five years? If the children that are gone, and the children who are living, had played with their heads on him for a pillow, when they had no other? Sir, he has carried us to mill and to meeting, and please God he shall die like an honorable old horse, and I will bury him with these hands of mine, if he goes first. Nobody shall ever abuse old Bill, and if I go before him, there are those who are paid to care for him."

"I beg your pardon," said the man who had spoken first. "I cannot blame you for not wanting to part with the faithful old animal."

And the two who had toiled long years and grown old together resumed their journey.—Our Dumb Animals.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL.

"Watson, come here!" These were the first words ever heard over a telephone, and were spoken by Dr. Alexander Graham Bell to Mr. Watson, his secretary, in a near-by room. On February 14, 1887, Dr. Bell patented his telephone.

Dr. Bell's father was a teacher of the deaf and dumb, and it was through Dr. Bell's interest in these pupils that his mind was turned toward the telephone.

A few months ago Dr. Bell again spoke over the telephone to Mr. Watson, this time across the continent, and Dr. Bell used the same words, "Watson, come here!" to which Mr. Watson replied: "I can't if you are in a hurry, but if you can wait five or six days I will be there."

Dr. Bell rendered a great service to the world in giving us the telephone. It is now in such common use that we think of it as a necessity. Business arrangements and social conversations that were formerly impossible are now hourly occurrences. The telephone has brought the remote parts of our country together.—Everyland.

SOME GOOD RULES.

We have the wisest teacher, and she has given this rule
That helps us in our lessons—you can use it in your school:
Always add a smile or two when things are going wrong,
Subtract the frowns that try to come when lessons seem too long,
Then multiply your efforts when the figures won't come right,
Divide your pleasures day by day with every one in sight.
Now if you always use this rule you'll have a happy day,
For lessons then are easy, and the hours fly away.

CORNER-STONE LAID.

Dear Brother Meek: Thinking that it might be of interest to you to know of some of our recent happenings of interest, I am taking it upon myself to send in a line or two concerning the laying of the corner-stone of Massey Hall, on the campus of the Woman's College of Alabama. It was a great occasion, characterized by the usual ceremonies—a beautiful academic procession while the students sang a Latin ode, and a magnificent address by Bishop McCoy. Then followed the placing of the old corner-stone of the Alabama Conference Female College in a niche beside the front entrance, this ceremony being performed by Dr. John Massey, formerly president of that famous old institution, who placed within the old stone a copy of his "Reminiscences" and made a talk beautiful in sentiment and most fitting.

The new building will contain fifty-two bedrooms and will cost when furnished approximately $60,000. The student enrollment now numbers 298, a gain of thirty per cent over any previous year. Dr. M. W. Swartz, our President, as you see, is making a fine record. We are ready to place him second to none in our connection as a college president.

The Advocate reaches me regularly and is read with interest. Yours very truly,

AN UNBIBLICAL CHRISTIANITY.

This may sound like an absurdity; but there is undouhtedly a pretty extended effort to set up such a thing. One meets up with it very frequently in the theological literature of this time and occasionally in a sermon from the pulpit. Those engaged in bringing forth this evolvement perhaps will not like the designation that we have given it, but, in our opinion, it fits it most admirably.

The promoters of this new type of Christianity, if such it may be called, usually depreciate the Holy Scriptures, or at least whittle down their authority and claims to inspiration, while purporting to exalt Christ and lift him to a higher plane. If one believes in the incarnation, the resurrection, and the atonement (after some order), one has the essentials of the faith, and it does not matter very materially about other things. The other doctrines of revelation—the creation and fall of man, the miracles set forth in the Bible, the teachings of the Word as to sin, as to repentance, as to regeneration, as to the work of the Holy Spirit, as to the general resurrection, as to the judgment, as to future rewards and punishment, and as to the inspiration of the hooks of the Sacred Canon—may be adhered to or not without any very serious consequences.

This etherialized Christianity is made to appear very top-lofty and scholarly; but if it should come to prevail generally, that it would soon land in the ditch, we do not at all doubt. Christ cannot be prescnted to the world successfully apart from the Holy Scriptures. Of the Old Testament writings, he himself said, "They testify of me;" and even more is this true of the New Testament writings. If the Bible were impeached and discredited, we should soon be engaged in a terrific and doubtful hattle to show that such a character as Jesus of Nazareth ever lived. What then would become of the doctrines of his incarnation, his resurrection, and the atonement?

But would not the accompanying experiences of men furnish an adequate basis for these great truths? Nay, not so. It is not the function of a merely normal religious experience to evolve truth and formulate a theology. Men are liable to educe most anything out of their experiences, as is attested by many of our modern cults. God has given mankind a supernatural revelation of his will, which has been written down and preserved, because it was an absolute necessity, and doubtless if it were lost he would make another such disclosure of these great hasal facts which relate to our welfare and which are undiscoverable by the finite mind. Well may we beware of any system of teaching, no matter what a pious aspect it may wear, that would attach less importance to the written revelation of God.

Daniel Webster in one of his masterful speeches said: "I have not allowed myself, sir, to hang over the precipice of disunion to see whether with my short sight I cannot fathom the abyss below." The Great Expounder of the Constitution felt that that was a needless and idle task. So it is a poor business in this day for any one who claims to be a teacher of Christianity to waste his time and that of the audience whose attention he may command by speculating as to how much of the Christian faith as it is commonly accepted we may throw away and still have a passable residuum.

A NEW SUGGESTION AS TO THE CANALS ON MARS.

The following dispatch, which was sent out from Berkeley, Calif., on October 17, will douhtless be read with interest:

"Dr. Percival Lowell, for 22 years head of the Harvard Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., in an address at the University of California last night, announced as his most recent deduction from his study of the planet Mars that the so-called canals were not water channels, but strips of vegetation under human cultivation and undoubtedly watered by artificial canals. In support of this decision Dr. Lowell said he had determined that the smallest observable spot on Mars would be at least ten miles in diameter. Canals, therefore, could not be seen from the earth. Mars, he added, has four seasons much like ours, but longer.

"Dr. Lowell said it was absurd to assume that the earth was the only planet having intelligent inhabitants."

The study of the heavenly orbs above us is one of fascinating interest, though, except as to their size, weight, orhits, and in some instances their composition, we have as yet learned comparatively little about them. The theories of the astronomers as to various things in the outlying universe are almost constantly changing. It has not been long since the lamented Alfred Russel Wallace wrote a volume, "Man's Place in the Universe," in which he argues that the earth, according to all the intimations that have become known to scientists, is probably the only inhabited planet, and other men of distinction in the scientific world have backed up that view; yet as will be seen, Dr. Lowell pronounced this notion to be "absurd." It should be noted, however, that Mr. Wallace was speaking wholly as to the suggestions of science, based upon the data that it had been enabled to gather, while probahly Dr. Lowell, when he made his utterance, was viewing the matter from the standpoint of reason and common sense, starting from the postulate that the universe was created hy an intelligent Being. With this method of approaching the question, his conclusion seems to us to be inevitable. Many of the planets are vastly larger than the earth; and we cannot conceive what they are in existence for, if they are not homes and theaters for intelligent life and activities.

NOT ADAPTED TO THE NORTH.

A good deal has lately heen said about the importation of Negro laborers to Northern States. While temporarily such an exodus might work a hardship on the South, in the long run it might prove to be a good thing for this section, if it would distrihute the colored contingent of the Nation's population over the entire country. In the wake of such a development, there would likely soon he found flowing into the Southern States a desirable class of white immigrants, and the race problem, of which we have heard so much, might as a result become definitely settled.

But there is another side to this question, and that is, how will the Negroes themselves be affected by this movement? This phase of the matter was recently touched upon in a statement by Congressman Dent of Alabama, from which we take the following:

"Our black belt has been stripped of a large number of farm hands, and the movement continues. Agents from the North looking for laborers have been active and somewhat effective. Considerahle hodies, numbering several thousands, have left us. We could stand it well enough in time and supply their places with other labor, but the worst consequence of it is that the bulk of labor that goes to the North is soon dissatisfied. The Negro laborer has a narrow path to travel in the Northern States, and he quickly realizes that his opportunities are not near as numerous for employment in the North, where they don't understand him, as in the South, where they do understand him. The result is, when they come back, as most of them do, they come back poverty-stricken and impose a new burden upon the community, until they can recoup their shattered little fortunes."

There is, we think, no doubt that the Negro is better adapted to the climate of the South than that of the North, and that he here finds his best opportunity. Others may constitute themselves his theoretical benefactors, hut the Southern white people are his best real friends. An open door to earn an honest livelihood is worth vastly more than academic disquisitions on his wrongs and possibilities.

HELP GRENADA COLLEGE.

It is a very interesting account of his "auto" tour through the Yazoo Delta which Brother Jaco gives us in this issue of the Advocate. Certainly he deserves commendation for his active efforts to discharge the important task which has been committed to his hands, and we are happy to see that success is crowning his labors. It will be noted that he states that only about $12,000 is lacking to bring into view the $50,000 which he set out to raise for Grenada College, and he makes an appeal for 120 persons to give him $100 each to provide for this balance. Surely from among the 60,000 Methodists of North Mississippi this number of $100 subscriptions ought to be forthcoming. The whole amount pledged does not have to be paid immediately. Write Brother Jaco at once that you will be one of this rounding-out company. Grenada College needs and merits this assistance. It would be a splendid achievement to have it reported at Conference that the whole of the $50,000 desired is either in hand or in sight.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The College of Bishops of our Church are in session at Atlanta, Ga., this week.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpaulr, who is in his fourth year as presiding elder of the Lafayette District, will be given up regretfully by the pastors and people in that territory. He is a wise and tactful leader.

The press dispatches a few days ago stated that Rev. T. H. Morris, of Monroe, La., had been stricken with an attack of illness. We trust that this attack was not of a serious nature, and that it will be of brief duration.

Dr. F. N. Parker, Professor of Systematic Theology in the Biblical Department of Emory University, is making a great impression as an instructor. There are now 127 students enrolled in this department of our University.

Mr. Herbert Gillis, Clerk of the Chancery Court of Forrest Co., Miss., renews his subscription for two years and adds $2 to his remittance to help send the Advocate to needy Methodists who are unable to pay for it. We are grateful to Brother Gillis for his kindly generosity.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, has shown himself to he a hard worker in that capacity as well as in the pastorate, and his labors have done much toward setting things forward in his "diocese." All the echoes reaching this office are highly complimentary of the service which he has rendered.

In a personal letter to the Editor, Dr. A. F. Watkins thus refers to present conditions at Millsaps College: "You will be glad to know that the work of the College is progressing unusually well. The enrollment in the College department (from Freshman to Senior inclusive) has already gone beyond that of last year, and promises to go beyond that of any year in the history of the institution."

Rev. J. J. Golden, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but who is now connected with the New Mexico Conference, writes us as follows: "I have heen appointed to Alamogordo, which is one of the prettiest towns in New Mexico. It has a population of 4000 or 5000, and is a nice $1000 station, with a good parsonage. I look forward to the coming of the Advocate each week with pleasure."

Our faithful pastor at Sallis, Miss., gives us a club of trial subscriptions and in his business letter says: "Everything is moving on nicely in this charge. We expect to make a good report at Conference."

Dr. S. H. Werlein is preaching to gratifyingly large congregations at our First Church in this city. This flock is exhibiting commendable activity in many directions.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of Glen Allan, Miss., says: "The work in this charge is progressing very well. The crops are short, but our finances are in good shape. We expect to go to Conference with full collections."

Rev. G. B. Love reports that the Kossuth charge, of the North Mississippi Conference, is making good headway. The Corinth District generally seems to be showing up well under the energetic leadership of Rev. T. H. Dorsey, who is winning new laurels as a presiding elder.

We expect to print next week an article on each side of the question of making lay leaders ex-officio members of the Annual Conferences. This proposal will be voted upon in our approaching Conference sessions, and we think it well for some consideration to be given it beforehand.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney says: "The preachers in the boll-weevil stricken districts are making a manly effort to pull through in a way to make a creditable showing at Conference." This is like the preachers of North Mississippi. They are a noble band, who carry on their hearts the interests of the Church.

Rev. H. T. Young, of Amite City, La., was in New Orleans last week, having brought his son to the city for surgical treatment, and while here he favored us with a visit to our office. Brother Young has had a successful year in his present pastorate and he expects to be able to submit a good report at Conference.

Rev. H. J. Boltz, of Vivian, La., has our thanks for a club of 10 six months' subscriptions from his developing field. He says: "I do not think the Advocate has ever before been as largely circulated among this people as it is now." We trust that our paper will prove a valuable assistant to Brother Boltz in his work.

The following friends, whose kindness has not been elsewhere referred to, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions lately sent in: Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Duhach, La., 6; Rev. O. S. Lewis, Shuhuta, Miss. 5; Rev. J. L. Greenway, Silver Creek, Miss., 5; Rev. W. L. Storment, Coffeeville, Miss., 2; Rev. Robert Randle, Harrisonburg, La., 5.

Prof. G. L. Harrell, of Millsaps College, was in New Orleans last Saturday and, like a good Methodist, found his way to the Advocate office. The Editor, not being in, missed seeing him, which he regretted. We are always pleased to hear what is going on at Millsaps and to come in touch with members of its Faculty or its student body.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. T. B. Cottrell, our efficient pastor at Tylertown, Miss., for a list of 17 renewal subscriptions, forwarded, with a check to correspond, on October 17. The interests of the Advocate are never neglected where Brother Cottrell has sway. Would that the Conference organ had more such friends as he!

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, who is rounding out a notably successful quadrennium at Starkville, Miss., has lately been looking after the renewing of subscriptions to the Advocate in his charge, with gratifying results. The Conference organ is a weekly visitor to 40 homes in this choice pastorate, which ranks with the best in North Mississippi.

A correspondent writes us as follows: "This will inform you that a little visitor arrived at the parsonage at McCool, Miss., on September 29, 1916, in the person of little Carrie Louise Oakes. The mother and babe are both doing well." We congratulate Brother and Sister Oakes upon this addition to their family, and pray God's blessings upon the little one.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Franklinton, La., writes: "Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, will dedicate the Angie and Varnado churches on the fifth Sunday of this month—October 29. The dedicatory service will be conducted at Angie at 11 o'clock a. m., and at Varnado at 3:30 p. m. All former pastors are invited to be present."

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, preached an excellent sermon to a large and appreciative congregation last Sunday morning from Romans 1:14. Brother Harper is winding up his third year in his present pastorate with the high esteem of his people and all the interests of the Church in an excellent condition. He is one of the choicest young men in the Louisiana Conference.

The delegates from our three patronizing Conferences to the third quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which will be held in St. Louis, December 6-11, are Dr. F. N. Parker, Dr. A. F. Watkins, and Rev. H. S. Spragins. Among the reserve delegates we also note the names of Mr. P. H. Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss., and Mr. R. M. Weaver, of Corinth, Miss. The sessions of this body will be held in the Second Baptist Church.

We regret to know that the health of Mrs. Hill, the wife of Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., the pastor of Felicity Street Church of this city, is far from good. She has not been strong for quite a while and apparently is not gaining in strength at present. We hope that her health will soon take a turn for the better and that a rapid improvement will follow. Dr. Hill has had a fruitful year at Old Felicity, which looks like a new structure since its recent overhauling, made necessary by last year's storm.

Brother Marcus D. Herring calls our attention to the fact that in his communication from Byhalia, Miss., last week the name of Prof. Brinson was printed as "Prof. Brunson." We regret this error, but we did the best we could to get it correctly. It was not legibly written. This leads us to say that our correspondents should take particular pains to write plainly the names of all persons and places. Being perfectly familiar to them, they often find them legible, when to others they are not.

Many of our readers will, no douht, follow with much interest what Dr. John W. Boswell, whom they have not ceased to remember and hold in high esteem, has to say on the subject of "Methodist Unification" in this issue of the Advocate. We have seen no clearer statement concerning the significance of the action of our last General Conference touching this issue than that contained in the initial paragraph of Dr. Boswell's utterance. Clarity of perception has long been an acknowledged characteristic of this veteran itinerant and editor.

We extract the following from a business note to our office from Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., our capable pastor at Duhach, La.: "Brother Frank Fowler, one of the best men in this charge, who was well known to all the preachers who have served this work, died on the morning of the 12th inst., a little past midnight. He will be greatly missed by his church and community. We are working hard to bring our finances as nearly up as possible. We have raised up to date $125 for the Orphanage, and a liberal-hearted man gave $25 to the same cause, bringing the total to $175. We have been repairing two of our church buildings."

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions.

Fraternally,
CHAS. O. CHALMERS,
Publisher.

It is with much sorrow that we have learned of the continued illness of Rev. R. M. Davis, of Byhalia, Miss., an honored superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference. We have never known a choicer spirit than Brother Davis, who is a man of towering intellect, and who, like Bishop Candler, has a philosophic wit that has long made him the center of interest in every circle that he enters. Genial, affable, and kindly, one could not know him without learning to love him. We pray that a favoring Providence may watch over him in his afflictions, which we hope will grow steadily lighter until they entirely depart. How we should like to see him!

From a recent note from Mr. S. B. White, a leading layman in our church at West Point, Miss., we take the following: "Our work is moving on well here. Our Sunday school is large and enthusiastic. We had an attendance of about 350 on Rally Day. Brother Wasson, our pastor, is a live and enthusiastic worker, and is well liked by our people." Mr. Charles White, a son of Brother White, whom we knew as a small boy in West Point when we were the pastor there, but who has now about attained to his majority in years, has recently accepted a position with the American Cotton Oil Company in New Orleans, whose office is in the Hennen Building.

We are in receipt of an attractive card which reads as follows: Mr. J. Marion Davis announces the marriage of his daughter, Pearl Anna, to Mr. Milo Barrett Clisby on October 18, 1916—Newberry, South Carolina." The bride is the accomplished daughter of a cotton manufacturer of the Palmetto State, and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Clisby, of West Point, Miss., who are highly esteemed members of our Church at that place. Mr. Barrett Clisby has been engaged in business at Newberry, S. C., for some time, where he has been successful and has made many friends. We extend congratulations to this choice young couple and wish them many years of usefulness and happiness.

In a note to our office, Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, Miss., says: "We have been varying our Sunday evening services of late and have found it profitable. The service Sunday evening, October 22, will be conducted by the Woman's Missionary Society, and on the following Sunday night the Board of Stewards will have charge. The choir will prepare special music for these hours and large congregations are expected. One of the best things we have in our church here is a Ladies' Bible Class (which has 12 members), which meets every Monday afternoon, and I always meet with them. At present we are studying 'The Baptism with the Holy Spirit.' We have selected plans for our new church and are very anxious to build, but under the existing financial conditions we may not be able to do so. We hope, however, to carry a clean balance sheet to Conference. The year has been spent pleasantly, and I believe profitably."

Rev. N. B. Harmon, our pastor at Magnolia, Miss., sends us the following note: "Rev. John Tillery Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., recently held a series of meetings in my church here, which resulted in a great uplift to the entire community and to all the churches of the town. He is wonderfully engaging in manner and forceful in preaching. He deals so tactfully but so effectively with worldly amusements that the people are drawn to his way of viewing these evils. My son, who is now at Emory University, writes me thus concerning Brother Lewis' influence over young people: 'He did me lots of good; he grips men, and I want to hold his friendship.' I should like to see him hold meetings in our churches where the young people are being swept into worldliness. Rev. J. C. Bolster, of the M. E. Church, who for a long time was pastor at Oakland, Calif., and who was with us during our meeting here, said of Brother Lewis, 'He is the sanest, safest evangelist I have met in years.' With John Tillery to do the preaching and the Lewis Quartet to do the singing, any church would have a team capable of rendering service that would be unusually drawing and effective."

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Dear Mr. Editor: Nov. 5 will be a great day for the J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Church. Bishop E. E. Hoss, D.D., will preach and dedicate the Church at 11 a.m. Dr. Sexton and his congregation will worship with us at the morning service and we will worship at the First Church in the evening. Mr. Editor, you, with all former pastors, are cordially invited to be with us.

We have received 87 members to date and all assessments will be in full at Conference.

Most cordially,
R. W. TUCKER.

CALLED TO HER REWARD.

Dear Brother Meek: Mrs. R. A. Baker, mother of Mr. H. L. Baker, of Plattenville, La., died at Morenci, Mich., at 8 o'clock, Friday, Oct. 20, 1916, where she had gone for the summer, and had not returned, her home having been with Brother Baker. Brother and Sister Baker are there now, in attendance upon her funeral, today at 10 o'clock. At the same hour a suitable memorial service was held in the chapel at Plattenville. She was as perfect a saint as I ever knew, and her unblemished piety and unselfish service have done as much to make this section Christian as any other one thing that I know of. If not too late for your issue this week, I trust that you will announce her death, that her friends may know.

Fraternally,
P. O. LOWREY.

BETTIE JACKSON STRONG, daughter of N. C. and Hallie Jackson, died on August 7, 1916, at her home near Learned, Miss. She was born in Holmes County, Miss., on Sept. 17, 1888. She joined the M. E. Church, South, while she was quite young and was always a faithful member, living the religion she professed, and said just before she died she was prepared and ready to go. She bade adieu to a kind, loving husband, a sweet little girl, and kindred dear, and crossed the last river, where she will meet with loved ones gone before.

"She has but dropped her robe of clay
To put her shining raiment on;
She has not wandered far away—
She is not lost or gone."

I say to her loved ones left behind, be true to God, to others kind, and soon you'll meet on the shining shore to live forever and part no more.

W. J. O'BRYANT.

The death angel visited earth on Sept. 14, 1916, and carried our dear old GRANDMOTHER MARTIN home to heaven. She had lived to see her 88th year. She had many trials and much sorrow as well as many pleasures. She was a Methodist always. She bore her sufferings on all occasions with steady patience. Her lamp was trimmed and burning and shone clear and bright. She was a true Christian and was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in sorrow. She went to bed as usual and was found asleep in Jesus the next morning. She leaves one daughter, several grandchildren and also some great-grandchildren. She was loved by all who knew her. Her name and influence will abide and the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. A large number of friends and relatives will sadly miss her, but they can never forget her, and some sweet day when the mists have rolled away they will meet again at Jesus' feet, in a better and brighter land. She was buried at Mt. Vernon Church, of which she had long been a member. May our Heavenly Father consecrate us all to his service! One who loved her,

E. W.

Mrs. LOUISE ST. CLAIR CULLENS FLOURNOY was born in Milledgeville, Ga., on February 9, 1838, and died in Pontotoc, Miss., on October 9, 1916. Sister Flournoy grew to young womanhood in Georgia. Her maiden name was Cullens. She was educated at the Wesleyan College in Macon, Ga. Professing faith in Christ early in life, she joined the M. E. Church, South, and was a consistent member of the same until death. She came to Mississippi in early womanhood, the family settling near Wallerville, Miss. Soon afterwards she was married to Col. R. W. Flournoy, this being about 58 years ago. When the end came she was over 78 years old. She suffered much in her last illness, which lasted about ten days, but endured all with great patience. She had lived in Pontotoc for many years. Her married life was filled with large prosperity. Her home was the preacher's home. They dispensed a generous hospitality. She looked after the sick and the stranger with such care as commanded unusual devotion upon their part to her. Her love and care for her pastor and his family have been most beautiful. She was deeply spiritual, being a regular attendant at church, at Sunday school, and at prayer meeting. Sister Flournoy leaves an only daughter, Mrs. J. W. Bell, of Pontotoc, Miss.; four grand-daughters, Mrs. E. M. Carr and Mrs. R. L. Campbell of Pontotoc, Mrs. Lillian Hurt of Memphis, and Mrs. Whitfield King of Grenada, Miss.; two great-grandchildren, little Louise and Robert Campbell. All these loved her as a mother. The devotion between her and her mother-in-law was most beautiful. Her life was a great blessing to all. She rests in peace. W. M. YOUNG.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

When the death angel passed through our town on August 25 and removed from our midst our friend and colaborer, Mrs. JAS. LUCAS, our hearts were saddened and our lives were left lonely by her going. We shall miss her when we meet for worship and service in our Missionary Society, for her helpful suggestions and cheering presence were ever a stimulus and encouragement. Her influence still lingers in our Society, in our church, and in our town, calling us to the Heavenly home to which her gentle spirit winged its flight when she heard the call, "Come up higher." Therefore, be it

Resolved, First, we here express a sense of our loss in her home-going, and thank our Father for the good influences of her life, her faithfulness and charity in word and deed; and, that we will strive to emulate those Christian virtues that made beautiful her life even amidst suffering and increasing feebleness.

Resolved, Second, That we tender to the bereaved family our sympathy, and point them to the home where "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain," and commend to them the God whom she served and in whom she trusted.

Resolved, Third, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of the Society, that a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that a copy be sent to the family.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. J. W. ECKFORD,
Mrs. T. W. WOODWARD,
Mrs. SUSIE THOMAS.

A NOTABLE MEETING.

Dear Brother Meek: Respecting a revival which it pleased God to give us some weeks since at James' Chappel, on Rev. H. C. Murphy's charge, I would like to mention the following noteworthy features: The Church is greatly revived and more strongly united, and a more fervent appreciation is manifested (if such were possible) of the pastor. (Here let it be parenthetically said that a meeting that does not thus affect the Church is a palpable failure, regardless of the seeming success.) There were 14 accessions, none of whom (may it be said) were submerged for baptism—moreover, not one out of upward of three hundred whom we have been instrumental in bringing to Christ and to the Church in Louisiana has asked for submersion. Furthermore, the writer has never had to dip a candidate, nor has he witnessed during his whole life the submersion for baptism of more than one person. Should one inquire as to how we avoid this, we would answer, "We don't preach immersion." Not long since we heard this: "If immersion is all that holds you off, come on; we immerse, too." And then a few days later, the following: "Well, I had to dip some applicants. I certainly did dislike to do it, but I was compelled to do so." May the time come in which Methodists will discard the doctrine of equivocal baptism!

In addition to the above results six new subscriptions to the Advocate were secured and five heads of families promised to conduct home worship. This is, I believe, Brother Murphy's sixth year at this church, and he is still held in high estimation by his people. A. A. PHILLIPS.

Pimples Gone Skin Beautiful

Really Surprising the Way Stuart's Calcium Wafers Put the Delicate Pink Tinge on the Skin Freed of All Pimples and Other Eruptions.

Send For Free Trial Package.

Of course you want a lily complexion. And you will have it if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

They work in your blood and stop the accumulation of all those impurities that lodge in the skin to cause pimples, blackheads, liver blotches, eczema and other skin eruptions. It is the wonderful calcium sulphide that does this. The blood must have it. The presence of skin eruptions is proof of blood poverty and you get just what you need to enrich and purify it in Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

This fact has been demonstrated by hosts of women and men who realize that the presence of skin eruptions of any sort detracts from their usefulness in business, pleasure, society and their own self-esteem. And since Stuart's Calcium Wafers will rid the skin of impurities, why have such imperfections? You will find Stuart's Calcium Wafers on sale at 50 cents a box at all drug stores. REPORT MAKING.

Another Conference year is rapidly nearing its end, and our pastors all through the Church are getting things "rounded up" for the annual report to Conference. No small part of that report has to do with the work of the Sunday school, and I wish I might have the ear of every Sunday school superintendent and teacher long enough to inspire them to more zealous efforts in co-operation with the pastors, for in the greater number of our Sunday schools the pastors, by the logic of conditions, can have but little part in the actual work of such schools.

Turning to the Sunday school items the pastor has to report on at Conference, suppose we take them up one by one for a brief comment and perhaps a suggestion as to how the local lay workers can help the pastors make a more gratifying report—for many of our good Sunday school people do not know what a pastor is required to report when he goes up to Conference every year. The Sunday school report is a part of Table II, and the first item in the Sunday school portion is "Number of Sunday schools." Last year our pastors' reports showed 895 Southern Methodist churches in the Gulf Division without Sunday schools. I hope that during the year just closing, some sincere, loyal Methodist in many of those churches has come to the help of the pastor and that the number of Methodist people without a Methodist Sunday school to go to has been decreased very considerably.

The second and third items are "Number of Officers and Teachers," and "Enrollment in all Departments," respectively. In order that our Conference Minutes may contain correct information in these items our Sunday school secretaries should have good record books and keep accurate membership accounts. Let every Sunday school look into this matter at once, so that when the pastor is ready to start to Conference the correct figures may be easily obtained and are ready for him. In addition to this, it ought to be the ambition of every Sunday school to report an increased enrollment over last year. I suggest that schools "take account of stock" at once and if the membership balance falls on the loss instead of the gain side, that they institute a membership campaign immediately.

The fourth item in the report is "Members in Home Department." Let every Home Department that was in existence a year ago endeavor earnestly to have an increase to report this year, and all schools that reported none last year set about organizing one yet this year. A postal card to Dr. C. D. Bulla, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., will bring you full information about a Home Department.

The fifth item is "Children on Cradle Roll." Let us not only seek to report more "lambs" being "fed" through the Cradle Roll already reported as organized, but have many new Cradle Rolls formed. Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, No. 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., will promptly send any information needed to help get a Cradle Roll started. Children's names should be taken off the Cradle Roll at their fourth birthday and enrolled in the Beginners' Department.

The sixth item is "Number of Training Classes." This refers to the teacher-training classes that are taking our training courses of study, and I hope the pastors will be careful to get every such class properly reported. A number of mistakes were made last year—one pastor reporting 17 such classes in one school, when I believe he didn't have any at all.

The seventh item is "Number of Bible Classes," and under this heading should be reported only those classes—intermediate, senior, and adult—that have been regularly organized and enrolled with the Wesley Bible Class Department at Nashville. A great many new classes have been organized and enrolled this year and every superintendent ought to assist his pastor in getting a complete and correct report of the number of such classes. In case of doubt about the status of any class write to Dr. Bulla.

The eighth item is "Number pupils joining Church during year," and here also the teachers and superintendent should aid the pastor in getting accurate data for his report. Every person of whatever age who is a member of the Sunday school when he joins the Church should be included under this item. And every pastor ought to report on it—none should ignore it.

The ninth and tenth items are "Amount raised for Missions (Assessment)," and "Amount raised for Missions (Special)," respectively, and each pastor before making his report on these items should reread paragraph 284 of the Discipline. All missionary money raised in the Sunday school should be reported under these two items in this table and none of it reported in the Mission Items of Table III. While Sunday school missionary money may be used to help pay the general missionary assessment against the charge, it should all be reported, as stated, in Table II; none of it can legally be used to help pay any other assessment, not even the assessment for Conference missions.

The next item in the report is "Amount raised on Children's Day," and the amount reported here should correspond with the amount paid the Treasurer of the Conference Sunday School Board. And any Sunday school ought to be ashamed of itself if it has to be included in the "Blank family" on this question. If you have not had a Children's Day service this year yet, get busy and have one right away—at least take an offering for that purpose and resolve to reform yourself next year.

The next item, "Amount raised for Sunday School Supplies," should be furnished by the treasurer of the Sunday school, and the necessity of the pastor making such a report should cause every Sunday school treasurer to keep an accurate account of all receipts and expenditures, and be prepared to balance his books in time to supply the pastor with the proper figures at Conference time.

The last separate item is "For Other Objects"—that is, the amount of money raised for objects not specified in the items already mentioned. Under this heading should be included all amounts raised and used by organized classes in their class activities, as well as the amounts raised by the whole school for miscellaneous objects—church debts, building funds, furnishings, socials, Christmas treats, etc.

Hence we see that it is not a small matter, this of making out the pastor's report to Conference, and it is with the hope of enlisting the aid of the Sunday school officers and teachers to the end that such reports may be both more accurate and complete that I have written this message.

THE TROUBLE IS NOT INSIDE.

The myriads of parasitic germs which cause Tetter, Eczema, Ringworm, Itch, Acne, Salt Rheum, etc., cannot be killed internally. They live and feed on the surface and must there be treated. Tetterine is the common sense treatment that has scientific principles to back it up. E. A. 500 Artistic Sweet-Toned

EPWORTH PIANOS

Yours truly,
H. B. Williams

Last June we began work on several hundred extra fine Epworth Pianos for our Holiday trade. About a hundred of these magnificent instruments are ready a little ahead of time and many more are being finished up every day.

As these finished instruments are getting in the way of our workmen and are crowding our warerooms, I have decided to make a Special Thanksgiving Clearing Sale ahead of the holiday rush, and I am going to close out all of this first lot of Christmas pianos before Thanksgiving, even if I do have to make quite a reduction from our already low net factory price, and give very easy terms of payment.

These splendid Christmas Epworth Pianos are just as beautiful in design, fine in finish, and sweet in tone as those used and so highly recommended by Prof. E. O. Excell and Prof. Chas. H. Gabriel, the famous Sunday School song writers.

Freight Paid—Free Trial—Easy Terms

Send your name on coupon, or postal, and get our beautiful Epworth Piano catalog with special Thanksgiving prices, 27 plans of easy payment, and book of 2,000 letters from Epworth Piano owners.

No matter where you live we will tell you how you can get one of the sweetest-toned pianos you ever heard on easy terms and at a saving of $100. We are willing to ship any Epworth Piano you may select, with beautiful silk scarf and fine stool as a free gift, freight prepaid, for an absolutely free 30 day trial in your home.

If at the end of thirty days you find it one of the best looking, sweetest-toned, most satisfactory pianos in your whole neighborhood and want to keep it at the Thanksgiving Sale price, you may do so on any of our many easy plans of payment without security or interest. If you do not find the piano all we claim, you may return it at our expense. Please act promptly.

Send Name on Coupon or Postal for Thanksgiving Offer

Even if it seems impossible for you to get one of these bargain pianos, it will only cost you a postal or a stamp to find out how much I am willing to help you.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Every Cold Should Be Considered Serious

So say the best medical authorities Unless promptly checked, often they lead to chronic bronchial and pulmonary troubles which may prove fatal.

If your cough or cold has not responded to treatment—and remember, medicine should not be solely relied on—timely use of Eckman's Alterative may give you relief.

For more than twenty years it has been benefiting sufferers from these disorders. It is especially indicated where the system demands lime, for it contains calcium chlorid so combined as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Safe to try—because it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort whatsoever. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Notices have been sent to the preachers and superintendents giving the dates and places of the District Institutes to be held from Nov. 3 to 13. We trust these leaders to let the teachers know the great good that will come to every school that has a teacher to attend one of these institutes.

If the teachers only knew Miss Kennedy it would be no trouble to get them to attend; but suppose nobody tells them about her? She is able to direct the wisest and most skillful teacher and can help any mother understand and nurture the growing child more effectively. The preachers and superintendents who fail to hear her will suffer a distinct loss and the Kingdom of God will be delayed that much longer.

We have not emphasized the work for adults too much, but we have under-estimated the worth and possibilities of child nurture. We have been building our house from the top downward, instead of from the foundation upward. Not that adult life should be neglected; but that we should put a larger investment of time, thought, and talent where they count for most in character-building. We must see the child as Jesus sees it.

Who is it that feels they know the least of the privilege of teaching childhood the things of God? Those who really know most. Who is it that is self-satisfied and feels no need of better preparation for this holy task? Those who know least, and do the loudest boasting. May God show us how much we need his help!

Permit me to mention three books that every parent and every teacher of children may read with profit: "The Elementary Worker and His Work"—Jacobs-Lincoln, 50 cents; "The Church School"—Athearn, $1; "The Unfolding Life"—Lamoreaux, 75 cents; Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn. If I could not get but one of these books I would buy the last-named and read it through at least three times.

Recently Mr. Dietrich and I did some work at Greenville, Shipman's Chapel, Cleveland, Shelby, Duncan, Rosedale, Coahoma, and Lyon. The preachers and superintendents took one or more steps upward toward the goal. We are indebted to Rev. H. S. Spragins and Rev. B. P. Jaco for valuable assistance rendered on this tour. Smoot at Cleveland is having his school undertake the full program of a standard school. All the other places ordered some of the best books for their officers and teachers. The work prospers under the leadership of the presiding elder, Brother Spragins.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

SUMMER REVIVAL WORK.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have heard not less than six people say this summer, "I wish our preachers would report more often to the Advocate than they do." One lady at Myrtle said: "I always look first for the report of meetings, and charges; they always interest me greatly." At another town where I was preaching this summer a wealthy and intellectual man said to me, "I often do not have time to read the articles published in the Advocate, but two things I always read: the editorials, and the reports made by the preachers from over the Conference." And then he said, "Can you tell me why all our pastors do not write of their work at least TWO OR THREE TIMES A YEAR?" I had to acknowledge to this brother that I was one of the guilty multitude, and then I discovered that I myself ALWAYS read with especial interest these same FEW reports. So I now say, "Forgive me, Dear Doctor, and Dear Good Methodists of our Great Church—you shall have hereafter a "line or two" now and then.

I have been in six revival meetings this year, scattered along from May to October. At Robinsonville, where Brother A. C. McCorkle is the very efficient pastor, we were unfortunate in the time, as it rained a cold, damp spring rain most of the time; but the people proved themselves to be both loyal and royal. The services were well attended (for the Delta), and we hope that good was done.

At Sherman, where Brother W. B. Baker and his charming wife are in such high favor, we had a good and great meeting. I heard every soul in an afternoon congregation of 110 testify to the power of Christ in the heart to save.

At Baldwyn, with Brother W. C. Carlisle, we had ten days of most splendid fellowship with this consecrated and popular preacher. The people of Baldwyn are a choice citizenship. The congregations were splendid and a goodly number were added to the Church.

Next I was in services at Myrtle, where Brother J. A. Goad is pastor. I found this pastor in high favor with his people and Methodism not only at the front, but in the lead. Brother Goad is doing a fine work there. The meeting was largely blessed of the Lord.

I was then under p[illegible]se to go to Horn Lake with our pastor, Brother J. A. Biffle. It was good to find the people in love with their preacher, believing in him, and ready to help in any way possible. I believe the pastor said the membership was more than doubled in that meeting.

Last, but not at all least, I have just come in from a two weeks' meeting with our own Brother J. W. Dorman at Water Valley. Of the meeting I shall say nothing, feeling sure Brother Dorman will send a report, but I do want to say I never saw a people think more of a pastor or manifest a finer type of loyalty than those Water Valley people. The spirit of that church is just about as near ideal as I ever saw. And I believe Judge McGowen's Sunday school is the best in the Conference. Brother Dorman's work is monumental, and for a hard worker, he is the limit when it comes to making a fellow talk eight times in one day, as I did one Sunday while there. You don't blame me for saying so, I am sure.

Here at New Albany we are moving on smoothly, with good prospects of our usual full report at Conference on Nov. 29th. S. L. POPE.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel, bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

MARRIED.

Catarrh is an excessive secretion, accompanied with chronic inflammation, from the mucous membrane. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts on the mucous membrane through the blood, reduces inflammation, establishes healthy action, and radically cures all cases of catarrh.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

"SHOWERS" AT SHARON, MISS.

Dear Dr Meek: It is not often that I write, but some such good things have been coming our way of late, that I must ask for space to tell about them. Neill our brilliant Conference Sunday School Secretary, has just held our circuit institute. He is great in this work. He is going some now, if he didn't ride on a railway train until he was nineteen years old. No doubt our Conference Sunday School Board has taken a step in the right direction in inaugurating their present plans and selecting this choice young prophet to carry them out. He is a wonderful combination. In his statement of truth, and in speaking out his convictions, he is as rugged as John the Baptist. His language, however, is as polished as that of an Apollos, and he has the energy and endurance of Paul, while his manner, withal, is as loving and gentle as that of St. John. Our people who heard him were delighted, and are, I am sure, determined to do greater things in this all-important department of our Church work.

Sharon Circuit is one of the old charges of the Conference, around which cluster some facts of history that are interesting and sacred. Here are some of the finest people on earth, and they are of the most generous type. They know how to take care of a pastor and his family, to which fact this preacher and his wife can bear witness. But recently the heart of the better half of the above mentioned pair was made to rejoice exceedingly, when there came a most copious shower of various articles with which to beautify the home, and for personal adornment—just such things as the average Methodist preacher's wife seldom has, on account of the usual leanness of her husband's purse, or because of that sacrificing spirit that characterizes these devoted martyrs, who are always doing without, that others may have.

This most original and unique surprise to Mrs. Byrd was given in the home of Mrs. W. H. Coulter, and was planned and carried out by her sister, Miss Bettie Prichard, one of God's own, who sits day after day in an invalid's chair, but who is always seeking an opportunity to make others happy. The scheme was, "The Blue Bird of Happiness." In the midst of several other features of this glad occasion, to which all of the ladies of the community had been invited, Mother Byrd was blindfolded and carried to hunt the nest, guided by the singing of some of the young Byrds that had been brought in without her knowledge. The large nest, when found, was filled with the beautiful and useful gifts from members of the family and the invited guests, many of whom were present, which brought joy and gladness to our humble parsonage home.

But only last week our hearts were made glad again, when another "shower" came. And on yesterday there was a "honk," "honk," and on rushing out no clouds were in sight, but the front porch indicated that there had been another "shower;" this morning another, and this afternoon another. All of them were copious, and the parsonage pantry is flooded; but we are not praying for it to stop. However if it should it will be many days before it will be necessary for us to call on the grocer again. For all of these good things our hearts go out in the most profound gratitude to our Heavenly Father, and in heartiest appreciation to these good people, than whom there are none better.

Our work is moving along as well as could be expected. There has been some progress spiritually at some points, while others are holding their own. We are in midst of the "Annual Tug" now, but, with a steady pull, we hope to come out in advance of last year in spite of crop failures. Pray for us. A. S. BYRD, P. C.

For Weakness and Loss of Appetite

The Old Standard general strengthening tonic, GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC, drives out Malaria and builds up the system. A true tonic and sure Appetizer. For adults and children. 50c.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION.

On the 10th instant a number of members of her family gathered at Poplarville, Miss., to celebrate the 79th birthday of their mother, Mrs. Martha A. Joyner. Notwithstanding her advanced age, Mrs. Joyner is hale, well preserved and in possession of all of her faculties unimpaired, and is shedding the fragrance of a bright and optimistic spirit everywhere.

Mrs. Joyner's has been a useful, well spent, and, in many respects, a remarkable life. She was born on October 10, 1837, in St. Tammany Parish, La. In early life she gave her heart to God and united with the Methodist Church. On September 30, 1856, she was married to Mr. C. G. Joyner, and for many years they made their home on a comfortable farm at Pearl River, St. Tammany Parish, La. Afterward they lived for different periods at Covington and New Orleans, La., and Hattiesburg and Moss Point, Miss. During their residence at the latter place she was left a widow, after fifty years of married life, Mr. Joyner dying in March, 1907.

It is not given to many mothers to rear to mature life so large a family as did Mrs. Joyner. She was the mother of eleven children, ten daughters and one son, nine of whom are now living between the ages of 58 and 40 years, namely: Mrs. T. P. Crawford, Pearl River, La.; Mrs. W. L. Ellis, Slidell, La.; Mrs. L. E. Ward, Natchez, Miss.; Mrs. F. E. Welch, and Mrs. P. M. Provost, Poplarville, Miss.; Mrs. J. W. Dean, Mansfield, La.; Mrs. J. W. Whittle, Hammond, La.; Mrs. W. E. Thrash, Natchez, Miss., and Rev. Nicholas E. Joyner, pastor of Carrollton Avenue, M. E. Church, South, New Orleans, La. Her descendants number also 32 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. One daughter died in infancy, and one, Mrs. Janie Bancks, died at Pearl River, La., last year.

The home life of this family was always beautiful; characterized by old-time hospitality, wise precept, godly example, and the Christian attributes that enter into the making of noble Christian character. The devotion, piety and simple faith of the mother permeated the home, and flowered in the lives of the children. It is not surprising that the entire family, and nearly all those entering it, are earnest Christians and faithful members of the Methodist Church. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

The gathering on the birthday at Poplarville was at the home of Mrs. F. E. Welch, where a sumptuous dinner was served. Those present were all the daughters (except Mesdames Whittle and Thrash); the son, Rev. N. E. Joyner; one son-in-law, Mr. W. L. Ellis, a number of the grandchildren, and the family's pastor, Rev. G. S. Harmon, and Mrs. Harmon. Right royally did the company pay tribute to the beloved mother, whose noble qualities were likened to the ideal housewife and mother recorded in the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs.

In the afternoon an informal reception was held, the large number of friends who attended attesting the esteem and affection of the entire community for this most estimable woman.

Sister Joyner has walked before her Lord in the beauty of holiness, and now in the sunset glow of a consecrated life enjoys "the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel," and after sunset "her eyes shall see the King in His beauty, and behold the land that is very far off." G. S. HARMON.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

THE DOOR OF HOPE FOR CHINESE WOMEN IN SHANGHAI

The Watchman said, "The morning cometh."

The Lord of pity heard the cry of anguish and in the year 1900 he spoke by his Spirit to five missionaries, who were representatives of the leading denominations, ladies whose hearts and hands were full with other phases of Christian activity, yet knowing something of the facts, "were bowed down at the hearing of it and dismayed at the seeing of it."

Each one understood something of the power of prayer, and to each was given a holy determination to obey the call to "make up the hedge and stand in the gap."

This little band, together with a gifted woman, Miss Cornelia L. Bonnell, the first missionary in the "Door of Hope," were enabled in November, 1901, to open a rescue home for Chinese girls and children who had been unwillingly sold or rented into a life of shame. It was known that there were at least 5000 of these "daughters of the night" in Shanghai, not counting another 5000 who were living lives of sin, either partly or wholly, on their own responsibility. In addition to these, the number of children being reared for the same degraded life reached into the thousands.

The brave pioneers in this work of rescue were not ignorant of the many difficulties awaiting them, but they persistently set their faces toward the One who is far greater than all the forces of opposition, and, through prevailing prayer, one mountain of difficulty after another disappeared before the mustard-seed grains of faith. They laid hold upon One who is mighty, but God himself has brought the work to its present proportions.

After the "Door of Hope" had been established about four years, a Chinese gentleman of official rank learned of the work and succeeded in influencing a number of the gentry in Shanghai to take some active interest in helping it forward. Through their co-operation a receiving home was established in the Foochow road and proved to be a veritable "City of Refuge" to many poor girls. In spite of the warnings they received from their masters as to their probable fate should they enter its door, many girls were prepared to take the risk rather than to endure longer their cruel existence.

These Chinese gentlemen not only financed this home, but they secured a proclamation from the Mixed Court magistrate, which later became a municipal regulation, limiting the age of girls in brothels to fifteen years. As a result of this proclamation some hundreds of little children have been rescued. These men also secured the passage of a law which forbids the appearance on the streets of singing girls carried on the shoulders of men.

Knowledge of the work spread among all classes of Chinese, and thus most effectively reached the girls themselves. This brought about a decided change for the better in their treatment by their owners, who, for fear that the girls would run away to the "Door of Hope," no longer dared to practice the cruelty which formerly had been so common.

In June, 1907, about sixty rescued children were removed from the overcrowded Shanghai rented homes to a large house in the neighborhood village of Chiang-Wau. This building, with a little over an acre of ground, was God's answer to prayer for the first property and has been a house of blessing since the first day it was occupied. God's goodness to the children brought a melting of hearts and he was glorified, as one after another has inquired, "What must I do to be saved?"

Through believing prayer much opposition from heathen neighbors was gradually overcome, and, to-day, many of their children are found in the village day-school connected with the "Love-reared" home.

In 1909 the number of children in the home had so increased that prayer was offered for additional homes. The answer came in a gift of $10,000 (Mex.) from the surplus of the "Christian Herald" famine fund, given in view of the fact that a number of girls and children who had been kidnaped or sold from the famine district, had been rescued and brought into the "Door of Hope." This money was used to build five cottages, the first of which is the home for the kinderzarten children. These little ones are "mothered by a young native woman who has been especially sent of God for that purpose. The same thing can be truly said concerning the head of each of these homes, all of which are under the superintendence of a foreign missionary peculiarly fitted for the care of motherless little girls.

On the same compound a preaching hall has been built by the members of a well-known Christian family from America, living in Shanghai, as a memorial to their sainted mother. This building has not only been a place of worship for the children and teachers of the "Love-reared" school, but services are frequently held for people of the neighboring villages, many of whom, for the first time, have there learned of him who is the Light of the world.

The family continued to increase and soon there was pressing need of a sanitarium in which suitable care could be given cubercular and other diseased children. Once again the prayer of faith brought the answer from the One "who faileth not."

The heartless and opium-smoking mistress of one of the night's suffering victims had been convicted of cruelty by the Mixed Court officials and fined taels eight hundred, in addition to serving a short time in prison, and being expelled from the "settlement." The victim, Miau-Tsung, was in the home long enough to become a Christian, but she never regained her health. Before her death she expressed a wish that the greater part of her money should be given to the "Door of Hope." This was used in starting a sanitarium, which was finally completed through smaller gifts sent for the purpose.

The over-crowded condition of the native houses, which for several years had been the home for the rescued young women, was a call to prayer for larger and more healthful premises. Once again the Lord answered through a gentleman in the United States, who had become deeply interested in the work of the "Door of Hope." He was led to bequeath $5000 gold, and, after his decease, his two daughters visited their brother, a medical missionary in China, and felt such a warm interest in the work that they added a generous gift. A grant of taels 2500 from the Municipal Council made it possible to build the Industrial Home, a part of which is used as the "First-year Home." The combined families in all the homes number 130.

From these homes, no child of the night is ever turned away. During the fifteen years about 1400 girls have been lovingly cared for until other provision has been made through marriage, or an opportunity has been given for further education in some mission school.

The daily provision for the expenses of the "Door of Hope" families has been met through prayer. God has graciously answered through his trusted ones, who, "having ears to hear," have been led to contribute, considering it a privilege to share with the King in this his work of saving the precious "children of the night."

Why Take Risks?

Many cases of gangrene and blood poison result from the neglect of small sores, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, etc. Numerous deaths occur from blood poison due to infection of slight wounds. Whether the wound is painful or not, treat it immediately with Gray's Ointment which, for ninety-six years, has been an indispensible family remedy. It allays pain, heals the wound and frees you from all danger of troublesome after-effects. It is invaluable for treating abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, burns, bruises, cuts, sores, etc. Mrs. N. E. Coleman, Mt. Jackson, Va., writes: "I have used it in my family for 15 years and have not found any ointment equal to it." Only 25c a box at druggists. For FREE sample, write to W. F. GRAY HAIRS mean that your hair is not receiving proper attention, and yet a gray hair will do more to make you look old than anything else. Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food, and unless you give your hair the proper attention you cannot expect it to retain its lustre and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original lustre. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Don't use strong alkaline soaps as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. Price $1.00. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

From the Field

Rienzi, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am through with all my meetings. In two—at Bethel and Pisgah—Rev. J. C. Nelson, of Lafayette Springs, Miss., a local evangelist, did the preaching, and it was well done. Brother Nelson is thoroughly Methodistic in doctrine, and the Holy Ghost attended the Word in power as he expounded it. We had old-time altar services. No claptrap methods were used. The people were brought to repentance under the power of the gospel. As a result of these two meetings we had nearly 100 conversions and 71 accessions to our Church. We have had up to date, I think, 82 accessions this year. Notwithstanding the short crops, we are going to wind up ahead of last year in our finances. We are getting material on the ground to build a new church at Bethel.

Keep on sounding the same trumpet on the union question. God bless you and the Advocate! To God be all the praise. B. P. FULLILOVE.

P. S.—Brother Wyatt also assisted me in one meeting in which we had several conversions and 2 joined our Church. The people greatly enjoyed Brother Wyatt's strong sermons.

B. P. F.

Iuka Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: Summer has passed and fall is here. We have held seven meetings, in some of which the work done has been reported. Rev. J. R. Murff, of Gattman, Miss., was with us at Bethel, Snow Down, Pleasant Hill, and Spring Hill—all on the Iuka Circuit. In these meetings, he did the preaching and did it well. True to his conviction, as "the needle to the pole," uncompromising with sin and sinfulness, he uttered grace-seasoned messages from time to time.

From all of our meetings, we have had only 8 accessions to the Church, and 3 reclamations, though there were a few more converted who will join other Churches. The spiritual interest of the people seems to have been revived in these meetings. In fact, all who attended the day services throughout any one of our meetings gave both evidence and testimony to the fact that they had experienced a real revival of religion in their souls. In every meeting we gave a service to the children. It was always a spiritual one. Taking for his text, "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself" Brother Murff aimed at the child mind, but he hit the adult heart. His expression, "Me thinks I hear some children say, I never heard my parents pray," brought tears from the eyes of both young and old.—Wm. I. White.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Dear Advocate: On Saturday, Oct. 14, our fourth quarterly conference convened at Oak Ridge, and, viewed from any standpoint, it was a success. While we have not had a single accession this year (that is not our only purpose here), there is an unquestioned under-current of spiritual power and progress that is working in and out of the church, and the uanimous opinion of the officials was that the presiding elder's and pastor's salaries will be paid in full, and the balance on the Conference assessment is growing steadily smaller, despite the unprecedented failure in crops. One church has practically paid out, besides giving the pastor a nice purse for holding a few days' meeting. One noticeable feature of the meeting was the general good, brotherly spirit among all and a general feeling that better times spiritually are in the near future. There are two persons on the circuit who figure very largely in its spiritual work—Mrs. F. M. Williams, of Oak Ridge, wife of the late Rev. F. M. Williams, of our Conference, and Mrs. Annie M. Paxton of Porter's Chapel, a daughter of a Methodist preacher. As both of them knew by experience something of an itinerant's life, I enlisted their special prayers for the work and I feel that their prayers are largely the cause of so many evidences of God's power and presence all over the circuit. They both are practically "shut-ins," but their prayers ascend to the throne. May God graciously bless and preserve them until Heaven's gate opens to receive them!

On Saturday Brother Sharbrough preached to an appreciative audience a really great sermon from the text, "She hath done what she could." Sunday morning he preached several sermons in one, doing all he could to help us wind up the year successfully. On Sunday afternoon he preached another good sermon at a schoolhouse, stopping on his way to Vicksburg.—J. A. Wells, P. C.

Vivian, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: My revival meetings are all over, so I will now report through the Advocate the results of them. My meetings were all union meetings. Our first meeting began on the first Sunday in July at Vivian, with Rev. Eugene Keasler, pastor of the Cumberland Preshyterian Church, and the writer to do the preaching for two weeks.

We labored earnestly and faithfully to give the people the pure gospel by offering Christ to them as the only hope of eternal life. While the results as to the number of accessions to the Church were small (only three new members were added to the two denominations), we feel safe in saying that the membership of both churches were greatly benefited. I sincerely believe that if we would have continued the meeting another week the results as to accessions to the Church would have been much larger.

Beginning the third Sunday in September, another meeting was held in Vivian, all denominations uniting, with Rev. B. B. Crim, a Baptist evangelist of Marshal, Texas, to do the preaching. This was a great meeting, which resulted in over 200 accessions to the different Churches. Seventy-five new members were added to the Methodist Church.

The next and last meeting was held at Trees City, beginning the second day of October, and was continued for ten days, with Rev. B. B. Crim conducting the services. These services resulted in a remarkable revival. We had about 100 accessions to the different Churches, 20 of whom came to the Methodist Church. Numbers of people, both in and out of the Church, were converted in these meetings. We have had 108 accessions to the Church on the Vivian charge since Conference. Our Sunday schools are doing good work. About 30 of our Sunday school children have joined the Church this year. We are pressing on toward the Standard of Efficiency. We have 9 classes in our school at Vivian, besides a Teacher-training Class, a Cradle Roll, and a Home Department. About four months ago an Epworth League was organized with only a few members. We now have 52 members enrolled and they are as fine a class of young people as you could find anywhere. Mr. C. P. McLendon and Mrs. Long have both been very active workers in managing and conducting this League.

The carpenters are hard at work on our new church, and, when completed, it will be the first M. E. Church, South, that was ever built in the town of Vivian. It will likely be several months before it will be entirely finished and paid for.—H. J. Boltz.

Take Iron, Says Doctor, if You Want Plenty of "Stay There" Strength Like an Athlete!

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 200% Stronger in Two Week's Time, in Many Cases

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

A NOTE FROM HOLLY SPRINGS.

Dear Dr. Monk: Now as the conference year is about closing, I want to speak just a word commendatory of our assistant pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott. He came here during the summer by an arrangement made by our able presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, to assist our much beloved pastor, Dr. H. G. Henderson in the work here. Dr. Henderson was then too ill to perform the arduous labors incident to this charge. Brother Lott is a young man of marked ability. It was no easy task for him—nor would it have been for any one else, as for that matter—to fill Dr. Henderson's pulpit. The North Mississippi Conference scarcely has Dr. Henderson's equal as a really finished orator and preacher. Nevertheless Brother Lott undertook this task at the command of his Church, and it affords me great pleasure to be able to say that his success both in the pulpit and among the members as a pastor has been phenomenal. Holly Springs, as perhaps you already know, is a bit critical. She has always been accustomed to the best in our Church, and, therefore, this young man undertook a difficult proposition. Dr. Henderson preached himself last Sunday and expects to do so again next Sabbath. In my humble opinion, W. R. Lott will make his mark, and that speedily. He is well educated, thoroughly consecrated, is a good thinker, is very energetic, and has but the one aim in life, and that is to do his Master's bidding. Any congregation that secures this godly man next year as its pastor may count itself fortunate.

Sincerely,

W. A. BELK.

Holly Springs, Miss.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

The appended resolutions were recently adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society at Bayville, La.:

We the Committee on Resolutions beg leave to submit the following: That by the death of Mrs. W. L. Calhoun the Methodist Missionary Society has lost a much valued member, and it is with a sense of personal loss that we record her passing.

Her's was a beautiful life of unselfish service, and we can truly say a good woman has gone to rest who left an influence which, like the sweetness of the rose, will last forever.

It is meet that this Society should, with solemn and sorrowing hearts, mourn the loss of our beloved sister. And we recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. W. L. Calhoun and family, that a copy be furnished the Beacon News and the Christian Advocate, and also that a copy be inserted in the minutes of the Missionary Society as a tribute to the memory of our honored dead.

Signed: Mrs. B. F. Tatum, Miss Fanny Norman, Mrs. J. W. Summerlin.

AN ADDRESS FROM OUR BISHOPS.

While in session at Atlanta, Ga., last week, our Bishops issued the following address to the Church:

"In view of the fact that our excellent Book of Discipline makes it a prime duty of the Bishops 'to oversee the spiritual and temporal interests of the Church,' and to call attention from time to time to all matters of serious importance, we conceive it to be eminently proper at this critical juncture to speak out our minds with the greatest distinctness in regard to certain current events which, for good or ill, are likely to affect the whole future course and development of our ecclesiastical life.

"It is a matter of general knowledge that the entire movement for closer federation between the different bodies of American Methodists originated in our General Conference in 1894. Some six years ago the Joint Commission of Federation, made up of representatives from the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, took up the broader question of union. The outcome of their action was a series of suggestions made to the General Conferences of the three Churches, as a possible basis for further negotiations. To these suggestions the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1912 paid no attention whatever. The General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church of the same year gave them their general indorsement, but declined to act more definitely until the two Episcopal Methodisms should reach some sort of agreement.

"The General Conference of our own Church for 1914, after proposing a single important modification in them, likewise gave them a unanimous ratification, and then passed them up to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as a tentative outline of 'union by reorganization."

To Support Action.

"We need scarcely say that as Bishops of the Church we consider ourselves bound to support and maintain this action to the full extent of our ability and influence. Any statement to the contrary, by whomsoever made, is utterly without foundation in fact. Whether the action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1916 is a fair and favorable response to our proposals is a thing that must be determined by our Commissioners appointed for the express purpose of considering that very subject. We cannot think it possible that those Commissioners will do less than follow the instructions laid down by the General Conference for their guidance, and we do not believe that they should be hindered by any interference from the outside. In view, however, of some things that have been said and repeated on public platforms and in public prints, we feel constrained to make a brief but very definite statement. The assertion, for example, that for the past forty years we have been 'wandering in the wilderness, a lot of miserable fools and miserable sinners,' we hold to be an injustice both to the living and the dead.

"The men who have shaped and controlled our policies for that period have been consecrated Christians, worthy in every way of the commanding position that they have held among us, and we resent any words that tend either to belittle their ability or cast discredit upon their characters.

"We are happy to be able to state that our active Senior Bishop (Eugene R. Hendrix) distinctly disclaims the interpretation put upon his words at Saratoga last May, or elsewhere at any time, in so far as they seem to reflect on our Church in its work in the past or our great and saintly leaders, or on the spirit and purpose of our Church to-day, and unites with us in this paper.

"The history of Southern Methodism is not something to be ashamed of, but something to glory in. In the whole record of our relations to other Churches there is nothing to repent of. If we had to face the same conditions again, we ought to do it in the same spirit and with the same resolution.

Should Hold Heads Erect.

"Instead of hiding our heads in shame when we review the past, we are entitled to hold them erect. In the whole history of God's Church there is not a single chapter that is more worthy to be blazoned in the face of the world than that one which tells of the fidelity and the heroism with which our preachers and people alike endured without flinching or faltering, and without one word of encouragement from any quarter, the years of hardship and disaster that followed the War between the States. The people that learn to blush at the memory of their own fathers are lost. No matter what the future may hold for us, we have a background of history in which we may always rejoice, and which we should teach our children and our children's children to hold forever in pious veneration. No matter into what alliances we may enter in the future, we should go into them, not crawling prone upon the earth, but with uplifted faces and with unabated self-respect. If we should go otherwise we should make but a poor contribution to any co-partnership.

"We have no word of criticism to offer touching other Churches, nor any disposition to make light of their achievements or of their present outlook. Let them act in accordance with their own lights. We devoutly wish them well. That God may pour upon them the abundant riches of His grace, is our most earnest prayer. If a union can come among all Methodist people that will be a real union of hearts, we shall be glad and happy. But we are not ready to bargain away any of the great inheritances and glorious memories of other years for any consideration.

"The most important matter among us just now is to promote the spirit of Christian love among ourselves. Whatever breaks up the unity that has characterized us in the past and promotes the spirit of faction and schism in our own ranks is worthy of condemnation.

"We should be lacking in all sense of gratitude if we failed to take note of the great things God has done for us during the past forty years. In 1870 we had about 600,000 members. Now we have 2,200,000. Our increase in moral power and in material resources has been upon the same scale. No other body of Christians in the sweep of all the centuries has enjoyed more signal tokens of Divine favor. We are no bankrupt ecclesiasticism, finding it necessary to take shelter and seek protection under the broader wings of another denomination. Blessed be God, we are a solvent and going concern, and in any negotiations for the future we have as much to offer as to ask.

IT SHOULD BE ADOPTED.

Among the several amendments to the Louisiana Constitution that are to be voted on next week is one which is designed to make it possible for women to serve on the boards of trustees of public institutions. We sincerely hope that this amendment will command the necessary support to make it a part of the organic law of the State. Practically all of these institutions have to do with females in fulfilling the missions for which they were established, and the women should have a voice in saying what provisions and facilities are needed for their safety and comfort. We have never heard an argument against this measure that we thought possessed any real merit. The interests of humanity call loudly for its adoption.

IN CHRIST.

Rev. J. C. Elkins.

In Christ I'll daily try to dwell,
His will shall be mine own;
His love shall be my theme to tell,
I will His grace make known.

In Him my spirit has its throne,
My soul with Christ hath kin,
And I shall never be alone—
I know that God's within.

Oh, wondrous truth, oh, wondrous light,
Revealed by inward sign;
The soul has said good-bye to-night,
The sun's forever mine!

Some day this mortal coil shall drop,
And I in far-off realms of space
May make my home and cast my lot;
Yet Christ with me shall share the place.

I will not go in search of Him
To dim and distant star;
But in the soul's soft light and dim
I'll see the things that are.

Abide with me, oh, Christ divine;
Be thou my constant friend,
So that mine all in Thee I'll find,
My goal, my bliss, my end.

THE REAL LIFE BEYOND.

A thousand times, yea, every perilous moment, God saves us from dying. There is a moment on the way for every one of us when that preservation will be possible no longer. We shall pray, our friends will pray for us, "Again, O Father, spare him; let him live." And then the answer which is looked for will not come, and he who has been so often saved from dying, at last will die. Will it be a sign of God's forgetfulness? If so, then God has forgotten all his children, and let them, every one, either in childhood or as life-worn veterans, slip through his careless hands; for all have died or will die. But, no; if, as we know is true, the real life lies beyond, and can be reached only through death, then the old miracles are nothing to this new one.—Phillips Brooks.

FAITH.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

All life is of faith. If there was no faith in the world, in the heart and life of men, there would be no endeavor, no worthy purpose enterprised, no noble action accomplished. All true faith has for its essential element truth—else it is mere credulity; so that instead of being the dominant diapason of real worship and service to God, it degenerates into wild vagaries or hurtful superstition. Faith must have an object, either a being or person, toward which it tends, and upon which its desires and affections are centered. A mere principle or abstraction by its very evanescent nature precludes it from the fellowship of faith. Man is a personal being, expressing life and character; responsiveness must be the keynote of his adoration. An abstraction or principle as a concept of God fails most signally to meet this element of his nature. What the sun is to the flower—real sun, real flower—God is to man, spirit to spirit, real fellowship, the upward lift of the minor to the major, the meet and rush of soul on soul, the human personality and the divine personality conscious the one of the other. Then, in the larger sense, to live is to believe, and to believe is to live. Faith not only touches the boundaries of all being, but embraces all the range and sweep of this vast territory. More than this, it sinks and settles into the very heart-center of man. Its eagle-eyed vision will rest only on the throne of God.

John Pipes, "nomen clarum et venerabile," once voiced a supreme and holy sentiment in a prayer at a Conference session of his brethren: "Oh, Lord, whether we live long or die soon, we are in Thy hands." Such faith covers two worlds and bridges the abyss between. This is the "faith of God" which the Master taught the wandering disciples, as they stood in the place of the stricken fig tree, withered at the word of his power. The old question whether faith be of man or of God finds its answer here: It is of each. Man believes, exercises faith; God responds, receives; and from the gracious, reciprocal outflow yet greater faith abounds. God's will is the only boundary to the cry of faith. The Master taught that otherwise it is limitless. Trees of centuries' growth uprooted, mountains torn from their base and cast into the sea, were striking and wonderful figures to impart and impress this marvelous lesson.

All the wide empire of spirit belongs to the supernatural and miraculous; small wonder then that stupendous natural or material phenomena fail to fully illustrate the ways of God with man. The vast territory of faith's possibilities is larger than mountains or sycamore trees, and its bases are more firmly grounded in the depths of the human soul. A man told me once of an earthquake sending the current of a great river upstream. The faith of Paul changed the tide of the world, the faith of Luther gave the nations civil and religious liberty, the faith of Wesley has given a new note to every pulpit wherein the gospel is preached.

Prejudice, passion, pride in the heart of a sinner is more firmly embedded than a tree with its hundreds of grounding roots, more stubborn than the rocky base of a mountain; yet faith in God, through divine power, removes these—the miracle of grace. Believing, hoping, trusting—a trinity of heavenly virtues! Hope the dawn; faith the morning, with its sunburst of glory; trust the eventide with its splendor and peace.

PAUL AT SALONIKI.

By Rev. Henry G. Hawkins.

The books of the New Testament are not arranged in the order of their date of composition. It is now accepted by scholars that the first books of the New Testament written were Paul's two letters of the Church at Saloniki (1st and 2d Thessalonians).

The Macedonian maritime city of Saloniki, where Britain and her allies, for the purpose of guarding the Levant, have had large forces assembled for some months, is in about the same latitude as New York City. Its modern normal population is probably about 100,000; but in past periods it has sometimes had a population of nearly a quarter of a million. Among the cities of that part of the world Saloniki is next in stragetic importance to Constantinople. Its early name in authentic history was Therma, on account of hot salt springs in the vicinity. Therma was rebuilt by Cassander and named Thessalonica for his wife, who was the daughter of Phllip of Macedon, and her name had been given by Philip in honor of his victory over Thessaly, which was won the day he received the news of his daughter's birth. Its situation has made it a safe harbor for ships in all ages, and causes it to command the trade of the sea.

When Macedonia was reduced to a Roman province Thessalonica was its most important city. Cicero, the orator, found refuge there during his exile, and during his governorship of Cilicia he freuently stopped there, and from there wrote several of his extant letters. In Paul's time it was the capital of the whole country between the Adriatic and Black seas. It was on the great Egnatian Road, which the Romans built from Dyrrachium east across their great Macedonian Province, one of the mighty highways of the Empire.

Paul, a Jew, early in his career, realizing that the Jew and the world were under the political domination of Rome, decided that the only hope for his own people, in the absence of the Messiah, was that they should dominate in religious matters, and he determined to throw into the effort to bring this result the best and all that was in him. To his end he early decided that he would never marry; to this end he studied in his home city, Tarsus, and afterwards in Jerusalem under Gamaliel.

During the years that Paul was a student in Jerusalem, Jesus appeared and died. Paul, though devoted to his studies, certainly was not a careless observer of the events of the earthly life of Jesus, who claimed to be the Messiah. According to the prevailing view of their leaders, in which Paul doubtless shared, the Messiah, if he should come, would make the Jews even political lords over their conquerors, and when Jesus met his death in ridicule and shame it proved to Paul that he was not the Messiah, but that he had been an impostor. Anxious and ambitious as Paul was for the triumph of Judaism, this death and contumely which had come upon the one who had claimed to be the Messiah caused this young patriot and other conscientious observers to detest him now, and this all the more because, after having raised their hopes, he had in the end degraded the Jews and their idea of the Messiah before the Romans.

As long as Paul believed that Jesus was an impostor and dead, he devoted himself to the task of imprisoning and killing his followers. But after he saw Jesus on the way to Damascus and knew that he was alive after his death, this sudden perception of the truth about Jesus recreated and invigorated all his mental and moral frame. Paul knew that this was Jesus whom he had seen as he drew nigh to Damascus, and knew now that he had been indeed the Messiah. The death and resurrection of Jesus furnished opportunity for him to carry out his plan of life. He had always longed to champion God's cause and the faith of his fathers. Now he knows how this is to be done, and when in after years we see him amid his trials, defeats and victories, it is not the picture of one treading laboriously a path forced upon him by an overruling providence contrary to his own instincts; but of one who by his conversion on the way to Damascus had simply been liberated and had revealed to him how to fulfill his youthful ambition to make Judaism the conquering faith of the Roman world.

After his conversion several years of comparative inactivity passed, during which period his purposes and ideas matured; and when the leaders in the great work of Evangelism in the mighty city of Antioch, at the suggestion of Barnabas, sent for Paul, they thereby brought into their midst a man who was ready to use, in the young cause, with perfect mastery and with absolute concentration of mind, the marvelous faculties and ideas with which nature and training had provided him. By the time he had spent a year at Antioch, the Christian leaders there realized that Paul's breadth of mind and perfect grasp of the gospel plan fitted him for work among the Gentiles. In Galatians he says, "It pleased God who separated me from my mother's womb and called me through His grace to reveal His son in me that I might preach him among the nations." This word "nations" and other similar expressions in Paul's writings show us that he was not a haphazard worker, that he went as a Christian statesman into the task of making Judaism dominant in the world. It was now a Judaism whose Messiah had been crucified, but was risen and alive. It was this idea with all the wonderful doctrine resulting from it that Paul was determined to throw into the "melting-pot with which Rome's policy was stirring and mixing the nations."

Accordingly, as soon as he was authorized by the infant Church to take the field as champion of the faith among the Gentiles, we see him attacking with the truth the very capitals of the Roman world. His first missionary route covered the centers of life and influence in Asia, and then he heard the Macedonian call to Europe. The first capital upon the European continent to which he carried the gospel was Philippi, the eastern terminus of the great Egnatian highway. Though shamefully treated in Philippi and imprisoned, he and Silas had a miraculous deliverance and he left behind him there a Christian congregation which ever afterwards he cherished with utmost affection.

It is not surprising that the next stronghold which he charged with the gospel was the next great station on the Egnatian highway, the powerful maritime city of Saloniki. Here his stay was short, for in a few weeks he was unceremoniously ejected by his own people, the Jews. But during the months that followed while he was preaching in Athens and other cities, news reached his ears from people who were traveling from Salonikl that the gospel which he had left there had struck root. Therefore, in his anxiety to have confirmation of this news, he sent the young man Timothy to Salonikl, in order that he might learn the true situation. Timothy, returning by appointment to Corinth, was able to give a glowing account. Paul, enthusiastic over the success, and realizing that he had gone among the Thessalonians, "not in word only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," took up his pen, and wrote his first letter to the Thessalonians which is the earliest document of the Christian religion which has come down to us. Probably the chief reason why he wrote it was because Timothy had told him that, though they were standing fast in faith, there was some dismay over the death of a few members, and as they had been led to believe from Paul's preaching that Jesus would come again quickly, they were afraid that these who had died might miss Him. He wished to reassure and comfort them in this matter. His sentences burn with love: "For ye are our glory and joy." Though it is a short epistle, it covers almost the whole gamut of Christian doctrine. His inner joy that the gospel had found a footing in the capital of Macedonia appears, as he writes: "And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost; so that ye were examples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia. For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to godward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything."

The lost clause of the above, "so that we need not to speak anything," shows the confidence that Paul had in the gospel leaven which he had thrust into the great mass of humanity that surged in and to and from Saloniki, and in the way it was beginning to work. He expresses joy that they had turned from idols to serve the living, true God.

Paul knew that Saloniki was a stratgetic center of life and influence. During the succeeding century it became the bulwark of Oriental Christendom. The Roman Emperor Theodosius, whose services for State and Church won for him the title of "Great," received his baptism at the hand of Ascolius, Bishop of Thessalonica. The Church there was largely instrumental in the conversion of the Bulgarians, Russians, and other great Slavic peoples of Europe. It received the designation of the Orthodox City; and the withdrawal of the provinces subject to its jurisdiction from the See of Rome about 730 A. D., became one of the principal causes of the separation of East and West.

LAY LEADERS AND THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson, D.D.

Why should the District Lay Leaders be members of the Annual Conferences?

1. Because the laymen are not adequately represented. The preachers of the Church number only one to 300 of our membership, yet they make up six-sevenths of the voting strength of the Conference. It is in accord with the hour in which we live, with the growing sense of the worth and capacity of the laymen, and with a sense of fairness in the division of responsibility that laymen should have a larger share in the affairs of the Kingdom.

2. Because these lay leaders are truly representatives of the Church. They do not represent a class or a special interest. They are elected by the same body that elects other Lay Delegates, except one who is elected by the Annual Conference. We trust the District Conference to elect four. Can we not also trust the same body to elect a fifth? When elected will the fifth man be any less representative than the other four? In addition to the fact that this electoral body will be choosing a Lay Leader, they will be conscious at the same time that they are electing a member of the Annual Conference also, and will make their selection accordingly.

This has been called class legislation. Surely this is using words without thinking of their meaning. In what sense is it class legislation? There is not a layman in the Church who is excluded from the benefit of this legislation. There is not a voter who is excluded from his electoral right. These men have no special interests to serve. What are the duties assigned these men composing the Board of Lay Activities in the Annual Conference? "The duties of this Board to consist of considering plans for the better support of the ministry, the larger activity of laymen in evangelistic work and co-operation with other Conference Boards in executing their plans for larger service in all Church work." Par. 413. No one of these duties is a "special interest," and there is nothing here to be dreaded. These men have no salary; no position of honor open to them; no temptation to protect a class.

3. They represent the entire lay activities of the Church. The same General Conference that originated this legislation gave to the laymen's work in the Church organic form and legal recognition. The Committee on Lay Activities in the Annual Conference was formed. These activities are represented under three heads: Missions, Social Service, Evangelism. These three departments of Lay Activity are meant to include all the forms of lay service in the Church. When a Lay Leader is admitted to the Annual Conference he is there not only as a representative of the great body of laymen in the Church, but as one who has knowledge, skill and interest in the lines of work committed to laymen by act of the General Conference. The preacher properly has a predominent place in the Annual Conference because he has special knowledge and skill and interest in the affairs of the body. For the same reason these laymen, whose office puts them in a similar relation to laymen's work, should by all reason have a place in the councils of the Church. The purpose of representation in a delegated body is to secure two things, viz., (1) The representation of the interests and desires of those represented. (2) A knowledge of and devotion to the interests to be represented. These Lay Leaders fulfill these requirements. They are elected by the people they are to represent and not by any special class or organization, and they are chosen because of their special fitness to represent the great trunk line interests of the Kingdom.

The suggestion that laymen of other Boards should bear the same relation to the Annual Conference as these Leaders is a curious mode of reasoning. In the first place, the Lay Members of other Boards are not chosen in the same way. They are nominated by the presiding elders and elected by the Conference. They are, therefore, not representative in any general sense. They are not delegated by any tributary body. Such a form of ex-officio membership would make it possible for the Annual Conferences, on nomination of the presiding elders, to double their lay membership at will, and would open the way for dangerous manipulation. Those who, like myself, would like to see the lay representation increased would naturally hesitate to increase it in that way.

In the next place, the members of other Boards are appointed to represent definite interests. Their duties are not to look after general interests, but specific. The cry of "special interests" could be raised against them with some show of reason.

4. Not only does the Church need these men, but they deserve this recognition. I have for ten years been thrown in the most intimate official and personal relations with leading laymen of the Church. My deliberate judgment is that they are as devoted, as self-denying, and as competent as the average preacher. They love the Church and can be trusted with its interests. They labor and travel and spend their own money, asking nothing in return. Sometimes they have to face discouragement and, sad to say, even scant courtesy at the hands of those they are trying to serve, but they keep right on. Their names are on high. We can afford to record them on our membership rolls. "He that will be great among you let him be servant of all." This badge of honor these men as a class have won. We should recognize it and give them and their fellow-workers the encouragement and the confidence they deserve.

I cannot conceive that the Church will negative this legislation. It is in the interest of progress, and is in recognition of the most significant and most hopeful movement of the last half century. To veto this reasonable and logical legislation would be to discourage and to hurt the movement.

If defeated, this defeat will be due to the votes of preachers. Will it be quite considerate and generous for the preachers who already have a lifetime tenure as members of the Annual Conference to close the door on these men, who like themselves are set apart to a definite official relation and work in the Church?

SHALL THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE HAVE EX-OFFICIO MEMBERS?

Rev. W. F. Dunkle, Ph. D.

The above question is to be answered by the Annual Conference at this annual session. It comes to them from the General Conference in the form of an amendment to the Constitution, proposing to make the Annual Conference and the District Conference lay leaders members ex-officio of the Annual Conference.

Undoubtedly there is a widespread feeling that we should have a larger lay membership in the Annual Conference, and with this feeling I am in fullest sympathy. Likewise, there is a fixed desire to advance in every wise way the interest of the Laymen's Movement. Nobody desires anything but to help it forward. This proposed measure has the merit of combining both these desires—a desire to increase the lay membership in the Annual Conference, and to help the Laymen's Movement. It is conceded that it will give some increase to the membership of the Annual Conference. But the question is, do we want increase at any cost? The proposed measure has some very serious objections.

1. It is class legislation of the baldest and openest sort. Being such, it inevitably discriminates against all and every other Conference Board, together with the interests in their hands. The lay members of no other Conference board are also members of the Annual Conference. It remains for the Board of Lay Activities to ask and be granted this special favor. On what ground, one wonders?

2. It opens the door for every other board to ask for a like consideration, and it places the General and Annual Conferences where they cannot well afford to deny the request, not to say demand, if made.

3. It introduces into our Conferences the dangerous practice of having "special representation for special interests." And once this practice is legalized, it would inevitably grow until each board had it. Then the Conference would be in the hands of groups, each seeking to advance its own special interest, regardless of the effect on the whole.

4. It would place the balance of power in every trial by ballot, where the laymen voted separately, in the hands of these "special interest" representatives. And they could, if they wished, always control elections. Hence, it would be possible to send to the General Conference lay delegations who were the special representatives of the special interest that elected them.

5. It introduces into Methodism a new thing —"ex-officio" membership. And, weighty as are the objections hitherto mentioned, they are

THE PUZZLE OF MAN.

Alice Gorton Wynn.

My wife demands the right to vote!
Give her the chance, I say;
She has more wit than dull Sam Groat,
Who pitches coal all day.

She has more sense than hulky Joe
Who leads the big brass band,
Or shallow Pasqual Angelo
Who runs a peanut-stand.

Although she has no cards of State,
How fine her usefulness!
A judge's work is not as great,
A mayor's office, less.

I see the children 'round her knee,
I know her constant care
In all good works—it seems to me
She more than does her share.

So, my bewilderment's complete
Why she, sweet Puritan,
Should wish to ride on life's front seat
And drive the car for man!

THE GIBSON MEMORIAL WINDOW AGAIN.

To the members of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please hear my last appeal for this window. The Gibson Memorial Church of Vicksburg has been built at a cost of about $11,000. We owe $1900 on the building, including the windows. The General Board of Church Extension has promised to pay one-half of the entire debt if the Church will pay the other half by the time of the Annual Conference.

I am canvassing for this $950 among my members and have secured one-half of it in cash and good subscriptions up to this date—Oct. 21. Now, if you will pay the balance due on the memorial window you will be doing double service. You will not only be bestowing a worthy honor on the memory of the first Methodist missionary to the Natchez country, Rev. Tobias Gibson, but every $1 you put into this window means $2 toward the payment of this church debt. Now, brethren, you sent me here to build this church, and I have done the best I could, and I feel that I deserve at least a respectful hearing.

Since the last report we have received contributions as follows: Rev. T. B. Holloman, $5; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, $5; and Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., $2. The window cost $100, and $42 has been paid on it. If you are ever going to help me, help me now.

Your brother,
L. L. ROBERTS, Pastor.

THE MILLSAPS PREACHERS' LEAGUE.

Dear Dr. Meek: The ministerial students of Millsaps College have organized again the Preachers' League, headed this year by H. M. Johnson, last year's President and an acknowledged leader among the young preachers. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference, and is thoroughly capable of presiding over a band of future ministers. C. W. Alford, a local preacher in the Jackson District, was elected Vice President, and was also given the task of organizing a Preachers' Quartette. J. L. Cockrum, another Jackson District local preacher, was elected Secretary. Since preachers, as a rule, are without an excess of money, no treasurer was elected. Some are inclined to think that leaving this office vacant was irony on the part of the President, who seemed to have had experience elsewhere.

Various committees were appointed, and all are working hard to make this a successful year for the Millsaps Preachers' League. At the time of this writing, twenty-eight of the thirty-five ministerial students enrolled in Millsaps College have become active and earnest members of the Preachers' League. This is a better showing than was made any year since the establishment of the College.

Formerly the League met twice a month; but it was voted first by an overwhelming majority, and then unanimously, that the League should meet every week. This is an indication that the members are not idle, but have the interest of the League at heart and are working to place it above the various other organizations of the College.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of the College, seems very much interested in the work of the League, and has not failed to be present at every meeting, helping here and there, and speaking words of encouragement and helpfulness. The local pastors are interested, and already some have been present and have spoken before the future pastors of Mississippi and other States—perhaps before future Bishops or missionaries.

The pessimistic theory that "a good beginning makes a bad ending" has long since been proven worthless, but this year the Millsaps Preachers' League will give it the knockout blow.

The League has had a good beginning and will have a good ending. God will not allow anything fostered by His servants to decay, if the servants will only do their part.

At a later date, I will write and tell more of the work of our League. Respectfully,

G. HILTON BUTLER.

THE ANTI-SALOON CHURCH.

Tne Anti-Saloon League is "the Church in action against the saloon." There may be some who dispute this, but they are not found in the ranks of the liquor dealers. The following comment on this subject from the current number of the Liquor Dealers' Journal, a Pennsylvania trade journal, fairly expresses the opinion of the whole liquor fraternity:

An anti-saloon speaker was reported in a paper the other day as boasting that they are getting $70,000 a year in this State to wipe us off the map. And where did these grafters get it? Why, from the poor people in the churches where the fool preachers let the anti-saloon gang go in and beg off the poor people.

But there are plenty of churches that won't stand for that kind of graft. Their preachers are fair and will not stand for it. They believe in a square deal for the licensed liquor dealer. So they quietly adopt the budget system and that rules out the antis.

Of course some of these preachers may talk against us to please some fanatics, but talk is cheap and harmless; we have nothing to fear from the church as long as it continues to deal fairly with us and keeps the A. S. L. out.

Every licensed dealer ought to remember that every preacher who shuts his pulpit against the reformers is only doing justly by one of the country's great industries, whether he does it with a noble purpose or not. Sometimes it is the influence of the banker or butcher or the grocer in the official body of the Church which bars out the beggars.

It is time for the men engaged in the wine, beer and whiskey industry to recognize the foregoing facts and stand by their natural allies when they contribute to the Church, when they start a bank account, or when they buy meat and groceries.

This is indeed fulsome praise for the Church which has stood by contentedly doing nothing while other churches all around have been in the thick of the fight which has driven John Barleycorn back to his last trenches. The do-nothing church, regardless of whatever motive prompts this policy, is embraced by the liquor traffic as a friend.

It must rejoice the heart of every Christian woman who reads the above excerpt from a fighting liquor sheet, to know that the churches are becoming more closely united and more determined in their effort to overthrow their common enemy, the liquor traffic.

The Liquor Dealers' Journal has unconsciously paid a beautiful compliment to the anti-saloon church.—American Issue.

DR. WILLIAM J. LAMKIN.

Dr. William Joseph Lamkin, son of John Tillman Lamkin and Thurza Ann Kilgore Lamkin, was born in Holmesville, Pike County, Miss., on Nov. 24, 1843, and died in Gloster, Miss., July 18, 1916. At the very beginning of the Civil War, leaving school, he joined the Oxford Grays, later belonging to the Sixteenth Mississippi Infantry, and served as a Confederate soldier through the whole war.

After the war, he studied medicine at Tulane, graduating in 1868. He was married to Miss Mary A. Conerly in 1867. He practiced medicine in Pike, Franklin, Lincoln, and Amite Counties. He settled in Gloster while the town was yet in its infancy and spent the remainder of his life there.

Thirty-two years of faithful service as a physician endeared him to many homes through a large area, of which Gloster is the center. He became long ago in a very real sense "the beloved physician" of the large community. This fact was in evidence on the day of his funeral, when the stores were all closed for the hour, and, although it rained, an immense congregation came to the Methodist Church and paid tribute to his memory.

He had been an invalid for many months, unable to leave home; but he continued to practice, patients coming to him, to the hour of his death, which came suddenly. His daughter came to call him to dinner as he lay resting on the lounge, and found him dead. He and his wife, who sat near, had been conversing but a few minutes before. Thus peacefully, without pain or a groan or a sigh, he passed into the other land.

He did a great deal of charity practice and was specially kind to the poor. Women and little children, especially among the poor, loved him devotedly; a poor little sufferer was hastening to him when he died.

He joined the Methodist Church in 1885. He lived his religion after the manner of his Lord, "who went about doing good." Bright and cheerful and helpful, he lived his life and served the Lord Christ. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

PROTESTANTISM GAINING IN INDIA.

Catholics are still slightly in the majority among the Christians of India, not considering the Eurasians. There are 1,294,000 Roman Catholics out of a total Christian population of 3,574,000. However, in the last ten years Protestants have increased almost twice as rapidly as Catholics, the Catholic increase for that period being 272,000 and the Protestant nearly half a million.—Missionary Voice.

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

WHY ONE RULE FOR THE NORTH AND ANOTHER FOR THE SOUTH?

By the Editor.

Some have been disposed to censure those in our Church who have criticised the "plan of unification" adopted by the Northern Methodist General Conference at Saratoga. We do not see why that plan should be exempt from criticism when editors and leading men in the Church, North, discussed adversely and assailed so vigorously the plan framed by the Joint Commission on Federation (on which they had representatives) and which was approved by our General Conference. We give below a few extracts from editorials and other utterances which appeared in Northern papers, subsequent to our last General Conference, which met in Oklahoma City:

Zion's Herald of October 20, 1915, in referring editorially to the plan adopted by our General Conference, said:

"We must not, ostrich-like, ignore the difficulties, but neither must we magnify them. Without question the crucial problem in unification will have to do with the Negro. * * * Of this one thing we are sure—our branch of Methodism will never prove false to the Negro. From the first Zion's Herald has insisted that there can be no compromise at this point. Not only his rights, but whatever will make for the development and growth of the race, must be absolutely safeguarded in all discussions of the question of unification. We are pleased to be able to state that while the Southern Church did make a proposition of separation, leaders in that organization are certain that that is simply an incidental, and that the question may be adjusted on the basis of the federation plan or some modification of it."

This same journal in its issue of February 2, 1916, in an editorial opposing the election of Negro Bishops by the Church, North, to serve their own race, again spoke as follows:

"Do not they (Negro leaders favoring such Bishops) see that they are in this advocating the very thing that demeans them—a Bishop among other Bishops who will not be on an equality with his brethren? Do they not see that this is the very thing being done to keep the race under in political and business circles? It is this spirit that results in setting aside sections in cities in which to segregate the Negroes. It is the same spirit that crept into the administration offices in Washington not long since to keep the Negroes by themselves. It is this same spirit that works itself out in what are colloquially called Jim Crow cars. The whole thing, from beginning to end, in its perfected form, is bad, iniquitous, wicked. * * * If the Church can find a Negro who has the qualities of heart and mind, the qualities of genuine manhood and leadership for the high office of a general superintendent, let him be elected for that purpose and assigned to a Negro area. (Such an assignment of course would rest upon the mere will of the College of Bishops, having no basis in law.—Ed. Ad.) * * * We must not go into the negotiations for the unification of American Methodism handicapped by a Jim Crow episcopacy. That will never do. The only way in which we can face this very critical question, this very crucial question, is with all our members on a footing of absolute equality. We can negotiate adequately upon no other basis."

Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, in the Central Christian Advocate (of Kansas City) in January 12, 1915, among other things, said:

"The Central also showed (in a previous number) beyond peradventure that the particular plan 'suggested' by the Joint Commission (which had been approved by our General Conference.—Ed. Ad.) was a 'suggestion;' that it can be openly and frankly discussed without disrespect to our great Southern sister; that it can not only be discussed, but frankly criticised; and that should it be 'rejected by the General Conference and the churches' of the Methodist Episcopal Church (to quote the precise language of the instrument), the act cannot be construed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as an act of either discourtesy or procrastination, or, in any particular, a disparagement of the principle of organic union, etc. * * * We would not place one straw across the path of this aspiration for union. We realize its necessity. * * * And silence is sometimes a better friendship than many words. But silence can no longer be tolerated. We wish, therefore, with as much fairness and personal detachment as we can command, to show the Methodist Episcopal Church exactly what the proposed plan will do, so our General Conference and people may know exactly what is ahead and inevitable if the particular plan now before us is adopted and put into operation."

Here followed an analysis of the plan in question after which Dr. Spencer proceeded to say:

"The first thing to go down, so far as the Methodist Episcopal Church is concerned in this reorganization, is its name. * * * It will be a sorrowful day when that noble and mighty ensign is hauled down and tucked away to the moths and corrosions of some hidden box in the museum of history. * * * Second, 'UNION BY DIVISION.' We do not know who invented that phrase. In any event, it states a fact. * * * It is the prattle of infants to talk, as we hear some in our own ranks talk, about dividing white Methodism in America into three areas based on meridians running from Canada to the Gulf and the Rio Grande. No man will ever sincerely advance that proposition who has read history. * * * The basis of carving the area of American Methodism, therefore, if it comes to pass, will be along the lines that keep the North in the North and the South in the South, and the common ground of the West where, without let or hindrance, both bodies are now building altar against altar in concord and good feeling, a third by itself. The dream of Nathan Scarritt will be attained. It is our conviction that an attack on this classification will prove in fact an attack on the PLAN.

"As for lifting a voice in the affairs of the other, either north or south of the meridian parallel of latitude, each body, the Church in the North and the Church in the South, will be as dumb as it is to-day. This is embedded in the bond; it is a 'basic principle,' to use a phrase of Bishop Hoss, in the Plan sent to us from the Church, South, as the 'suggestion' for the union of American Methodism. In reality, will it not be two Churches masquerading as one?"

Bishop R. J. Cooke, who is now on the Northern Commission of Twenty-five, in Zion's Herald of December 29, 1915, thus expressed himself:

"Examine the plan that is before us. It shows upon its face that it rests wholly upon the underlying feeling or conviction that there is such incongruity between the peoples of the two Churches, such consciousness of latent hostility, such consciousness of latent incompatibility with one another, that we must think of a divided Church, a sectional Church, under the illusion of a united Church, in order to have any sort of a plan of union at all. But where is the union? The South in this plan will not trust the North. It consolidates itself, but cuts up the rest. No section is to trust the other to make laws, rules, and regulations for the whole. Each shall make its own laws. In this plan the supreme General Conference at bottom is nothing more than a clearing-house for the Boards. What spontaneity of thought or feeling is there in such a document? It is union by disruption. Instead of the union of Methodism, we have the disruption of Methodism. * * * The Methodist Episcopal Church is invited to commit suicide. It is to carve itself, under the guise of reorganization, into segments, fragments, divisions, each segment to think itself a unit, in itself independent, and yet dependent, with about as much unity in a collective whole as there is in a scrap heap. Was there ever such a proposition?" (If any Southern Methodist leader or editor has arraigned the Saratoga enactment in a manner so severe as this, we have failed to see it. Ed. Ad.)

In its issue of November 1, 1915, the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate made the following utterance in its leading editorial, which was very extended:

"We regret to say it, and have hesitated to do so, but we are convinced after mature reflection that the most serious present hindrance to the organic union of the Methodist Churches, and particularly of the two Episcopal Methodist Churches, is the plan of unification suggested by the Joint Commission, and now proposed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Methodist Episcopal Church as a BASIS for further negotiation, a tentative plan, but one which is to be 'elaborated and perfected,' after being definitely accepted by our General Conference. On the face of it the proposition submitted to us by the Church, South, seems very simple. Surely no harm could come from an attempt to 'elaborate and perfect a tentative plan. But it must not be overlooked that the Church, South, has declared itself in favor, not of organic union on a plan to be devised by the Joint Commission, using the plan suggested as a starting point, but in favor of the plan suggested with the modification recommended. * * * Of course, the Church, South, is within its rights in making its proposal so plain and definite and is acting wisely, not to say shrewdly, in presenting such a proposition. We shall be exceedingly foolish if we discuss organic union and ignore the plan, or even postpone the discussion of it. * * * Now we are told at the threshold of any discussion of the subject that we must not hark back to 1844 and the controversies of that unhappy time. It is contended that the solemn treaties upon which the Churches have entered preclude the raising of issues which have been buried and ought to have been forgotten. The contention seems reasonable and Christian. But the plan itself harks back. Under the guise of union it proposes to perpetuate the sectional division provided for under dire stress and distress in 1844 by the Plan of Separation.

"It should be known to all who are to have a part in determining the action of the Church at this time, as it is known to careful readers of the Journal, that in the General Conference of 1844 William Capers, one of the most prominent and able of the Southern leaders, introduced a series of resolution, proposing constitutional changes so as to provide for two General Conferences to meet quadrennially, one in the South and one in the North, 'to make rules and regulations for the Church, within their territorial limits respectively, and to elect Bishops on the same.' One was to be known as the Southern General Conference and the other as the Northern General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. The constitutional restrictions were to continue in force upon both General Conferences, thus securing the doctrines, general rules, and polity of the Church. The Book Concerns at New York and Cincinnati and the foreign missionary organizations were to serve the whole Church, the editors and agents being elected in the Northern General Conference, with a provision for the casting of the Southern vote by delegates sent for that purpose. This plan embodied the basic principles of the plan now proposed, and has the merit of simplicity which cannot be claimed for the plan we are asked to accept seventy years after.

"But the fathers of 1844 did not accept the plan of Capers, wisely regarding separation itself, much as they all deplored and dreaded that, as more desirable and less likely to cause friction which would become intolerable. Yet IN BASIC PRINCIPLE, what essential difference is there between the plan proposed by William Capers in 1844 and that now before us? It will be said that times have changed, and that what could not be done in 1844, can now be done easily. Precisely so, and that is just why a plan embodying the basic principles both of that suggested by Capers and that which was adopted in 1844 in the Plan of Separation should not be thought of at this time.

"It will readily be seen why discerning leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, can so cordially endorse the present proposed plan. It embodies in basic principle all their fathers asked for in 1844, all they could hope for then, and all the Church, South, now desires for itself; AND IT CARRIES WITH IT THE FINAL AND COMPLETE VINDICATION OF THEIR FATHERS IN WHAT THEY DEMANDED AT THAT TIME AND IN THE ACTION THEY THEN TOOK.' (In nothing that has been spoken or written since the action of the Northern General Conference last spring have we seen a more insistent dissent from the paper that it adopted than the one which is here made from that which was sent out from Oklahoma City. In some instances the italics used in the foregoing quotations are ours.—Ed. Ad.)

There are some persons who profess to see no difference between the plan approved by our General Conference at Oklahoma City in 1911 and that adopted by the Northern General Conference at Saratoga in May 1916. If there be no material difference between the two schemes put forward, why should the Northern Methodist papers, that we have just quoted, which so assailed our plan, now so heartily approve their own, as without exception they are doing?

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Church News

Bishop David H. Greer, of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, has recently been afflicted with an attack of neuritis.

The schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have almost without exception reported an attendance in advance of that of last year.

According to a contemporary, there are in the Sunday schools of the Southern Methodist Church 7650 Wesley Bible Classes, with about 230,000 members.

The Alumnae of the Greensboro (N. C.) College for Women, one of our Church schools, are engaged in raising $10,000 to endow the Chair of English in that institution.

Bishop W. R. Lambuth delivered the principal address at the centennial celebration of the American Bible Society at the late session of the California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dr. J. H. Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, who is perhaps America's most popular preacher, spent his three months' vacation (which recently ended) in England and Scotland.

Mississippi has 14 young lady students attending the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., and Louisiana has 17. The total enrollment at this institution is 592, of whom 46 are from the city of Lynchburg.

The statistics submitted at the Protestant Episcopal Convention, lately held in St. Louis, showed that there are now in that denomination 5750 clergymen and 1,080,000 communicants. Of these clergymen, it was stated that about 1000 were not engaged in parochial work.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will meet at Trinity College, Durham, N. C., November 16-17. President Few, of Trinity, will on that occasion deliver an address on "A New Emphasis on Education." Dr. Few is one of the ablest of our Southern Methodist educators.

Mr. Winston Borum, a son of Dr. W. A. Borum, of Jackson, Miss., who is one of the most efficient Baptist pastors in Mississippi, has lately been ordained as a Baptist minister. We could scarcely make a better wish for this young preacher than to express the hope that he may follow faithfully in his father's footsteps in devotion and usefulness.

Rev. Walter J. Johnson, pastor of Grace Church, Dallas, has received 274 members during the past ten months, the present numerical strength of this congregation being about 1000. The Sunday school is contributing $600 annually toward the support of Miss Annice Siler, a missionary in Hiroshima, Japan. Mr. Johnson, the popular leader of this active flock, is an ex-Mississippian.

Zion's Herald says: "Bishop Franklin Hamilton highly prizes a gavel presented to him at the Erie Conference by Dr. J. C. McDonald, superintendent of the Meadville District. The gavel was made from the work bench used by John Brown when he was a tanner in Meadville." The Northern Methodist brethren do not seem to miss any opportunity of exhibiting their admiration for John Brown.

Rev. R. A. Clark is closing out a notably successful four years' pastorate at the First M. E. Church, South, of Jackson, Tenn. He will leave a beautiful $80,000 house of worship as a monument to his labors, and all the departments of the church are said to be in excellent condition. One of the latest achievements of this congregation was the raising of $1000 to support Rev. H. C. Ritter, of Columbia, S. C., as its missionary pastor in China.

Since 1892 the Trinity College library has increased from 8000 to nearly 50,000 volumes. Some gifts to that great institution this year were an oil portrait of the lamented Governor T. J. Jarvis, of North Carolina, by his wife, and a beautiful stone wall extending around the entire campus by Mr. Benjamin N. Duke, who also greatly improved the roads and walks about the college and established the "John McTyeire Flowers Lectureship on Christian Citizenship" as a memorial to a brilliant son of Trinity of the class of 1900.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE IN THE PANHANDLE.

How the Board of Church Extension Came to the Rescue.

By Mrs. Mollie Shutt.

In the winter of 1914, when the Northwest Texas Conference convened at Sweetwater, we were sent to the Gageby Circuit. This was the first time that a charge by that name had appeared upon the Conference map. However, it was listed among the self-supporting charges. After a trip of about 400 miles by rail and automobile, we found the parsonage at Cataline, in the Gageby Valley, Hemphill County, Texas. This is far up in the northern end of the Panhandle. This particular appointment (Cataline) was part of an old mission which had been established here some twenty years prior to this time, but it was surrounded by big ranches and these were owned now mostly by people not in sympathy or harmony with Methodism or the Christian religion. There was not a store or business house of any kind in the place. To the east of the parsonage was a great ranch of thirty-five sections. Even the postoffice had been moved seven miles away. Far to the north and east stretched the great prairie upon which antelopes and jack-rabbits scampered and played by day and coyotes barked by night.

The parsonage and church lot was composed of eight acres of fine black western land. Through the midst of this tract flowed the Gageby Creek, clear as crystal, rippling over sparkling sands. It would be in vain for me to attempt to describe the beauty of Gageby Creek, now dashing and splashing over a little cataract, now spreading out in its course to many yards wide, then narrowing down until a deer could spring over it, then deepening at intervals, where the fish have their habitation. Almost any one in the Upper Panhandle who has ever followed hunting or trapping knows something of the Gageby Creek. There are many beaver dams along its course, these animals being protected by the ranchmen, who say they are very valuable to a ranch. In the winter-time ducks by the thousands float upon these glassy waters. Along this beautiful stream prairie chickens, quails, and rabbits also have their habitation. Among the branches of the trees birds of great variety and plumage chirp and sing their merry notes. Along the banks of this creek was a model place for the preacher to spend his "blue" Mondays, with hook and line, angling for the finny tribe. Some choice specimens of these found their way to the parsonage table in the early spring.

Thus things went on quietly until one evening in April there was an inky-looking cloud up the creek, far to the west, with a wonderful electrical display. No word painter can do justice to an electrical display in these high latitudes. First the shimmering lightning along the horizon with deep base thunder, then as the cloud rises higher and grows larger, and nearer, all Jove's thundershops seem to be doing business at the same time. The heavens crossed and checked and recrossed with threads of fire as if some ethereal monster was turned loose to kindle the universe into an inextinguishable flame. It was a display like this, only much more terrific and indescribable, which did business along the Gageby Valley above the little parsonage in April, 1915. But, strange to say, there was no precipitation at the parsonage. But soon the clouds in splendor rolled away, and as night came on the stars in countless numbers took their wonted places in the heavens. I had heard talk of sudden western rises, when a wall of water would come down, sweeping all movable things with it. I suggested to my husband, "Do you suppose there is any danger of that creek rising?" He replied: "I will go out and have a look at it before I retire, and see how it is behaving."

The parsonage stood out on the little elevation a hundred yards from the creek. However, he walked out to see the little creek before retiring and found it rippling along as usual within its own glossy banks, doing business at the old stand. So all retired, feeling perfectly safe. A little while before day-break the following morning there was a roaring, crashing of driftwood, fences and telephone poles. We jumped up and opened the door to look out upon a sea of water. The little creek had suddenly become a great river, and had not only come up to the parsonage, but had spread itself out about a hundred yards beyond. The inmates all escaped unhurt before a second wall came, which carried the parsonage down the creek some distance, where it lodged in some trees. A friendly Methodist ranchman opened his doors to receive the preacher and his family temporarily. Of course, household effects were largely ruined. What was to be done? A new parsonage must be built at a more eligible location. But it was a new charge—where was the money to come from?

We remembered that we had a Board of Church Extension, whose business it was to help the needy. We wrote to the different members of the Board and laid the facts before them, and asked for an early reply. The response was, "Go ahead and build and we will do our best for you." We did build. This was written early in December. Conference is now over. The application was granted. We now occupy the new parsonage at Zybach, Texas, a growing village, about two hundred feet above high-water mark and nearly three thousand feet above sea level. So much for the Board of Church Extension. Things like these were not done before the days of Church Extension.

There are but few churches or parsonages in the West that the Church Extension Board did not figure in their building. To hear a Western man say, "I do not believe in missions or Church Extension," is like a child saying after it gets large enough to care for itself, "I do not believe in mothers." The Church Extension Board is a powerful arm of mission work.

There is no fiction about this article, but they are things that actually occurred in the year of our Lord, 1915.

THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

By R. G. Moore.

O that men would feel the cross
Which Jesus bore alone!
Then worldly joy would be but dross,
Compared with His love on Calvary shown.

Help me, O Christ, that they may know
The shame, the anguish, the sacrifice,
The offering of that crimson flow,
Which washes sin as white as snow.

'Twas by Thine all-embracing love
For precious souls of dying men,
That Thou didst reveal the Father above,
Who, for Thy sake, doth pardon sin.

O mortal man, to Jesus flee'
In thy utter helplessness!
For the blessed Christ who died for thee
Awaits thy soul to own and bless.

Let the cross of Christ be your delight;
Your every need it will surely meet.
Boast in it with all your might,
For in the cross, life is complete.

Hesterville, Miss.

THE BROKEN TELEPHONE.

Mrs. George S. Brown.

"Uptown 1247!"

"Uptown 1247, I said!"

"Yes, Uptown 1247! can't you hear?"

"I said Uptown, not Main."

"Are you deaf? Not 1249, but 1247."

"Oh, pshaw! Does 7 sound like 9?"

"Busy?"—A moment's pause and again—"1247 Uptown."

"Busy still? O I don't believe it!"

Russell Frazier hung up the receiver of the 'phone rather impatiently. He waited a few moments and then demanded his number peremptorily. "Oh, I know Uptown 1247 can't be always busy, and if you don't give it to me at once I will report you. Can't you attend to your business?"

Another minute's pause and he again demanded the number.

"Oh, come off! I know the line is not busy."

Russell pressed the 'phone again and again, calling repeatedly and receiving no answer. In a white heat he arose from the 'phone, slamming it against the wall and splintering it.

Just then his mother came out of her room, and looking reproachfully at her son, said, "Oh, Russell, my boy, how can you get into such a temper and with an inanimate thing like a telephone? Now look at the 'phone, broken all to pieces and what good did your anger accomplish? You will now have to pay to have it mended and can not get the number you want all the evening, whereas if you had waited patiently you would probably have been talking to your party."

"Good gracious, mother, I was patience itself, but no one can stand such monkey business with these telephone girls. They sit around and gossip, paying no attention to calls. That is what is the matter. You know that line could not be busy all the evening."

"Oh, Russell, Russell! it makes me shudder to think of what your temper may do some day if you do not learn to control it. Suppose you should get that angry some time with a schoolmate or any human being and have a dangerous weapon in your hand? Many a man has gone to the penitentiary or the scaffold because he killed a fellow-man in a temper."

Russell looked somewhat abashed, but still defended himself. "Oh, mother, you take things so seriously. Of course, I would not hit a boy like that, and I will pay for the 'phone myself. It was foolish, but those telephone girls make me so mad. They never pay any attention to their business."

"How do you know that Russell? Do you not get your number oftener than you fail to get it? Did you ever think of how tedious it must be to sit hour after hour, day after day, with a muffler over your ears, listening to a constant buzzing sound, hitching and unhitching an instrument, never daring to leave your post, hearing constant exclamations of impatience, with seldom a kindly word; busy Sunday as well as every other day, with few diversions, and nothing pleasing to the eye? Have you ever been in school when the fire engine or a parade passed by and you could not get up and look at it? Do you remember how inattentive your mind became to your lesson?"

"I had not thought of that, mother."

"Well, dear, the telephone girls are human beings just as you and I are, with feelings like ours, and nerves wrought up to the highest pitch. No doubt they, too, often feel a desire to answer back at the 'phone and to utter impatient exclamations, but they would lose their places if they did; so they must keep a silent tongue, and some of them are refined, nice girls, who have to make a living, and I do not want my boy to make it harder for them. Moreover, dear, you must remember that it has not been many years since communication was made so easy. The time is not far removed when we had to go and tell our message or write it, and now all we have to do is to press a button and once in a while wait a few minutes to get an answer. At the most you waited fifteen minutes and exploded because you did not get connection. Was the message so very important?"

Russell hung his head, for he knew he could have well waited. It was just to know about some "Frat" meeting and he felt thoroughly ashamed of himself. Mrs. Russell, being a wise mother and not a nagging one, said no more and Russell went to a store near-by to call up the Company and tell them to come and fix the 'phone, and they promised to send a man up next day.

Russell slept in a room adjoining his mother and little sister, and in the night he heard a hoarse bark and a strangling sound, and his mother ran to the 'phone to call up the doctor. She then remembered that the 'phone was broken and called hurriedly to Russell to get up and dress as Florence had croup. "Run to the nearest drug store, Russell, for some ipecac and ring up the doctor," she exclaimed.

She said nothing of the broken 'phone, but Russell remembered only too well, and, jumped into his trousers and shirt with lightning-like rapidity. All the while he heard the coarse cough, and, looking in at the door, saw his mother bending anxiously over his little sister who seemed to be fighting for breath. He ran every step of the way and pulled the drug store night-bell violently. Even as he waited he remembered his temper with the telephone and tried to be patient, but the little glimpse he had of Florence's fever-flushed cheeks and his mother's cry "to hurry" made the minutes seem like hours. He prayed as he had never done before, for he felt that if his little sister died he would be responsible. Again and again, he rang, but received no answer. Evidently the clerk had not slept at the drug store. He would only lose time trying to get in a neighbor's house to telephone and there was not a car in sight, so he sped on to the next drug store, praying as he went! "O Lord, don't let my little sister die. I broke the 'phone and if I can't get help for her she will die and I will be her murderer. Oh, I will never be so impatient again. I was ashamed of my temper, anyway, after mother talked to me. Lord, save her and try me this time."

On and on he sped, and his mother was praying, too, at home, for it seemed every minute as if little Florence would choke to death. She thought of her boy and prayed that it would not take little Florence's life to teach him the lesson he needed. Every now and then she would run to the 'phone and see if she could not hold the parts together so as to get connection, but no answer greeted her anxious ears.

Russell reached the second drug store before a car came and rang and knocked so repeatedly, that at last the old German druggist put his head out of the window and called, "Mein gracious! Gif me time to put on my breeches."

Russell did not remember to laugh about it until long afterwards, but he called back, "Oh, who cares for breeches? This is a matter of life and death, so let me use your 'phone and put me up a bottle of ipecac quickly. My little sister is dying. Oh, hurry, please hurry!"

He soon had the medicine, but the doctor was out on a night call, and when he again tried to get other doctors the exchange was busy, and he was so uneasy that he determined to run home first with the ipecac. He suddenly thought of the telephone exchange around the corner and blushed even as he did so, remembering his accusations of the early evening when he could not get his number. He ran to the Exchange, however, and saw the girls sitting bolt upright on duty, giving an attentive ear to every sound, and his conscience smote him. He had no time, however, to censure himself just then, but asked one of the girls if she would call up a doctor for him, as his little sister was dying. She was all sympathy and promptly went to the 'phone and began calling. Russell had only time for grateful acknowledgment, but his thoughts were busy and he wondered how he could have so misjudged the poor telephone girls who were working far into the night while he was sleeping.

Again there was no car in sight, but fear gave him the feet of Mercury and he reached the house before the doctor did in his machine. "Mother, mother," he called, "tell me I am not too late. Tell me Florence will live or I will never forgive myself."

Mrs. Frazier was not very hopeful, but she tried to smile reassuringly, seeing how nearly crazed the boy was, and when the medicine began to get in its work, and the nature of the cough changed a little, she put her hand on his bowed head and said, "Don't worry, dear. You have learned your lesson and God will spare our treasure to us."

The doctor came and stayed until daylight, when all danger was past. And when little Florence reached out and stroked her brother's head, as he knelt by her, and said: "Thank you, Russell, for running so fast for my medicine, I know you saved my life"—he felt that he had more to be thankful for than any boy in the world. "Dear little sister," he cried, "you don't know how near I came to being the cause of your death, but I will always remember it and it will help me to control this unruly temper of mine."

THE ADDRESS OF OUR COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

The Address of our Bishops issued at their semi-annual meeting in Atlanta, Ga., last week, which we are publishing on the first page of this number of the Advocate, should be carefully read and considered by Southern Methodists everywhere. Not for decades has so important a deliverance as this emanated from our Episcopal College, and it is destined to become historic, taking its place in our annals alongside that great utterance of our Chief Pasters which rallied and heartened our depleted, discouraged, and menaced Church at the beginning of the frightful era that followed in the wake of the Civil War. With every line of this vigorous, statesmanlike, and Christian message we are in the heartiest and fullest accord, and we doubt not that it will find a responsive echo in the hearts of a vast majority of our people.

Of course, there will be some who will seek to discredit this pronouncement and to counteract its influence by endeavoring to put forward the view that our Bishops had no right thus to speak and that they should have kept silent. But there is nothing either in the law of our Church or in its history to justify such a contention. As our Chief Pastors in this masterful paper have themselves said: "It is the prime duty of the Bishops 'to oversee the spiritual and temporal interests of the Church' and to call attention from time to time to all matters of serious importance." Our Bishops have always done this and the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church exercise a like function. The notion that our General Superintendents are elected to be "a set of dummies" who may not open their mouths and whose duties are restricted to a certain round of routine performances is a late-born conception that has come along with many other un-Methodist innovations that have sprung up among us. Who are so competent to counsel and guide the Church as are these brethren who travel all over its territory, who are members of all its more important boards, who carry its needs upon their hearts, and who see its complicated interests from every angle? To strip the Church of their active leadership would be to weaken it immeasurably. This leadership has contributed largely toward the making of Methodism in the United States, where it has achieved its noblest triumphs and attained to its greatest strength.

Of the timeliness of this episcopal deliverance, there can be no question. Much that has gone on among us since last May has been surprising and unfortunate, not to say humiliating. The widespread controversy into which the Church was plunged by those who presumed to exercise powers that had been specifically delegated to a body specially created to act for the Church in the negotiations concerning unification, thus diverting the proceedings from the designated official channel, was needless and most regrettable. The proclamations that union had virtually been effected by the action of the Northern General Conference at Saratoga, the premature celebrations of it, when not a word had been heard from the Commission which alone had a right to speak for our Church in construing the significance of that enactment, and the declaration that we were to be hurried into a joint General Conference with our sister denomination at an early date, for which the Church, North, was led to make provision, forced Southern Methodists who could see nothing to warrant such a precipitate course to take up the task of publicly combating it. Meanwhile, a work of intermingling congregations and other interests was going on in some localities in a manner that looked not a little like efforts toward the disintegration of Southern Methodism, and persons who could not stand for this program were forbidden to discuss what they conceived to be the difficulties in the way of its execution, or even so much as to refer to the distinguishing differences of the two denominations in the past—this, too, when, as we are showing elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, the Northern Methodist press had freely analyzed and criticised the action of our General Conference at Oklahoma City in May, 1914.

Nor is this yet all. Not even our honored dead—the noble men who toiled and sacrificed and suffered for our Church and the Kingdom of God in "the days that tried men's souls"—were passed over without being reflected upon in the sloppy utterances that were being scattered over the country. Every disaffected and disloyal element in the Connection seemed to feel that for it the clock of opportunity had struck and that the time had come for it to aid in the unmaking of Methodism and in the creation of a new and very different ecclesiasticism. To mention any obstacle in the way of union or to express a fear as to what the outcome might be, was to be branded as narrow, bigoted, and lacking in Christian love. Separation in the bygone years was spoken of as a silly mistake and its continuance in the future, it was declared, would be "a sin and a shame." And, furthermore, there was presented the strange and humiliating spectacle of men who had been attacking our polity from top to bottom for years and who had never been known to strike a blow in its defense, commanding those who had stood and fought for its maintenance at a great cost to shut their mouths, while they blazed the way to larger and more glorious things for Southern Methodism.

Against this unparalleled and astounding proceedure the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate has sought to stand. And for this, he has been sneered at and misrepresented from far-away China on the east to the Pacific Coast on the west. But these slurs and attacks have not moved us; nor will they do so if they should be continued. We shall in the future, as we have done in the past, speak plainly concerning any proceeding that we think is hurtful to the Church, and cooperate fearlessly with our loyal leaders in seeking to defeat any movement that we adjudge to be inimical to its welfare. In this connection, we desire to say that in the foregoing statements we have not intended to reflect to the slightest extent upon the brethren among us who believe in the union of the Methodisms of America upon any honorable basis and who have sought in a legitimate and proper way to bring it about. There are equally good men with variant views concerning this issue, and all should be given a respectful and patient hearing. But we hold that even a Church is entitled to be openly and fairly dealt with and that the raising of this question has not revoked our admission and ordination vows and given every man who may wish to do so a right to make war upon the constitution and government of our unsurpassed denomination.

That our Bishops should have found it necessary to affirm publicly that they feel committed to carrying on further negotiations pertaining to unification in accordance with the instructions of the General Conference, is a recognition of the unusual and regrettable doings that have been going on, but we do not in the least question the needfulness of this affirmation. It has been one of the many remarkable developments of this remarkable time, that those who have insisted upon treating the Oklahoma plan of unification (upon which years of labor have been expended, and which our General Conference has endorsed, as has also practically that of the Methodist Protestant Church) as if it amounted to something, and which, though it is to be further considered and debated by the Joint Commission, is not to be lightly surrendered, have been heralded abroad as being opposed to it. It is something new under the sun to have those who are disposed to stand for a scheme declared to be its combatants, while a proclaimed readiness to abandon it constitutes one its loyal adherent and defender. The Editor of the Advocate has been accorded the same treatment in this respect as that which seems to have been administered to our Chief Pastors.

Well worth noting are the following words contained in the paper adopted at Atlanta: "We cannot think it possible that those Commissioners will do less than follow the instructions laid down by the General Conference, and we do not believe that they should be hindered by any interference from the outside." The instructions given these Commissioners at Oklahoma City were very definite; namely, to "elaborate" and "perfect" the plan recommended by the Joint Commission and approved by our General Conference, with a single modification. And while we think every phase of the great pending issue should be open to discussion in the public prints, in our judgment, there is no occasion for other bodies in the Church to undertake to give direction of any kind to the Joint Commission on unification. So far as we know, not a single voice has been raised within the bounds of Southern Methodism against having the Commission to go forward with its work, according to the directions of the General Conference, and for any other organization to seek to encourage the Commissioners to do anything other than that which they have been specifically authorized to do, would be highly reprehensible.

Our Bishops were certainly right when they said: "The most important matter among us just now is to promote the spirit of Christian love among ourselves." It is vastly more needful and helpful to have fraternity and unity among our own people than it is to have them between a segment of our Church and another denomination. Nothing can compensate for the stirring up of division, discord, and strife among the more than 2,000,000 members of our own Church. With war at home, whatever we might gain by alliances abroad, we should be an enfeebled and injured people.

In conclusion, we shall only add that we should count ourselves most fortunate that we have a College of Bishops who are so clear-visioned and alert as to the perils and interests of our great Church. Though they are not perfect men, and though they sometimes make mistakes when acting in an individual capacity, never in the history of our denomination has a great crisis arisen that our Chief Pastors did not nobly and successfully rise to meet it. And if, when speaking together, they have ever given unwise counsel or misled the Church, we do not know when or where it was. Certainly, their united message is entitled to great weight, and it should serve as a clarion call to our communicants in every part of our widely extended territory.

THE PROHIBITION REFERENDUM OFF IN MISSISSIPPI.

It now develops that the quart law and liquor advertising law will not be voted on in Mississippi on November 7, as had been expected. The Supreme Court of that State has decided that as these measures were passed by the State Legislature before the referendum act was made a part of the Constitution, the latter enactment, not being retroactive, cannot be made to apply to them. So this legislation will, we are happy to say, at least stand until the Legislature shall again meets which will give time for its workings to be tested and its benefits to be clearly demonstrated.

The Mississippi game law, however, was adopted after the referendum amendment to the Constitution had been inserted, and in consequence will have to be passed upon by the voters of the commonwealth. But there seems to be some doubt as to whether the referendum act was made a part of the Constitution in the prescribed manner and is valid; so it is possible that that enactment itself may be stricken out when this issue is raised before the Supreme Court. Truly, there are many angles and intricacies in law.

THE NORTHERN VIEW.

We frequently hear it said that the Northern and Southern people are of one mind concerning the Negro and his relation to the social order of the South. As a matter of fact, according to our best observation, there is little to justify such a notion. Let those who have been holding this view read the second quotation from Zion's Herald that appears in the article entitled, "Why One Rule for the North and Another for the South?" which we are publishing in this number of the Advocate.

Zion's Herald is perhaps the ablest and most influential paper issued in the interest of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Boston being the place of its publication. It probably typifies the mind of Northern Methodists more nearly than any other journal in the United States.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in the Advocate office last Thursday at 11 o'clock a. m., with all the members present. Dr. J. M. Henry presided, and Rev. W. W. Drake served as Secretary. The reports of the Editor and Publisher showed that the Advocate had had a fairly good year. Its income was appreciably larger than it was last year, and by working a smaller force than heretofore in the office its expenditures were helpfully reduced. Its financial condition is wholesome and encouraging. The circulation remains practically the same as last year, but it is a safer and better one, the Publisher having been more strict in striking off delinquent subscribers. We are face to face with some adverse conditions incident to the European war, however, and some changes in the policy of the paper were deemed advisable. Of these, Rev. J. T. Leggett, who was appointed to prepare a statement for the Publishing Committee, will tell in an early issue of the Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

There are 16 volunteers for foreign mission work at Emory University.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached in Bogalusa, La., last Sunday. We dare say that he gave his auditors an informing and helpful discourse.

Rev. J. L. Williams, of Leesville, La., assisted in a meeting at Many, La., last week. A dispatch from the latter place to the Times-Picayune pronounced Brother Williams one of the ablest preachers in the State.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, our popular pastor at Booneville, Miss., has brought us under obligations to him for a club of 5 renewal subscriptions. In his business letter, he takes time to add a line commendatory of the Advocate.

Rev. J. S. Renshaw, an honored superannuate of the Memphis Conference, who resides in New Orleans, was an appreciated visitor to our office last Monday. A truer, worthier man than Brother Renshaw would be hard to find.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Burns, Miss., gave us, on October 25, 1 renewal and 5 trial subscriptions, for which we extend to him our thanks. Of his work, Brother Winstead says: "Everything is moving along very satisfactorily."

Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding elder of the Sardis (Miss.) District, reports that the work in his "diocese" is making good headway. Brother Holder is a hard worker and he has associated with him an excellent band of co-workers.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. E. L. Cargill, of Campti, La., for several subscriptions to the Advocate. Of his work, Brother Cargill says: "I think we will wind up things in good shape and carry a creditable report to Conference."

Rev. Olin Ray, of the North Mississippi Conference, finished his theological course at Emory University in August and will be at Winona the last of this month to take an appointment along with the brethren. He is a choice and promising young man.

See the schedule of free cars that are soon to be run for the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages at Jackson, Miss., which we are printing on another page. It is to be hoped that these cars will be filled to the limit of their capacity with various good things.

On a postal card bearing date of October 28, Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Heidelberg, Miss., writes as follows: "I have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting for Rev. T. A. Ferguson, of Camden, Miss., which resulted in 24 accessions to the Church. The pastor is in high favor with his people."

Writing under date of October 27, Rev. J. B. Randolph, Superintendent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, says: "The health of the children in the Home is good. The returns from Work Day are better so far than at the same time last year. We are having some much needed repairing done on the main building."

From the Daily Corinthian (Corinth, Miss.) of October 19, we take the following: "Bishop James Atkins, of Waynesville, N. C., is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Weaver. They left yesterday for a few days' fishing and hunting trip in the wilds of Arkansas." We trust that these brethren had good luck.

In a business letter to our office, bringing us 2 subscriptions, Rev. H. C. Castles, of Vimville, Miss., appends the following note: "We are serving a fine people. We have been 'pounded' three times and 'showered' once. The young folks also like to get married—I have officiated at three weddings lately." Happy pastor!

We heard of Dr. W. H. Huntley, our genial and scholarly pastor at Columbia, Miss., being in New Orleans last week, and were much disappointed in that he did not call to see us. We trust that he will not overlook us when he again comes to the Crescent City. The Mississippi Conference has in it no choicer spirit than Dr. Huntley.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Durant, Miss., writes: "Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, preached two strong sermons here yesterday, October 29. He won all hearts while among us. The sum of $100 was raised for a heating plant for our new church. I think that Durant will round out the year's work with a splendid report."

Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of St. Mark's Hall and the Mary Werlein Mission of New Orleans, spent last Sunday with Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss. The people of that delightful charge received Brother Thomas royally and gave him a substantial donation for the important mission work in this city of which he has supervision.

Rev. C. A. Battle, the pastor of our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., spent last Friday in New Orleans. He stated that committees were busy getting things in readiness for the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference. The Capital City of the State is preparing to give the Methodists who are soon to gather there a royal welcome.

The following friends, of whom mention has not been made elsewhere, have brought us under obligations to them for two or more subscriptions, sent in since the last issue of the Advocate: Rev. W. G. Burks, Dumas, Miss., 2; Rev. J. C. Park, Sardis, Miss., 3; Rev. E. L. Alford, Anguilla, Miss., 3; Rev. G. A. Baker, Pope, Miss., 2; Rev. A. C. Searcy, Florien, La., 5.

Sister Crisler accompanied her husband, Rev. C. W. Crisler, when he came to New Orleans last Thursday to attend the meeting of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate. They remained here over Friday. Brother Crisler is rounding out his fourth year as pastor of our Main Street Church at Hattiesburg, with all departments of the work in a healthful condition.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who has served the Rayne Memorial congregation of this city for the past four years, has been transferred to the West Texas Conference and stationed at Laurel Heights, San Antonio. Of Dr. Hill's work in New Orleans, Rev. W. W. Holmes, his presiding elder, speaks in most complimentary terms elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. We wish him great success in his new field.

On October 8, 1916, Miss Agnes Dottery, the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Dottery, of Okolona, Miss., was given in marriage to Mr. A. S. Pilgreen, of Clarksdale, Illinois, where they will make their home. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents in Okolona, Miss., by Rev. J. N. Thomas. We congratulate the happy bride and groom, and wish them a large measure of happiness.

The press dispatches state that Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, has been transferred to the Baltimore Conference, and that he will have charge of the Representative M. E. Church, South, which is to be built in Washington City at a cost of $200,000 or $100,000. Dr. Sexton has a great record as a church builder. He has done a phenomenal work as pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, and that congregation will give him up with not a little reluctance.

Rev. C. M. Morris, pastor of the Epworth M. E. Church, South, of this city, has had a notably successful year. He has received 58 members into the Church, has baptized 19 infants, and has performed 9 wedding ceremonies. As compared with the same period last year, the Sunday school shows an increase of 12 per cent, church attendance a gain of 35 per cent, and the finances of the Church an advance of 40 per cent. Brother Morris is now residing at 520 South Scott Street.

A note from Mrs. R. F. Harrell, of Centerville, Miss., the editor of our Woman's Missionary Department, written from Jackson, Miss., on Oct. 28, stated that she had taken her little daughter to that city for medical treatment, and that her usual installment of matter would not be sent for this issue of the Advocate. This will explain why this department does not appear in this number of our paper. We trust that Mrs. Harrell's daughter has ere this greatly improved and that her health will soon be fully restored.

In the absence from the city of the pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, the pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Church was filled last Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. by Rev. C. M. Morris, who preached an excellent sermon to a good congregation. At the evening hour the exercises were in charge of the laymen, and Mr. S. A. Montgomery made a strikingly forceful and helpful address. Prof. T. O. Adams and his associates in the choir had prepared special music for the last-mentioned service. Mr. Montgomery, who is a lawyer of distinction, has lately joined Rayne Memorial Church on profession of faith. He had for years, however, been a regular attendant upon the services of that congregation and a liberal contributor to the maintenance of its work.

Rev. N. E. Joyner spent last Sunday on the Houma Mission charge, of which Rev. Martin Hebert is pastor, and Rev. A. D. Martin the assistant pastor. He preached at Houma at 11 a. m., and in the afternoon he went to Bourg, where he dedicated a lately constructed chapel. Our church at Bourg has been blown away three times, but the new structure, which cost about $1200, was set apart to sacred uses without a dollar of indebtedness. Brother Joyner states that the outlook for the work at this place is very bright. We have there about 120 church members, a well organized Epworth League, and a fine Sunday school. The prayer meeting usually numbers 40 or 50 persons, 75 per cent of whom will lead in public prayer. At night Brother Joyner lectured in Houma to a fine audience on Mexico. Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir was present at the evening service in Houma, being there to conduct the fourth quarterly conference.

THE NEXT CONFERENCE.

In the presence of an unusually large congregation yesterday, October 22, the question of inviting the next session of the North Mississippi Conference to come to Oxford was discussed and adopted with great enthusiasm. Short addresses were made by Dr. D. H. Bishop, Dr. W. S. Leathers, Chancellor J. N. Powers, Dr. E. N. Lowe, and Mr. P. B. Furr. All were enthusiastic in their support of the proposition. Nineteen years ago the Conference was held here, with Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore, presiding. It is high time the church here were having the privilege of entertaining the Conference again. It would mean much to Oxford and much to the Conference. Many who have never seen the State University would be given that opportunity. We put the Conference on notice now that it will be Oxford's pleasure to act as host next year, if it will accept the proffered invitation.

Fraternally,

Oxford, Miss., Oct. 23, 1916. E. S. LEWIS.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA PREACHERS!

While we have heard from quite a number of places, many of the larger churches and Sunday schools have not reported their "Work Day" offerings to the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. We are quite anxious to get all the reports in so that we may make up the final reports to you for your Conference reports. Please find out whether or not the offerings from your church and Sunday school have been sent in, and, if not, please have the matter attended to at once.

The collections to date from "Work Day" total about $3000. We trust they will reach not less than $5000 when all reports are in. Thanking you, one and all, for your good help, I am

Faithfully,

On September 8, 1916, the death angel visited the home of John W. Patterson and laid his icy fingers on the heart of their loving daughter, JANIE MAY, who was born on June 22, 1915, being therefore 11 years, 2 months, and 16 days old. She was sick for only about seven hours. All was done for her that loving hands and kind physicians could do, but to no avail. God saw fit to call her home. There was a vacant place in heaven that no one could fill but little Janie May. We would say to the bereaved father, mother, brothers, and sisters: Weep not for Janie May, for she is not dead. She only fell asleep in the arms of Jesus to await the resurrection morning. She can't come to you, but by the grace of God some sweet day you can meet her on that happy and peaceful shore where sickness, sorrow, pain, and death are felt and feared no more. Little Janie May was laid to rest in the Liberty Graveyard on September 9 in the presence of a host of friends and relatives. The funeral service was conducted by the writer. Her pastor,

T. J. HOPPER.

WILLIAM LAMAR FURR, the son of Robert Furr and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Furr, was born on February 9, 1903, and went home to God on September 30, 1916. Lamar was 7 years, 6 months, and 9 days old. He was preceded to glory by his mother some eighteen months. He leaves a number of sorrowing relatives to mourn his departure. His illness was of short duration—he was seized with diphtherla on Wednesday, September 20, and died on Saturday, September 30. All that skilled physicians and loving hands could do was done, but alas! the Lord "works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." Lamar was a bright, jolly, energetic little fellow with many of the qualities and principles that go to make a strong and useful man. But "in the midst of life we are in death," for "man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." Weep not, father and relatives. God makes no mistake. "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." May He who protects the shorn lambs and notes the fall of the sparrow comfort the bereaved! His pastor,

W. C. BEASLEY, P. C.

HESTER ELIZABETH WHITESIDE, the six year old infant child of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whiteside, was born on November 5, 1909, and was carried from earth to heaven by the angels on September 24, 1916. She became somewhat ill on Tuesday (previous to her death on Sunday evening), with a sore throat which later was discovered to be a fatal case of diphtheria. Physicians were called and medical aid was administered. Mother, father, brothers, sisters, and other relatives did all that mortal hands could do. Friends stood by with anxious hearts. But all to no avail. The last enemy of man had come for its victim. It was the unmistakable Providence of God. "The Lord hath given and the Lord hath taken way." The term of common expression, "She was a sweet child," is but a mild way to express the beauty, the brightness, and attractiveness of little Elizabeth. Everybody loved her. Jesus loved her too, for he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me." We placed her body in a little casket and carried it out to the Ebenezer Cemetery, being followed by the grief-stricken parents and a number of relatives and friends. There we laid her remains in the earth, to await the resurrection of the dead. May heaven's richest benedictions be upon the family!

Her pastor, W. C. BEASLEY.

On August 16, 1916, the angel of death entered the second time into the home of E. B. FOSTER and bore his soul from its earthly habitation into that sweet beyond in which Jesus said he would prepare a place for his followers. This was the first death in a family of ten children, all of whom are grown. Both parents also are living. No one who has not experienced the same trial can know the deep sorrow that has come to these two aged parents and to the two brothers and seven sisters, as well as those of his own little family. Eddie was born on February 19, 1878, in Chickasaw County. In early childhood he always spoke the truth, even in the face of peril, and until his death he was ever the embodiment of the principles of truth, honesty, industry, service, manliness, and high regard for the cause of Christ. He united with the Methodist Church, South, at an early age. In 1891 he moved with his parents to Webster County, where he received a fairly good education in the public schools. After this he had some high school training at Mantee, Miss., near his home. Soon after this he went to Texas and spent four years in work and travel, but later came to his own State, where on January 20, 1912, he was married to Miss Rosa White, who died, leaving two children, Vada and Cecil. He was next married to Miss Sallie Miller, who bore him another son, William. Not long ago Eddie and his wife united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church near their home, the Church of their choice not being close enough to them. They took great interest in the Sunday school, the day school, and the community at large. Words are inadequate to express the strength of character and the worth of such a man as this. We younger children always respected and adored him almost as a father. When the end came his little son, Cecil, cried out, "Oh Lord, take care of us now that papa is gone." Yet we do not mourn as those who have no hope. We know that we can live in such a way as to meet him again, and I believe that we shall know him when we shall see him face to face.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We wish to express through the Advocate our great appreciation of the many letters of condolence which we have received from our friends since the death of our darling baby. We only wish that it were so we could answer each one personally. May God bless those who remembered us in the time of our distress, and, should they ever pass through a similar trial, may just such true frends as they have proved to be to us be near to comfort them.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

END STOMACH TROUBLE, GASES OR DYSPEPSIA

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

Prepare This for a Bad Cough—It's Fine

Cheaply and Easily Made, but Does the Work Quickly.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy,—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations,—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sunday School

ARKANSAS IN THE LEAD.

In the "Araknsas Methodist" for April 13 I published an account of the splendid work of the Friendship Sunday school of Chickasaw County, Mississippi, as a challenge to the Sunday schools of Arkansas. And now comes Rev. W. C. Davidson, the alert presiding elder of the Monticello District, Little Rock Conference, with the following account of an Arkansas Sunday school which puts his State several points ahead of Mississippi. I'm wondering where the next showing is coming from:

"In the Arkansas Methodist of April 13, Sunday School Secretary A. L. Dietrich challenged Arkansas to match Mississippi in one of her Sunday schools, namely, Friendship, Chickasaw County. The challenge is accepted by the Rock Springs Sunday school of Drew County. The facts concerning this Sunday school were given the writer by Brother J. M. Carr, a venerable layman of Monticello, and a brother of the Rev. J. F. Carr, deceased, a former prominent member of the Little Rock Conference.

"The Rock Springs Sunday school is about fourteen miles north of Monticello, Drew County, and is on the Mt. Pleasant Circuit. It was organized in the summer of 1859, in a little log house with a dirt chimney. An old man was appointed superintendent, and J. M. Carr, then a young man, not quite nineteen, was made assistant. The Sunday following the organization of the school the superintendent was sick, and it fell to the lot of the young assistant to take charge. This he did by reading a Scripture lesson and leading in prayer for the first time. A class was formed of those who could read in the New Testament. The only literature used that day was a few Bibles that had been brought by those who were present. The next Sunday a few union question books and catechisms that had been gathered from the neighborhood were added to the Bibles and constituted the supply of literature. When the war broke out Brother Carr, who had been acting as superintendent, enlisted in the army. In the fall of 1865 he returned and resumed the superintendency of the school. They still had no other literature, but the next year a small circulating library was introduced. Two or three years later literature from the Methodist Publishing House was introduced.

"By this time the little log cabin had become quite dilapidated, and one afternoon when the people met for Sunday school they found the chimney had fallen down. But the seats were moved out into the sunshine and the school was held as usual. This occurrence led to the erection of a better and larger log structure, finished with hand-dressed lumber, which had been hauled twelve miles. This building, with its religious activities, became the community center. Everything that was for the higher life of the people had its origin in this Sunday school. The school regularly observed the anniversary of its reorganization (May 3), until the introduction of Children's Day, which took its place. Another annual feature of this school was the public observance of Thanksgiving. Before the organization of the Woman's Missionary Society the lady teachers of this school formed themselves into a society to help the pastor raise his missionary collections. They gave systematically themselves and induced others to give. In this way the assessments were more than paid, and sometimes doubled. The well known liberality of the Rock Springs Church to-day may easily be traced to this beginning. Out of the inspiration of this Sunday school sprang a day school which developed into a noted boarding school.

"From the membership of this Sunday school have come the following: Twelve preachers, five wives of preachers, five physicians, one of whom was a lady, and a graduate of Wellesley and Johns Hopkins, who did graduate work in a university of Germany; five lawyers, one of whom was a delegate to the National Democratic convention that nominated Woodrow Wilson for President; twenty-five school teachers, one young lady missionary to Japan, and about twenty business men of Monticello, all of whom are official members of the several churches of the town.

"Brother Carr served as superintendent of this school from 1859 to 1903 (except the four years he was in the army), a period of 44 years. The present superintendent is the one who succeeded him thirteen years ago, when he moved to Monticello. When this school was organized the nearest postoffice was Monticello, fourteen miles away. At this time there was not a railroad in the State, and wild game was so plentiful that the men, while at work on the new church above referred to, killed a bear and feasted on his meat. The house in which the Rock Springs Sunday school holds its services today is an excellent frame structure, and is still the center of the best country community in the Monticello District.

"Brother Carr, the real founder of this Sunday school, still lives and enjoys the unbounded confidence, love and esteem of all Monticello and surrounding country. He is a frail old man now, but the light of heaven shines in his genial face."

Let some other presiding elders look over their fields and see if the two records given can be beaten.

A. L. DIETRICH.

THE CREOLES OF LOUISIANA,

the descendants of the original Spanish and French settlers, prided themselves upon their hair—and rightly they should—for it was they who first knew the secret of beautiful hair, the one great successful remedy for hair diseases and the greatest of all hair foods: La Creole Hair Dressing. The recipe was kept a profound secret by the race until about fifty years ago, but now you can reap the benefits of their early discoveries by using "La Creole" hair dressing, the very best dressing for keeping the hair fluffy, light and beautiful.

This wonderful preparation of the Creole race not only cleanses the scalp from all disease and filth, but also renews the life of the hair; makes it light and fluffy; restores to the hair its natural color and original lustre and supplies the hair with oil, food which it requires. No home should be without it. Ask your dealer for it. Price $1.00. Manufactured by VAN VLEET-MANSFIELD DRUG CO., Memphis, Tenn.

REV. K. W. DODSON—AN APPRECIATION.

Brother K. W. Dodson has been pastor of the Broad Street M. E. Church, South, of Lake Charles for the past four years. He has also been chairman of the Ministers' Association of the town. His leadership, not only of his own congregation, but of the religious forces of the city, has been wise, tactful, and exceedingly efficient. He is very highly esteemed by the citizenship of the city and greatly appreciated by his fellow-ministers for his brotherly spirit and ever kind and courteous consideration.

We, the members of the Pastors' Association, regret exceedingly that the rules of his Church necessitate Brother Dodson's removal from our midst in the near future, and we take this method of expressing to him, to his Church, and to the public, our love for the man and our appreciation of our fellowship with him. Our prayers and best wishes shall follow him and his most estimable family wherever they may go.

Done by order of the Pastors' Association of Lake Charles, La., October 23d, 1916. J. R. McKRUZIL, Secretary

Rheumatism Conquered.

R. L. Eastman, Sec. Nashville Board of Trade, Nashville, Tenn., writes "My attention was called to your remedy, 'Renwar,' for rheumatic troubles. I gave it a trial and have been permanently relieved. It is with pleasure I endorse the merits of 'Renwar' for rheumatism."

"RENWAR," the new scientific remedy, relieves quickly and permanently rheumatism, by removing from the blood the cause of the trouble, uric acid. Many wonderful cures of cases of long standing are being reported. If you suffer from rheumatism you cannot afford to miss this opportunity to be well again. "Renwar" is sold by all druggists, price 50c. per bottle or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. WARNER DRUG CO., Nashville, Tenn.

BROTHER RANDOLPH AT MACON.

Dear Doctor: Brother J. B. Randolph was here Sunday to represent the Orphanage. He spoke Sunday night to an appreciative audience. His exposition of the Home's affairs was most interesting, and quite the best we have ever heard. He has done the cause a great service and our pulpit here is open to him whenever he may be able to return. E. NASH BROYLES, Macon, Miss. Pastor.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

Calcium's Value in Tuberculosis

As a tonic and remedial agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, this element is being studied by scientists and physicians everywhere.

For more than two decades users of Eckman's Alterative have tested its efficacy in such cases, for calcium chlorid is one of the chief constituents of this preparation, which has produced beneficial results in thousands of instances. And in this form it is so combined as to be easily assimilated.

If you are thus afflicted, a trial may prove this to be just what is needed to assist Nature in bringing about a return to normal health.

It is safe to take, because it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT NOTES.

The work of the New Orleans District this year has not been easy. The wreck and ruin of many of our church buildings, caused by the great storm of September 29, last year, along with the damage done to nearly all residential property, brought about a financial stress that has made the work very difficult, but our preachers and people have been heroic. They have practiced self-denial that they might liberally give. They have worked together with hope and a larger vision of our Church in this needy field. As we come to the last lap of the Conference year, we have every reason to be grateful to God. There should be nowhere a discouraging or discordant note.

The Algiers Church is the only one of the city churches not yet rebuilt. The new church will not be built on the old site, but will be built on Opelousas Avenue, the best location, perhaps, in all that section of the city for our Church in the future. The lot has already been purchased and paid for, and there is quite a nice sum of money in the treasury for the new church building. It will cost about $20,000. Brother Brown is rounding out a quadrennium of most splendid service. The church is thoroughly alive and in every way active. The people regret exceedingly that the time limit will move Brother Brown before the new church is built. His successor will have a great opportunity and yet a great task. The church building at Daisy, on the Algiers charge, fifty miles below New Orleans, is a total wreck, and the people are much discouraged. They need help badly.

Bogalusa is a city unto itself, and so is the church there. The population is constantly shifting. The prosperity of the church now does not mean it will be prosperous six months from now. Many of the people may have moved away. Bogalusa probably covers more square miles than any city of its population in the country. We have only one church there, but in order to reach the people, especially the children, Brother Warlick has established several Sunday schools in different sections of the city.

Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, has had a very successful year under the splendid leadership of Brother Joyner. This is the only Sunday school that has reached "the Standard of Efficiency," according to our Sunday School Board. The Epworth League and the Woman's Missionary Society are doing good work. The Church debt is being reduced. The congregations are fine.

The Covington charge was left to be supplied at our last Annual Conference and it was not until the middle of January that a preacher was secured. Being so long without a pastor, the work was disorganized and the people wholly discouraged, but, in the face of these facts, the charge, especially the church at Covington, has had a year of success under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Boykin. With only 84 members to start with, the membership is now 134—a gain of 50. The Sunday school has doubled in attendance and enrollment; an Epworth League has been organized and is a most vital force in the church life. It has now more than 40 members. The Covington Church has just closed a revival that has been far-reaching in its effects. Fifteen new members were received on profession of faith. The services were largely attended. Rev. C. V. Breithaupt did the preaching and Rev. J. L. Evans led in the singing. The people were greatly pleased with the service of the visiting preachers. The interior of the parsonage has been thoroughly renovated and beautified. It is now very comfortable and homelike. The furnishings are tasty and substantial. The pastor and the Covington people have worked well together in building up the church in that beautiful little city. Brother Boykin will ask for admission on trial into our Conference in November. He is a young man who does good work. He has a most efficient helpmeet and two fine children.

Brother Lowrey has looked well after every interest of the Church on the Donaldsonville charge. The work has been thoroughly organized. The Ladies' Aids have been converted into Women's Missionary Societies, and adult Sunday school classes have been organized wherever possible. Brother Lowrey has done some effective work in distributing tracts on timely subjects. He has also used his own pen to good effect. He has been of large service to the Anti-Saloon League in his section.

Brother Morris has emphasized the evangelistic in his Sunday school and church at Epworth. He has had several meetings this year and several "big days." He never tires in the pastoral work. His faithful service has borne fruit. The church has had a substantial increase in membership. The Sunday school is large—too large for the building.

When we met at our last Annual Conference the old Felicity Church was in ruins. A great many people said the church could never be rebuilt, and yet, through the optimism and wise leadership of Dr. Felix R. Hill and his faithful people, the new Felicity is more beautiful and commodious than the old Felicity. Dr. Hill is a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." He has been at his post of duty throughout the whole year without any vacation and is now enjoying splendid health. He has been a great help to the young preachers in New Orleans, especially to the presiding elder.

First Church has all the problems of the down-town church of a great city. The membership live miles away. The people in the neigbborhood are not members of that church. The congregations change from Sunday to Sunday. It is almost a strangers' church. While the large congregations are encouraging, yet the shifting membership is very discouraging. A large number are received into the church every year, yet the membership has a very small increase as so many move away. Dr. Werlein is a tireless worker and a strong preacher. He is a terror to the evil-doer. He is fearless in his condemnation of the city's sins. He is the greatest reformer among our preachers.

At Louisiana Avenue Church there is always something doing. Brother Gearheard is now busily engaged with his "fall drive." He is certainly not lazy. He plans well for all the activities of his church. About 100 new members will be added to the Church there this year. An Epworth League has been recently organized. Only those who know the field can appreciate such a large ingathering. Brother Gearheard has done most splendid work as President of the New Orleans Methodist Sunday School Quarterly Meeting.

Our mission work at Mary Werlein and St. Mark's is prospering. Considerable improvement has been made on the Mary Werlein building. It has been beautified, rearranged, and adapted to the work at hand. The Woman's Board is doing a great work at St. Mark's. The kindergarten, the clinic, clubs and classes, the house-to-house visitation, and many other activities make St. Mark's a power in the community. This work is in charge of Miss Gibson, head deaconess; Miss Iles, deaconess; Miss Cason, nurse deaconess, and Miss Capers, kindergarten teacher. Mrs. Herr is doing the deaconess work at Mary Werlein Mission and she is doing it well. The Italian Church and Sunday school are growing all the time. The Italians say that Brother Romano is a fine preacher. Brother Thomas, the superintendent of our mission work, certainly has the work at heart and has made many sacrifices for its success. He has a large acquaintance and everybody knowing him must know his work.

McDonoghville is our railroad town, and our church there is largely a railroad church. The removal of the T. & P. shops in the beginning of the year made the outlook for church work very gloomy, but the church has prospered, notwithstanding. On account of ill health, Brother Peters gave up his work there on September 10 and returned to his home in Tennessee. He was succeeded by Brother Leon McCain. Brother Peters endeared himself to the people and did a fine work. His successor, Brother McCain, has been well received and has the work well in hand.

The presiding elder of the Plaquemine charge, Brother George P. White, has been busy in season and out of season. His district is made up of the parishes of Iberville and Pointe Coupee. He has about a dozen preaching places. He is now finishing his fourth year in this difficult and needy mission field. The citizens of Plaquemine, regardless of their church affiliation, have petitioned for his return. As a home builder, I think Brother White has no superior in the Conference. He has made of a dilapidated old parsonage in Plaquemine one of the most beautiful and attractive homes to be found anywhere. His yard is a veritable flower garden.

Parker Memorial has the largest Sunday school in the district. The church is well located. The membership is made up of some of our finest people. The only drawback to the church is the heavy debt it has had to carry for the past few years. The debt, though, is being reduced and will eventually be paid. It is one of our best and most substantial buildings and promises to be one of the leading churches in the city in a short while. Brother Harper is a fine preacher and the people love him.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Jr., has done his best work in his last year at Rayne Memorial. Not only have the church buildings been made new, but the membership itself has largely been made new. A great many new members have been received into the Church, and quite a number of these on profession of faith. The church auditorium is a thing of beauty. Bishop Mouzon said it was one of the most beautiful auditoriums in Southern Methodism. The reopening of the church was a great occasion. The Bishop preached a great sermon. The congregations were large. Dr. Hill has endeared himself to the Rayne Memorial people, and, if his successor is loved as much, I have no fear for the future of the church. Dr. Hill is a Christian gentleman of the finest type and that congregation is fortunate that shall have him as pastor for next year. We regret exceedingly to give him up.

Brother Alford is doing well at Second Church. He never forgets the sick and those who are in trouble. Second Church is our only church among a population of at least 100,000 people. If anywhere on the earth there is a mission field it is this section of New Orleans. Brother Alford is a hard worker and his church is loyal, but what is one preacher and 200 church members in the midst of 100,000 people who, for the larger part, are opposed to all that our Church stands for?

The church at Slidell is having a year of prosperity under the pastorate of Brother Embree. The people are delighted with his preaching. The Sunday school and congregation are good and there is a marked interest in all kinds of church activity.

Last, but not least, is Brother Rutledge, in St. Tammany. The circuit is large. There is much to be done, and, without making much show about it, Brother Rutledge is quietly working ahead. There is a Sunday school at every preaching place on the circuit.

Brother Sutton, who has charge of the Home for Destitute Boys, is doing a work in New Orleans that very few ministers could do. He has a large acquaintance and is connected with the city's charitable and benevolent institutions.

Our superannuate preachers, Dr. J. T. Sawyer and Brother J. S. Renshaw, have been very active throughout the entire year. They have given help whenever and wherever opportunity afforded. Our local preachers, by their godly life, by their preaching, by their teaching in the Sunday schools, are rendering a valuable help to our Methodism in New Orleans. H. H. Ahrens is with the Times-Picayune. George Goodall is English Vice-Consul. G. W. Evans is with the Leyland Line. R. L. Schroeder is a dentist with a large practice. J. H. Stafford is in the Government service. A. Palmisano is a wood and coal dealer. S. A. Seegar is attending the Candler School of Theology.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside: no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a tablespoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

COMMENDATORY RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Gallman (Miss.) charge:

Whereas Rev. Jasper L. Smith, pastor of this circuit, will be removed at Conference on account of the time limit of our Church, having served his four years; therefore, be it Resolved:

1. That he has been a faithful pastor; that he is a brotherly Christian gentleman; that we commend him to any charge to which the Bishop may appoint him, and that our prayers shall attend him.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mr. E. O. Newman, Mrs. E. O. Trawick, Mrs. W. W. Alford, Committee.

NOTES FROM THE PORT GIBSON DISTRICT.

Last Sunday and Monday was the occasion of the fourth quarterly meeting of the Rocky Springs Circuit, which was held where we were on historic ground. The church was built by the Rev. Thomas Owens in 1837, and is probably the oldest church building in the Conference. It is a brick structure, and, with proper care, I do not see why it may not stand for hundreds of years. It seems to me that the Church should carefully preserve this interesting relic of its history. The house which was the home of Brother Owens is still standing, and his tomb is near the church. The congregations were fairly good. On the work as a whole the finances were almost up to date, while Willows and Hickory Ridge reported the salaries paid up to the close of the year. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Strait, reported about 80 persons received into the Church during the quarter on profession of faith. He is closing out his third year on the work exceedingly well.

At Hermanville the preaching services announced for Monday night were dispensed with because of the sudden death that day of Mr. Jones, who was the husband of one of the daughters of Rev. A. D. Miller, deceased, and the father of Mr. J. J. Jones, one of the prominent members of our church in Hermanville. On Tuesday morning, after the funeral services of Mr. Jones, which were conducted by our pastor in our church, we held our quarterly conference. Though the finances of the work, as a whole, were considerably behind, yet Carlisle reported paid up to the Annual Conference. The official members and the pastor were hopeful of accomplishing much during the few remaining weeks of the Conference year. This is the first year for our brother, J. W. Price, on this charge, and, as he has been greatly hindered by sickness in his family, he has hardly had a fair chance of doing his best work; so we are hoping that the next year may be one of much greater general prosperity.

URIC ACID

TRY THE WILLIAMS TREATMENT

50 Cent Bottle (32 Doses) FREE

Just because you start the day worried and tired, stiff legs and arms and muscles, an aching head, burning and tearing down pains in the back—worn out before the day begins—do not think you have to stay in that condition.

Be strong, well and vigorous, with no more pains from stiff joints, sore muscles, rheumatic suffering, aching back or kidney trouble.

If you suffer from bladder weakness, with burning, scalding pains, or if you are in and out of bed half a dozen times a night, you will appreciate the rest, comfort and strength this treatment gives.

To prove The Williams Treatment conquers kidney and bladder diseases, rheumatism and all other ailments when due to excessive uric acid, no matter how chronic or stubborn, if you have never tried The Williams Treatment, we will give one 50c. bottle (32 doses) free if you will cut out this notice and send it with your name and address, and 10 cents to help pay postage, packing, etc., to The Dr. D. A. Williams Co., Dept. 1270F, Post Office Block, East Hampton, Conn. Send at once and you will receive by parcel post a regular 50c. bottle, without charge and without incurring any obligation. Only one bottle to the same address or family.

HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate lining of the joints, the heart and other organs. To cure Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of the physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, gall stones, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,

Box 17-M, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

Iron the Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous Rundown People 200 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Week's Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell, what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while don't increase their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone down into inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

FREE CARS FOR THE BAPTIST AND METHODIST ORPHANAGES, JACKSON, MISS.

It has been a custom for several years for the railroad companies to allow special cars to carry, free of charge, donations along their several lines to the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages at Jackson, Miss. There are more than 450 children to be fed, clothed, and warmed in these two institutions, and all donations, such as corn, flour, sugar, molasses, grits, cured meats, lard, all kinds of canned goods, all kinds of dishes, boxes of clothing, shoes, hats, soap, blankets, sheets, pillow-cases, towels, etc., will be brought free of charge and will be very acceptable to the two Orphanages. The railroads are better pleased when we fill the cars well, and so are the orphaned children. Let a soliciting committee be appointed in every community to secure contributions of goods, then arrange for some one to carry them to the depot in due time, and the free cars will bring them to Jackson. Mark every package plainly, either for the Baptist or the Methodist Orphanage.

Arrangements have already been made with the following roads to run free cars this year at the times and places indicated below:

The car on the G. & S. I. R. R. will leave Gulfport, running to Hattiesburg, on Dec. 5, Rev. L. F. Alford, of Saucier, being in charge. It will lie over in Hattiesburg all day Dec. 6, Mr. K. T. Moore, of Hattiesburg, being in charge, and will run from Hattiesburg to Jackson on Dec. 7, Mr. R. F. Bass and Rev. W. M. Williams, of Collins, being in charge.

The car on the N. O. G. N. R. R. will run from Twin to Jackson, Miss., on Dec. 5, Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Monticello, being in charge.

The car on the N. O. M. & C. R. R. will run from Walnut to Newton, Miss., starting on Nov. 20, Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Ripley, being in charge.

The car on the N. O. & N. E. R. R. will run from Picayune to Hattiesburg on Dec. 1, and from Hattiesburg to Meridian on Dec. 2, Mr. W. H. Patton and Mr. Geo. S. Weems, of Shubuta, being in charge.

On the M. & O. R. R., one car each for the Baptist and Methodist Orphanage will run from Corinth to Artesia on Nov. 21, Rev. J. S. Berry, of Tupelo, and Mr. Fred J. McDonnell, Jr., of Okolona, being in charge, respectively. A joint car for the two Orphanages will run from Columbus, via Artesia to Meridian, starting Nov. 21, Rev. J. S. Berry, of Tupelo, and Rev. D. W. Babb, of Crawford, being in charge. A joint car from Vinegar Bend to Waynesboro will run on Friday, Dec. 1, and from Waynesboro to Meridian on Dec. 2, and this same car will run locally on the A. & V. from Meridian to Jackson on Monday, Dec. 4, carrying all donations for the two Orphanages at intervening points, Mr. W. H. Patton and Mr. Geo. S. Weems, of Shubuta, being in charge.

On the I. C. R. R., one car will run from Horn Lake to Grenada on Nov. 24, Rev. W. E. Lee, of Como, and Rev. J. H. Brooks, of Senatobia, being in charge. A car going from Lamar to Grenada, via Water Valley, on Nov. 23, Dr. C. K. Bailey, of Coffeeville, being in charge. A car from Grenada to Jackson on Nov. 24, Rev. R. A. Tucker, of Grenada, being in charge. A car on Aberdeen Branch from Aberdeen to Durant on Nov. 29, Mr. D. L. Brown and Miss Lill Dodd, of Kosciusko, being in charge. A car from Osyka to McComb on Dec. 5, Mr. E. W. Reid, of Magnolia, being in charge, and the same car from McComb to Jackson on Dec. 6, Mr. J. R. Kyser and Mr. W. D. Davis, of Brookhaven, being in charge.

A car on the Y. & M. V. R. R. from Clarksdale, via Dublin, Tutwiler, Greenwood, Tchula, to Yazoo City, Nov. 21, Dr. W. T. Johnson and Mr. Rowan Thayer, of Greenwood, being in charge. A car from Tutwiler, via Drew, Ruleville, Sunflower, Moorhead, and Yazoo City to Jackson on Nov. 21, Mr. M. C. Smith and Rev. R. H. Ruff, of Moorhead, being in charge. A car from Clarksdale, via Shelby, Leland, Rolling Fork and Vicksburg to Harriston on Nov. 21, Rev. E. M. Shaw, of Boyle, being in charge. A car from Natchez to Jackson on Dec. 5, Mr. Hugh Junkin, of Natchez, and Rev. J. C. Ware, of Fayette, being in charge.

A car will be run on the F. & G. in charge of Rev. W. H. Saunders—date to be announced later.

All pastors, Sunday school superintendents, Missionary Societies, Unions, and Leagues are requested to appoint committees to announce and advertise these cars in their several communities and see that they are well filled for the benefit of the hundreds of orphaned children in these two institutions.

Sincerely yours,
J. R. CARTER,
Mgr. Baptist Orphanage.
J. B. RANDOLPH,
Mgr. Methodist Orphanage.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM BACKACHE?

When your kidneys are weak and torpid they do not properly preform their functions; your back aches and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be despondent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Get it to-day.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

From the Field

Mathiston, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am very glad to say that everything is moving on nicely in our charge. Our people have been very kind to us. Our revival did much good and a number were received into our Church on profession of faith. Some good church members have been called to their heavenly home during the year. Two of our most worthy men were ill when we came to this charge, Brothers W. J. Malone and John Atkins, but we are glad to say that they are much improved and we trust that they are on the road to health. Our new church at Mathiston will be dedicated on the second Sunday in November at 11 o'clock a. m. All former pastors and presiding elders are cordially invited to attend the service, which will be conducted by Rev. W. W. Mitchell, the presiding elder.—Thos. H. Mills, P. C.

Porterville, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you allow me space to say a few words? Our work consists of five churches and one appointment in a field where there is no church. We have held a revival at all six of the appointments. At each place we had a very good meeting. We received 12 persons into the Church this year, and there have been at least 40 reclamations during the year. There are several who have told us personally that they were more determined to live for Christ than ever before. From the fruits of the lives of the people generally, we believe the churches are all holding their own, and that some are doing more than this. Our congregations are better than they have ever been during our stay on the Porterville charge. Our finances are not up, but we are hoping that they will be as good as last year. However, we can not tell just yet. We are receiving good things from the people all over the work. We have made about 285 pastoral visits. We are happy, praising the Lord for what has been done. Pray for us.—R. H. Clegg, P. C.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

REPORT OF "THE COMMISSIONER."

"To whomsoever it may concern," or, "Know all men by these presents," that while there is much that might be said, there are so many things that must be done in these closing days of the year that time fails me for more than brief statements; neither am I writing in the order of events.

Brother and Sister Chapman brought their little girl to our City Infirmary some time since, where she was operated upon successfully, and, after a stay of ten or fifteen days, they returned with her to their parsonage home, entirely relieved.

"Will Griffin" passed through the city en route to Mayersville to assist Brother Hopper in a meeting—results have not yet been reported. It was whispered to us very recently that Wells' people were contemplating a Ford for making his work more effective in his pastorate. Sister Wells, I surmise, may set the hens for early broilers next spring.

Port Gibson College reports a full house, there having been quite a score added to its student body since my last report. We learn that a very successful revival was held in the town, in which there were several additions to the Church, mostly from the students at the College.

By agreement, all of the Protestant churches in Vicksburg held protracted services during the week beginning with the first Sunday in October. Little interest was manifested except at the Gibson Memorial Church, where Pastor Roberts had secured the services of the Lewis Quartet, who took turn about also in the pulpit. These services resulted in 28 accessions to the Church, a general revival of the membership, and an all-round forward movement by the congregation. Roberts is in fine spirits and is pushing a movement to liquidate the debt upon the church and parsonage with remarkable success. "So mote it be."

Every few days a message over the 'phone from the elder tells me that he is passing through on his whirlwind campaign, winding up the work of the year.

Last Sunday afternoon Rev. S. J. Winchester, of the Southern Sociological Congress, gave two lectures in our city—one to men, and one to women—both of which were received kindly by those who heard them. The cause that he represents is in many respects most vital to our social life, and I bespeak for him a hearing wherever he may go.

A hasty call to Coffeeville recalled the oft-repeated lines "Into each life some rain must fall, some days be dark and dreary." The twin granddaughters smiled upon us for a while and then began to fade, and the Reaper, who "reaps both great and small," came.

While in the community, we had the pleasure of meeting and hearing Elder Felts. I can not forget his discourse on "The Vine and the Branches." It recalled an expression so often made to me by Dr. Richard Abbey, famous as a writer and thinker of another generation: "Oh, I wish I could preach, I wish I could preach!" Felts feeds his hearers. From pointers, which dropped, he is not sparing himself. The rains in July and the weevils in August had played havoc with the farming interests, but the brethren were hopeful of full reports.

It was an agreeble episode when a kindly face and a pleasant voice greeted me on the train with the expression, "Don't you know your namesake?" It had been many months and some years since our parting, and he was in kilts at that time. How could I know him? Yes, it was not hard to recall even the child features of "Dick" Eagan, and we love him for his greeting.

But this thing might do like Tennyson's brook; and duty calls. Unless some things extraordinary should come upon the scene, the boys may have a recess until after the gathering at Galloway Memorial, in Jackson.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Between the great things that we cannot do and the small things we will not do, the danger is that we shall do nothing.—Adolph Monod.

FROM LELAND, MISS.

At the fourth quarterly conference of Leland Station resolutions of high appreciation were passed touching the work of Rev. H. S. Spragins, presiding elder of the Greenville District, who is concluding a most successful quadrennium. The strongest feeling of love and appreciation abides in the hearts of all the people of the Greenville District for Brother Spragins, many of this number being at Leland.

Leland was made a station appointment with full time of the pastor at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference and the work in every department has prospered this year. There have been 40 additions to the Church, the parsonage debt has been paid in full, and the parsonage supplied with new furniture without creating any indebtedness. We have a live Sunday school, an active Woman's Society, and the membership of both of these organizations has been increased. These are some of the items of which the official board took note of at the business session of the quarterly conference on Oct. 23.

This growth is largely due to the wise planning of Brother Spragins, and my predecessor, and the faithful co-operation of such laymen as J. T. Mathis and the membership as a whole this year. E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

REV. H. W. MAY COMMENDED.

Whereas, the Rev. H. W. May, the presiding elder of the Alexandria District, of the Louisiana Conference, has come to us for his final quarterly conference of the present year, and of his quadrennium,

And whereas he has been punctual and painstaking and has exercised wise judgment in administering the affairs of the kingdom; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the fourth quarterly conference of the Columbia charge, that we regret exceedingly that the time has come when the said Rev. H. W. May shall cease his labors among us.

Resolved, secondly, That during the six consecutive years that Brother May has served this charge in the capacity of presiding elder and pastor we have learned to appreciate him highly as a man, as a brother, and as an officer in the Church, and shall ever hold him in kind remembrance for his work's sake.

Resolved, further, That our love and prayers shall ever go with our beloved brother, and that we shall always rejoice in whatever success may attend his labors.

Resolved, finally, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and also a copy to the Caldwell Watchman for publication.

Done at Columbia, La., Sept. 3, 1916.

"We are on a solemn journey at all times, and the direction we are taking is of greater consequence than the point we have reached, for our journey is an endless one. Are we looking toward God or away from God?"

A contemporary remarks as follows: "The recognition of properly constituted authority is an integral part of worthy character. Irresponsibility has no recognition in the Word of God. 'Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers,' is the exhortation of the Apostle." A spirit of lawlessness is bad, whether it exhibits itself in the State or in the Church.

In commenting upon the character and service of the late Hon. Charles Scott, of Rosedale, Miss., The Vicksburg Herald says: "He was born to leadership by the title of an indefatigable purpose and a fearless heart." These qualities are always among the essential elements of true leadership. A man of courage and persistent determination is pretty sure not to be a mere trailer.

It was Milton—was it not?—who spoke of "stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in." There now seems to be upon the part of some so-called Christian workers, in their efforts to take over the dance, the theater, and the Sunday picture show, a disposition to reverse the policy referred to by the great bard, by stealing the livery of the devil to serve the Lord in. The devil is doubtless pleased with such service, but we scarcely think that the Master is.

The following utterance is from the Sacred Heart Review: "College drinking songs are on the decline. The University of Pennsylvania has taken action prohibiting the further use of songs that are fit only for drinking-bouts. The Ohio State University is taking similar steps. Sooner or later all the colleges will be compelled to yield to the rising tide of sentiment against social drinking." May God speed the happy day!

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, who has been spending some time as a chaplain of troops on the Mexican border, is quoted as having recently said: "I rode one day with the Negro driver of four army mules and my estimate of the army mule is that he has more insight, sagacity, and will-power than anything outside of a human being." We do not know how much "insight" a mule has, but it has always been our understanding that he has quite a good foresight and "hind-sight."

"Our Dumb Animals" quotes Miss Frances Willard as having said to Mr. George T. Angell, the pioneer organizer of the movement to prevent cruelty to dumb brutes: "I look upon your mission as a sacred one, not second to any founded in the name of Christ." Kindness to the various sentient creatures about us is truly a part of the Christian religion. Cruelty of any sort is at variance with the mind that was in Christ Jesus, and which ought to be in all his disciples.

OUT OF PLACE.

We confess to a decided distaste for undue familiarity with the great Infinite God, whether it be in the form of addressing him in a light and irreverent manner, or in a presumptuous affirmation of what his will is. Surely we should be slow to take liberties with Him whom the heavens cannot contain and before whom angels and archangels veil their faces, and it ill becomes any man with his limited knowledge of the counsels of omniscient Deity to declare oracularly that God is leading in this or that movement. Modesty and common sense alike call for some qualifying words when we venture to speak of what we think the Heavenly Father is doing with reference to human affairs and activities. Presumptuousness is not a characteristic of deep piety, of true holiness. Usually it is a mark either of ignorance or of a superficial Pharisaism.

THE TRUE MAN'S REWARD.

It pays to live up to one's highest conceptions of right, but one who does this need not expect that such a course will invariably be rewarded by one's fellow-men in this life. There is much talk to the effect that such will unfailingly be the case, but the facts do not justify it. The world's honors are more frequently won by a resort to expediency than by inflexible adherence to principle, and possibly this is also more often true of the Church's honors than it ought to be. But he who stands openly and fearlessly for his convictions "earns and keeps the company of his own self-respect," and to a true man this is worth more than applause or wealth or position. Perhaps this was what the inspired writer had in mind when he said," A good man shall be satisfied from himself." And there awaits him at last the Master's sweet approval.

EDUCATION PAYS.

The value of an education (of the right kind) does not by any means wholly or chiefly lie in what it capacitates one to acquire in a material way. The enlarged usefulness and increased pleasures that it brings with it are factors of equal, if not even greater, importance. An educated man can be vastly more serviceable to society than one who is not, and in the far-reaching fields of knowledge there are many things that please and delight him, of which the untutored mind knows nothing. Think, for instance, of what charms there are in such a knowledge of the starry heavens above as even a fair acquaintance with astronomy gives. But while it is these nobler aspects of an education which constitute its crowning glory, it is nevertheless true that, when viewed from the lower standpoint of financial profit, education pays. A very striking setting forth of this fact is seen in the following clipping from a secular contemporary:

State Superintendent Cary, of Wisconsin, declares the schoolboy or girl earns $9 a day for every day spent in school. This is the way he proves it:

Uneducated laborers earn on an average $500 a year for 40 years, a total of $20,000.

High school graduates earn on an average $1000 per year for forty years, a total of $40,000.

This education requires 12 years of school of 180 days each, a total of 2160 days. If 2160 days at school add $20,000 to the income of life, then each day at school adds $9.02.

The boy who quits school before he has finished in order "to make money" should look this statement over and think it second time. Nine dollars a day is better than one or two dollars.

It is true the $9 isn't paid in cash. It can't be placed in the bank or used to buy clothes. But it is added to the balance account of the future from which the youth expects to draw in years to come. And $9 is merely the average. Many who improve their opportunities make much more.

This is only the money side of education. It leaves out of account the improved standards of living and the greater social opportunities which are worth more than money.

There isn't a job in town good enough to compensate a boy or girl for the loss of schooling.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING AT VASSAR.

A volume has come to us on the problems of religion by a professor in Vassar College. It bears the mark of scholarship and culture and is written in an engaging style. One is surprised, however, to find that it reduces the whole matter of religion to pure naturalism. According to its teaching there is no supernatural element in the Bible, the miracles of Jesus are myths, the forty years elapsing between his death and the writing of the Gospels allowing plenty of time for the growth of legendary tales, and even the resurrection of Jesus has no sufficient evidence and is unimportant. Jesus was only a Jewish prophet of rare spirituality and enthusiasm, and we once more hear the story of Renan's "Sweet Galilean Vision." Now this professor has a right to his conscientious views on the subject of the origin and nature of Christianity, but is Vassar College the place in which they should be taught? This is a Christian college founded by Baptists and always regarded as an orthodox institution. The Baptists control it, and they stand true to historic Christianity. Young women go into its class rooms out of Christian homes in all of our evangelical churches. Do they know into what religious atmosphere they are being invited when they receive its catalogues? Do the trustees and Baptist leaders who are responsible for that institution approve of such teaching? We know this involves a difficult and delicate problem, but there is a line to be drawn somewhere, and at least the Christian public has a right to know when such an institution as Vassar College so widely departs from historic Christian faith and teaching.—Presbyterian Banner.

To be aware of God means that we must see Him in nature and in history, that we must perceive Him in the lives of our fellow-men, and that we must find him in the recesses of our souls.—George Wharton Pepper.

A MORNING HYMN.

John Wesley.

We lift our hearts to thee,
O Day-Star from on high!
The sun itself is but thy shade,
Yet cheers both earth and sky.

O let thy orient beams
The night of sin disperse,
The mists of error and of vice
Which shade the universe!

How beauteous nature now!
How dark and sad before!
With joy we view the pleasing change,
And nature's God adore.

May we this life improve,
To mourn for errors past;
And live this short revolving day
As if it were our last.

To God, the Father, Son,
And Spirit—One in Three—
Be glory; as it was, is now,
And shall forever be.

MR. MOODY'S FEAR.

Mr. Moody used to say that he feared more than anything else the dead and cold formalism of the Church of God. He conceived it to be his duty to awaken the many Christians who were sleeping and slumbering while souls all around were perishing. Mr. Moody's spiritual insight into conditions in the Church of God was exceedingly clear and discriminating. What the Church needs to-day, as in Mr. Moody's time, is to arouse from her lethargy and to enter upon an era of evangelistic earnestness such as characterized the early disciples in the apostolic age.—Christian Observer.

STOPPING THE MACHINERY.

Some time ago I was taken through a large factory where there were hundreds of looms at work in the spinning of very fine linen thread. * * * The manager of the mill said to me, "So delicate is this machinery that if a single thread out of the whole thirty thousand which at this moment are weaving should break, all of these looms would stop instantly." * * * He stepped up to one of the machines and broke a single thread, and instantly every loom stopped, and remained stationary until the thread was rejoined. Then they went on automatically. That mechanical wonder can be used as an illustration of "that which is spiritual." It is through one sin, one disobedience, one departure from the clearly seen pathway of the will and the fear of God that I lose the ministry of the Spirit, and not until the thread is rejoined is it that—automatically, if I dare use the term—the ministry of the Spirit in his illumination, in his refinement, in his satisfying of my heart and mind, and in his reinforcing of my efforts, is continued.—J. Stuart Holden.

SIN.

Anything which makes sin less sinful connives at sin. Anything that glosses sin, that vanishes it, that decorates it, is in reality a minister of sin. And in this way even our very forgiveness can be the enemy of virtue and the barrier to a holy life. In our desire to be "nice" we are often hurtful, and in our wish to be sweet and pleasant we are often morally and spiritually destructive. We may smother the stench of an open sewer with a flask of eau de cologne. Our forgiveness may be just sweet-scented sentiment, and the uncleanness of the sin is only daintily concealed. Well, now, if the Holy Lord is to forgive our sin, it must be in some way that will not make light of it. However he may forgive us, the sin which is forgiven must not appear light and frivolous; it must appear exceedingly sinful, black with the blackness of the blackest night. If the Holy Lord made sin less awful by the manner of his forgiveness, what an awful world would this become! It is at the Cross of Christ that we see what divine forgiveness has cost. At the Cross the guilt of sin is forgiven, while its appalling nature is revealed.—Dr. Jowett.

REDEMPTION ACCORDING TO SAINT PAUL.

By Rev. Olin Ray.

I.

Saul, who became the great Apostle to the Gentiles, was a free born citizen of Tarsus, which he tells us was no mean city. As a young man he went to Jerusalem for instruction in the school of Gamaliel, the most renowned Pharisaic Rabbi of his day. As a Pharisee, Paul believed in the strictest observance of the law. Educated in Jewish schools, trained in Jewish law and bred in the monotheistic doctrine of the Jew, he believed that the worship of Christ, by His followers, was nothing less than blasphemy against God and should be prohibited. Thus we have the beginnig of the persecution of the early Christians by Saul, who was recognized by his fellow religionists as being so effective in his persecution that the Sanhedrin appointed him as a special agent to stamp out the Christian heresy in the city of Damascus, since to the Hebrew mind righteousness is not so much a moral quality as a legal status.

Salvation, according to the Jewish conception, was physical and political. In the early life of the nation it was of the whole nation, but later, under their persecution, it was of the remnant that should be spared, through whom the nation should be brought back into glory and power. The foes from whom they were to be redeemed were their national enemies. To Paul, the only way to rid the world from such opposition, according to their idea of God and His plans, was to put to death every one who called on the name of Christ. This he did so far as was possible in Jerusalem and was on his way to Damascus, in company with a party, in order to seek out and bring to trial any who might be of the following of the hated Nazarene in that city, when the Lord appeared to him in the way and revealed himself as the Messiah.

Paul was familiar with the Messianic idea which had developed from the nation as a whole through the remnant conception into a conquering personality. The Jews had hoped for a day when God, in wisdom and righteousness, should rule over the whole world. This idea had been broadening and ripening until it found its culmination in the revelation of Christ, himself, to Paul as the Messiah. He at once recognized the supernatural presence and in response to his question received the reply—"I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." He immediately attributed to this voice the authority of God and recognized the Messiah, so long looked for by the Jews.

As he was carrying out the letter of the law, hoping thereby to find favor with God, he likely observed, in the lives of those people whom he was persecuting, just that confidence and satisfaction which he had hoped to find in the observance of the law. Doubtless he never forgot the convincing words of the dying Stephen nor the face radiant with heavenly light. In quest of this peace, Paul came to realize that the law demanded an obedience which he, as a carnal man, was unable to render and felt the need of a power, outside of himself, which the law could not supply. This could only fill him with doubt and despair. The whole of the seventh chapter of Romans is the cry of a despondent soul groping in darkness and trying to find comfort in the keeping of the law. This agony of spirit finds its culmination in the closing words, "Wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me out of the body of this death?" But the answer to this inquiry is found in the hope which he had in Jesus Christ.

Paul comes to understand that the purpose of the law from the beginning was not to save men from sin, but to convince them of their sins, and his own experience taught him this. After his vision on the Damascus road and his realization of the Messiahship of Christ, he reinterpreted the Scriptures in the light of his new revelation and found in them a new hope, not only for his own nation, but for the whole world as well. In this experience a veil has been lifted from his spiritual perception, so that he found in the Book of the Law such treasures as he had never dreamed of before. This fact is brought out in the following words of his (the Apostle's) writings: "But unto this day whensoever Moses is read a veil lieth upon their heart, but whensoever it (a man) shall turn to the Lord the veil is taken away." (II Corinthians 3:15.) It is only when a person comes into a spiritual relation with Christ that he can comprehend spiritual things.

The conditions of salvation have never changed, and the Apostle himself tells us that the promise was given four hundred and thirty years previous to the law. He speaks of "a covenant confirmed beforehand by God, the law, which, coming four hundred and thirty years after, doth not disannul, so as to make the promise of none effect." (Gal. 3:17.) Christ was in the history of Israel as a spiritual force, operating prior to and beneath all law. His experience in keeping the law, as a Pharisee, revealed to him very acutely its futility as a power to save from sin, and he saw in it only a shadow of the things to come. (Rom. 3:21, Gal. 3:24, Col. 2:16.) "But what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh; that the ordinance of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8:3, 4.)

The law was given for the purpose of showing men their sinfulness and thereby driving them to Christ for relief. By it men came into a consciousness of sin and of their condemned condition before God, but are never delivered from its curse. The very presence of the Gospel shows that the intention of the law was not to save fallen men. "For if righteousness is through the law, then Christ died for naught." (Gal. 2:21.) Christ becomes the end of the law in that He put an end to its validity, and in Him we find everything that was of permanent value in it. In addition thereto, He supplied that joy and peace which had been sought in vain in the realms of the law. Paul himself had sought peace by the strictest observance of the law, but had never found satisfaction until he found it through faith in Jesus Christ. When he found that it was impossible to keep the whole law and that a break in the minutest part brought him under its condemnation, he was prepared for the revelation by the way, and the reception of the great commission which made him the great Apostle to the Gentiles. When convinced of the Messiahship of Christ, His death was transformed from the last calamity of a blameless life into an act of grace by which God saved a sinful world. This conviction drove him beyond the narrow walls of Jewish prejudice and particularism to become the advocate of a world-wide gospel, in which there was only one God for Jew and Gentile.

This was an entirely new view of the gospel, and one which had not yet been grasped by the other Apostles. Nor was it fully realized by Paul himself until later in his experience. It was a gradual development, ever broadening as he came to understand its broader purpose, until he could say, "I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Rom. 1:16.) Then whoever, by faith, shall come into its realization will be made a new creature, free from all law, for he is governed by a spiritual principle engravened on his heart.

In the fall of Adam, as the federal head of the race, man inherited a nature so biased towards sin that it was impossible for him to please God or find favor in His sight. This moral depravity led him into a state of ruin and despair and held out for him nothing except the curse of the law, for "cursed be he that confirmeth not the words of the law to do them." (Deut. 27:26.) The punishment prescribed by the law was death. This penalty was imposed upon each individual, because it was impossible to fulfill its requirements. This made salvation by the law impossible.

In order to meet this inability of man and to save him from the inevitable doom of the law, it was necessary that a supernatural power intervene. At this stage "God commendeth His own love towards us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Rom. 5:8.) This is shown further in the following: "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not also with Him freely give us all things." (Rom. 8:32.)

Redemption then had its source in the heart of God, who planned for its accomplishment from the foundation of the world, "according to the eternal purposes, which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph. 3:11), and its procuring cause in the death of Christ. The revelation of the Son made known unto man, his kinship to God and capacity to know him.

Walnut, Miss.

THE NEGRO AND METHODIST UNITY.

(By the late Rev. A. B. Leonard, D.D., LL.D., for twenty-four years one of the Foreign Missionary Secretaries of the Northern Methodist Church.)

It must be admitted that the Negro is the main obstacle to the organic union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Indeed, but for the Negro the latter organization would not exist. The Negro was the sole cause of the division that was precipitated in 1844, and to-day he is the one obstruction to reunion. Eliminate the Negro and the two Methodisms will flow together as naturally as two rivers unite and flow on in the same channel. But the Negro cannot be eliminated. He is too numerous and too important. He numbers ten millions to-day and will number twenty millions to-morrow. It has been proposed to send him back to Africa, but if all the ships that float the Stars and Stripes were employed they could not carry away the annual increase. Any arrangement, political or ecclesiastical, that tends to cleavage between the black and the white, not in harmony with the basic fact of human equality, will only breed greater trouble further on. There may be adjustments, political and ecclesiastical, growing out of racial, linguistic and social conditions, provided they do not ignore or violate the basic principle of racial equality. God has "made of one blood all nations to dwell on all the face of the earth," has redeemed all by the blood of His Son, and brings all into a fellowship "where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all and in all."

Changed Attitude.

From 1844 until 1866 the Southern Church had Negro members, but in the latter year, immediately succeeding the Civil War, that Church set off its colored members and constituted for their accommodation what has since been known as the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, which was a purely arbitrary act unasked and probably undesired by the membership affected. Since that time the Church, South, has reported no colored members, lay or ministerial. Its doors are closed to persons having Negro blood in their veins, no matter how perfectly they may measure up to all intellectual and spiritual conditions of membership. In a word, a negro cannot become a member of a local church or an Annual or General Conference. Among its membership of over 2,000,000 not a Negro is found, though they are surrounded by millions belonging to that race. The "one blood" doctrine of Saint Paul (Acts 17:26) is ignored, and a no-negro blood doctrine is substituted.

Unchanged Attitude.

From 1784 until the present the Methodist Episcopal Church has maintained the "one blood" doctrine and now has a Negro membership numbering about 320,000, every one of whom enjoys equal ecclesiastical legal rights with the white membership. The Negro is not barred by law from any position in the gift of the Church. Bearing a certificate of membership, he is entitled to admission to any Methodist Episcopal Church anywhere in the world, and is eligible to any office from the lowest to the highest. Colored Annual Conferences are on the same ecclesiastical level as white Conferences, and are entitled to equal representation in the General Conference where their representatives have equal rights and privileges with the representatives of white Conferences. A white man can be a member of a colored Conference, and in either case each is on the same ecclesiastical level. In fact, such mixed memberships have often occurred and now exist. Of our seven effective missionary Bishops one is a Negro who is the equal of his colleagues, and in the territory to which he is assigned is the equal officially of a General Superintendent. Negroes are members of our Book Committee, General Missionary Committees and Benevolent Boards; one is a corresponding secretary co-ordinate with a white colleague, and one is the editor of an official weekly Christian Advocate—all of which prove conclusively that in the Methodist Episcopal Church there is no legal or ecclesiastical color or racial line.

Proposed Attitude.

Should the plan for "Unification by Reorganization" proposed by the Joint Commission be adopted, the attitude of the new organization toward the Negro would be the same as that held by the Church, South, from 1866 until the present, while the Methodist Episcopal Church would abandon the attitude it has held toward the Negro from 1784 until now.

The plan of the Joint Commission proposes "three or four Quadrennial Conferences." The General Conference of the Church, South, responds by saying it favors "this general plan of reorganization" and adds: "However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the organized and united Church."

The difference between the two plans is that the former proposes that "the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church and such organizations of colored Methodists as may enter into agreement with them may be constituted and reorganized as one of the Quadrennial Jurisdictional Conferences of the proposed reorganization," while the latter favors the organization of the colored Methodists into an independent denomination.

The Joint Commission plan, if adopted, would divide the territory of the United States into three Quadrennial Conferences for white people and constitute a Quadrennial Conference for colored Methodists as large territorially as the three for white people. Would this plan place the lay and ministerial negro members on the same legal and ecclesiastical level with the lay and ministerial members of the white Quadrennial Conferences? It is taken for granted that lay members and ministers of the three white Quadrennial Conferences would be freely transferred from one jurisdiction to another. Would the same freedom of transfer be allowed to negro members and ministers? Or would white Conferences and churches be closed to colored people? If the first question is answered negatively and the second affirmatively, then the 320,000 colored members of what is now the Methodist Episcopal Church would be deprived of their present ecclesiastical position and relegated to another position which would be as distinct as though they were an independent organization.

Constitutional Difficulties.

It is difficult to see how the Methodist Episcopal Church can co-operate in such a plan, as it would require constitutional changes that would be seemingly impossible. Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church cannot be eliminated by constitutional amendments. If our Negro members desire to remain in the Church no legislation of any kind can displace them. Ex post facto legislation is impossible. There are only three ways by which membership can be terminated—withdrawal, expulsion and death. Withdrawal is a personal act, expulsion is a legal act for cause, and death is an involuntary, providential act. Our Negro members could unanimously withdraw, a thing they are not likely to do; or our white membership could withdraw, which would leave the negro membership in possession of the present organization known as the Methodist Episcopal Church, while the white membership would become identified with a new organization with a new name. But why all this gerrymandering on the question of unification? Why, simply and solely because of the presence of the Negro? There are differences that have developed since 1844, as the veto power of the Bishops, lay men in the Annual Conferences, probationary membership, etc., but all differences could be adjusted and a union effected were it not for the fact that the Methodist Episcopal Church has a large Negro membership which cannot go into the proposed union on the plane of equal legal and ecclesiastical privileges and there does not as yet appear any practicable method of disposing of them. * * * * * *

The color line drawn by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is the one obstacle to organic union. It is the "crux recognized by both sides." Even if the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church should unanimously withdraw, we could not enter into the proposed organization, by whatever name known, with a written or implied understanding that any human being should be refused membership because of race, color, or "previous condition of servitude."—From the New York Christian Advocate.

A PRECIOUS WESLEYAN RELIC PRESENTED TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Mr. L. B. Roheson, a member of the Publishing Firm of Ginn & Co., and a graduate of Emory College in the Class of 1886, has presented to Emory University a rare relic of the Wesleyan era. It is a pulpit which was probably made for John Wesley by the miners of the Winterbourne District about the year 1740. For many years it has remained in an old cottage in Kendleshire, near Winterbourne—one of a row of cottages in which the colliers were accustomed to assemble for service nightly in winter and in wet weather. In fair weather the desk was carried out on a neighboring hill and around it were assembled a great multitude to hear Mr. Wesley's preaching.

The genuineness of the relic is attested by Mr. Daniel Edwards, now past ninety years old, of High Street, Staple Hill. Mr. Edwards is the grandson of Mr. Charles Edwards, and lived in one of the three cottages at Kendleshire. In this cottage Mr. Edwards played around the desk as a child. He was told that John Wesley ordered the pulpit made by a carpenter by the name of James, a great-grandson of whom is in the employ of Mr. Edwards. He remembers distinctly when it was used in his childhood for Sunday services in the cottage, which were conducted by various preachers, among them being Jeholda Edwards, who gave the father of Mr. Edwards his first class card, and who at a later date preached from the pulpit a funeral sermon on the death of Dr. Adam Clarke. In this pulpit Dr. Adam Clarke also preached many times.

This interesting relic was purchased of Miss Mary Ann Flook of Kendleshire, Winterbourne, who also is able to attest its being the pulpit made for Mr. Wesley and used by him, and also used by many of the great historic preachers of early Methodism.

The pulpit will be placed in the chapel of the School of Theology of Emory University. It is in a good state of preservation.

THE SINGING WELSH.

The Welsh people have been criticised for holding a musical festival when their nation is in the throes of war, and many of their own sons have given their lives for the nation. But those who know the Welsh fully realize that their singing is never inappropriate. They sing out of their lives and the kind of their singing is determined by the situation. Lloyd George, in an address delivered at an Elsteddford recently, put the matter well when he said of the Welshman:

"He sings in joy; he sing in sorrow. He sings in prosperity; he sings also in adversity. He sings in play; he sings also at work. He sings in the sunshine; he sings also in the storm. He sings in peace, why should he not sing in war? He sings in the daytime; he sings also in the night. Hundreds of wars have swept over these hills, but the harp of Wales has never yet been silenced by one of them."—The Presbyterian.

General Carr is one of the leading laymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The New York Herald of October 28 says: "Speaking on 'What New York Needs,' the Rev. James David Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, said in his sermon yesterday morning: "We should not think of and wait for an evangelist who may come here in May. We should do something very different from that and it should be done now. The saloons of this city, placed end to end, would make the longest city in the world and the dives are wide open. The remedy is Christian influence."

SHALL THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE HAVE EP-OFFICIO MEMBERS?

Rev. W. F. Dunkle, Ph. D.

(As the latter portion of this article was inadvertently omitted last week, we are publishing the whole of it in this issue of the Advocate.—The Editor.)

The above question is to be answered by the Annual Conferences at this annual session. It comes to them from the General Conference in the form of an amendment to the Constitution, proposing to make the Annual Conference and the District Conference lay leaders members ex-officio of the Annual Conference.

Undoubtedly there is a widespread feeling that we should have a larger lay membership in the Annual Conference, and with this feeling I am in fullest sympathy. Likewise, there is a fixed desire to advance in every wise the interests of the Laymen's Movement. Nobody desires anything but to help it forward. This proposed measure has the merit of combining both these desires—a desire to increase the lay membership in the Annual Conference, and to help the Laymen's Movement. It is conceded that it will give some increase to the membership of the Annual Conference. But the question is, do we want increase at any cost? The proposed measure has some very serious objections.

1. It is class legislation of the baldest and openest sort. Being such, it inevitably discriminates against all and every other Conference Board, together with the interests in their hands. The lay members of no other Conference board are also members of the Annual Conference. It remains for the Board of Lay Activities to ask and be granted this special favor. On what ground, one wonders?

2. It opens the door for every other board to ask for a like consideration, and it places the General and Annual Conferences where they cannot well afford to deny the request, not to say demand, if made.

3. It introduces into our Conferences the dangerous practice of having "special representation for special interests." And once this practice is legalized, it would inevitably grow until each board had it. Then the Conference would be in the hands of groups, each seeking to advance its own special interest, regardless of the effect on the whole.

4. It would place the balance of power in every trial by ballot, where the laymen voted separately, in the hands of these "special interest" representatives. And they could, if they wished, always control elections. Hence, it would be possible to send to the General Conference lay delegations who were the special representatives of the special interest that elected them.

5. It introduces into Methodism a new thing—"ex-officio" membership. And, weighty as are the objections hitherto mentioned, they are slight as compared to this. This is fundamental. "Ex-officio" membership! It is fundamentally undemocratic, and fatally dangerous. No civil government has ever favored it. Whenever tried it has proven hurtful. It is inherently "special interest" representation. It is there not because the electors deemed it fit, but because some special interest selected it. It is never amenable to the body in which it sits and in whose deliberations it takes a voice.

If once this principle be admitted, nobody can tell to what extent it may grow. Already one General Conference seriously debated making all the connectional officers members of the General Conference "ex-officio." And, if the Annual Conferences adopt this measure and give to anybody "ex-officio membership, we may be sure of seeing it find a place in the General Conference sooner or later. In fact, one wonders if this may not be a sort of side-door attempt to get what was found impossible at the front.

If the Annual Conferences need additional laymen, why not let them be elected by the District Conference? The only wise thing to do with this measure is to vote NO.

THE APPEAL FOR GIBSON MEMORIAL CHURCH.

To the Mississippi Conference.

My Dear Brethren: By permission, I am writing in the interest of Brother Roberts' appeal for the Gibson Memorial Church. The closing sentence in that call, "If you are ever going to help me, help me now," can be fully appreciated only by those who are on the ground, and know the struggle Brother Roberts is making to lift a burden from his church. His people are rallying nobly to his help, going some of them beyond their means, to secure the end in view. Methodism in Vicksburg needs Gibson Memorial—(yes, and more). Brother Roberts has stated his case, and, as his co-pastor, I join in this appeal for relief. There are doubtless former citizens of Vicksburg within the Conference, elsewhere, who would willingly respond to this call if their attention were drawn to it.

Sincerely,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

NOTICE.

Financial depression, which is particularly severe in this locality, and limited hotel accommodations, which are of an unusual character, make it impossible for us to offer entertainment to visitors during the approaching session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. This applies to the wives of preachers as well as to all others who are not duly elected delegates to the Conference. This notice is given with sincere regrets and only because of the force of adverse circumstances.

WHITWORTH GIRL WINS HONORS.

Miss Audelle Alford has been awarded the prize offered each year by the State Federation of Women's Clubs for the best original musical composition in the Junior Department. This department is open to all students of music under twenty-one years of age studying under teachers within the State of Mississippi. The judge of this contest is Charles Denee, of the New England Conservatory of Music. We feel that Whitworth is to be congratulated on this new honor. Miss Alford is a pupil of Miss Lois Cooper, who is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and has done post graduate work under a number of artist teachers in the North and East.

For years past, Whitworth has had a reputation throughout the Gulf States for the excellence of her music department. We are glad that this repulation is not only being held, but constantly enhanced.

WATER WORKS FOR FARM HOMES.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Mississippi has under way what is known as "A Water Works Campaign," which will be in progress from November 12 to November 18. Perhaps the leading spirit in this commendable movement is Prof. Daniel Scoats, who is anxious to secure the co-operation of the preachers of Mississippi in this worthy effort to improve rural conditions in that commonwealth, and who would be pleased to have pastors call the attention of their congregations to this undertaking next Sunday.

The following is an extract from an utterance recently made concerning this movement by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss.:

"It is appalling how blind are many to the daily opportunities of, by word and deed, bearing the burdens of those nearest and dearest to them, even of lifting burdens which none need bear. Incongruous as the statement may seem, it is possible to-day because of recent scientific labor-saving devices to add another exhortation to those quoted from the Bible: 'Cast thy burden upon science, and it will relieve thee.' In practical illustration, there is being inaugurated in Mississippi to-day a Home Water Works Campaign, the aim of which is to bring to the attention of the farmers of Mississippi the immense amount of daily drudgery that might be saved their wives and daughters by a simple and inexpensive system of piping water into the farm home from the well, with drainage out again, making toting water and slop a thing of the past. Everywhere our farmers are awakening to the value of labor-saving machinery for farm use. They are purchasing such and are providing better things for their dairies and stock farms, in many instances are purchasing automobiles; but in 106,870 farm homes in Mississippi (97.47 per cent) nothing has been done as yet to relieve the mothers and daughters of the old burdens in the kitchen and at the washtub, which have consumed time and bowed shoulders unnecessarily for centuries. Not unnecessary heretofore, it is admitted; but unnecessary to-day if even as little as $18.40 is expended to put in the simplest system suggested (See information sent out from the A. & M. College, or write for same). It is certainly not because the farmers of Mississippi do not love their wives and daughters as devotedly as do any in the land, nor is it through wilful lack of consideration for them that these conditions exist. It is rather because they have never realized as yet how easily possible it is to cast upon science these burdens to be borne by their loved ones no more forever, giving them time and opportunity for other helpful and uplifting things."

"Asked for the assured truth of Christianity, Coleridge answered, 'Try it!'"

THE BURDEN OF KEEPING UP APPEARANCES.

Human nature has no trait more marked than the desire to "be like other folk," especially in society and in the tokens of domestic prosperity. There are people who cannot bear the thought of being eclipsed in any way by a neighbor's show of material advancement.

In some respects this spirit is commendable. No one wishes to attract attention by being peculiar, or by showing contempt for fairly good examples set by other folk, yet it were better to be overly independent than to be hurtfully subservient to social custom.

"There is," as one writer observes, "a dreadful ambition abroad for being 'genteel.' We keep up appearances, too often at the expense of honesty, and, though we may not be rich, yet we must seem so. We must be 'respectable,' though only in the meanest sense—in mere vulgar outward show. We have not the courage to go patiently onward in the condition of life into which it has pleased God to call us; but must needs live in some fashionable state to which we ridiculously please to call ourselves, and all to satisfy the vanity of that unsubstantial genteel world of which we form a part. There is a constant struggle and pressure for front seats in the social amphitheatre; in the midst of which all noble self denying resolve is trodden down, and many fine natures are inevitably crushed to death.

What waste, what misery, what bankruptcy, come from all this ambition to dazzle others with the glare of apparent worldly success, we need not describe. The mischievous results show themselves in a thousand ways—in the rank frauds committed by men who dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor, and in the desperate dashes at fortune, in which the pity is not so much for those who fail as for the hundreds of innocent families who are so often involved in their ruin."

Illustrations can be found in almost any daily paper. The instances are not few in which men "dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor." The exposure of their frauds and dishonesties has brought heartache to many loved ones, some of whom, possibly, by ungovernable social ambition may have unconsciously contributed a share toward the fatuitous impulse to do wrong.

We wish some effective means could be devised of ridding society of this unnecessary burden.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING IN STATE SCHOOLS.

Here is one of those straightforward, Christian sayings that come so often from Mr. Bryan's lips: "We cannot compel the teaching of religion, but Christian taxpayers have the right to protest against the teaching of irreligion in the guise of philosophy in our universities." That is a point that should be well pondered by all our State schools.—Lutheran Church Work and Observer.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1200 to 1500 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions. Fraternally,

THE GRAVE OF HERNANDO DE SOTO.

(From Walter Malone's great epic, "Hernando De Soto"—a volume that every Southerner ought to read. As will be remembered, this renowned explorer, who was the first white man to see the Mississippi River, was buried in that noble stream near the present site of the city of Memphis.—Editor of the Advocate.)

De Soto sleeps heneath his River's waves;
No prouder, no more lasting monument
Hath any being of terrestrial birth.
The dying Theban, crowned with victory,
For mausoleum had his battlefield,
And childless, yet exclaimed exultingly:
"Two fairest daughters leave I unto Thebes—
Leuctra and Mantinea, deathless names!"
The giant Alps, where sleep eternal snows,
Where rush wild tempests everlastingly,
Where raging torrents leap, where eagles soar,
And rocky summits blend with clouds of heaven—
These make a tomh for Winkelried and Tell,
Stout-hearted patriots of their mountain land.
Magellan—he who sought to round the world—
Who gave his life to prove the earth a globe—
The stormy ocean shouts his glorious deeds,
Spreading his fame from pole to pole.
De Soto's mighty River, leading on
Ten thousand tributaries to the sea—
A tomb as lordly as a demigod's,
Magnificent and everlasting—bears
From Norland snow-peaks' fountain-urns of ice
To the far sunland vales of plumy palms,
The name of him who gave it to the world.

KEEP THE ISSUE STRAIGHT.

By W. F. Dunkle, in the Nashville Advocate.

Surely every issue should stand or fall on its own merits. In a recent number of the Advocate it was said of a certain Conference that it "went on record as against the proposed constitutional measure providing for increased lay representation in the Annual Conference." Now, of course, that may be just what that Conference did, but I doubt it, for there is no measure before the Church "proposing increased lay representation in the Annual Conference." What is before the Church is a measure which proposes to make the District and Conference lay leaders members of the Annual Conferences ex officio. And it is well to keep the issue straight. Otherwise it would appear to a casual reader, maybe to some who are not so casual, that the Church is opposed to granting the laymen any more representation than they now have. In fact, it has sought to make it appear just that very way.

But as a plain matter of fact the Conferences are not opposed to increased lay representation. They would be in favor of that if they had a chance at it. Neither are they afraid of the laymen. The preachers know that the Church belongs quite as much to the laymen as it does to the preachers, that the laymen have inherently as many rights in it as the preachers have, and that the laymen are just as loyal to it and love it quite as ardently as do the preachers. But the Annual Conferences do not forget that they are the custodians of certain very valuable rights, and they jealously guard them. They do not forget that once upon a time they refused to give even to the Bishops the right of ex-officio membership in the Annual Conferences. And, having refused it to Bishops, they are not likely to give it to any chance layman who may he chosen district or Conference lay leader. The Conferences are afraid of this principle of ex-officio membership. They do not and cannot know where it may lead unto. It is dangerous to open even a crayfish hole in a dyke.

The Conferences are going to reject this measure by a decisive vote. And it will prevent future misunderstandings and maybe heart-burnings if we keep the issue straight.

Sometime the Conferences will he given a chance to vote on a measure giving adequate lay representation in the Annual Conference; and, when that day comes, they will adopt it by an overwhelming majority. For they believe in and love the laymen. But they do not believe in nor do they love partiality and unjust discriminations. Neither do they believe in the principle of ex-officio membership.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

To Louisiana Pastors.

Brother pastor, am I correct in saying that you, as well as myself, have thoughts of the coming Annual Conference which is to meet at Baton Rouge on Nov. 22? While it may be true that our thoughts on many subjects dwell, one of the most important things to think of is that of having the Church Extension assessment paid in full.

It is unnecessary for me to try to tell you of the importance of this fund. It is as truly missionary as sending men and women to China or Africa is missionary. Like all missionary work, the field is both at home and abroad. Much is done in the foreign field by the Church Extension Board. Also much is being done in our home Conference. Many applications are being sent in, asking for help. There are churches in our towns and cities suffering because they are unable to build. There are communities where church organizations have disbanded because they had no church home. Others are on the verge of disbanding if we do not help them. To illustrate what I mean, when I was a boy one of our neighbors kept bees. It was the nature of these bees to swarm. When they swarmed, the farmer's crew would ring bells, blow horns and beat on a tin-pan. Whether this influenced them or not, the bees settled on a limb. The farmer usually had a hive or home for the bees. He knew that if he failed to house them they were lost. Now, this is just as true of our work; if we fail to house our organizations, we will lose them.

Dr. McMurry has sent out a little pamphlet, entitled, "The River of Church Extension." In this pamphlet he shows how this river springs from the heart of the Church, and gathers many tributaries, but does not despise the day of small things, and, with ever-increasing volume, pours its water over the land. Among its tributaries are Annual Conference collections, specials, individual contributions to the loan fund, and loans to churches and parsonages repaid. This river has followed the pioneer; ten thousand homeless congregations are housed because this river came to them. Two thousand itinerant preachers are dwelling in comfortable homes because of this river. Ten thousand more are waiting in hope that the stream will reach them.

"Blest river of Extension,
Pursue thine onward way.
Flow thou to every nation,
Nor in thy richness stay—
Stay not till all the homeless
Have found a worthy home,
Until the last disciple
Shall to the kingdom come."

Dr. McMurry will give to each pastor who has his collection in full, the Biography of Dr. David Morton, a book written by Bishop Hoss. This is our opportunity to get a book on one of the greatest themes, written by one of the greatest men of our Church. If you fail to get your collections in full, don't forget that the Church Extension cause is worthy when you divide. With best wishes,

Your friend and brother,

K. W. DODSON.

A CHAPTER FROM MY EXPERIENCE.

Rev. W. R. Williams.

What I am going to say in this article is for no other purpose but that I may be able to assist some young preacher who is coming after me. Just nineteen years ago this coming December I was admitted into the North Mississippi Conference. I stood some sort of an examination and passed the Committee. How or why, I cannot tell—possibly there was some undeveloped quality in me. I was put upon a four years' course of study, and I read and studied the books in it with one object in view: to be able to stand the examinations and pass. How and why any Committee passed me on any book I cannot tell. It may be that the love of Christ constrained them to do so.

Since finishing my four years' course I have read and studied the books embraced in it with a different object in view, namely, that I might know the truths they contained, the lessons they taught. Some of these volumes I have read from lid to lid, I think, as many as fifteen times. I have had a rule for a number of years to read from 5000 to 8000 pages each winter—except when occasionally I have had to move, and have fallen a little short in this respect. I am sorry that I have failed to keep a record of how many times I have read the Old Testament through. I have read the New Testament through twenty-six times. During this time I have traveled some circuits that were nearly large enough for presiding elders' districts; yet I have found time to read all the good books that I could buy or borrow. I bought some books from a young preacher eighteen years ago at half price; he told me that he had finished them in the course of study and that he would have no furtber use for them. I have them yet—some of them are considerably worn—and I would not sell for hardly any price. My library is a small thing compared with some that I have seen; still I prize it very highly. I am of the opinion that no man really needs a very extensive library unless he wants it for show.

My children are attending the Agricultural High School here in Buena Vista, and I have had to buy a great many books for them. They have laughed at me for the amount of time I have spent reading and studying their books. The only reason that I can give is that they keep me studying and help me to think and learn. All the books I have read have created a desire to read them again and again, that I might secure any knowledge set forth in them. Some one has said that if a man knows how to make a better mouse trap or chicken coop than others, the world will find its way to his gate. To any young preacher, I would say, if you can only afford to buy Webster's Blue Back Spelling-book, and will master its contents, you will at least know a few things.

Buena Vista, Miss.

THE ROBIN AND THE CHICKEN.

A plump little robin flew down from a tree
To hunt for a worm which he happened to see;
A frisky young chicken came scampering by,
And gazed at the robin with wondering eye.
Said the chick: "What a queer-looking chicken is that!
Its wings are so long and its body so fat."
While the robin remarked, loud enough to be heard:
"Dear me! an exceedingly strange-looking bird!"
"Can you sing?" Robin asked, and the chicken said, "No!"
But asked in its turn if the robin could crow.
So the bird sought a tree and the chicken a wall,
And each thought the other knew nothing at all!

GOING TO SCHOOL.

"I don't want to go to school this fall," said Lawrence as he came into the house one day in late summer.

"Why not?" asked his mother.

"Well, I've had such a good time all summer that I don't want to go back to the books and maps and things," answered Lawrence.

"I see," said his mother as she came to the doorway of the pantry and met his serious gaze with one of equal seriousness. Then she smiled as she turned to her work, and added: "We will talk it over when father comes home to-night."

Lawrence went back again into the yard, where he was making a wagon out of an old box, and there his mother found him, busily hammering and sawing, when she went to the back porch a little later.

"Lawrence," she called, "I must have some more sugar for my preserves. Will you please run down to the store and get half a dozen pounds? And get a yeast cake, too, and half a dozen oranges and a pound of raisins. Can you remember all that?"

Lawrence carefully repeated the list of things wanted, took the dollar bill which his mother gave him, and went off down the shady village street to the grocery store. He kept saying over the list to himself, and so he made no mistake when the grocer came forward to greet him.

"You did well to remember all of them," said the grocer, who was fat and jolly. Then, when everything was ready for Lawrence to take, the grocer said: "Now let us see how you are on figures. The sugar is six cents a pound, the yeast cake is one cent, the oranges are forty cents a dozen, and the raisins are twenty-five cents a pound. What does it all amount to?"

Lawrence said it over slowly after him, and then stared at the floor. "I am afraid I cannot do it in my head," he said at last.

The grocer laughed. Business was dull in the store just then, and he came around the counter to where Lawrence was standing. "We'll try it on paper," he said, giving Lawrence a pencil and a piece of wrapping paper.

So Lawrence wrote down the items as the grocer called them off, but he was in trouble from the first. Only after he carefully said over the multiplication table of the sixes, assisted by the grocer, did he master the problem of six pounds of sugar at six cents a pound. Then an example in short division made it plain that half a dozen oranges at forty cents a dozen would be twenty cents.

"Now add them," said the grocer, when thirty-six and one and twenty-five were placed in a column.

"It is seventy-two," announced Lawrence, when a considerable time had passed.

"Wrong!" said the grocer.

Lawrence studied the figures carefully. "O," he exclaimed, "I did not carry the one from the first column! It is eighty-two."

"That is better," said the grocer. Then he looked at the paper upon which Lawrence had been working and continued, with a smile: "You seem to find them rather hard words to spell—sugar, yeast cake, oranges and raisins. They are pretty common words, too."

By this time Lawrence was feeling very uncomfortable, and his face was red through his coat of summer tan. But the grocer only patted him on the shoulder, passed over the purchases, and gave him the change due from his dollar bill, without putting him to the testing of substracting eighty-two cents from a dollar.

"Come again!" called the grocer as Lawrence hurried out.

"Thank you," said Lawrence. "And the next time I will know how to spell all of these words."

"All right," said the jolly grocer, laughing.

A little later, when Lawrence delivered the packages to his mother, his face was very serious. "I guess, after all, I will go to school when it opens next week," he said.

"Very well," said his mother. "I don't believe you will ever be sorry for it."—Marion Halliowell, in Youth's Companion.

FINGER PRINTS.

"The evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." So says the poet, but fortunately he merely uses the word "oft," so his pessimistic assertion becomes not a wide-sweeping one. Here is an incident related by the Youth's Companion of one of whose loving deeds blessed those who knew her not. We repeat it, letting it point out the way to some others:

On a sunshiny day in early March, the Methodist minister's wife was out in the parsonage yard. She seemed to be hunting for something on the ground.

"What have you lost, Mrs. Raymore?" her next-door neighbor called.

"I'm hunting for something, but I haven't lost it," replied Mrs. Raymore. She smiled at the other woman across the fence. "I'm looking for the first green sprouts of the crocuses and the snowdrops. I know they must be here somewhere, because I found out last fall that the Stanworthys were here in this charge about twenty years ago."

"I've lived here four years and I've never noticed any," the neighbor replied. "Why are you so positive about it?"

"This is the fourth parsonage I've moved into during the eight years I've been married," replied Mrs. Raymore, "and in three of them Mrs. Stanworthy had lived before me. In my first one she had lived when she was old. In my third one she had lived when she was young. There were more than thirty years between them, but in both yards she had planted crocuses and snowdrops.

"I never saw Mrs. Stanworthy or even heard of her until I was told she had planted those bulbs in the yard of my first parsonage; but I've loved her ever since. When her flowers begin to bloom it is one of the happiest days of my whole year."

The other woman looked thoughtful. "Wait a moment," she said, and hastened across the lawn.

An old man was trimming his rose bushes just beyond the next fence, and she talked with him eagerly; then she ran back.

"I can tell you about it!" she said joyfully. "Mr. Roberts says that about fifteen years ago they sold the old parsonage and bought this place. The old one was that little brown house with the big maple tree in front of it, about five blocks north. The yard is one of the beauty spots of this town in the early spring, with crocuses all over the lawn and snowdrops under the trees and along the fence. It's too bad they are not in your own yard."

"At least," said the minister's wife, "Mrs. Stanworthy has not failed me. I shall have to make friends with the woman who lives in the old parsonage and go there every day to see her flowers bloom. Do you think she would give me some of the bulbs to move over here?"

"I am sure she would," the neighbor said.

"God created the world, of course," mused Mrs. Raymore, "but He lets us give little pats and pinches here and there to help finish it. Mrs. Stanworthy was a true 'worker together.'

"Shall I tell you a secret? Every year since the first time her crocuses and snowdrops bloomed for me I have planted violets in the parsonage yard. I always plant white violets the first year; then, if I stay another year, I plant the blue ones. I don't know yet what I should do if I stayed three years, but I'd find something else that can take care of itself. Perhaps sometimes my violets may mean as much to some other minister's wife as Mrs. Stanworthy's crocuses and snowdrops have meant to me."

"Virginia Raymore—her finger print," agreed the neighbor, and she smiled understandingly.—The Presbyterian.

BOYS MUST CLIMB.

Billy Sunday says:

"Listen, boys and girls, if you find a man on the top of a mountain you may bet he did not just land there. He had to climb that mountain to get to the top. It is the men who work and climb that hang their mugs in the hall of fame for us to look at. It takes more than a mortar board hat, a diploma, a frat pin and a rah, rah, rah to make a man."

Again:

"I hold that the boy who goes to school is bigger than the young lobster that loafs in the street or goes into a booze joint and tries to drink the whole bunch under the table. It is bigger to pray than to curse. It is bigger to sit in church than it is to line up at some bar. The chance for a boy with education in this country is great, and if you can't become something worth while you are a mutt, a mollycoddle, excess baggage and a mere cipher. You can become great by fighting the world. When it knocks you down, get up. Don't take the count. Blood, environment, grit, education, and Christianity are the five essentials for success."

Whatever we do, whatever we give, whatever we are, there is more we ought to do, more we ought to give, and more we ought to be.—Canon Barnett.

"TEACH ME THY WAY."

These words of David were addressed to the Lord. Life is a hard problem and often we are perplexed as to how we shall face the various phases of it as they arise from time to time. It seems very unfortunate that men do not first turn to God for help; hut perhaps it is better after all they do not, for when they do find out that all their efforts to stand unaided hy the Almighty are futile, they realize how indispensable He is to them and they go to Him and are less inclined question his goodness or doubt the final outcome of the workings of providence. He who created man knows hest how to instruct him in the things that he needs to know, and he lets man find out for himself that he can not get along without divine aid. Man learns most from experience. Hence his opinion as to what he can do is not worth much until he has tried what he speaks of doing—especially is this true of young people. Through repeated mistakes and failures man realizes his own weaknesses, and, with a deep sense of humility and of the wretched condition of his sinful nature, he seeks the aid of God.

There are three chief ways of living in the world represented hy three classes of people. First, there are those who believe that whatever is pleasing to the senses is right. King Solomon tried this way and all that he could say of it was, "Vanity of vanites! All is vanity and vexation of spirit." Those who live only for self-gratification meet at last with bitter disappointment and hlack despair, from which there is then no escape in life or in death. St. Paul says that "those who sow to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."

We next turn our attention to the morallsts, who constitute the second class. They are represented hy the rich young ruler who, having kept the commandments from his youth up, came to Christ to learn what he must do to inherit eternal life, but who turned away from what was douhtless a call to the apostleship because he could not make the sacrifice which Jesus demanded of him. Mark says that when the Master looked upon this young man he loved him, and it is also stated that the young man went away in sorrow. This young man missed a great opportunity—the greatest that could possihly come to him in a lifetime—and he failed to get out of life all that he ought to have gotten and all that God intended that he should. The Master sowed seed in good soil, but "the care of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choked the word" and it hecame "unfruitful."

Moral men are not, however, appreciated as they should be. Go out to search for one, either in the Church or out of it, and when you have found one you will he disposed to look upon him and love him, or rather you would if you could understand him as the Master did the rich young ruler. Such men as these do not go down into the depths of infamy and shame; but, on the other hand, it must be confessed that they do not scale the heights and enjoy that indescribable "peace of God which passeth all understanding," that happily the world can not give and that it can not take away. They are like those who seek to climh some lofty mountain and stop midway.

The last class is composed of those who accept God's way as interpreted by our Lord Jesus Christ, and who, by the guidance of the Holy Spirit, follow it. Most miserable is the man of the first class; happy is the man of the second class, but blessed is the man of the third class who, like David, realizes that the wisest thing to do is to make God's way his and to delight in the praise of the Most High at all times and in all seasons.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

FURTHER ACTION TAKEN BY OUR COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

We printed last week the strong address to the Church that our College of Bishops issued at their late semi-annual meeting in Atlanta. We are also reliably informed that the Bishops during that meeting resigned as trustees of the Atkinson fund for the education of young ministers in Vanderbilt University and decided that hereafter they will not exercise the function vested in them of confirming lecturers at that institution on the Cole Foundation. They, furthermore, adopted a resolution that henceforth they will not appoint any professor or student to Vanderhilt.

BISHOP HOSS IN SHREVEPORT.

Bishop E. E. Hoss spent last Sunday, November 5, in Shreveport, La., We are indebted to the Shreveport Times for the following account of his work in that progressive city:

"The J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Church, erected hy Mr. J. S. Noel in 1911 in memory of his son, was formally dedicated Sunday morning by Bishop E. E. Hoss, of Nashville, Tenn., with solemn and imposing ceremonies. Mr. Noel huilt the church and contributed largely to the furnishing thereof at an aggregate cost of $100,000. The debt of $5000 on the furnishing was raised in full last Sunday. Rev. R. W. Tucker, the present pastor of the church, has been at this post for the past two years.

"In honor of the dedicatory services and Bishop Hoss's visit, the First Methodist Church held no services Sunday morning, and the congregation attended the ceremonies at the Noel Memorial Church in a body. In order of dedication, the Old Testament lesson was read by Rev. Briscoe Carter, of Ruston, and the New Testament lesson hy Bishop Hoss. At the special request of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Tucker, Dr. George S. Sexton, pastor of the First Methodist Church, took the collection.

"Judge W. C. Barnette, in behalf of the Board of Trustees and the Board of Stewards, presented the church huilding to the Bishop, who pronounced the dedicatory service. The excellent choir, under the leadership of Mrs. P. M. Welsh, rendered a heautiful, special musical program.

"At the night service at the First Methodist Church, Bishop Hoss delivered an address in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Bishop Francis Asbury, the first American Bishop. Dr. Sexton received 20 members into the Church. Very large congregations attended both the morning and evening services to hear the Bishop.

"On Tuesday the Bishop will journey to Lufkin, Texas, the seat of the East Texas Conference, where he goes on special invitation to deliver the memorial address on Francis Asbury.

"The Bishop is the guest of Dr. Sexton during his stay in Shreveport."

FROM A HIGH SOURCE.

Dr. A. B. Leonard, from whose pen we are this week publishing an article on "The Negro and Methodist Unity," passed to his eternal reward last April. He was for twenty-four years one of the Secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was Secretary Emeritus of that body when the Master called him into his presence. The opening sentence of the tribute paid him hy Zion's Herald when he died was as follows: "One of the tall cedars of Lehanon fell in the death of Dr. A. B. Leonard." A son of this distingulshed Northern Methodist leader was elected to the episcopacy by the Saratoga General Conference.

We mention these facts that our readers may see that the article referred to above emanates from a high source. Dr. Leonard was in error in stating that our Church placed the Negroes in a separate Church against their wishes—this was done at the request of the Negroes in the Church, South. But probably no man in the Northern Methodist Church was more competent than Dr. Leonard to state plainly the status of the Negro in the denomination in which he was so long a trusted and honored official.

There may be some who will say that we ought not to publish this article at this time, but surely our people ought to be given dependable information concerning this very important matter. We need nothing less than a form of union that can be consummated only by hiding out of sight facts such as Dr. Leonard has set forth.

DR. H. G. HENDERSON DEAD.

Under date of November 2, Rev. James H. Felts, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, writes us as follows: "Dr. H. G. Henderson fell on sleep last night. The funeral service was held at the church of which he was pastor this afternoon at 4 o'clock, being conducted by Bishop W. B. Murrah, who was assisted by Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. W. R. Lott, and the writer. The body of the deceased was carried to Georgetown, Ky., for interment. All that love and sympathy could do for this gifted pastor was done. He was ready and waiting when the call came. Truly was he loved, and he will be greatly missed."

It is with sincere sorrow that wo chronicle Dr. Henderson's death. As many of our readers know, he had a stroke of paralysis several months ago and had been ill nearly all the year. He went to Kentucky last spring to rest and recuperate, and only a few weeks ago returned to Holly Springs, with the expectation of resuming his "loved employ." But a few days since he had a second stroke of paralysis, and it was realized by his friends that his work was done.

Dr. Henderson was horn at Lehanon, Ky., March 2, 1860, being a son of Rev. James Alex and Mrs. Mattie Smock Henderson. He was educated at Kentucky Wesleyan College, where he received the A. M. degree, and later he studied theology at Vanderbilt University. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by Morris Harvey College. Dr. Henderson had filled many leading pulpits in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having served in Parkersburg, West Va., St. Louis, Mo., and other prominent cities. In the North Mississippi Conference he was pastor at Columbus, Lexington, Sardis, and Holly Springs. He was a fluent and eloquent speaker and the author of several publications, tho latest of which was, "When Sainthood Was in Flower." On October 24, 1888, Dr. Henderson was married to Miss Mattie L. Coseldine, who, with one daughter, survives him.

We extend sympthy to the bereaved, and earnestly pray that Divine grace, in large measure, may be vouchsafed to them in their great sorrow. We trust that some one in a position to do so will furnish the Advocate with a fitting memoir of the deceased at an early date.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, our gifted young pastor at Waynesboro, Miss., says that tho officials of his charge have assured him that the finances will be in full. It is Brother Decell's habit to carry a good report to Conference.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, spent last Friday in New Orleans. It was our pleasure to lunch with him at the noon hour. Dr. Watkins gave an encouraging report of the condition of things at Millsaps.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor at Fernwood, Miss., was a visitor to New Orleans on Wednesday, November 1, being the guest of the Editor of the Advocate. Brother Saunders spoke in enthusiastic terms of the work in his present charge.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of Zachary, La., sends us the following note: "Please state in the Advocate that our churches at Ethel and Zachary, La., will be dedicated on November 19—Ethel at 11 a. m., and Zachary at 3:30 p. m. All former pastors are invited to he present."

In forwarding us some subscriptions, Rev. W. S. Selman, of Mt. Pleasant, Miss., sounds an optimistic note concerning his work. He says: "We are going to make the best financial report at the approaching session of our Conference that this charge has made in ten years."

Rev. D. R. McDougal, of Kossuth, Miss., sends us some subscribers, and in his business letter appends the following note: "I think that I will round out this fall the best year of my ministry." We are pleased to know that the Master is blessing the labors of this faithful and energetic pastor.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Zwolle, La., says: "On October 29 our Sunday school here had a fine Rally Day service at 11 a. m. At 7 o'clock of the same evening Rev. S. S. Holladay preached a great sermon to a large congregation. He organized our Church here in 1897. Brother Holladay was a welcome visitor to our town."

The tribute which Rev. O. W. Bradley pays Mrs. E. D. Robins of Tupelo, Miss., in this issue of the Advocate is well deserved. The Editor has known Sister Robins for quite a number of years, and has felt honored to number her among his friends. We have never met a choicer spirit or a more consecrated and efficient worker. We pray that her valuable life may long be spared.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, writes us as follows: "Rev. P. F. Luter, of Acona, Miss., has the honor of being the second person to pay his assessment for education, and Rev. J. E. Thomas, of Amory, the third. These brethren are the first to remit from their districts—the Durant and Aberdeen."

We erred in a recent issue of the Advocate in stating that Dr. George S. Sexton, pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, had been transferred to the Baltimore Conference. Dr. Sexton is expected to surrender his pastorate and give his whole time to the work of building the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City, but he does not intend to transfer his Conference membership to the East—at least not for the present.

We take the following from The Bulletin of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge of Nov. 5: "During this Conference year 119 have been received into the Church and 98 names have been removed from the roll on account of some having passed into the Land Beyond, some having moved away, and many having been dropped from the roll. We have about 730 members at present." Pastor Battle has had a notably successful year in this important charge.

Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Meridian, Miss., writes us of the death of Mr. Norman Ferguson, the beloved husband of Mrs. Sallie Smylie Ferguson, which occurred in Meridian on Saturday, October 22. Of the deceased, Brother Watkins says: "Mr. Ferguson was an earnest Christian, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and an ardent friend of our Church." We regret to be informed of the demise of this good and useful man, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

In a business letter to our office, written on November 2, Rev. E. B. Sharp, our pastor at Schlater, Miss., says: "On October 29, at 6 o'clock a. m., Mrs. M. V. Jones, of Highlandale, Miss., passed to her eternal reward. She was a long-time friend of the Advocate and a consecrated Christian—one of our very best members." It is with sorrow that we have learned of the death of this choice servant of the Master, and we pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain the stricken loved ones.

We regret to state that Mrs. Hoss, the wife of Bishop E. E. Hoss, continues to be seriously ill and that she has gone to Battle Creek, Michigan, where she will rest and undergo treatment. The Bishop stated, while in Shreveport, that he would likely be forced to cancel his engagements between now and the meeting of the Louisiana Conference and join her there. The many friends of Bishop Hoss throughout the Church will remember him at the throne of grace in this time of trial and solicitude.

Miss Helen Gibson, our head resident deaconess at St. Mark's Hall, this city, has our thanks for a copy of the Bulletin which she has begun to issue in connection with that growing mission. It shows that there is much activity going on in the various departments of the work, and that a goodly measure of success is being achieved. The Methodists of New Orleans and the surrounding section ought to make St. Mark's Hall one of the greatest home mission centers in the entire Connection. Certainly it furnishes a fine opportunity for a telling Christian service.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. H. Grice, Glancy, Miss., 9; Rev. S. A. Brown, Koseiusko, Miss., 2; Rev. R. C. Pickett, Escatawpa, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Winstead, Burns, Miss., 6; Rev. E. B. Sharp, Schlater, Miss., 2; Rev. J. C. Ellis, Florence, Miss., 3; Rev. W. T. Woodward, Oak Grove, La., 2; Brother Thomas J. Martin, Sr., Ringgold, La., 6; Rev. J. O. Ware, Fayette, Miss., 3; Rev. J. M. Henry, Ruston, La., 4; Rev. C. M. Morris, Epworth, Church, New Orleans, 5.

We take the following from the Morgan City (La.) Daily Review of October 30: "Rev. C. C. Weir celebrated his fiftieth birthday by delivering a special sermon to his congregation yesterday morning, and his people remembered the occasion by presenting him with a substantial purse. The services at the Methodist Church, morning and night, were well attended, and the music at both services was excellent, especially at the night service, when a male quartet rendered a selected hymn. The sermons were, as usual, forcible and practical. One thought of the preacher might be read with interest: 'If you call a man brother, act also towards him as a brother should.'"

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., writes: "Greenville Methodism was greatly favored and pleased on yesterday, Nov. 5, with the presence and ministry of Bishop Murrah, who preached a thought-provoking and spiritually helpful sermon from the text, 'Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.' It is really inspiring in these days of materialism to sit under the ministry of one of the leaders of our great Church and hear him so strongly stress the spiritual things of life. I think I speak for all when I say we hope that Bishop Murrah will come this way again soon." At the evening hour of the same day that he occupied the pulpit of our Church in Greenville, Bishop Murrah preached at Leland, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our pastor there, states that he delivered a great discourse to a packed house.

It was the Editor's pleasure to spend a portion of last Sunday in Shreveport, where he went to attend the dedicatory exercises of the Noel Memorial Church, in response to a kindly invitation from the faithful pastor, Rev. R. W. Tucker, to be present on that interesting occasion. Though he left New Orleans Saturday night and should have reached Shreveport in ample time for the aforementioned service, our train was several hours late and it was past noon before we arrived in the metropolis of Northwest Louisiana. We were present at the united service at our First Church in the evening, however, and greatly enjoyed Bishop Hoss's address on Francis Asbury. We acknowledge ourself indebted to Dr. George S. Sexton, Rev. R. W. Tucker, and Rev. H. T. Carley, of Centenary College, for appreciated courtesies while we tarried in Shreveport. Our absence from our office will explain why some of the departments of our paper are not as full as usual this week, as the train was again late on our return trip and we were not able to be at our desk again until nearly noon Tuesday.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Daily Republican of October 10, we take the following: "The members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this city tendered a reception to Rev. Francis Dwight Van Valkenburgh, father of the pastor of that church, at the home of his son last evening. The Rev. Mr. Van Valkenburgh was for a time a member of the Little Rock Conference and later of the Louisiana Conference of the Southern Church, and joined the Gulf Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church over fifteen years ago." Referring to this interesting occasion, Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh says: "It was my father's 75th birthday that was celebrated. He is hale and hearty and keeps quite busy preaching in the nearby towns and in halls as opportunity affords. His many friends in your section will, I feel sure, be quite glad to hear of his continued good health and usefulness. My mother's health is also very good. The gift referred to at the reception mentioned above was a $20 gold coin." We are glad to have this goodly message from Brother Van Valkenburgh, who, we trust, will live to celebrate many more birthdays.

"BILLY" SUNDAY—WHY NOT?

Ministers of the different Protestant denominations seem "many men of many minds" toward the proposal to support a "Billy" Sunday revival in this city. Some are openly opposed, many are lukewarm. The Rev. James V. Chalmers, of the Church of the Holy Trinity, belongs to neither of these divisions.

In a letter published in Tuesday's Herald Mr. Chalmers asks to be counted as one of those heartily in favor of having "Billy" Sunday methods tried in New York. Quoting John Wesley's assertion that a sermon that does not convert a sinner or make some one mad is no good, Mr. Chalmers writes:

"Test 'Billy' Sunday's sermon by that rule and see what you get. Of course, he jars you with his ranting and his roaring, with his slang and his gesticulations. He makes you squirm and makes you mad. But you get him; you know what he is driving at. You don't go to sleep while he is talking."

That's a preety fine tribute. "Billy" was never caught asleep on the bases when he was a professional baseball player, and he doesn't intend to let anybody else sleep while he is coaching for the Lord.

Mr. Chalmers' letter would seem to "put it up to" those clergymen lukewarm toward the Reverend "Billy" and his works to give the reasons for the faith that is in them.—New York Herald.

"WITHOUT HOPE AND WITHOUT GOD IN THE WORLD."

Those we casually meet do not wear their hearts upon their sleeves, but now and then some perfect stranger opens up her soul to one with a friendly face. The Aviator's daughter came home the other day quite depressed by what had occurred in the rest-room of one of the great department stores. A well-dressed woman of evident intelligence and more than common culture spoke of her mourning costume and ventured to ask the reason for these garments of heaviness. One word led to another, and then with a sigh the stranger said, "I would give anything if I could believe as you do. O that I could find God!" And yet we are told that "ours is a social gospel and our message relates to the world that now is rather than the world that is to come." So long as there are people all about us "without hope and without God in the world," our first message must be, "Come to Jesus—and find rest."—The Presbyterian.

A CHURCH COMMITTEE MEETING.

Ten committeemen selected, all so fine,
One of them declined to serve, and then there were nine.
Nine committeemen still left on the slate,
One had business out of town, and then there were eight.
Eight committeemen to constitute the leaven,
One recalled a previous date, and then there were seven.
Seven committeemen, if each one only sticks,
One was overcome by heat, and then there were six.
Six committeemen yet due to arrive,
One had a guest to dine, and then there were five.
Five committeemen, and work cut out for more,
One had the toothache, and then there were four.
Four committeemen are all there seem to be,
One was tired from playing golf, and then there were three.
Three committeemen to put the business through,
One missed his train from town, and then there were two.
Two committeemen, and nothing yet begun,
The other just forgot to come, and that left one.
One committeeman sitting at the 'phone;
He's the poor chairman, left all alone!

BACKSLIDING FROM GOD.

"My people are bent on backsliding from me" (Hosea 11:7). Slipping away from God is caused by not drawing close to him. A little girl fell out of bed. When asked why, she replied, "I went to sleep too near the place I got in."—The Presbyterian.

"Only a believer can say, 'My God.'"

Our hearts were grievously saddened when the death angel visited the home of our pastor, Rev. J. F. Dring, on October 19, 1916, and carried the sweet spirit of little J. P. to his beautiful heavenly home. J. P. was born on August 2, 1914. A beautiful little blossom has been transplanted to bloom in the garden of God. He was an unusually bright boy—the sunshine of the home and neighborhood. We think of his short life as a precious loan from God. He has gone on before to make the way brighter and to welcome his devoted parents and other loved ones, for, "A little child shall lead them." The body of little J. P. sleeps in a cemetery near Simmsboro. The people of the town of Ringgold extend to the loved ones their deepest sympathy.

One Who Loved Him,
GRACE.

It is hard for us always to understand the workings of God's providence and to know at all times what acts are His. Only a few months ago H. H. Weatherly and his wife, Mrs. Mary H. Weatherly, had a happy family of children, consisting of Mrs. J. B. Sullivan, of Jackson, Miss., and two sons at home. The latter were bright young men, full of energy and hope. But alas! on April 20, PAUL, the elder, was struck and instantly killed while returning from Kosciusko during a storm by a tree which fell across the road between his father's residence and the town of Kosciusko. A little more than five months after this tragic death, HOLLAND, the younger brother, while leaning against an electric light post in the city of Jackson, Miss., talking to a friend, reached up and caught hold of a heavily charged chain and was killed in the same instant. Paul joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Bethel when he was 13 years old, and Holland united with the same Church on August 4, 1916. Both lived the lives of consistent Christians until death claimed them. Their parents and sister deserve the prayers of all true and loyal followers of Christ, and I hope that those who read this sad notice will remember specially Mr. and Mrs. Weatherly and Mrs. Sullivan at the throne of grace. W. A. CAMPBELL.

Mr. E. M. FRANKLIN was born on April 28, 1861, in Butler County, Ala. In the latter part of 1877 he moved, with his parents and three brothers, to Red River Parish, Louisiana. In 1878, they moved to Bienville Parish. At the age of 20 Brother Franklin was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, and from this time until his death he was true to his Church and his God. At the age of 24, he was happily married to Miss Edna Smith. Of this union were born five sons, of whom two remain to mourn their loss. The mother, with the other three, went to be with Jesus some years previous. Mr. Franklin was married the second time to a Mrs. Cora Minchew, a widow with two sons and one daughter. Of this union were born three sons and one daughter, who remain to share in this sorrow. Brother Franklin lived at the following places in Louisiana: Haughton, four years; Greenwood, one year; Bossier City, one year, after which he moved to Shreveport, La., where he spent the last two years of his life. On July 15, 1916, at 4:15 p. m., Brother Franklin folded his hands upon his breast, and looking at his family and loved one's standing about his bed and said to them, "Now be quiet while I go to sleep." He closed his eyes and in a few moments his "spirit returned to the God who gave it." Before he pased away he called his family to his bedside three different times, talked to them about their souls, exhorting them to live for God and meet him in heaven. Brother Franklin was a devoted Christian from his early manhood until death. He was a power in prayer and talked about his Lord and his work on earth. He was poor in this world's goods, but would often say in his testimonies for Christ, "I am rich." May God bless his devoted Christian brother and loving wife, with the little children! Interment was made in the Spring Hill Cemetery on Sunday afternoon, July 16, the services being conducted by Rev. A. C. Searcy of Hornbeck, La., a nephew by marriage, and one who was dearly loved by the deceased and one who loved him.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR
It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.
You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.
Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.
This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.
This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY.
The DOOR OF OPPORTUNITY swings both ways. One side is labeled "Push;" the other side, "Pull." Whether you enter from the "Push" side or the "Pull" side, you must have BUSINESS TRAINING in order to succeed. The BEST PLACE to get it is Draughon's Practical Business College at Shreveport, La.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR
FREE FROM DANDRUFF
Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.
If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.
Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND AVOID DISEASE

When your blood is impure, weak, thin and debilitated, your system becomes susceptible to any or all diseases.

Put your blood in good condition.

Hood's Sarsaparilla acts directly and peculiarly on the blood—it purifies, enriches and revitalizes it and builds up the whole system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has stood the test of forty years. Get it to-day. It is sure to help you.

Relief in Pulmonary Or Throat Troubles depends largely on the sufferer's ability to upbuild a weakened system, and thus hasten a return of normal body functions.

In this effort much depends on fresh air—night and day—and rest and good food. The patient should refrain from work that overtaxes, and all sanitary precautions should be taken. These commonsense measures do not always achieve the desired results unless aided by proper medication.

It is here that Eckman's Alterative has evidenced its worth, for in many cases it has effected lasting benefit. And often such troubles seem to yield to it.

In no case is its use attended with possible harm, since it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

EIGHTY BEAUTIFUL YEARS.

Any one who has lived in Tupelo is familiar with the appellation "Mother Robins." She is the mother of Tupelo, not because she is the oldest resident of this fair little city, but because in her ministries of love she has been a mother to almost every home.

On Wednesday, November 1, Mrs. E. D. Robins reached the eightieth milestone in one of the most beautiful journeys ever a saint made towards the Eternal City. And without the exception of a single year these have been beautiful years. Her many friends planned an informal reception at the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening at the close of the prayer meeting service. After a few remarks made by her pastor, her favorite hymn, "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me," was sung, and she was asked to come and take a seat at the chancel while every one in the large congregation came forward to express their love and good wishes for her on this her eightieth birthday, after which she was presented with an exquisite basket filled with chrysanthemums. It was a touching and beautiful scene, and, if we had not taken her by surprise we would not have had the pleasure to so express our appreciation of her, as she would rather give than receive.

Mother Robins is the most remarkable person I have ever known. There is no service of the church upon which she is not a regular attendant. She is one of the most valued members of the Woman's Missionary Society, a teacher of an Adult Bible Class in our Sunday school, superintendent of the Sunday school at the cotton mills, and, besides, she has charge of the local charity of the town. There is no place of sorrow and need where she is not among the first to enter, bringing cheer and help. On the hottest day of summer and the coldest and most disagreeable day of winter, she is found from a block to a mile or more from home looking after some one in need.

Eighty years old! Yet, her body hardly knows fatigue, her mind is clear and strong, her soul is as sweet and fresh as the morning, and her interest and concern for the life about her and for the church and welfare of the community are equal to that of any, and to the shame of many. Hopeful, sweet, charitable, loving and lovable, she has come down to her eightieth year with a closing like unto that of a "perfect day." It is only once in a life, if then, that one is privileged to know such a character. When one's faith grows dry and doubts becloud the sky, such a life becomes a "pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night" to one's path. It was such a life I feel sure that inspired the words:

"Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made."

She is the oldest sister of the famous "Private" John M. Allen and mother of Judge J. Q. Robins, Mrs. J. H. Ledyard, and Hon. W. D. Robins, who reside here, and with the last-named she makes her home.

Tupelo, Miss. O. W. BRADLEY.

Why Take Risks?

Many cases of gangrene and blood poison result from the neglect of small sores, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, etc. Numerous deaths occur from blood poison due to infection of slight wounds. Whether the wound is painful or not, treat it immediately with Gray's Ointment which, for ninety-six years, has been an indispensible family remedy. It allays pain, heals the wound and frees you from all danger of troublesome after-effects. It is invaluable for treating abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, burns, bruises, cuts, sores, etc. Mrs. N. E. Coleman, Mt. Jackson, Va., writes: "I have used it in my family for 15 years and have not found any ointment equal to it." Only 25c a box at druggists. For FREE sample, write to W. F. STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

I Will Prove to You by Signed Statements and Letters From Scores of Former Sufferers That

RUPTURE

BROTHERS WOODWARD AND LUTZ COMMENDED.

"Veni, vidi, vici," said Julius Caesar when he crossed the Ruhicon into Gaul and had made his famous and successful campaign against the Nervii. "I am here, on the spot, have reconnoitered, recruited, rallied and ready for the fray, and later on we've won the day; the British are routed, we rejoice and I am awaiting further orders," said General Jackson at the great battle of New Orleans in 1815. "I'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," said General Grant at the memorahle siege of Vickshurg in 1863, and he won out by his strategy and persistence. And, might not Rev. W. T. Woodward truly affirm, reasonahly and justly rejoice in his great success and wonderful achievements as pastor of this, the Oak Grove, Circuit, during the Conference year now nearing its close? He has worked faithfully and zealously, has "seen a vision"—put new life into the old land and set his people to working as well as dreaming, thinking, talking and reading. He has reconnoitered, recruited, rallied his forces and is ready for, aye, is "in the midst of the fray," battling for the Lord. Yes, has organized and marshaled his men and women, too; has harmonized and unified his people in interest and action as well; has brought about that spirit of zeal and co-operation so essential in every field of endeavor and action for the accomplishment of results where good and success are the ends aimed at. He has preached, prayed, inspired and electrified by his great zeal, untiring energy and go-aheadedness. By his mellow, sweet persuasiveness he has won his people closely to him and is drawing them closer day by day. He is not only their teacher-preacher from the pulpit, but he is a pastor to them, a good man and a good mixer with men, and they listen to and heed his teachings; always glad to see, anxious to hear and willing to listen to and ready to follow his wise, safe leadership which is ever onward and upward to bigger and better things for this and the life beyond. "Poeta nascitur non fit," was the belief of the ancients. Yes, "the poet is born, not made." Likewisely with the doctor, the lawyer, the artist, the musician, the teacher, the preacher. While we all may learn and be able to do many things, in a way, yet some seem to be more gifted and hetter ahle than others, are "natural-born architects," chosen vessels, mouthpieces and predestined to lead and to do things successfully. While this people have been fortunate, favored and blessed with many zealous, good ministers in the years that are gone, none have come up to the mark and met the conditions and requirements with more fervor and fitness than Rev. W. T. Woodward, who has "made good and will "make better" as the years come and go. And we feel that we are voicing the wish and earnest hope of the people of this circuit that he he returned to this work another, and another, and another year, God willing, and longer were it possible and in keeping with the rules of the Annual Conference and he be willing to do so. So mote it he. This people are also well pleased with Rev. Albert Lutz, and would he delighted to have him returned as presiding elder of this district again, again, and again Brothers Lutz and Woodward are fine "yoke-fellows" and make a good, strong "team," and work well together in these parts of God's material, moral and spiritual vineyard, as is fully attested by the results of their labors here this year. That they may hoth he returned and the good work go on, is the earnest wish of The Gazette and a host of other friends and admirers.—The West Carroll Gazette.

MARRIED.

In Pontotoc, Miss., on October 20, in the Anderson home, by the Rev. W. M. Young, Mr. JOHN HENRY ANDERSON and Miss MARY HULSEY, of Okolona, Miss. This splendid couple will make Pontotoc their future home.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

The Poplar Springs, Meridian, congregation has recently purchased a handsome parsonage which is situated on a most desirahle lot. Rev. B. L. Sutherland and his loyal people are to he congratulated. This charge hids fair to become one of our leadlng appointments in the coming years.

Mr. J. B. Holland, the efficient superintendent of the Sunday school of our Fifth Street Church, has heen managing the campaign in Lauderdale County to uphold the present llquor law. He has had the co-operation of all the pastors and the assistance of many prominent laymen—Congressman W. W. Venahle, L. P. Brown, Marion W. Reilly, and others.

Miss Sarah Brinkley, a member of our Wayneshoro Church and an accomplished member of the Waynesboro High School Faculty, has volunteered for the mission field. It is her purpose to take a course of training at the Scarritt Bible School and then to enter into the "harvest field" as the Board of Missions may direct. It means much for the cause of Christ when such capable young women answer the call TO GO!

The Borderline Preachers' Association met with Rev. J. T. Abney at Bucatunna on October 24. The following were the subjects discussed: "The Pastor a Personal Evangelist," by C. E. Downer; "Developing Our Laymen," hy A. J. Davis; General Book Review. Rev. O. S. Lewis and Rev. J. Loyd Decell preached at the morning and evening hours, respectively. The next meeting will be at Shubuta during the fourth week in November.

The hrethren of the district are on the "home stretch" and their reports at Jackson will be creditahle, notwithstanding the disastrous July storm and the subsequent devastating rains. Many farmers throughout the district made neither corn nor cotton, but the potato and cane yield has heen good. The results of storm and flood has been telling. It is noted that even in Wayne County where, under normal weevil conditions, 8000 hales of cotton is the average yield, this year the entire crop was ahout 600 bales. Yet the people of the Meridian District are looking upward and are going to do well.

NUNTIUS.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not ahsorb impurities into the hlood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or—sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the hody.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before hreakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiastic on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty hreath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in hoth health and appearance shortly.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our hodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver actlve, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entlre system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no hahit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale hy the best dealers everywhere. In bottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

ST. JOHNS CHURCH, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Dear Brother Meek: I am closing my second year as pastor of this Church. Two hundred and forty-eight have been received into the Church, making our present membership 705. We have a subscription of $18,000 to build a Sunday school addition to our church auditorlum. At an official meeting of our stewards the other night it was stated that the financial and spiritual condition of the Church was never so good in all its history. This church is located in a desirable residential district and has its own peculiar dlfficulties, but commands unsurpassed advantages. Bishop Murrah's family worship here. Conference is at hand, and I hope to report. "A good year, Bishop."

T. W. LEWIS.

AS OF OLD.

We have been having the circus here lately in upper South Carolina. These occasions bring together great companies of people. Every gradation in society seems to mingle freely at a circus. These gatherings bring out the latent evil in the community that ordinarily is kept in check.

At Greenwood there were a great number of arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. One man got drunk and ran amuck, killing several men hefore he finally committed sulcide. Ten children were left fatherless and several women left widows. Afterwards the citizens of Greenwood called a mass meeting and passed resolutions favoring the enforcement of law.

At Anderson sixty-five persons were arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Fifty plead guilty.

Thousands of dollars were drained from each county that ought to have been spent for food and raiment for little chlldren.

Yet many good people support the circus morally and financially. We wish that we could keep them out of the State.—Southern Christian Advocate.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.

Brain Blood-Supply Must Be Good.

The importance of having pure blood is perhaps never more deeply impressed on us than when we are told by physiologists that if the brain is supplied with impure blood, nervous and bilious headache, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, impaired intellect, dimness of vision, and dullness of hearing, are experienced, and in time the brain becomes disorganized and the brittle thread of life is broken.

The more we learn of the usefulness of the great blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the more grateful we are for this old and successful family medicine, which has accomplished so much in removing scrofula, rheumatism and catarrh and other blood diseases and correcting run-down conditions of the system. If you need a blood purifier, get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

GUNTOWN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Conference year is nearly gone. Only about one month of it is left and there is yet much to be done. I hope that we shall have a great Conference at Winona. Thus far we have had a very pleasant year in many respects. Of course, you know that the experts give the Lee County farmers only 10 per cent of a cotton crop, but the high price of it will help us very much and perhaps finances will not be as bad as one might expect.....I do not think that we are ready for 'organic union' yet, and, as I see the matter, there is a great deal to be done before it can be brought about. I am with you in measuring every inch of the way and in the thorough discussion of every question involved.... .It has been a number of weeks since I ended my summer evangelistic campaign, but I have neglected to make my report concerning it. We began this work with Rev. W. I. White at Harmony, on the Iuka Circuit. It rained every day. The meeting closed on Wednesday, but in spite of the rain we had some very spiritual services. Brother White is a young man, and is in high favor with his people. This is his first year. Our next meeting was with Rev. Guy Itay at Mooreville. The rains continued to come. It rained all the week, but we had fine congregations and a good meeting resulted. Brother Itay also is a young man and is much loved by the good people of his charge. From Mooreville we returned to our own work, at Guntown (on the 4th Sunday in July), where I was assisted by Rev. W. N. Dodds, of Verona, Miss. To the pleasure and satisfaction of my people, Brother Dodds did all the preaching. Thirteen persons joined the Church on profession of faith. The fifth Sunday in July found us at Baldwyn, with Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our Sunday School Field Secretary, in the pulpit on Sunday and on Monday at 11 o'clock. Brother Gladney did fine work for us. Our Sunday school is better there now than it has ever before been during my pastorate. That good and faithful preacher, Rev. S. L. Pope, of New Albany, Miss., reached me on Monday, and for about eight days he preached to the delight and benefit of our Baldwyn people. Ten new members were added to our Church as a result of this meeting. From Baldwyn I went to Saltillo, where I had no one to assist me except the Lord and the splendid people. We did our own preaching, which was rewarded with 8 additions to the Saltillo Church. We were next in the fight at Pleasant Valley at our third quarterly conference with Rev. T. H. Dorsey to do the preaching, and you know that it was well done. We had a great day on the third Sunday in August, when our new church at Pleasant Valley was dedicated by Brother Dorsey. His sermon was great. Here we had 6 to join our Church. My people are delighted with the presiding elder. All these brethren that were with me in the revival services rendered a good account of themselves, serving me well. I was next engaged at Faulkner with Rev. M. L. Ward, who possesses a jolly, good-natured disposition. Brother Ward is the much beloved pastor of the Ripley Circuit. We were greeted by great congregations, and I hope that much good was accomplished there. Now we come to the close of this campaign, which ended at Wells' Chapel, with Rev. C. A. Northington, on the New Albany Circuit. The attendance at the services was large. The Spirit was with us in old-time power. Many were converted. A goodly number were added to our Church there. Taking all things into consideration, God has been very close to us this year, and we shall trust Him to the end.—W. C. Carlisle, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father called from earth to heaven our beloved sister, Mrs. [illegible] HARRIS, on October 2, 1916; and

Whereas, she was held in great love and esteem by the Church and prayer meeting therefore be it resolved

1. That we have heard with sorrow of the death of our beloved sister, who had done so much for the glory of God and for the upbuilding of his kingdom.

2. That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, pointing them for comfort to our blessed Savior whom our sister loved so well and served so faithfully.

3. That, although she will be missed by all who knew her, and despite the fact that many hearts are sad and though many loved ones mourn over her departure we humbly submit to the divine will of God, for we know that he doeth all things well, realizing that heaven is made to rejoice at her eternal gain.

4. That we acknowledge in the death of Sister Harris the loss of a beloved woman, a devoted mother, and a Christian character.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

How sweetly she fell asleep
Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast
There by his love o'ershadowed
Sweetly her soul shall rest.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron to Make Beautiful, Healthy Women And Strong, Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER FIVE MILLION PEOPLE DAILY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty. Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over five millions people daily in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of well-known physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below.

Dr. Kong, a New York physician and author says: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags, and the memory fails, and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks."

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

Dr. Sauer, a well known Boston physician who has studied widely in both this country and in prominent European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause while startling, their disease was nothing more nor less than a weak condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and I asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man. In fact a young man he really was, in spite of his age. The secret he told me was taking Nuxated Iron. It had filled him with renewed life. When he was in bad health at 45 he was careworn and nervous all in a row at 70, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of apparently run-down people who were taking a number of different [illegible] tried, [illegible] Nuxated Iron [illegible] per cent [illegible] been [illegible] I have [illegible] of [illegible] any good [illegible]

Man, an athlete of prize fighting has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affair, while many another has gone down to defeat simply for the lack [illegible]

NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also agree to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in less than four weeks. It is dispensed in tablet form by all good druggists.

MINUTES OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING OF LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society met in Shreveport, on Oct 11, 1916, at the Noel Memorial Church, at 2:45 p.m. Those present were Mmes. Hoit, Cunningham, Niebergal, Ledbetter, Holmes, and Bobbitt. Mrs. Cunningham read the 91st Psalm and Mrs. Holt led in prayer.

With the Conference First Vice President in the chair, the Committee proceeded to business. Mrs. Cunningham read Mrs. Bliss' letter of resignation as President. The Secretary was instructed to write Mrs. Bliss a letter of appreciation for the faithful, loving work she had done for the past four years as Conference President. The matter of electing a President therefore came up for consideration. Mrs. Holmes nominated Mrs. C. F. Niebergal, of New Orleans. Mrs. Ledbetter seconded this nomination. Mrs. Niebergal, being district secretary of the New Orleans District, tendered her resignation of this office. She was unanimously chosen President.

With the new President in the chair, the question of a District Secretary for the New Orleans District was considered. Mrs. I. N. Niebergal, of New Orleans, was unanimously chosen.

A letter from Mrs. J. E. Walter, read by the Corresponding Secretary, told of the possibility of her office being left vacant, since she probably would move away. A motion prevailed that in the event such a thing happened, the President should appoint some one to fili the vacancy.

The question of the Annual Meeting was brought before the Committee. The time and place of the meeting will be February 13, 1917, at Crowley, beginning Tuesday morning and closing Thursday night. The presence of Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb was desired as Council helper. Mrs. Herr, of the Mary Werlein Mission, and Miss Gibson, of St. Mark's Hall, are also to be invited. The name of Mrs. Williams, missionary to Japan, supported by First Church, Shreveport, now at home on a furlough, was also suggested. The Corresponding Secretary will ascertain if the workers named are available. The Committee adjourned.

The night session opened at 7:45 p. m. Plans for the Annual Meeting were again considered. Mrs. Holt suggested that the district secretaries bring out in their reports at the Annual Meeting the special lines of work stressed during the year—Organization and Membership, Financial Increase, Harvest Day, Week of Prayer, Prayer Circles, and District Meetings.

It was decided that one of the three evenings of the Annual Meeting be devoted to Social Service.

A plan for an institute on the work for the information of the Presidents of Auxiliaries was considered. It was decided to devote a half hour each day to committee work, and a half hour each day to such an institute. Adjournment.

The committee met at 9:45 Thursday. Present: Mesdames Niebergal, Cunningham, Holt, Holmes, Ledbetter, Johnson, Miller, and Bobbitt. Mrs. Niebergal read from the 13th Chapter of John, and Mrs. Holt led in prayer. Discussion of Annual Meeting was resumed. It was decided that district secretaries should ask auxiliaries to elect delegates for the Annual Meeting at same time officers are elected, that is, on the first Monday in December, and that plans begin at once for providing expenses for delegates. It was also suggested that in this letter district secretaries call attention to subscribers for the Voice and Young Christian Worker. The goal for Y. C. W. is 700 for February.

The complex duties of Conference Superintendent of study and publicity were discussed. A motion prevailed that each district secretary appoint from her district an assistant to the Conference Superintendent of study and publicity to promote an interest in mission and Bible study, to urge all auxiliary superintendents to make full reports to the Conference Superintendent, and to present matter at district meetings. Such assistant to serve until the Annual Meeting.

At the afternoon session plans for 1917 were discussed. The goal for adults was placed at 148 auxiliaries, 3000 members; Young People, 35 auxiliaries, 600 members; Juniors, 75 auxiliaries, 2000 members.

Mrs. R. E. BOBBITT,
Recording Secretary.

HEARTY WELCOME FOR LOUISIANA'S TWO NEW OFFICERS.

Louisiana women take great pleasure in greeting the new Conference President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergal, 4 Lorraine Apartment, 8000 St. Charles Avenue, New Orleans, and the new District Secretary on the New Orleans District, Mrs. I. N. Niebergal, 7929 Zimple Street, New Orleans.

Many of our women will remember the former as the charming district hostess of our 1914 Annual Meeting. She served as Secretary of the New Orleans District from 1911 until the recent meeting of the Executive Committee at Shreveport, when she was called to fili the office of President, made vacant by the removal of Mrs. Abel Bliss to Mississippi.

As a Secretary, she has worked untiringly in her efforts to bring the district to the highest point of efficiency. Consecrated, earnest, efficient, and ready to serve wherever her Master leads, Mrs. Niebergal comes to the office well fitted to carry forward the work of the Conference.

Mrs. I. N. Niebergal, the new District Secretary, has filled well the office of Corresponding Secretary of the First Church Auxiliary. She brings to her new work all those qualities of mind and heart which are essential in the qualifications for this very important field of service.

All friends and workers in the Conference will please note these changes in our official roll. Will you join in our prayer that, in these remaining days of 1916, we may, as auxiliary members, as secretaries, and officers, so labor, so pray, so sing praises for all his wondrous mercies, that the name of our God may be honored?

Mrs. A. P. HOLT.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. MAYME ASBACH, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. MCCASLAND, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. OSGOOD, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

From the Field

Ackerman, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I am sure that you and all the brethren will be interested to know that our new church at Weir, Miss., will be completed by Conference. The building is of brick. It is heated by steam, contains artistic glass windows, and has nine classrooms. It is truly a beauty and would do credit to any community. Some builders have pronounced it a $6000 job, but we succeeded in constructing it at a much lower figure, owing to the fact that we did our own purchasing and building. (We truly "skinned the rabbit for his hide.")

This section has been hard hit by the bad crops, but, by the grace of God and hard work, we are going to Conference with everything paid up and with a total collection this year of something like $7000 paid by our heroic people. I want none of this for my credit, for it is due entirely to the spirituality and liberality of our members and to the efforts of Brothers J. Lem Seawright, of Ackerman, J. T. Moore, of Weir, and R. A. Gladney, of Salem.

We will begin our second revival on Sunday, November 5, at Weir. The Wisdom Sisters will assist me in the meeting; also they will be with me the week following at Ackerman. Our meetings this year have all been conducted by the pastor. Of course, the preaching was poor, but the Lord blessed our efforts and gave us good and lasting results.—Chas. D. McGehee, P. C.

Utica, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: The quarterly meeting of the Utica charge was a pleasant and seemingly a profitable one. It was held in the nice little town of Learned, where we have a small but very loyal church. There the Woman's Missionary Society has raised during the year more than $16 per member. On Monday afternoon we had a good congregation for both the conference and the preaching service. Though the finances as a whole were considerably behind, Learned reported paid in full on salaries and nearly up on the Conference claims. The salaries will probably be paid in full. Brother Lewis, with his missionary committees, is hard at work on the assessments for connectional purposes, and he hopes to have a fair report ready by the time of the Annual Conference. Utica is a great old charge, but, like many others, is not sufficiently alive on the subject of missions, and is in need of more of the connectional spirit. We need a general revival on these subjects. We are able, with a little self-denial, to meet all of our connectional assessments, and, with the proper information and the right spirit within us, we could do it, and would be blessed in the doing. In the town of Utica we have probably the oldest member of the Church in the entire Conference. Sister Ellis, the mother of Dr. Ellis, is ninety-eight years old. She has spent the last eight years in bed suffering from a fractured hip, which affliction she has borne with great patience. Her mind is still bright and she reads her Bible every day.—M. B. Sharbrough, P. E.

Canton, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I rejoice to report that the revival meeting held at our church recently by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, was attended with very gratifying results. Thirteen children and young people and two adults were received on profession of faith, and two members were received by certificate, making a total of seventeen accessions to our Church. Many lukewarm members have been revived, and almost our entire membership received a great spiritual uplift. The music was in charge of that gifted singer and preacher, Rev. J. S. Duke, of Jackson, Miss., who rendered valued service as choir leader and soloist, and who also gave us several excellent sermons. Brother Bowen, is a strong, spiritual, and unusually attractive preacher, and people of all classes were completely captivated by his earnest and eloquent presentation of the gospel. He is also a man of magnetic personality, who knows how to do personal evangelism. Brother Bowen's preaching made a deep and lasting impression, especially upon the men of our little city, who were much in evidence at the night services. The meeting for men and boys at the Court-house on Sunday afternoon was largely attended, and proved to be one of great spiritual power. Nearly every person present responded to the call to lead a better life. Throughout the meeting we had the hearty co-operation of the members of other churches—a courtesy which we greatly appreciated. We are deeply grateful to God for this gracious visitation.—M. M. Black, Pastor.

Canton, Miss., Oct. 30, 1916.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clogg you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

SOUR, ACID STOMACHS, GASES OR INDIGESTION

Each "Pape's Diapepsin" digests 3000 grains food, ending all stomach misery in five minutes.

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest stomach remedy in the whole world and besides it is harmless. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

SHANNON, MISS.

I want to tell the church folks about how much development and growth in grace are going on here among the Shannon people. I don't know when I have seen such rapid growth on the part of people. Last Sunday was a great day with us; I have been rejoicing all the week, because of the great things done on that day. Owing to the fact that our presiding elder has been filling the pulpit at Okolona with the various preachers in this district, I was sent there on this occasion, and in my absence the laymen and laywomen distinguished themselves and held services at our church, both in the morning and evening. The program was excellent. Choice selections of music were made, and, with the cornets, violin and organ, combined with the many fine voices we have in the choir here, the music was fine. Professor J. J. Weaver, principal of the High School, presided over the morning service, and, after Scripture reading by Dr. M. A. Cowden and a very fervent prayer by one of our fine co-operative Baptist brethren, Mr. Jerry Lee Arnold, Professor Weaver commented upon the first verse of the 12th chapter of Hebrews, to the great delight of the entire congregation. The evening service was given over principally to the good women, only two men taking part—Brother W. I. Springer read the Scripture and Brother Boozer closed this service with prayer. Brother Boozer is the Mayor of the city and Brother Springer is one of the leading merchants of the place. Miss Bettie Vaughan, the preacher's friend, presided over the evening service with very great dignity and to the delight of the people. Fine selections of music and song were interspersed with informing talks on Jesus, Paul, and Prayer by Mrs. Emma Lamb, Mrs. C. M. Johnsey and Mrs. T. C. Lauderdale, respectively. Mrs. Boozer at this juncture prayed a very fervent prayer. It was declared by all that the services, from beginning to end, were helpful and inspiring. The writer has heard from every source the most complimentary remarks in regard to the occasion. In fact, some have requested the preacher to leave again and turn the services over to the good men and women. I told them that, instead of leaving, I was going to enlist these workers and be with them in one of these services and derive the benefit of it myself. You have no idea the difference in the atmosphere here now compared to what it was before the revivals. Our laymen are holding the prayer meetings now regularly.—W. V. Shearer.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conference is a unique gathering—no other denomination has anything like it. It is a very different body both in its functions and proceedings from the associations and conventions of other Churches. In fact, it was a providential development in the Methodist movement, which was born of Mr. Wesley's efforts to supervise the work that had sprung up under the labors of himself and his associates and to carry it forward in the manner that would achieve the largest results. In other words, it was nothing more nor less than "an efficiency conference," though it was not specifically called by that name—the early Methodists were not much given to the use of high sounding nomenclature. The order of procedure in the first Conference that was ever held (which met at the Foundry in London on June 25, 1744) was grouped under three heads "1. What to teach. 2. How to teach. 3. What to do; that is, how to regulate our doctrine, discipline, and practice."

The first Annual Conferences were largely dominated by Mr. Wesley, upon whom all the preachers looked with reverence as a father; but, with the passing of the noble founder of Methodism, they became the governing bodies of the Societies, or Church, and such they remain in England to this day. But as Methodism took root and grew in the vast territory embraced in the United States, it became necessary to develop a better balanced and more complete form of government for the widely scattered itinerants and churches. This finally led to the creation of the General Conference, which first embraced all the traveling preachers, and which in 1808 was made a delegated body with well-defined powers. Since then the Annual Conferences have exercised no legislative functions, except when constitutional questions were involved.

Laymen were admitted into both the Annual and General Conferences in 1866, being given equal representation in the latter assembly, and a restricted membership in the former. Bishop McTyeire, under whose statesmanlike leadership this wise action was taken, in commenting upon it in his "History of Methodism," says: "A sentiment in favor of lay co-operation had been growing quietly for years. Once, only two questions were asked in Annual Conference: 'How many are in the Societies?' 'Where are the preachers stationed this year?' There was no business for laymen then. The schedule grew to embrace a wider range of topics and a larger care. By and by education, Sunday schools and Sunday observance, religious publications and their dissemination, orphanage and widowhood, temperance and Church extension, began to occupy much time in Annual and General Conferences and the need of laymen was felt."

There is perhaps no gathering in Southern Methodism that so closely holds the attention of the Methodists within its area as an Annual Conference. It greatly interests the preachers, because their work is there to come under review and they are to be reassigned to appointments, and it likewise enlists the deep concern of the pastoral charges, as each of them is anxious to know by what minister it will be served for the next twelve months. There is something sublime in seeing 150 or 200 preachers, with all their interests and those of their families subordinated to what is conceived to be best for the Church, surrendering the right to choose their fields of labor and awaiting their marching orders from the presiding Bishop. Such a spectacle demonstrates the fact that the heroic spirit has not yet departed from men who have been called to preach the glorious gospel of Christ.

A Conference occasion is also a time of happy reunions and good fellowship. Methodist preachers as a rule love one another, and after a year of separation in their respective fields of labor, it is beautiful to note the eager interest and hearty good will with which brother greets brother and mutual inquiries after the health and work of each are made. There is no finer comradeship to be found anywhere on earth.

One other thing we wish to say. The work of Annual Conferences ought not to be unduly hastened. The scope of the matters that they now handle has vastly enlarged within recent decades, and is still broadening. Interests of great importance are committed to their hands, and they now exert a far-reaching influence. Therefore, while strictly speaking they are not legislative bodies, they ought, within the limits of their sphere, to be deliberate in the best and truest sense. They should consider the questions upon which they are called to act carefully and thoroughly. Proper discussion should never be stifled. HE LEADETH ME.

In pastures green? Not always, sometimes he
Who knoweth best, in kindness leadeth me
In weary ways, where heavy shadows be.
Out of the sunshine, warm and soft and bright,
Out of the sunshine into darkest night,
I oft would faint with sorrow and affright—
Only for this—I know he holds my hand,
So whether in a green or desert land
I trust, although I may not understand.
And by still waters? No, not always so;
Ofttimes the heavy tempests round me blow,
And o'er my soul the waves and billows go.
But when the storms beat loudest, and I cry
Aloud for help, the Master standeth by,
And whispers to my soul, "Lo, it is I."
Above the tempest wild I hear him say,
"Beyond this darkness lies the perfect day,
In every path of thine I lead the way."
So whether on the hill-tops, high and fair,
I dwell, or in the sunless valleys where
The shadows lie—what matter? He is there.
And more than this; where'er the pathways lead,
He gives to me no helpless, broken reed,
But his own hand, sufficient for my need.
So where he leads me, I can safely go;
And in the blest hereafter I shall know
Why, in his wisdom, he hath led me so.

CONSPICUOUSNESS NOT NECESSARY TO HIGH SERVICE.

The highest service may be prepared for and done in the humblest surroundings. In silence, in waiting, in obscure, unnoticed offices, in years of uneventful, unrecorded duties, the Son of God grew and waxed strong.—B. F. Westcott.

PRAYER A NECESSITY.

Had it not been for that little meeting in the upper chamber where they were all with one accord, in one place, there would have been, humanly speaking, no Pentecost, with its thousands of converts from which Christianity advanced until the banner of the Cross waved over the Roman Empire. The child of God is running awful risks of exposure to temptation, arrested development, and spiritual atrophy, if he neglects the place and weakens the habit of prayer.—M. M. King.

THE MEASURE OF THE SERMON.

A minister's message is accredited about in proportion to the driving power of the conviction behind it. It is recorded that when Joseph Hume, the alleged infidel, was charged with inconsistency in going to listen to John Brown, the godly Scotch minister of Haddington, he replied: "I don't believe all he says, but he does, and once a week I like to hear a man who believes what he says. Whatever I think, that man preaches as if he thought the Lord Jesus were at his elbow." Much of the preaching of the day fails of effect because, while it is gorgeous in rhetoric, acute in argument, or noisy in delivery, the hearers do not detect in it the note of reality. To believe only what is true, and to preach, teach, or write only what one believes, is the way to reach the ordinary sinners, and also mayhap here and there a skeptical Hume. —Zion's Herald.

THE JOYS OF FAITH.

The joys of victory are not greater than the joys of faith—a faith that rests and delights itself on the living God, and glories in Him as much before the conflict has begun as it rejoices in Him when the victory is achieved. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." Was there no joy in the hearts of Caleb and Joshua when they triumphantly declared of the dreaded foes, "They are bread for us: their defense is departed from them?" Was Jonathan troubled in the presence of his enemies when he exclaimed, "There is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few?" Oftentimes have the armies of the Lord of Hosts gone forth to the war as did Jehoshaphat, who appointed singers to go before the army, praising the Lord, whose mercy endureth forever! Rich spoils are gathered when the people of God battle after this sort!—J. Hudson Taylor.

RECOLLECTIONS OF REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

By Rev. Beverly Carradine. D.D.

Bishop Keener had three sons—Christian, John, and Samuel. The first named became one of the truest and best friends I had in the Louisiana Conference. All of the Bishop's sons were religious and became preachers. Some one said that, as the Bible says, "a wise son maketh a glad father," Bishop Keener should be a glad father, indeed.

Christian, the eldest, had a serious, thoughtful face, but was endowed with a fine sense of humor, and possessed, like his father, a most remarkable power of quietly and justly judging a man's mental caliber and moral worth. He had a way of stroking his short Vandyke beard as he looked on one, and the reader may be assured that he was thinking, calculating, measuring and weighing the whole man accurately and truthfully.

The first time I met him was at the Crystal Springs camp meeting, in Mississippi, when I was a young preacher. He came in company with his father and two brothers. The Committee on Public Worship preached him twice, and both discourses made a most powerful impression. One was from the text, "Agree with thine adversary quickly whilst thou art in the way with him." The treatment was unique and tremendously forceful. He was gifted with what I call the cumulative syle of preaching, growing stronger with his points and more overwhelming with his conclusions at the end.

After this, I met him at the Seashore Camp Ground, and I soon felt we were mutually drawn to each other, while I recognized he had a far deeper insight into men, their motives, methods and sermons and in the meeting itself than I possessed.

Still later, I was sent to New Orleans by Bishop Wilson, and there my acquaintance and affection for Christian became David and Jonathan-like. We had many conversations together and found perfect agreement in mind and spirit.

He paid his addresses to a lovely and rich young lady in Baton Rouge, Miss Ella Knox. After the engagement he, according to Southern custom, asked the mother for her consent. Mrs. Knox replied: "My daughter, Mr. Keener, has been accustomed to every luxury. What have you to offer her?"

Brother Keener, with that remarkable power of apt reply and repartee, pointed out of the window to his horse which was grazing on the green and said, "Nothing in the world, madam, but that old gray horse."

The lovely young girl became his wife, and, all honor to her, submitted to the hardships of a circuit life, going from one appointment to another in all kinds of weather and along every description of road in a buggy drawn by the gray horse already mentioned.

At one of the sessions of the Louisiana Conference, a brother of the impertinent order came up to Brother Keener, who was smoking a cigar, and said in a very rough, dictatorial way, "Brother, take that dirty cigar out of your mouth." Brother Keener, with that keen eye of his, discovered at a glance that anything but immaculate linen was being worn by his rebuker, and with perfect immobility of countenance replied, like a flash, "Brother, take that dirty shirt off and put on a clean one."

The rebuke was a stunner in its effect.

This speech was made long years before Sam Jones lock-jawed a like offensive woman who in a great congregation interrupted the service and put a question to him about one of his personal habits. Like Brother Keener, Sam Jones carried the war into the camp of the enemy with a question about an article of the woman's dress that so hit the mark that she arose in confusion and left the audience, amid the smiles of hundreds.

Brother Keener had a great way of drawing people in a personal way to Christ and a number into the Christian ministry. Meeting one of the latter on the car, who had failed to fulfill his promise to preach, and instead had hired a rig, a colored man in livery, and was about to tour the southern part of Louisiana with some patent medicine, the said brother was utterly discomfited, put to rout, flight and surrender by the sangfroid or quiet manner of Christian, whom he saw observing him across the passenger coach.

The running Jonah tried to stout it out for a while; he spread his lunch of broiled chicken and potato salad, flanked by a bottle of wine, with his uniformed servant waiting on him, while Christian Keener kept his eyes on him and stroked his Vandyke beard.

It was more than Jonah could bear, and suddenly out of the window went the bottle of wine, while the faithless preacher came over to Brother Keener and said, "Forgive me. I will quit this business, sell out, pay off the negro who is with me, meet you at your next quarterly conference, and get a license to preach."

Of course, Brother Keener accepted his hand, and the running Jonah left his business voluntarily, as he had promised, met Brother Keener, who was then a presiding elder, and, having been licensed to preach, became a mighty man of God. Meanwhile, let the reader remember that all Brother Keener did was to fix his eyes on the man, rub his beard and look thoughtful.

At the Seashore Camp Ground, where good and powerful preachers had been able to get only a few people to the altar, one afternoon a minister was "put up," not remarkable for intellectuality or spirituality, but had an impressive manner, was quite voluble, and looked like he was saying something when he was saying nothing, and yet when this preacher made a call for seekers the long altar was filled.

I was sitting next to Christian Keener, and, leaning over, whispered, "What on earth did that man say that so moved the people? He has not thought or unction. How do you account for this great result?"

Christian Keener was busy pulling his beard. Just then a large yellow dog came trotting up the aisle, and Brother Keener, without replying, picked up a handful of sawdust and threw it at the canine intruder. A more panic-stricken animal I never saw. He fled with great leaps and bounds as for his life, and as far as we could see him the dog was still running.

Then it was that Brother Keener, turning to me, said: "This is the answer. The dog thought I threw something at him, when it was nothing; so the people here thought they heard a great sermon, when it was nothing on earth but sawdust."

In one of his spells of quiet humor, he argued with a rustic who was driving him to an appointment, that at that moment and in that spot they were in the center of the world. "Just look," pointing over the prairie to the horizon, "don't you see how the sky fits evenly down at the same distance all around, like the lid of a skillet? This in itself shows that we are in the center of the world." The man, perfectly convinced, replied: "I never thought of that before, but I see it now plainly. This is certainly a fact." And he drove on, wonderfully pleased with the thought that he was in the center of this planet. There was no desire on the part of Brother Keener to make the man the butt of ridicule. It was only the spirit of mirth that bubbled up and over now and then out of his delightful spirit. Then, who can tell how it broadened the vision and uplifted the life of the man as the idea crept in, that being in the center of the world, which he intended keeping secret, he would act worthily of being in such a place, and so honored by being situated in such a locality. Christian did his smiling weeks later in telling me of the matter. Not for the world would he have wounded the man by laughing at his ignorance.

But with all these Rowland Hill-like originalities and flashes of humor, we had no better preacher nor truer man to Christ in the Church than Christian Keener. I am confident that the exposure which he met with in his long rounds as a presiding elder led to his physical breakdown and premature death.

If ever a man in a proper sense worshiped his wife, it was he, and if ever a man loved and lived out the truths of Christian living, it was Christian Keener.

His death made a gap in the circle of my friends that no one has ever been able since to fill. I thank God I ever knew him and for our mutual fellowship and affection.

I am not satisfied to lay a single flower on his grave, but bring a great bunch of immortelles to spread upon the mound of a man concerning whom I am confident that his influence for good still abides on earth, and who has to-day a high rank and great reward in heaven.—From the Gospel Herald (Washington, D. C.)

BATON ROUGE METHODISM.

Mr. W. S. Holmes, one of the most loyal and consecrated men I ever knew, who is now president of the Board of Stewards and superintendent of the Sunday School of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge, has in his keeping a book of great interest, upon the fly-leaf of which is written: "Register of the Baton Rouge Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the General Records, and a Synoptical History and the Statistics. Revised, etc., by Robt. J. Harp, 1851." The book is bound in sheepskin, its pages numbered to 470, some of which are written upon, and some of which are blank, while still others are, unfortunately, missing; and has printed upon the back edge, "M. E. Church Register." The book is now 65 years of age. It contains many revisions of the Church roll, registers of baptisms, marriages, deaths, records of quarterly conferences, notes by various pastors, and other matters of interest. The history of the Church begins with the year 1834; the first revision of the roll contains the names of those who in 1851 had been members since 1834. One of the last items recorded was written by Dr. J. A. Parker and reads thus: "If I am not returned here next year (1892), I trust my successor will keep up the record.—Parker." Two lines follow for 1892 and the "short history" ceases.

The list of pastors, beginning with 1834, contains the following names: Marshall, Porter, Scott, Talley, Scott, Speer, Craighead, Simpkins, Dieffenwierth, Crenshaw, Harmon, Harp, Porter, Goodwyn, Avery, Foster, Suratt, Avery, Linfield, Cravens, Linfield, C. V. Carter, Goodwyn, Chapman, Trippett, Goodwyn, Wilkinson, Christian Keener, Goodwyn, Sawyer, Daves, White, Fauntleroy, J. A. Parker, Evans (1892). The list of presiding elders of the district begins with 1842 and contains the following names: Pipkin, Powell, Crenshaw, Doty, J. C. Keener, Linus Parker, Walker, Evans (1891). The roll of the presiding elders appears broken in many places. J. C. Keener served the district intermittently 12 or 15 years.

In 1834 Baton Rouge was made a station. But the first appointment to this city seems to have been in 1832, when Rev. E. Tabor had charge with outlying preaching places. In 1834 money was subscribed to build the church and in 1836 the building was completed; the task of raising the funds and building the edifice was that of Dr. C. K. Marshall, a most efficient laborer in the Lord's vineyard. As the church then stood, it was the first story of the present building. In 1850 Rev. W. E. M. Linfield made the following note: "The new church was built this year; $14,500 was raised in cash and subscriptions, and about $1000 was left to be secured after dedication. The sermon was preached by Dr. Marshall, the first pastor of the station." Brother Linfield meant by the "new church" that another story had been added to the building erected in 1836, and the spire, as it now appears, was placed upon the church. A parsonage was bought and furnished that year also. On May 18, 1861, Brother Linfield made the following note. "While last year offered the occasion for privation and liberality and was closed most graciously, the excitement in the political world, the dissolution of the old Government, the preparations for war and the hardness of the times have furnished the occasions of great trial; some $7000 unpaid on church subscriptions, and the impossibility of collecting, finds us in a trying strait. The ante-rooms of the basement are used as sewing rooms for the soldiers who are volunteering for the campaign." In 1862, the short history relates that New Orleans and Baton Rouge were captured by the Federalists, and that the Baton Rouge Methodist preacher, Bro. Cravens, was taken a prisoner to New Orleans. Over against the years 1863, 1864, and 1865, notes are made saying that no appointments were made to Baton Rouge those years as the city was within the Federal lines.

In 1871 Brother R. S. Trippett was appointed to Baton Rouge. He devised means, he states in a short entry, to pay the church out of its heavy indebtedness, to raise money for a new floor in the basement and to paint the spire. This must have been a heroic task in those days of great financial depression under Carpet Bag rule and Reconstruction, but the Lord was with the fathers of our Church. In 1890, Dr J. A. Parker states about $1000 was spent upon the church in having it replastered and refrescoed. In 1891 Dr. Parker further remarks, "A lot of ground at the corner of America and Favrot Streets was pur-

REV. C. A. BATTLE,
Host of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. C. A. Battle, our pastor at Baton Rouge, is a Georgian by birth, and comes of a family which on both sides has been allied with the Methodist Church for generations. He attended Young Harris College, of Georgia, where he took the B. A. degree, and later pursued his literary studies further at the University of Chicago, and Vanderbilt. He took a theological course at the latter institution, where he was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. He joined the Louisiana Conference some eight or nine years ago, and since his connection with it he has been assigned to the following charges: Jennings, Lafayette, Felicity (New Orleans), and First Church, Baton Rouge. Well equipped educationally, an earnest student, a fluent and forceful speaker, and a consecrated, energetic pastor, he gives promise of great usefulness in the years to come. Mr. Battle wields a facile pen and is a frequent and widely-known contributor to the Church press. He is genial, affable, and brotherly, and doubtless will make an ideal Conference host.

chased. The lot was paid for and property deeded to the Board of Trustees of this church. M. C. Aldrich, Pres. Board." In this year a Sunday school was organized at the point where this ground was purchased. It has since grown into a flourishing church of over 200 members. A few years ago a new church was erected in place of the old one. This year, 1916, under the guidance of the able pastor, Rev. H. Wade Cudd, a neat parsonage has been built on the same lot that the church is situated upon.

The "short history" contains no further records of work upon the building of the First Methodist Church. I may add, however, that when Rev. E. K. Means was pastor (1905-1908), $7000 was raised and spent for needed repairs, putting the building in comfortable shape. During this year, 1916, about $2000 has been spent upon the church in replacing the basement floor, which Brother Trippett put in in 1871, with one of cement, in converting the basement into a modern Sunday school room, with individual classrooms, and installing a modern hot-water heating plant throughout the building. During the last two years the building has been relighted, with a different arrangement of lights, throughout.

During the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Drake, one of the most loved of ministers among the membership of the First Methodist Church, the congregation subscribed and paid over $1300 toward the building of a district parsonage, which cost several thousand dollars, on Government Street, where our efficient presiding elder, Rev. H. W. Bowman, now lives.

In 1851 Brother Harp reported, he states in the "short history," 139 members to Conference. At present there are 730 members of the organization. The names of all persons "lost sight of" have been deleted recently, and the above number fairly represents the membership of the church.

It is interesting to note that the Louisiana Annual Conference met in Baton Rouge on Jan. 5, 1853. Brother Linfield states that the Conference was entertained in the city again Dec. 5-11, 1860, at its fifteenth session. Bishop Early presided. Bishop Marvin held the Louisiana Conference in Baton Rouge in January of 1874; and in January of 1886 Bishop Keener presided over the Conference in this city. In December, 1889, Bishop Duncan held the Conference in the First Methodist Church again. In December, 1900, Bishop Galloway was president of the Louisiana Conference in Baton Rouge. And on November 22, 1916, that outstanding and world-known leader, Bishop Hoss, will hold the Conference in the historic edifice of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge, the first story of which was built in 1836 and which served as a sewing room for the ladies of the Confederacy, and later as a hospital for the "Yankees" while they held the city during the Civil War and imprisoned the Southern Methodist preacher in New Orleans.

At the Baton Rouge session of the Louisiana Conference of 1886, F. N. Parker, F. S. Parker, J. I. Hoffpauir, and H. S. Johns were admitted on trial. At the session of the Conference in the same city and church in 1889 there were elected and ordained elders the following: J. I. Hoffpauir, J. S. Sanders, F. N. Parker, H. S. Johns, J. O. Bennett, G. A. Mandeville, and F. S. Parker.

In 1889 W. H. N. Magruder and W. H. Goodale were pillars in the local church. Since that time J. R. Holmes, beloved by everybody, and S. B. Jones, the father-in-law of F. N. Parker, both deceased, were zealous leaders in this field. The Board of Stewards at present are: W. S. Holmes, A. T. McGuire, E. F. Fleming, Jr., A. Bogan, Ernest Curtain, Dr. W. S. Cushman, F. D. Dawson, J. K. Dyer, G. A. Evans, Sidney Fairchild, A. A. Fridge, L. A. Himes, C. A. Holcombe, Prof. C. A. Ives, Dr. Tom Spec Jones, J. S. Kean, Dr. Charles McVea, J. R. Murphy, Col. J. W. Nicholson, H. L. Puckett, W. H. Quine, Prof. S. T. Sanders, Matt G. Smith, Prof. O. B. Staples, A. C. Stewart, Prof. H. W. Stopher, Col. I. D. Wall, A. A. Wren.

The church has a live missionary society, two strong and prosperous aid societies, Junior, Intermediate and Senior League organizations, the latter of which is in a thriving and spiritual condition; it has a prayer meeting attendance of about 50, and in many ways is doing the Lord's work in Baton Rouge. The roll of members contains the names of many consecrated and active men and women in the Master's work. There is a bright prospect for the charge.

REV. H. W. BOWMAN,
Presiding Elder of the Baton Rouge District, within Which the Louisiana Conference Will This Year Meet.

Rev. H. W. Bowman was born in Massachusetts on Dec. 12, 1869. He was left a homeless lad at 11 years of age, and began life as a newsboy. He worked during his vacations at any job he could secure and managed to obtain a high school education. He went to Texas in 1888, where he was converted in 1890. He at once began to preach, and the day after he was twenty-one years old he was received on trial in the East Texas Conference. In 1894 he was married to Miss Mollie Holladay, a daughter of the Rev. S. S. Holladay, of the Louisiana Conference. In 1898 he was transferred to the Louisiana Conference, in which he has served ever since, except in the years 1902 and 1903, which he spent in the Indian Mission Conference. Brother Bowman is in his third year on the Baton Rouge District, where his labors have been fruitful and where he has shown his metal as a leader. He is a forceful and informing preacher, a wise and helpful counselor, and a man of great devotion and fidelity to the Church; and he is held in high esteem by the brethren, both clerical and lay.

II.

In the Old Testament the idea of redemption was a physical one and always had a naturalistic significance, as is shown in the following: "And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem unto Himself for a people, and to make him a name, and terrible things for thy land, before thy people, whom thou redeemest to thee out of Egypt, from the nations and their Gods?" (2 Sam. 7:23. Deut. 26:27). The only conception of immortality found in these writings was that of the family and race. For them redemption was nothing more than to be free from the enemy by a supernatural power, or a release by ransom, as in the case of a slave being freed from his master.

According to Paul, redemption had a new and altogether different meaning. It had a spiritual significance which had never dawned upon the mind of the Jew. It was the deliverance from the powers and influences of sin which had come as a result of the fall and a re-establishment in the presence of God, fully justified because of the meritorious life and death of Jesus Christ; the Greek word used, apolutrosis, meaning a release effected by the payment of a ransom, redemption and deliverance. It is the deliverance effected through the death of Christ from the retributive wrath of a holy God, and merited penalty of sin. (Eph. 4:30, 1 Cor. 1.30, Col. 1:14, Rom. 3:24-26. Thayers). Remission of sins is more than a judicial pardon, for it is an absolute forgiveness. It is the removal of everything that separates man from God. It is a deliverance of the conscience of man from the burden of guilt and from the wrath of an avenging Father.

Any adequate atonement, for man, must satisfy both the holiness and righteousness of God, and at the same time meet the needs of man in his sin. In the atonement made by Christ every requirement was met, making it possible for man and God to be reunited in Christ Jesus. God was pleased to accept the substitution of Christ's suffering for man's punishment. This substitution both vindicated God's holiness and satisfied every requirement of his moral law—"so then as through one trespass the judgment came unto all men to condemnation; even so through one act of righteousness the free gift came unto all men to justification of life." (Rom. 5:18). "The death of Christ accomplishes the end of God's moral government more fully than mere retributive justice could ever do. It is a more complete expression of God's nature than punishment could ever be. Punishment expresses only one aspect of it, while the humiliation, suffering, and death of the Son of God, prompted by infinite love, represent and satisfy the total perfection of God." "Being justified freely by His grace: through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God set forth to be a propitiation, through faith in His blood, to show his righteousness because of the passing over of the sins done aforetime, and the forbearance of God; for the showing I say of His righteousness at this present season; that he might himself be just and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." (Rom. 3:24-26.)

In no sense did Christ assume the guilt of sinful man. "This would be unjust, if not impossible." The substitution of His suffering and death was but another cause of divine action in dealing with sin, rather than its vicarious penalty. This course frees God's action in the treatment of sin from the slightest appearance of laxness, and at the same time meets every requirement for man's redemption. Through Christ's death man became partaker of the spiritual qualities and was released from the curse of the law. Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us; for it is written, "cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." (Gal. 3:13). In this Christ identified Himself with sinful humanity in such a way as to bring this shameful death upon Himself; that by so doing He might redeem man from the powers of sin. It was the sin of man which brought the death of the cross. Christ was treated as a sinner in order that, as a consequence of his suffering, sinners might be made righteous. His death was so far substituted for the sins of man that His suffering and death accomplished in God's moral order the same end which the punishment of man would have accompiished, which is the expression of God's holy dispieasure against sin. Nowhere did Paul imply the sameness of kind or tbe exact equivalent between the suffering of Cbrist and the penalty due to sin, yet in some way Christ's atonement met the same end with God and provided saivation for man. "He was made sin for our sakes." (2 Cor. 5:21). The desert of sin is penalty and in the sense that Christ's death averted penaity, oniy, couid it be said to be a substitution of penalty; however, in his sympathy he felt the guilt of the race. Tbe death of the cross is the act by which God becomes reconciled to man.

This redemption was a deiiverance from aii the effects of sin that had come as the result of tbe first man's sin. Not only had man been aiienated from God in the fall, but all creation bad heen disorganized. Thus the Apostle says, "Giving thanks unto the Father, who made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints of light, who delivered us out of the powers of darkness, and translated us into the kingdom of the Son of his love; in whom we have our redemption, tbe forgiveness of our sins." (Col. 1:12-14. Rom. 2:26. Eph. 1:7).

One of the resuits of sin, stressed by the Apostle, was death. By death he meant more than is ordinarily meant in modern speech. He meant all the consequences of sin. It inciuded suffering, fears, consciousness of guiit, and final separation from God, as weii as the end of the physical iife. The mission of Christ was to give, in the stead of all these, a consciousness of a right relation with God. His purpose was not to carry man hack to where he was before the fall, but to carry him forward unto the purpose of God in bis life, aboiishing from death everything that makes it horrible until he could say, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" The blood of Christ had been the price paid for the reiease of man from tbe dominion and power of sin, and consequently from all its punishment.

Paul makes the death of Christ the basis of the whole plan of redemption, yet in doing so he in no way discredits the life which He iived as being a necessary factor in the redemptive scheme. He speaks of the just suffering for the unjust. "Him who knew no sin, he made to be sin on our behalf; that we might become the righteousness of God in him." (2 Cor. 5:21). The hope of our salvation is attributed to the death of Christ. Unbelieving Judaism brought Christ to the cross, which seemed to be the defeat of bis divine purpose, but in the writings of Paul it was the symbol of salvation, and tbe tbing in which he found the greatest giory. He says, "Far be it from me to giory save in the cross of Jesus Cbrist, through whom the world has been crucified to me and I unto the world." In the death of Christ there came a perfect knowledge of sin, which knowledge was necessary in its perfect elimination. This death imposed by tbe race became a meritorious inheritance for the race.

Very little is said in the Pauline Epistles concerning how His death becomes a means of salvation unto mankind, yet Paul was familiar with the Jewish custom of offering the blood of animals for the sins of the people, under the oid dispensation, and doubtless had some idea of how this substitution became effective. Thus he says, "Much more than being justified by His biood sball we be saved from the wrath of God through Him." (Rom. 5:9). Tbe use of the term "blood" as used here carries with it the idea of sacrifice and propitiation. Justice could be met either by punishment or propitiation, and God's love for man caused him to pursue the iatter course, even with the death of His own Son. The prophecies spoken of in the Book of Isaiah concerning the suffering servant, of Jehovah were now interpreted to refer to Christ. He said, "He died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Cor. 15:2.)

The benefit of this atoning blood comes to man hy his dying to sin and becoming alive unto righteousness through faith in Jesus Christ. "Knowing this that our oid man was crucified with Him; that the body of sin might be done away, that so we should no longer be in bondago to sin, for He that died is released from sin." (Rom. 6:6-7). Christ, the head of this new order, died for all, and man comes into the benefits of His death. By this faith there is begotten in man the same spirit that dominated in the life of Christ, and it is because of this spirit that is within him that he is enabled to stand before God justified. A knowledge of this fact enabled the Apostle to say, "It is no longer I that live but Christ liveth in me" (Gal. 2:20); and for me to live is Christ, and to die is gain" (Phil. 1:20). The graco and power of Christ in the redemption of man is mightier than the sin of Adam. This grace not only shows him how he may be redeemed, but supplies in him every needed assistance for bis coming into that new experience.

This deleverance from death, with all its powers, may be experienced in this present world, making the participator a new creature (2 Cor. 5:17), dead to sin (Gal. 5:24), and alive unto a righteousness that gives joy and peace (Rom. 14:17). He is reconciled to God (Rom. 5:1), and saved from all sin (Rom. 8:24). He may be conscious of the present benefits that come from being a son of God, with all the privlieges that such a relation may bring (1 Cor. 15:9). At the same time the Apostle stressed most of all the future aspect of the Christian life. He held this up as a constant stimulus to him that he might endure hardships as a worthy soldier (2 Tim. 4:7-8). His great emphasis on the final redemption may have been partly due to his belief that the second coming of Christ was at hand (1 Cor. 15:19.)

Paul believed that at the coming of Christ the whole universe would bo restored to its original purpose and plan. Man, by redemption, would come into the same relation with the Father that is held by Christ. He shall be made like Him, and inherit things divine. Not only so, but the universe, being out of accord with the divine decree, shall be brought back into harmony with God, and aid in bringing giory and honor to His name. In this final state of the redeemed aii the results of sin shall be done away, and righteousness shall prevail in all things. By sharing in the nature of Christ, he shares in his power in overcoming death, which is man's last enemy. Then, the same power which raised Christ from the dead shall also raise his followers and establish them in the presence of the Father forevermore (Rom. 8:11, 1 Cor. 15:15-16).

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

The New Orleans Methodist Sunday School Union, during the latter part of October, heid, in connection with its fourth quarterly meeting, an institute and rally which were productive of much good to the Sunday schools of our Church.

The Union is composed of the officers and teachers of Orleans and Jefferson Parishes. Its officers are: Rev. W. W. Holmes, Honorary President; Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Acting President; Mr. O. J. Dunn, Secretary and Treasurer; Mr. H. H. Gibson, Superintendent of the Aduit Department; Mr. P. B. Habans, Superintendent of Teacher Training; Mrs. Z. A. Morrison, Superintendent of the Home Department; and Mrs. R. H. Harper, Superintendent of the Elementary Department. These, with others who were called to their assistance, made the Institute a decided success, whiie the Raiiy exceeded the expectations of those who promoted it.

The Institute was heid in Rayne Memorial Church. Octoher 18, 19, and 20. Beginning at 7:15 p. m., and continuing until 8 o'clock, divisional conferences were held. Mrs. R. H. Harper presided over the Eiementary Division, and was assisted by Miss Josephine and Miss Susie Juden. Mrs. C. F. Niebergali presided over the Primary Department, and was assisted by Mrs. W. H. Favourite. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Miss Mamie Hands and Miss Alice Wasson. Miss Cora Godat presided over the Junior Department, and was assisted by Misses Ethel Sarcher, Ruth Barnes, Ellie Jamison, Hazel Von Eye, [illegible] Payne, and Mrs. A. J. Gearheard. Mr. Van Carter conducted the "Teen-Age" Division.

After these divisional conferences, all assembled in the main auditorium for the inspirational addresses. The music was under the direction of Mr. I. N. Niebergall, with Prof. Black at the organ. All the pastors appeared in some way, on the program. Rev. W. W. Holmes conducted the "Bible Hour." Mr. S. A. Montgomery was on the program, and delivered a forceful address. Dr. George A. Oliver, of Philadelphia, was heard Wednesday night. Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, the Conference Sunday School Secretary, was present throughout the Institute, and contributed much to its success.

The Raiiy was held in First Church, Sunday afternoon, October 22. All the schools of the Union were represented, and the attendance was large. Two of tho schools had special cars to carry their children. Rev. W. W. Holmes and Rev. A. J. Gearheard presided. The music was led by Rev. O. M. Morris. "Is the Sunday School Work of America a Man's Job?" was the subject of Rev. C. V. Breithaupt's address. Dr. S. H. Werlein spoke on "The Child and the Commonwealth." A very interesting feature of the Raiiy was the demonstration, "The Value of Memory Work," under the direction of Mrs R. H Harper. Several children recently graduated from the Primary Department of Parker Memorial Church, when questioned by Mrs W H Favourite, answered perfectly every memory verse they had had during their year's work.

Besides working and speaking during the Institute, Rev. C. V. Breithaupt visited all our churches, and made inspirational addresses Brother Breithaupt made a very fine impression upon all our people, and they feel that a wise selection has been made in calling him to the great work in which he is now engaged. His work, if it is continued and let us hope that it may be, by all means will result in giving a great impetus and direction to our Sunday school interests in Louisiana. R. H. HARPER.

By the will of the late Colonel W. G. Vincent the Charity Hospital of New Orleans will receive $30,000, and the Medical Department of Tulane University $60,000 for the establishment of a school of tropical medicine. A number of other bequests were made to Catholic institutions in the city.

The recent State Fair in Shreveport, La., was largely attended and was a pronounced success in every respect. It is much to be regretted that fairs in Louisiana are kept open on the holy Sabbath. Agitation to create a sentiment in favor of Sabbath observance and the enactment of Sunday laws is one of the most urgent needs of this fast-developing commonwealth.

Church News

It is stated that during the past four years 140,000 people have joined the Methodist Church in India.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now reported to be building on an average two churches a day.

Bishop W. R. Lambuth dedicated the new M. E. Church, South, at Willows, Calf., which is said to be a fine structure, on November 5.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, has recently been visiting some of our Annual Conferences in the Far West and delighting them with happy addresses.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, the founder of the Christian Endeavor Society, who last year had a very severe attack of typhoid fever, is again reported to be ill at a hospital.

Dr. J. R. Dobyns has resigned the presidency of the Southwestern Presbyterian University, at Clarksville, Tenn. Dr. Dobyns, who has held this position for but a short time, was formerly engaged in educational work at Jackson, Miss.

Pope Benedict seems to be finding it rather a difficult task to meet the demands made upon him by opposing nations in the European war. Both the Allies and the Central powers are in some respects said to be much displeased with his course.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says that, so far, the movement to place ex-officio members in the Annual Conferences in connection with the Laymen's Missionary organization has failed to command the requisite three-fourths majority of those voting on the question.

According to the Midland Methodist, the Annual Conferences thus far held have made a good showing as to the number of preachers admitted on trial. The Western Virginia admitted 8; the Missouri, 7; the Southwest Missouri, 8; the St. Louis, 9; the Holston, 8, and the Tennessee, 11.

The McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Nashville, Tenn., recently gave Mr. J. D. Hamilton, who has been a member of its board of stewards for fifty years, a public reception. Mr. Hamilton, who is also Treasurer of the General Board of Missions, is a son-in-law of Bishop H. N. McTyeire.

Bishop E. E. Hoss says that Dr. W. H. Fitchett, the renowned Australian Methodist minister and author, once remarked to him that our Church had produced at least one very great man—Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe. Dr. Fitchett is stated to affirm that he owes much to the writings of that profound and brilliant metaphysician and theologian.

A press dispatch from Rome, Italy, states that Pope Benedict will hold a secret consistory on December 4, and a public consistory on December 7. It is expected that several new cardinals will be named at these meetings. One report has been current that France would be given three such officials as a means of showing the Vatican's interest in the people of that country.

From a report in Zion's Herald of the late meeting of the Northern Methodist Bishops, held in Minneapolis, Minn., we extract the following: "From conversation which I have overheard, I judge there is some anxiety among the Bishops over the effect of the proposed unification of American Methodism upon our churches in the South and on the border. In some cases there is a disposition to anticipate the union in local churches and communities. A case or two or three are said to have been cited where our churches were withdrawing from certain fields or attempting to unite with the sister Methodism. The spirit of this was thought to be admirable enough, but the action decidedly premature."

A LITTLE INQUIRY INTO FACTS.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb.

It seems to be generally agreed that where the assessments upon a charge are not paid in full the amount collected should be equitably divided among the several causes upon a pro rata basis, giving each an equal per cent of the amount assessed for it.

Yet it seems to be generally thought that this is not done in many instances, and that some causes receive more than their due proportion while others receive decidedly less. Accordingly, from the Boards just before Conference there usually comes a call to collect all possible on all assessments and apportion all according to the general per cent of the total assessment paid.

As Conference Secretary of Education, I have been requested to issue such a call in regard to the assessments for education. The Missionary Voice for October, in its leading editorial, entitled "The Misappropriation of Mission Funds—A Hundred Thousand Dollars Given for Missions Otherwise Applied," comes out in the most startling manner conceivable with a somewhat similar demand. This request and serious complaint and the general feeling of uncertainty as to whether a pro rata division of funds is being made has caused me to make (with acknowledgments to an adding machine) some inquiry into the facts in regard to this important matter, which I offer for the consideration of the North Mississippi Conference, and to its vindication in large measure.

The question which I saw had to be answered was: What per cent did the charges last year which did not pay in full pay on the several assessments? revealing whether or not there was wide discrepancy between their percentages paid to education, missions, church extension, etc. To discover this I found the total assessment placed upon the charges not paying in full for each cause, and then the total paid for each cause, which enabled me easily to find the per cent paid each cause, where assessments were not paid in full. The charges where everything was paid in full are, of courst, not involved in the question of equitable or inequitable division of funds. They paid, of course, 100 per cent on everything.

The result of this calculation I submit as follows:

From charges not paying in full their assessments for the several causes received the per cent indicated below of the assessment placed upon them.

Education	40 per cent
Missions (Home and Foreign)	46 per cent
Church Extension	43 per cent
Conference Claimants	50 per cent
Bishops	51 per cent
American Bible Society	44 per cent
Sunday School Board	27 per cent

The percentages paid by the entire Conference of the assessments made are as follows:

Education	65 per cent
Missions (Home and Foreign)	69 per cent
Church Extension	66 per cent
Conference Claimants	73 per cent
Bishops	76 per cent
American Bible Society	70 per cent
Sunday School Board	58 per cent

These figures tell their own story. They reveal that, as regards the division made among the General Boards, the percentage is much more nearly the same among charges not paying in full than might have been supposed—the Mission Board leading with 46 per cent, and the Board of Education trailing with 6 per cent less.

As Conference Secretary of Education, we should like very much to see this slight discrimination against the educational assessment removed (amounting to several hundred dollars in the aggregate), and a pro rata division made throughout—a policy endorsed by the Missionary Voice. The plea that it makes that mission moneys collected in the Sunday schools should not be added to the total and prorated among all causes, but should be added to the mission amount after the division has been made, is entirely reasonable. As a friend to the mission cause, we urge that this plea be regarded.

On behalf of the Board of Education, we earnestly ask that collections be made in full wherever possible, and that a pro rata division be made where the total assessments are not paid. The maintenance of our Church schools and the education of our young ministers are surely causes worthy of such consideration and generous support.

A LESSON IN CHRISTIAN UNITY.

By R. B. Eleazer.

While the two great Methodisms of the United States are discussing the basis of union, it is interesting to know that three Protestant denominations of Canada have been taking similar steps, and that their union within a short time is said to be assured. Canadian Methodists, Presbyterians, and Congregationalists, after twelve years of negotiations, have agreed on a basis of union and are ready for the final legal steps that shall merge them into one great Protestant body. Calvinism and Arminianism as extremes of theology, and episcopacy and congregationalism as extremes of polity, are to be harmonized in the spirit of Christian unity and mutual concession. The Christian Guardian, the official organ of Canadian Methodism, says of the proposed union:

"The die is cast; and Canada faces a union such as the world never saw before, a union which our fathers would have declared to be impossible, a union which speaks volumes in regard to the broadening of Christian sympathy and the passing of ancient prejudices, and which is eloquent also of a yet wider union which shall come to pass when the Church of Jesus Christ shall have grown big enough to be brotherly and strong enough to discard its century-old prejudices."

Certainly here is a lesson for the Methodisms of the United States, whose differences are insignificent as compared to those that our Canadian neighbors are about to subordinate to the essential unity of all true believers in Christ.

A HYMN.

(The following hymn, number 231 in our standard hymn book, was written by our versatile chief pastor, Bishop E. E. Hoss. It was designed to be used in the baptizing of infants.—Editor of the Advocate.)

O God, great Father, Lord, and King!
Our children unto thee we bring;
And strong in faith, and hope, and love,
We dare thy steadfast word to prove.

Thy covenant kindness did of old
Our fathers and their seed enfold.
That ancient promise standeth sure,
And shall while earth and heaven endure.

Look down upon us while we pray,
And visit us in grace to-day;
These little ones in mercy take
And make them thine for Jesus' sake.

While they the outward sign receive,
Wilt thou thy Holy Spirit give,
And keep and help them by thy power
In every hard and trying hour?

Guide thou their feet in holy ways;
Shine on them through the darkest days.
Uphold them till their life be past,
And bring them all to heaven at last.

BOY BLUE'S CANDY BEAR.

Boy Blue had seen the beautiful little candy bear many and many a time. It stood in the window of the Racket Store, with many other little pink and white bears. He had seen it every day for ever so long, on his way to and from Kindergarten. In the morning he was afraid of being late, so there was barely time for a hasty peep, but on his way home at noon there was no hurry, and he stood and gazed longingly in at the enticing rows of pink and white and brown candy bears.

Little Girl and Mother and Daddy and everybody else at home had heard all about those "darling little candy bears." The day Boy Blue showed them to Little Girl she agreed that they were the "darlingest Teddy bears" she ever had seen.

"I'd choose a pink one," she said, "like my ribbon."

"I'd choose a brown one," said Boy Blue, "brown like my leggings."

No sooner did they reach home than they went to ask Mother's leave to get one of those "dear little candy bears."

"They's only a dime apiece," said Boy Blue.

Mother willingly consented, and when morning came Mother gave Boy Blue two shining new nickels. Little Girl was older than Boy Blue, and as she had to go to school earlier, she had forgotten to remind Mamma about her dime.

At noon when Mother heard Boy Blue's little pitter-patter in the hall she put her sewing aside and went to see his wonderful bear.

"O, what a little bear!" she exclaimed as she bent to kiss him. It really was a most bewitching little brown bear, only about six inches high, and most maple-sugary looking. Now Boy Blue had not one, but a dozen "sweet teeth." Sometimes Mother said she thought his teeth were all "sweet teeth," so she said, "How ever did you get home with him without even nibbling his toes?"

Boy Blue tucked down his head a moment. His thumbs crept into his pockets and he twisted his toes, while a roguish twinkle came into his eyes as he said, "He's—soap!"

"How do you know, dear?" she asked.

"'Cause I licked the bottom of his foots."

Mother felt, oh, so sorry for him, but she knew that if she said so, the tears would crowd over the little eyes that were twinkling so bravely, so she said, "Well, isn't that the funniest joke we've ever had?" And Mother laughed, and so did Boy Blue.

After a bit Daddy came home from the office and Boy Blue told him about the candy bear that was only soap.

"You'll find a lot of them, Boy Blue, as you grow older—lots of them, little son. Very often the things you'll expect to be candy will turn out to be just soap. It is hard even for grown-ups to tell the real things from those that are make-believe."

And by-and-by Little Girl came in from school. "I bought my little brown bear to-day, Sister," he said, with never the tiniest smile.

"Lem'me see it!" So he drew it forth from his pocket and held it out.

"Oh! how cunning," she cried. And then she asked, "May I lick just once?"

"All you want to," said Boy Blue; but, "one lick" was all she cared for.

She laughed as heartily as any one over the candy bear that was only cheap toilet soap after all.

So Little Girl took her dime and bought some real candy, and divided it with Boy Blue, "'cause you see, Mamma, he saved my dime for me by spending his."—Catherine Rhodes Davis, in Christian Intelligencer.

THE TALKATIVE TURTLE AND THE DUCKS.

A turtle and two ducks, that lived at a certain pond, had a great friendship for one another. One summer, when the sun grew hotter and hotter and when no rains fell, the pond began to dry up. This so alarmed the ducks that they began to make plans to move to a distant pond where there was a great plenty of water. The turtle, thus overhearing them, began to upbraid and scold them. "I thought you were my friends, and now when the pond is drying up and we shall lose our livelihood, I overheard you planning to leave me to my fate!" The turtle cried bitterly and wept. At this the good ducks tried to comfort him. "But," said they, "we would gladly take you with us if we could. We must journey through the air many miles, and you know you can not fly." The turtle continued his weeping, and the ducks finally found a plan to help him. "We can take you with us, but you must do exactly what we command. You know what a prattler you are, and how you never cease from talking. You can go along, but you must not open your mouth to say a single word till we reach our destination. Should you disobey our request you will surely be lost and we can not help you."

The turtle gladly promised to heed their request. The ducks found a stick, and, requesting the turtle to bite the middle, they each took an end in their beaks and soon the three were flying high in the air toward their new home.

As they passed over villages the good folks would gaze upward and cry out at the unusual sight. The turtle became very indignant on hearing these cries of wonder. "Why can't they mind their own business?" thought he. The request of the ducks, however, made him refrain from jeering back at the folks below. At last, on passing over another village, he could keep still no longer and began to scoff at the wondering villagers.

He no sooner opened his mouth than he lost his hold on the stick and fell far down to the earth, where he was instantly dashed to death.

It is sometimes well to heed the advice of friends.—William S. Nortenheim, in Christian Standard.

PAYING THE PRICE.

Into a college community there came at Commencement time a man of splendid presence and fine oratorical gifts. When, with one accord, the boys exclaimed, "That is the man I want to be," an old professor said to them: "Boys, that is a fine ambition. There isn't a nobler man in the country than Mr. R., God bless him! But before you make up your minds to be like him let us count the cost. I have known your man from boyhood; he has suffered privations, thwartings, misunderstandings, losses, crosses, disappointments, and many failures. Boys, are you willing to pay the price for such a manhood? If you are, it is yours."—Moulton.

Life is most beautiful and noble, not when its environment is most splendid, but when it is nourished by the highest thought and the purest loves.—Bishop Spalding.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Some of our [illegible] ants have no money and [illegible] for groceries that they have [illegible] during this year. Let me beg of you to get up [illegible] for this worthy cause in full, if possible. [illegible] will need more money than we can [illegible] with the cost of living as high as it is now. Let us not neglect them. If you have any money send it to our treasurer. I am asking [illegible] to relieve some that are actually in need, but we can not do this unless we furnish him with the money. Please act now.

CHANGES IN POLICY OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman, the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in annual session in the city of New Orleans on October 26, 1916, with all the members of the Committee present. Dr. J. M. Henry, of the Louisiana Conference, was elected Chairman, and Rev. W. W. Drake, of the same Conference, was elected Secretary. The reports submitted to the Committee by the Editor and Publisher showed the Advocate to be free of debt and in a better financial condition than it was a year ago. This was made possible by the reduction of the office force to a minimum and by the unselfish and tireless labors of the Editor and Publisher. The Committee was so well pleased with the business condition of the paper that it passed resolutions of appreciation of "the faithful, tireless, and unselfish services of the Editor and Publisher." In view of the increased reduction in the margin of profit, because of the more than 100 per cent increase in the cost of paper and the advanced price of other printing materials, and with a desire to maintain the high order of the paper and keep it free of debt, the Committee after careful consideration passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That the annual subscription price of the New Orleans Christian Advocate be placed at a minimum rate of $1.50 to all subscribers, except to widows of ministers and superannuates (which abolishes all club rates and increases the price to ministers).

2. That the Publisher be instructed to discontinue all subscriptions which are as much as three months in arrears.

3. That these resolutions take effect on Nov. 15, 1916.

J. T. LEGGETT,
For the Committee.

TO THE METHODISTS OF LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

In addition to the statement made above by Rev. J. T. Leggett, who speaks for the Publishing Committee, we desire to say a few words. As was recently stated in our columns, we closed our past fiscal year with a better circulation than we had twelve months ago and with the finances of the Advocate more satisfactory than they were at this time last fall. But, notwithstanding these facts, owing to the unusual situation now existing, due chiefly to the European war, we are face to face with conditions which must necessarily be reckoned with. The cost of print paper has increased more than 100 per cent since last January and there has been a large advance in the price of all other printing materials. Both secular and religious journals have felt appreciably these adverse influences, and various expedients have been adopted to stem this rising tide of expense. The great dailies in many instances have reduced their sizes and cut off all subscriptions except those paid for at full prices, and some of them have commenced to use inferior grades of paper. The Northern Methodist Church has raised the price of nearly all its publications, as have also the publishers of such weeklies as The Outlook and The Independent. In our own Church The (Nashville) Christian Advocate has been reduced in size from 32 to 24 pages and the subscription price to ministers has been increased from $1 to $1.50 (a very large percentage of its subscribers are preachers). The Pacific Methodist Advocate and the Midland Methodist are now being issued in eight-page form, and the Florida Advocate has announced that after Dec. 1 its price will be advanced to $2. One other Southern Methodist paper increased its rate to preachers in the beginning of the year, and three of the Southern Methodist conference organs are receiving appropriations from their Conferences to support their editors.

It was the same circumstances which affected these periodicals that led the Publishing Committee in its session the last of October to adopt the regulations set forth by Brother Leggett. We desire, if we possibly can, to avoid reducing the size of the New Orleans Advocate, and it is our purpose to try to keep it up to its present standard, at least, in every particular. Please note carefully the following points in the new policy which we are announcing:

1. The price of the paper has not been raised except to ministers. Its regular price to others has always been $1.50; so all that has been done in the case of laymen has been simply to do away with club rates.

2. The Advocate will be put upon practically A CASH BASIS—the price to all persons (except superannuated preachers and the widows of ministers) being $1.50, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE. And the name of no delinquent will be carried on our mailing files longer than three months, if at all, before it is discontinued.

3. This regulation as to the price of subscriptions is now in effect, and henceforth they should be accepted only for $1.50 each, unless it be from some one included in one or the other of the two classes for whom an exception has been made. (The Publisher is permitted to carry delinquents until the 15th of December, by which time all of the patronizing Conferences will have met, thereby giving pastors an opportunity to secure renewals and make settlement at Conference. After the 15th of December the Publisher is expected to enforce the rule applying to delinquent subscriptions.)

We appeal to the friends of our paper to stand by it in the stress of these unusual times and we believe that they will. We appreciate the good work which our preachers have done for the Advocate, and nothing but a stern necessity could influence us to stand for having it issued to them at a higher cost. We invite a comparison of our paper with other $1.50 publications in our Church, both as to its mechanical make-up and the matter which it carries. We believe that if our constituents would examine the Southern Methodist weeklies published at this price, they would have an enlarged appreciation of their own Conference organ. It is our conviction that if there was ever a time in its history when our Church needed to maintain its press upon an efficient basis, it is now. Despite the present unfavorable outlook for all journals, we believe that there are yet bright days ahead for the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE GIBSON MEMORIAL CHURCH.

It was eminently fitting that a house of worship lately erected in Vicksburg, Miss., should have been named the Gibson Memorial Church, in honor of the Rev. Tobias Gibson, the first missionary to the Natchez country, and that there should be a window in that structure with his name inscribed upon it. No more knightly herald of the Cross ever threaded his way through lonely forests to the far-off frontier to tell the story of redeeming love than this intrepid itinerant, who wrought so well along the mighty Mississippi and whose body there reposes, awaiting the resurrection morn. How much Mississippi Methodism, now great and strong, owes to the labors of this noble and consecrated pioneer eternity alone can tell.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, the pastor of this church, is now making a vigorous effort to pay the indebtedness on it, which includes a considerable balance on the memorial window referred to above. The Methodists of the Magnolia State should count it a real privilege to have a part in this undertaking, thus helping to honor one whose name and memory should never be allowed to perish. Why not send a contribution for this purpose to Rev. L. L. Roberts, Vicksburg, Miss.? One of the regrettable things about our Southern people is that as a rule they do not sufficiently exalt and reverence the great characters that this section has produced. We need to learn to do better in this respect.

BROTHER ELEAZER'S OBJECT LESSON.

Rev. R. B. Eleazer, Editor of The Missionary Voice, in an article which we are publishing this week, refers to the union of the Methodist, Congregational, and Presbyterian Churches in Canada, and apparently is happy over the obliteration of Methodism in that vast country. We wonder if our brother would count such a union in the United States a thing to rejoice over. Such seems to be a fair inference from his utterance. In such a view we cannot concur. We believe that Methodism, in standing for a universal atonement, the witness of the Spirit, and Christian perfection in this life, has a message for mankind which needs to be sounded forth with an increased rather than an abated emphasis, and that if she should form any alliance that would cause her to speak less insistently concerning these great truths, the Christian world would be immeasurably impoverished. John Wesley said that he had never known a congregation to prosper greatly spiritually to which the high attainment of being made perfect in love in this life was not faithfully preached, and probably not less influential for good are the other doctrines mentioned above. It remains to be seen what sort of a Christianity the mongrel religious teaching in Canada will produce.

We stated some time ago that the real question in the background in the present union agitation is, Whether Methodism is to be preserved? And we stand by that statement. In a recent issue of the St. Louis Advocate there appeared an editorial, in which, after calling attention to the proposed federation of the non-conformist bodies of Great Britain, it was stated that this would probably be but a preliminary step to the union of the denominations participating in that movement. That would mean the obliteration of British Wesleyanism—the Mother Church of Methodism.

In support of our position we would also call attention to the two following statements:

Bishop Hendrix, who seems to be the real leader of the ultra-unionists in the Church, South, in an address at the famous Union Conference at Evanston, Illinois, which later was published in The Methodist Review Quarterly, said: "If we deem that the work of the Lord's Church can best be done under the Episcopal or Presbyterian or Independent form of government, why not reduce to these three forms of polity the countless numerous subdivisions that adhere to these forms until the various united bodies may themselves merge into a common Church with what each can contribute of its own life and government?

Dr. T. H. Lewis (of the Methodist Protestant Church), who is known as the Apostle of the Unification of American Methodism, in setting forth his creed some time ago, declared: "I believe that these divisions (denominations) are contrary to the spirit of the age; that whatever good they may have done in the past they are now outworn, and that the demands of modern life are for union in religion as much as in business and all other human activities." (We wonder what would happen if all the railroads or factories in the United States were merged, as Dr. Lewis seems to want all the Churches to be. Nearly every State in the Union, knowing the value of competition, has enacted laws to prevent such combinations. Why the right kind of competition is not valuable in church work, none of the anti-denominationalists have yet told us).

With unification with the Northern Methodist Church according to the Oklahoma City plan (which would leave Southern Methodism substantially intact in the South proper and largely autonomous), we probably could stand successfully for the preservation of Methodism if this movement to wipe out all denominations should become increasingly aggressive; but if completely consolidated with a much larger body, there would be no telling into what we might be dragged in a few years. A World Conference looking toward the uniting of all denominations is at this time being arranged for, the preliminary meeting having already been held some months ago at Garden City, N. Y..

THE BETTER WAY.

Would it not be well for our pastors and congregations, instead of seeking to shape their own appointments, to pray that the Holy Spirit may direct in the matter? He presided over and guided the proceedings of the infant Church, and we doubt not that he would perform a like function in this day if his leadership were sought with an equal faith and a similar spirit of self-surrender and obedience. The cabinet room at an Annual Conference ought to be a place of much prayer, made holy by the conscious presence of the great Executive Head of the forces of redemption. The best place for any worker is where our Lord wants him to be.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, our gifted young pastor at Tupelo, Miss., says: "We are closing up what I believe to be a good year." Brother Bradley and Tupelo always have good years.

Brother Battle says that the work of arranging for entertaining the Louisiana Conference at Baton Rouge is going forward finely. The Capital City of this State never does things by halves.

The Annual Conferences in our territory are in sight. The Louisiana will meet in Baton Rouge on Nov. 22; the North Mississippi, at Winona, on Nov. 29, and the Mississippi, at Jackson, on Dec. 13.

Rev. W. S. Selman, of Mt. Picasant, Miss., in forwarding some subscriptions to the Advocate, says: "This charge will make the best report this fall that it has made in ten years." We like the ring of this message.

At Mississippi City on November 5, Mr. Bruce Ehen Verlander and Miss Mary Phoebe Martin were united in marriage, Rev. W. T. Griffin officiating. We congratulate the bride and groom and wish them much happiness.

Brother James H. Ramsey, a leading layman in our church at Houston, Miss., renews his subscription, commends the Advocate, and makes the following reference to his pastor: "Brother Raper has done a fine work here and is in high favor with the people."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomh reports that the ending of his quadrennium at Starkville, Miss., promises to measure up well, and that as he looks back over the last four years he has a good conscience as to his labors there. He has certainly wrought worthily in that field.

The handsome new pipe organ which has been purchased for the Pharr Chapel at Morgan City, La., is now being installed. This is one of the finishing achievements of Rev. C. C. Wier, who is winding up a notably successful four-year pastorate at Morgan City.

Writing from Hot Springs, Arkansas, a few days ago, Dr. Theo. Copeland said: "We have recently closed the greatest revival meeting this city ever had. I took 105 persons into my church. Rev. Burk Culpepper, who was with me, is a genius and a real revivalist."

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. J. E. Gray, of Logtown, Miss., for some subscriptions, forwarded on the 9th inst. Concerning his charge, Brother Gray says: "My work is in a fairly prosperous condition now, and the year promises to end well."

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Montpelier, Miss., has our thanks for some subscriptions from his charge and a few kindly words of commendation. We are pleased to know that his labors during the recent passing months have been crowned with a goodly measure of success.

In a business letter to our office, Rev. C. M. Chapman, of Rolling Fork, Miss., appends the following note: "My daughter has almost entirely recovered from her recent operation. The year's work here will close in a fairly good condition." We are pleased to have this cheering message from Brother Chapman.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Gulfport, Miss., writes: "Evangelist Klein is conducting a revival meeting at Biloxi for our pastor there, Dr. H. F. Tolle. Much interest is being manifested. Rev. J. L. Sells and N. B. Harmon have been assisting Pastor Meigs in a series of revival services at Bay St. Louis. Rev Robert Selby has lately been on the coast in the interest of Emory University."

Just as we are closing our forms, we are in receipt of a postal card from Rev. Paul M. Brown, of Natchitoches, La., which reads as follows: "We are in the midst of a great union revival here. We are having the largest crowds and the deepest interest in the history of Natchitoches. Ask your readers to pray for us. There have been up to the present 75 professions of religion."

Miss Ada McMillan, who resides with her sister, Mrs. J. W. Lockhart, at 826 Louisa Street, this city, has lately returned from a visit to relatives in Pittsburgh, Penn., to the delight of her many friends. Miss McMillan is a member of Second Church and is noted for her activity and liberality in promoting its interests. New Orleans Methodism has in its ranks no truer or more devoted worker than is she.

Rev. and Mrs. Jasper L. Smith, of Gallman, Miss., have lately given the officials and other friends in their charge a most delightful dining. The Editor was honored with an invitation to be present, accompanied with a generous offer to defray his railroad expenses to and from Gallman. We feel that we missed much by not being able to attend. Blessings on this faithful itinerant and his worthy helpmeet!

Since our last issue, the following friends, whose kindness has not been elsewhere mentioned, have brought us under obligations for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate: Rev. J. M. Boykin, Covington, La., 2; Rev. George G. Yeager, Fannin, Miss., 2; Rev. W. C. Carlisle, Guntown, Miss., 5; Rev. J. L. Lay, Indian Bayou, La., 6; Rev. S. E. Flurry, Philadelphia, Miss., 3; Brother M. W. Porter, Harrisonville, Miss., 2; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Corinth, Miss., 3.

The paper, entitled "Redemption according to St. Paul," by Rev. Olin Ray, who lately was graduated from the Candler School of Theology, which we have published in the Advocate in two installments, is, we think, a highly creditable discussion. It reflects honor upon the gifted young writer and indicates that our young ministers are being well and soundly taught in the Biblical Department of our new University. The view of the atonement set forth therein is thoroughly Scriptural and orthodox.

From a letter from Rev. W. W. Jones, of Lula, Miss., we take the following: "We are coming out pretty well here. The salary is out; the expense of repairing the parsonage is provided for; the new organ will be paid for by Conference, and I have about 5 tons of coal in hand for the winter. My greatest pull is on the benevolences." We dare say that Brother Jones will make the landing on the last item also. He is serving an excellent people and is doing it well. He has kindly consented to report the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference for the Advocate.

A dispatch from Rev. J. G. Snelling, of Homer, La., Chairman of the Evangelistic Committee of the Louisiana Conference, requests us to state that the evangelistic services that are to be conducted at night during the approaching Conference session will begin on Tuesday evening, Nov. 21, and that the preachers are urged to be present, if possible, from the start. These services will be in charge of Rev. R. P. Shuler, of Austin, Texas, and the singing will be led by Mr. J. Douglas Swagerty. It is hoped that they will be largely attended.

Rev. W. Fred Long, the genial and capable Sunday School Secretary of the interdenominational work in Mississippi, recently received a letter from a fellow-worker in Chicago from which we extract the following: "You know what a high-hearted man Mr. Warren is, and that he is always thinking kind thoughts of other people. He puts into our treasury (for the Sunday school work) several thousand dollars a year, and, at proper intervals, he has a right to name a life member to receive a certificate representing a thousand dollars as having been paid by him into the International Treasury. We are under instructions from him to-day to issue a life certificate to you, and it will be forthcoming as soon as possible." This is a high honor worthily bestowed.

From the Weekly Watchman of Franklin, La., of November 4, we take the following: "Rev. A. F. Vaughan has been holding services at the Methodist Church every night this week, which have been largely attended. His sermons have been strong for the cause of duty and religion and highly entertaining. This is Mr. Vaughan's fourth and last year in Franklin. He has made many friends here among all denominations, and he will go to the new field to which he may be assigned with the best wishes of everybody, because of the splendid service which he has rendered at this place."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey sends us a notice of a Missionary Institute to be held in Donaldsonville, La., Thursday of this week for near-by auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society. It is to be conducted by Frances Niebergall, the Conference President, and Mrs. R. H. Harper, who is the official head of the Children's work in Louisiana, both of New Orleans. The ladies of the Donaldsonville Church will serve luncheon at the noon hour, and friends in Plattenville, Vacherie, Burton, White Castle, Plaquemine, Gonzales, Burnside, Napoleonville, and Indian Village have been specially invited to be present. Among those who have been active in working up this institute are Mrs. W. S. Cary, the President, and Mrs. I. L. Tyree, the Corresponding Secretary, of the Donaldsonville Auxiliary.

Mrs. Lucinda Ann Gearheard died at her home in Lutcher, La., after a somewhat extended illness, on Wednesday, November 8. She was 67 years old, and she and Mr. Gearheard, her husband, had celebrated their fifty-first wedding day on October 29. They had been residents of Louisiana about ten years. The deceased is survived by her husband, Mr. J. M. Gearheard; four sons—Rev. A. J. Gearheard of New Orleans, Mr. A. G. Gearheard of Lutcher, Mr. O. E. Gearheard of Donner, La., and Dr. E. F. Gearheard of Seattle, Wn., and by three daughters—Mrs. F. D. Wilson of Oberlin, Ohio, Mrs. W. Francis of Omaha, Neb., and Mrs. T. W. Jones of Ramos, La. The obsequies were conducted in New Orleans, with Rev. W. W. Holmes officiating, and the interment was made here in the Masonic Cemetery. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them in their great sorrow.

Dr. H. F. Tolle, our pastor at Biloxi, Miss., writes as follows: "Our Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. J. L. Neill, of Jackson, Miss., is quarantined in his home. His little daughter is down with scarlet fever and he is not even permitted to send out mail from his residence; so all people that may be expecting to hear from him will have to wait until the quarantine is lifted. Anything that needs immediate attention regarding Sunday school matters may be taken up directly with me, and I will look after it the best I can. I am now in the midst of a revival, with Brother G. A. Klein, of Nashville, Tenn., doing the preaching, Brother Renshaw leading the singing, and Brother Grace playing the piano. They make a splendid team. We are just starting, but are hoping for and expecting a great meeting." We are sorry to learn of the illness in Brother Neill's home, and we pray that the Heavenly Father may watch over and soon restore to health the stricken one.

It is claimed that in the late election the following States joined the prohibition column: Montana, Nebraska, Michigan, Oregon, South Dakota, and Utah. The cause suffered defeat in California, Missouri, and Maryland. Woman suffrage was rejected in West Virginia and South Dakota.

The promptness with which Senator Vardaman threw himself into the campaign to prevent the repeal of the recently enacted anti-liquor laws in Mississippi was much appreciated by the prohibitionists of that State, though the Supreme Court finally interfered with the holding of the election.

LLOYD THOMPSON, the infant son of Brother William and Sister Fannie Calhoun, died at the home of his parents on Nov. 8, 1916, and went home to God. Lloyd, as he was called, was a bright, heautiful child. He was 11 months and 2 days old. His body was laid to rest at the Oak Vale Cemetery, in the Williamsonburg charge. As their pastor, we would say to Brother and Sister Calhoun, live so as to meet Lloyd in the sweet by and by at the right hand of God. R. T. NOLEN.

EMMA MARGARET, daughter of P. S. and Mirtie Carley, was born on August 24, 1912, and died at their farm home near Eden, Miss., on October 27, 1916, from diphtheria. Emma was a heautiful, sunny child of sweet disposition, and loved to sing. Only a few days ago she was singing at her play, "Will there be any stars in my crown?" And now she has gone from us to joln the angel choir singing around the throne and praising Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

SAMUEL DECATUR HOYET was born in 1851, in Mississippi, and died on Sept. 23, 1916. He was married in 1870 to Miss Olive Ballard. There were born of this union nine children (seven boys and two girls), three of whom preceded him to the better world. Brother Hoyet joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1871, under the ministry of Rev. David A. Givens. We buried him in the cemetery at James Chapel Church in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends. Brother Hoyet was wonderfully gifted in prayer. He was always glad to have his pastor visit his home. He was ill for only a short time. He said, "I am ready to go." Oh, that his children may be able to say the same thing when God shall call them! His good wife still survives him. She, too, is waiting to welcome death. He was rich in faith. Weep not, dear loved ones, for if you are faithful you will meet him in a better world. Therefore, be strong in the faith. His pastor,

JOHN FRANKLIN FOWLER was born in Alabama on July 8, 1864, and died at his home, near Hico, Lincoln Parish, La., on the morning of October 12, 1916. He was married to Miss Bedie English on Octoher 8, 1889. Of this union were born eight children, three of whom died in infancy. Four boys and one girl are still living—all grown and memhers of the Church. By the death of his father, and the marriage of the older brothers, Frank was left to take the lead in making a living for his mother and sisters when but a boy of ten years of age, and never dld a boy stand by mother and sisters more faithfully than did he. I had known Frank from our boyhood days. We worked in the field together, hunted and fished together, and after I became a preacher I was his pastor for eight years (two four-year terms). In all that time I never knew him to use an impure word, or do an evil deed. He joined the Methodist Church in early life, and I am sure the Church never had a truer member, nor the preacher a better friend. He was a kind, loving husband and father. A good man has gone to his reward. May the good Lord bless his family and help us all to so live that we shall meet this good man in heaven!

J. B. WILLIAMS.

MELLISSA SPURLOCK FOSTER was born on February 8, 1837, in Amite County, Mississippi; was married to Dr. David Walker Foster, on April 3, 1856, in Amite County, Mississippi, and died in St. Landry Parish, Louisiana, on September 29, 1916, in the eightieth year of her life. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom preceded her to heaven, while five are left to mourn their loss. She came of hardy stock, and it was well, for to her fell many hardships during the War in the Sixties when moving from place to place, for safety was necessary. She used her same strength and hardihood in constant labors by the side of her husband in his practice in visiting the sick and ministering to the suffering throughout the many years of her married life.

Just when she first united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not a matter of record, but it was in early life, and ever afterwards she was as true to Christ and her Church as it is possible for a human being to he, never for one moment quailing in service or devotion. Sweet of disposition, kindly in her dealings, her name is as "an ointment poured forth" throughout the Opelousas country.

Interested in missions, she became a life member of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and aided as far as possible in all the departments of church work.

During the forty-five years of her married life, her home was always the regular stopping-place of the ministers, and no doubt many to whom she ministered met her as she entered into her rest to greet her for the many kindnesses received at her hands.

She was taken suddenly ill with acute indigestion, while her son, Dr. Paul Foster, was away from home in a sanitarium in New Orleans, and was only semi-conscious after he arrived home in company with this writer, but her few words were full of cheer and faith. Nothing daunting, she faced her Redeemer with perfect assurance.

Rev. J. D. Harper, her beloved pastor, had visited her earller in the day, while she was fully conscious, and upon being asked what portion of the Scripture to read, she responded, "Bless the Lord, O my soul." Brother Harper then read the 103d Psalm and prayed fervently by her hedside.

A large concourse of people followed her remains from the Opelousas Church, after Brother Harper had officiated in a melting service, to the Protestant Cemetery, where she was laid to rest by the side of her honored and heloved husband, who had gone before some sixteen years ago.

She now sleeps the sleep of the just, waiting to respond to the first call of the trumpet on the resurrection morn, and thus will she and her loved ones be ever with the Lord!

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

The DOOR OF OPPORTUNITY swings both ways. One side is labeled "Push;" the other side, "Pull." Whether you enter from the "Push" side or the "Pull" side, you must have BUSINESS TRAINING in order to succeed. The BEST PLACE to get it is Draughon's Practical Business College at Shreveport, La.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other Ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time: by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful tollet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Handy in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick-acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

If Threatened With Tuberculosis

you must pay proper attention to diet and living conditions, and get plenty of rest and fresh air and good food. Many a life claimed by this affection might have been saved by timely attention to these matters. In many cases, however a rundown system needs assistance. Under these circumstances, try Eckman's Alterative, a lime treatment which has the unique quality of being easily assimilated by the average person.

Give Nature every chance, but strengthen your own chances by using this preparation, which often has effected beneficial results.

No undue claims are made for it, but it has helped in many cases. And it is safe to try, for it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climatic conditions.

Secure from your Druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double strength). Take this home and add to it 1 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a slight tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial.

VANCLEAVE (MISS.) CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are entering upon the last month of our third year's work on this charge. In many respects it has been a very pleasant year, but with it came some sad experiences. Our collections are considerably in arrears; the cry of "hard times" has become chronic with some folks, and a terrible storm on the 5th of July brought destruction with it; yet amid all these disasters we are hopeful of good reports in the final winding up of the year's work.

We have had some very good revivals on the work. Congregations have been on a par with any of those of the past years. Quite a number of conversions took place at these services; new family altars were erected; five persons were received on profession of faith, and three Sunday schools have been put in operation since our last writing. We have Sunday schools at all churches on the work and three at schoolhouse appointments, making eight schools within the bounds of this circuit.

Our camp meeting began at the time for which it was scheduled, and it was quite a success. While we had to do considerable work in order to bring about the accomplishment of all the things that pertain to a camp meeting, yet, by the help of a kind Providence, we succeeded. The people who tented and attended the services say it was the best camp meeting that has been held here for several years. Bro. Jones and Bro. Sells, of Wiggins, Miss., were there to begin the preaching, which, as every one knows, was of a high type. Brothers Grice, of Mentorum, and Carter, of the Americus charges, were present a part of the time and preached to the delight of all who heard them. Good singing, conducted by the home choir with the assistance of visiting friends, was a feature of the services that was not by any means overlooked—especially, the quartet, duets, and solos; all being sung by consecrated Christians. Results? There were sixteen conversions, some reclamations, and many new resolutions were made by those present. Only in eternity will the work accomplished be fully made known. We are planning larger things for another year with respect to the camp meeting. To God and the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ be all the glory, honor, and praise, both now and forever. Amen.

THE HABIT OF BEING HAPPY.

To keep oneself fairly happy is a duty that ought not to be shirked. Science is telling us these days that to get out of the habit of enjoyment is to get depressed in vitality and vigor, to weaken in efficiency, and to grow old before one's time. There is nothing like laughter—not empty-headed laughter, but the intelligent, wholesome, kindly-hearted kind—to keep people young and fresh and fit for business and the obligations of living. Of course this is a prescription not easy to live up to always, but there is no reasonable excuse for not trying to do it. Sometimes it is just about as easy to be happy as to be miserable if one makes up his mind to it, and there is no doubt at all as to which pays the best.—Onward.

AS A MATTER OF INFORMATION.

From the Vanderbilt Alumnus (October, 1916), we quote the following:

"A sermon by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, the senior Bishop of the M. E. Church, South, in the University Chapel, and an address to the students, faculty and friends of the University by Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, marked the opening of Vanderbilt's new year. The formal opening was October 2, about two weeks later than usual. This date was agreed on by Vanderbilt University and the George Peabody College for Teachers to facilitate their plans of affiliation.

"The most encouraging reports come from all departments of the University. There are more new students than last year, and some of the deans have even insisted that their freshmen are better prepared. Dean Tolman of the School of Arts and Science reports 181 new students to whom orders for matriculations have already been issued as against 156 during last year. 'We expect 200 new men for academic and engineering work before the end of the year,' he has reported. Dean Keeble, of the School of Law, reports thirty-seven new men as against twenty of last year, thirty-three of the thirty-seven being freshmen. The School of Law seems to have caught the drift of the West Campus pretty soon after moving. They report one young lady among their entering students. Dean Tillett reports remarkable progress in the School of Religion. They show an enrollment of forty-two this year, while the total at this time last year was thirty-four. Of these, two are from China, three from Japan, and one from Mexico. Methodist, Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian, Christian, Congregational, Baptist, and Friends are among the denominations represented."

Our views on the Vanderbilt matter are too well known to require any word from us now. We desire simply to note the complete diversion of the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University from the purpose of its founders. We do not wish that department any harm. We simply note that it is no longer a place for our own ministerial candidates. The purpose of our theological schools is to prepare our men for efficient service in the ministry of the Methodist Church. We want men grounded in our doctrines and acquainted with our own history. We want men versed in our peculiar polity and in love with it.

We beseech our Bishops, our trusted leaders, men whom we have been accustomed to follow, men whom we revere—we beseech our Bishops to refrain from the doing of anything which could be interpreted to commend our young preachers to schools other than our own. Both laymen and preachers who are bending their backs to the establishment of Emory and Southern Methodist Universities have a right to expect and to ask this.—Texas Christian Advocate.

A NOTE FROM ITTABENA, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: We have recently closed what I think a very helpful protracted meeting here at Ittabena. It was much more than an ordinary meeting. Dr. T. B. Holloman, of the Mississippi Conference, preached the first four sermons. A fine expositor of the Holy Scriptures is the Doctor.

Then Brother John Ritchey dropped in and preached once. He gave us a strong, vigorous sermon, and did it inside of thirty minutes. Then Brother V. C. Curtis came to our help and stayed through the meeting, which lasted fourteen days. It had never been my pleasure to be with Curtis in a meeting before. I was delighted with his work, as were my people. He is one of the very best of our pastor-evangelists. He can come back.

We had another valuable helper in the person of my dear friend, Mrs. S. C. Taylor, of Cleveland, Miss. We all regretted that she was taken sick in the early days of the meeting and had to go home; but she held three or four afternoon services with the women. The work of this consecrated woman will abide.

The Wisdom sisters, who are attracting so much attention throughout the Church, commenced with us in the very first services, and stayed with us through the meeting. They are truly wonderful singers. Their modesty and consecration added much to the merit of their wonderful gospel singing. People came from afar to hear them.

Our presiding elder dropped in to give us a good word, and helped to make things go. The people of Ittabena think much of him, and wonder how it is that he has dwindled down into a presiding elder. He is doing a very fine work indeed on the Winona District, and, despite the short crops in this section, his district will make a good showing at Conference. For the past two years the "cotton bugs" and wet Julys have cut our cotton crop until the two years together made just about half a crop, and when it takes two years to get half of what one usually makes, you can begin to see what work it is going to take to meet our church finances.

Doctor, continue to battle for the right kind of Methodist union, or "unification." A mistake in this respect will hurt Southern Methodism for fifty years or more. Better bunch the negroes to themselves, giving them all the good-will, counsel, fraternity, and prayers that they will allow, but letting them run their own business. This would be best for them as well as us, for they will never make the effort to be what they can be, and should be, until they feel that they are left to work out their destiny alone. They have been "crutched" along, until they know not their own strength. Turn them loose and they may run with the smoothness and swiftness of a black snake in the spring of the year. Any kind of church housekeeping with them will turn thousands of the young life, and older ones, too, from us. Whether it be right or wrong, it may be "death in the pot" to Southern Methodism to adopt a one-church policy for the two races. May the good Lord protect us!

Doctor, I am just in from planting in the back-yard with my own hands four fine fruit trees (two of them apple trees, and two of them peach), for which I paid two long green one-dollar bills. And I want to warn the preacher who shall have the temerity to turn his cow in one them, if I can I will "HANT" him, and the women of the church will fire him forthwith.

I hope to see you soon at the annual meeting-place.

W. S. SHIPMAN, Pastor.

CALOMEL TO-DAY SICK TO-MORROW

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

COMMENDATORY OF REV. H. W. MAY.

Whereas, our beloved presiding elder, the Rev. H. W. May, has completed his quadrennium on the Alexandria District, and, under the law of our Church, must be sent to another appointment, therefore be it resolved, by the officials of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria in fourth quarterly conference assembled:

1. That Brother May, by his exemplary Christian life, by his painstaking attention to the details of his office, by his dignified and manly bearing toward the man outside the Church, by his willingness both to teach and to learn, by his practical direction of and co-operation with the great movements of the day, by his brotherly conduct towards the lay membership and by his sympathetic co-operation with the ministers of his district in solving the difficult problems that confronted them, has proved himself a worthy representative and leader of the cause of Christ.

2. That by building the foundations of the Church broadly and deeply, and by recognizing the wonderful opportunities in this district of varied and rich resources, as is shown by the building of 12 churches and 7 parsonages during the quadrennium, he has put the Methodist Church in the Alexandria District in a position to make great strides in the future.

3. That the Church has prospered under his guidance—its membership has shown a gratifying increase, it has paid more for ministerial support, and is beginning to see and to meet its greater financial obligations towards the benevolences, and its greater spiritual obligations toward the unconverted and the unchurched.

4. That we commend him for his past services, and we wish for him suitable opportunities for his work in the future. We feel that we are losing a friend and brother on whom we could rely and we shall miss him. May he continue to be the bountiful recipient of the blessings of the Almighty!

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of the Conference, a copy presented to Brother May, a copy published in Town Talk, and another sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

I hereby certify that the above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the members of the quarterly conference of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, La., on this the 6th day of November, A D., 1916.

Recording Steward.

WHAT EMINENT MEDICAL MEN SAY ABOUT ALCOHOL.

Sir Frederick Treves.

The noted physician of King Edward VII, Sir Frederick Treves, testifies that "Alcohol is distinctly a poison and the limitation of its use should be as strict as that of any other kind of poison. It is not an appetizer. And even in small quantities it hinders digestion."

Professor Mendal, of Yale University.

Professor Mendel testifies as follows: "Alcohol is a heart depressant; it lowers one's resistence to contagious disease." This testimony by Professor Mendel is re-enforced by the testimony of the highest medical authority on contagion and immunity.

Professor Metchnikoff, of Pasteur Institute, the Scientist.

"Besides its deleterious influence on the nervous system and other important parts of the body, alcohol has a harmful action on the phagocytes, the agents of natural defense against infective microbes."

Prof. Chittenden, of Yale University.

Professor Chittenden is one of the greatest Physiological Chemists in America. He says: "Alcohol presents a dangerous side, wholly wanting in carbo-hydrates and fats. The latter are simply burned up to carbonic acid and water or are transformed into glycogen or fat, but alcohol, though more easily burned, is at times liable to obstruct in some measure at least the oxidative processes of the liver and probably other processes too, thereby throwing into circulation bodies, such as uric acid, which are inimical to health; a fact that at once tends to draw a distinct line of demarkation between alcohol and the too non-nitrogenious foods."—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

"The only life worth living in the long run is a life of love and service to others."

PAINE COLLEGE.

Paine College has had an unusually good opening. The students are here from various parts of the South—Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Florida—nearly two hundred in all—and the boarding accommodations are being taxed to the utmost.

There will be about fifty theological students when they are all in after the meeting of the C. M. E. Conferences.

With the return of Miss Lula Crim to the institution the teacher-training department has been given fresh impetus. There are twenty-five or more young women in training and, in addition to the theoretical work provided, they are being given ample opportunity for observation in the demonstration school, which is also under Miss Crim's immediate supervision.

Three new teachers have been added to our faculty: Professor Peyton of Louisville, Ky., has the chair of science; Miss Maxie Harris of Atlanta University has the Latin, Physical Geography and Community Civics. A new matron, Miss Mary Thomas, of New Orleans University, is doing good work in caring for the health of the students, supervising their home life, and providing the meals for the entire boarding department.

Mrs. MacDonell and Mrs. Ross, of the Woman's Council, visited the institution just before the opening. They went carefully into every detail of the work of Paine Annex, seeking to make ample provision for the needs of the young women and teachers who would board in Bennett Hall and for the work of the industrial department.

Several delegates from Paine College attended this past summer the Student Conferences held in Atlanta and King's Mountain, N. C., for the Young Women's and Young Men's Christian Association, respectively, as a result of which both these organizations are taking on new life.

The Missionary Society, which has as its aim the fostering of interest in the African mission projected by Bishop Lambuth and Dr. John W. Gilbert (the latter a member of Paine College faculty), has again been organized and gives promise of good work. This society provided in its constitution that one-half of all funds collected shall go to the African field and that the other half be used as scholarships for students in training for foreign mission work.

We have had one unfortunate occurrence in the loss of our barn on October 28. The building, quite a good deal of corn, "roughage" for winter use, all the farm interests and the harness were lost. Through the presence of mind of two students the mules escaped, with only a slight injury to one. To those outsiders who watched the fire it meant little, of course—"only one of Paine College's old outhouses burned"—but to the institution it meant a total loss of about $500. The building, poor as it was, will have to be replaced, and new harness and farm tools bought.

A beautiful spirit of co-operation, mutual sympathy, and helpfulness seems to pervade the entire institution. We are looking forward to a good year of work and growth.

May we not have the sympathetic concern, the prayers, the substantial support of our Church at large in the work we are trying to do? It is a work that makes for mutual respect between the races, for the discharge of obligations toward a people who have served us long and faithfully; it is a response to a God-given opportunity and privilege to help make a better South and a better nation.

D. E. ATKINS, President.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman, and likewise every man, could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags," and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and refreshing the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

THE LOOM OF LIFE

It is a solemn thought that every one of us carries with him a mystical loom, and we are always weaving—weave, weave, weave—this robe which we wear, every thought a thread of the weft. We weave it as the spider does its web out of its own entrails, if I might so say. We weave it, and we dye it, and we cut it and we stitch it, and then we put it on and wear it, and it sticks to us. Like a snail that crawls about your garden patches and makes its shell by a process of secretion from out his own substance, so you and I are making that mysterious solemn thing we call character moment by moment. It is our own self modified by our actions. Character is the precipitate from the stream of conduct which, like the Nile delta, gradually rises solid and firm above the present river, and confines its flow.—Alexander Maclaren

NO NEED FOR SELF-IMPOVERISHMENT.

God will meet every need of our life, if in faith we ask him to, and put at his disposal all that we have. Some of our needs go unmet simply because we fail at one or the other of these two points: either we do not believingly ask him to meet the need, or we do not, by complete surrender of all that we are and all that we have, give him the necessary materials to work with. He needs only the materials that we already have—let us be sure of that. It matters not how poor and scanty our resources are: if they, together with ourselves, in faith are placed unreservedly in God's hands for his using, every need that can ever at any time confront us will be met by him exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think. God proved this when he met Jesus' need the day that he used five loaves and two fishes to feed five thousand. He has proved it as unmistakably in the lives of his trusting children countless times since then. To live in unmet need, therefore, is both unnecessary and wrong. To be anxious or worried about any need of our life is unnecessary and wrong. God invites us, instead, to live the life of unceasing abundance.—Sunday School Times.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Skin Diseases

such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. Ask your druggist for it. 50c a box. By mail from SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

MERIDIAN WESLEY HOUSE THROWN OPEN.

Every Methodist Church in Meridian was well represented yesterday (Oct. 3, 1916) afternoon at the formal opening of the Wesley House in Tuxedo Park, when not only the signal for fall and winter activities was given, but the kindergarten teacher, Miss Duncan, was introduced and a visit made to the little cottage next door, where she will conduct the kindergarten school that is an addition to the work of the Wesley House this year.

The keynote to the all-pervading Christian spirit that governs the big heart of the Methodist women in their labors was made manifest in the inspiring talk that was prayerfully made by Mrs. J. R. Whitaker, president of the City Mission Board. Mrs. Whitaker touched lightly on the work that had been done, realizing, doubtless, that the Wesley House speaks for itself, which it does. But she asked the further co-operation of every one to be able to further the work successfully. Miss Womack, the deaconess, made an interesting talk concerning the home; so did Miss Duncan, the new kindergarten teacher, and Miss Germany, the matron of the nursery.

Opens with Twenty-One.

Miss Duncan said she was pleased to announce that she opened the school the previous day with 21 pupils, and that the outlook was that they would be able to accommodate all that would care to attend. A visit to the adjacent cottage, where the day nursery and kindergarten will be housed, proved interesting. Several little children were there—nine of them. One little toddler was fast asleep in a snow-white crib. All were clean and sweet and showed happy faces. In the yard were fine swings and sand boxes, all well patronized by healthy looking children.

Wesley House is a cottage well arranged, with a spacious hallway running clear through to a rear porch from the front, where also is a broad porch. Rooms are on either side. One side is given to the bedrooms and bath for the matron and helpers. On the opposite side, are the classroom, the dining room and kitchen, and the domestic science hall. In speaking of the sewing classes that would soon begin, Miss Rena Stuart, one of the volunteer teachers said last year they had a class of 90. This was divided into four grades. This is just a mere insight into the great work done in Wesley House.

The Day Nursery, which is a wonderful help to the mothers who are compelled to work in the mills all day, is governed by these rules: No child from a family in which contagious or infectious diseases have been, can be admitted. No child under six months or over nine years can be admitted. The sum of five cents for a day, or a portion of a day, is charged and must be paid daily. Physical examinations are made of all children entering. Children must be brought clean. Every child is under the direct care of the deaconess and matron of the department. Each patron must sign a card agreeing to comply with all rules before being allowed to enter their child.

A notation was made on the blackboard showing the interest and co-operation given this settlement home in the month of September, this being $75 for furnishing kindergarten, M. E. Warren, of Exeter, Cal.; $2 per month pledged by Truth Seekers' Society of East End Methodist Church for kindergarten supplies; blocks and boxes for nursery by Miss Duncan; boxes and blocks, Central Methodist Church, East End Church, Meridian, and Forest and Meadville.

DAY OF PRAYER.

Friday, November 17, has been appointed as a Day of Prayer for Foreign Missions. It is urged that this time may be truly a day, for an entire day is sureiy not too iong a time in which to focus our prayers on the great non-Christian world. We would also emphasize not only the time to be spent, but the fact that it is to be a day of prayer—not a date set for speeches and stirring missionary addresses, but a time for a great outpouring of the heart in constant, unceasing prayer, a time for sending direct petitions to the Almighty Father that the great unevangelized world may come to know Him, whom to know aright is life eternal.

Remember November 17, a Day of Prayer for Foreign Missions.

MISS LIZZIE WILSON, MISSIONARY TO MEXICO.

On Sunday morning, August 27, 1916, at El Paso, Texas, Miss Lizzie Wilson passed to the life above. Heart trouble and other complications were the cause of her death. Miss Wilson was for twenty-two years the principal of Palmore College, Chihuahua, Mexico. Her funeral was quiet and simple. Her intimate friends spoke parting words of love. Her favorite hymns were sung. Her grave, under the trees of Evergreen Cemetery, was covered with flowers.

GOOD FOR MISSISSIPPI!

The Port Gibson District has fifteen auxiliaries. Fourteen observed the Week of Prayer last year, and all expect to do so this year. The Jackson District has more auxiliaries than charges, and there are three charges without societies; but plans are laid to organize these.

LIVES LIKE STARS.

It is not what the best men do, but what they are, that constitutes their truest benefaction to their fellow-men. Certainly, in our own little sphere, it is not the most active people to whom we owe the most. It is the lives like the stars, which simply pour down on us the calm light of their bright and faithful being, up to which we look, and out of which we gather the deepest calm and courage.—Phillips Brooks.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach-headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes. Put an end to stomach trouble forever by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder. It's the quickest, surest stomach doctor in the world. It's wonderful.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

A NOTE FROM WINONA, MISS.

Editor Advocate: A few items from this corner of the Lord's vineyard may not be out of place.

We are now having "Conference" served for breakfast, dinner and supper and also between meals. Not only Methodists but other denominations are looking forward to its coming with interest and pleasure. A new furnace is being installed at a cost of $500, the pipe organ will be put in fine tune, the talented Wisdom Sisters are expected here a part of the time, and everything will be done to make this session of the North Mississippi Conference one of the most pleasant and profitable that has ever been held.

Brother Duncan has already proven his ability as a good pastor and a helpful, strong gospel preacher; so we know he will also prove an ideal Conference host. I am sure that in spite of the boll weevil and hard times, this district will make a most excellent report.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of the district, under the wise leadership of Mrs. Pond, have recently spent about $140 renovating and repapering the district parsonage, which was a much-needed improvement and adds greatly to its appearance.

Mrs. LEE LIPSCOMB.

WOODVILLE (MISS.) CIRCUIT.

The quarterly meeting was held at White's schoolhouse. After preaching and dinner, we had the longest conference that I ever attended, and the liveliest one. Finances were greatly behind, and I attempted to stir the brethren and succeeded; so they talked out in the meeting, and I gave them the full right of way, with good results. Reports were left open, and the next day White's raised its balance on salaries and got a fair start on the benevolences. The stewards of Bethel assumed what was due there on salaries. With this impulse, we are hoping that other places will come up by the Annual Conference. On Sunday we had fine audiences and a good day, with two preaching services. Brother Ellis, from Woodville, preached an excellent sermon in the afternoon. Brother Herring is finishing up the second year of his second term on this work. He is a deeply religious man and a faithful preacher. There is need for a church building at White's, where they have a good organization in a good and thrifty community. In the evening I came into Woodville in Brother McKithen's car, and began a meeting with Brother Ellis, which is to run over next Sunday. We have started off well.—M. B. Sharbrough, P. E.

BOGALUSA AND METHODISM.

Dear Mr. Editor: My attention has been called to Brother Holmes's elaborate write-up of the New Orleans District in which he incidentally mentions Bogalusa and the Methodist Church here. It has occurred to me that the outside world might be interested to know something about the outlook for Methodism in this "city off unto itself."

Bogalusa has, within the past few years, grown from a pine forest to a city with a population of about 12,000. Naturally there have been many changes, and everything has been in an unsettled condition, but the days of uncertainty as to the permanency of the city have passed. Recently one large paper mill was put into operation, and just two weeks ago, in the presence of about 5000 people, Mr. Wood, the paper mill king of the United States, took the spade in hand and broke the ground for the largest paper mill and paper box factory in the South. The Methodist pastor was called upon to invoke the blessings of Almighty God upon this great enterprise. The foundation of the building for this enterprise is now being laid. Mr. W. A. Sullivan, a man so full of faith and plans for a great city here that he can do anything, stated that he had been working steadily for five years with Northern capitalists for this institution, which will insure the future of Bogalusa. He also stated that other manufacturing plants would be located here in the near future.

Some time this month the foundation will be laid for a modern and well equipped Y. W. C. A. building, the counterpart of the magnificent Y. M. C. A. structure here now.

Just a few weeks ago the property holders of Bogalusa voted a $300,000 bond issue for the erection of five new school buildings and other civic improvements. Bogalusa is indeed here to stay, and if the Louisiana Conference does not have a strong Methodist Church here it will be its own fault. The city has been building up in every direction, but the time is near when a suitable site for a new central church building can be decided on.

In conclusion, I will say that at this time the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. However, the seed of truth are being sown, and we confidently expect a rich harvest to be reaped as the fruit of our labor. While the financial showing will not be what we and the good people here would like, we have received many tokens of love and good will since coming here, and all things have been made easy and pleasant.

T. J. WARLICK,
Bogalusa, La. Pastor.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

MATHERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We are rounding out our second year's work on this circuit. Here we have found many good people, and they have worked hand in hand with their pastor in laboring for the Master. During the present year a meeting has been held at each of the five churches on the circuit. We were ably assisted by Revs. J. L. Decell, C. A. Schultz, L. L. Harger, and J. T. Abney, and Rev. J. N. Broadway preached twice for us. The most visible results of the entire meeting were at our home church, where we were assisted by Rev. C. A. Schultz. The attendance upon the services was good from the beginning. Much of value as regards the spiritual uplift of our people was brought about. We have held on to many of the things that were accomplished. This year we have had quite a number of persons to reform their lives, and twenty-two members have been received into the Church. We are about ready to begin the erection of an additional room to our church at Poplar Springs.

Brother Leggett was with us last Saturday and Sunday (Oct. 27, 28), and held our fourth quarterly conference. The fact that he was closing up his quadrennium of service as our presiding elder made us feel sad. We deeply regret the fact that we have to give him up. The influence of his personal character, as well as his official character as a district superintendent, has been for the advancement of the Church and the kingdom of Christ on this circuit, and the remembrance of his good works will remain long after he has gone.

The following resolution was adopted by our quarterly conference:

Whereas, in the providence of God, Rev. J. T. Leggett has served as our presiding elder for the past four years; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we most sincerely appreciate his sermons for the great spiritual and mental food contained therein.

2. That we are indebted to him for the kindness, patience, and brotherly love with which he has presided over our quarterly conferences during the past four years of his able administration.

3. That we regret very much to give him up, but having to do so we commend him to any field of labor that he may be assigned to, and we pray that the benediction of Jesus Christ, the great head of the Church, may rest upon him and his labors.

We are planning to finish up the year's work in the best way we possibly can. D. E. VICKERS, P. C.

NONE WITHOUT CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS.

Thanksgiving, like supplication, has its basis in a recognition of our dependence upon God. The latter springs out of a sense of need and a belief in the ability of the Heavenly Father to come to one's succor and assistance. The former is the expression of the appreciation that one feels for mercies and blessings of which one has been the recipient in one's weakness and want. Both are essential elements of true prayer, and each should have a large part in every normal Christian life. The privilege and duty of giving thanks and praise to our beneficent Creator is strongly set forth in the Holy Scriptures. The Book of Psalms is largely made up of hymns voicing gratitude to the great King of kings for the manifestations of his love and favor, and the writings of St. Paul, Christianity's ablest exponent and advocate, are full of exhortations to be thankful. For instance, he thus enjoined the Thessalonians: "In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."

Nowhere on earth is there a human being who is without reason for being grateful to the great Infinite One who brought the universe into existence and who upholds all things by the word of his power. Human life itself is the gift of his gracious hand, and it is inestimably rich in its possessions and possibilities. How splendid is man's present physical inheritance! For him was builded this magnificent planet, the wealth and beauties and glories of which "beggar all description." All its creatures, products, and forces were designed to minister to his comfort, happiness, and welfare. His are its glorious skies, its majestic mountains, its noble rivers, its broad oceans, its fertile valleys, its waving harvests, its fauna and flora, the treasures of its forests and mines, and the mighty agencies, such as steam, electricity, and magnetism, that abound in nature to do his bidding. All the children of men have a share in this noble estate, though its benefits are not as equally distributed as the Heavenly Father perhaps intended they should be. But notwithstanding any inequalities that may exist, no one has yet been able to monopolize the air or the sunshine or the water, or to transfer into his own possession the health and strength and years of existence vouchsafed to others. Personality is an individual thing before God, and he has so fixed it that its noblest endowments are safeguarded and preserved. So, when the poorest among us take stock of the physical blessings that have come to them during the past year, they are certain to find that the Heavenly Father has not been unmindful of them and that they are included among the beneficiaries of his unfailing goodness.

But it is not for the physical man alone that God has made provision. All the needs of his spiritual nature have been abundantly provided for in Christ. For his guilt, there is pardon; for his defilement, there is cleansing; for the conflict in his soul, there is sweet peace; for weakness, there is strength; instead of doubt, there springs up faith, and eyes hitherto blinded are opened to spiritual vision. Nor is this yet all; the one thus regenerated may also have fellowship with the risen Christ and be kept and guided by the Holy Spirit. He may, furthermore, have in his heart an unspeakable joy and find a constant delight in a helpful ministry among his fellow-men.

If we are the children of God, surely the year now passing has brought us not a few spiritual blessings for which we should ascribe praises to the Most High. Shall we not thank him for his patience with our shortcomings; for his willingness to pardon us when he had disobeyed his commandments; for sustaining us amid our sorrows; for the whisperings of his love; for any progress that we have made in holiness, and for any service that we may have been able to render others in his blessed name? As the soul is more valuable than the body, these things are worth more than food and drink and raiment, as indispensably necessary as the latter are. As bad as physical poverty is, spiritual destitution is vastly worse.

Still another thing for which we should be profoundly grateful to the Heavenly Father is for our future inheritance in Christ. Man was not made merely to inhabit the earth for a few years and then to pass away into nothingness. His real home, if God's will is fulfilled in him, is in the sky. There he will attain to a grandeur and a dignity unknown to this lower sphere of existence. There all sufferings will cease, and all losses will be recompensed. As the poet has sung, "Earth hath no sorrow that heaven doth not heal." For the sweet prospect of reaching that fair and glorious land, and the fact that we have nearly passed another milestone on the journey to it, let us pour forth ardent praises to Him who has promised to bring us into heaven at last, that we may abide with him 'neath its cloudless skies forevermore.

> "What no human eye hath seen,
> What no mortal ear hath heard,
> What on thought hath never been
> In its noblest flights conferred—
> This hath God prepared in store
> For his people evermore!"

BISHOP W. B. MURRAH, D.D., LL.D.

Mississippi's own Bishop who will preside over the approaching Annual Conferences in that State. Bishop Murrah was once the popular pastor of the Methodist Church in Winona, the meeting-place of the North Mississippi Conference, and he resided for many years in Jackson, where, on December 13, the Mississippi Conference will assemble, his friends there being numbered by the thousand. These are happy coincidences in the Bishop's first official visit to the Conferences of the commonwealth with which nearly the whole of his career has been identified, and he will be given a heartfelt and enthusiastic reception.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

On November 18, President Woodrow Wilson issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

"It has long been the custom of our people to turn in the fruitful autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to the Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us and the nation.

"The year that has elapsed since we last observed our day of thanksgiving has been rich in blessings to us as a people, but the whole face of the world has been darkened by war. In the midst of our peace and happiness, our thoughts dwell with painful disquiet upon the struggles and sufferings of the nations at war, and of the people upon whom war has brought disaster, without choice or possibility of escape on their part. We cannot think of our own happiness without thinking of their pitiful distress.

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do appoint Thursday, the thirtieth of November, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, and urge and advise the people to resort to their several places of worship on that day to render thanks to Almighty God for the blessings of peace and unbroken prosperity which he has bestowed upon our beloved country in such unstinted measure.

"And I also urge and suggest as our duty, in this day of peace and abundance, to think in deep sympathy of the stricken peoples of the world upon whom the curse and terror of war has so pitilessly fallen, and to contribute out of our abundant means to the relief of their sufferings.

"Our people could in no better way show their real attitude toward the present struggle of the nations than by contributing out of their abundance to the relief of the suffering which war has brought in its train.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington, this seventeenth day of November, in the year of our Lord, 1916, and of the independence of the United States the 141st. WOODROW WILSON,

"By the President:

"ROBERT LANSING,

"Secretary of State."

THANKS FOR ALL.

Nannie J. Rea.

Give thanks to God for sun and rain,
And summer's fruit-crowned trees;
For springtime's bright unfolding buds,
And autumn's garnered sheaves.

Give thanks to God for darkened days,
When wintry winds blow high;
When leafless trees stand bleak and lone,
Beneath a sunless sky.

Give thanks for griefs that seem to march
Like marshaled hosts along;
Oftimes in midst of blackest night,
Is born the sweetest song.

Give grateful thanks for all that comes;
Sun, cloud, joy, grief and pain;
For in our God's eternal plan,
Each one shall have its gain.

—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE BEST OUTLET FOR THANKFULNESS.

The best outlet for our thankfulness is to try to make others happy. Selfishness has no songs for this day, but he who follows the Christ will live for his fellow-men, as the best way to live for and to praise his God. We may not only on this Thanksgiving Day scatter the sunshine of joy and gladness, but make every day of the year full of abounding blessedness.—Rev. Edwin Whittier Caswell.

THE BLESSING OF THE DIVINE PRESENCE.

Are you a disciple of the Lord Jesus? If so, He says to you, "I am with you always." That overflows all the regrets of the past and all the possibilities of the future, and most certainly includes the present. Therefore, at this very moment, as surely as our eyes rest on this page, so surely is the Lord Jesus with you. "I am" is neither "I was," nor "I will be." It is always abreast of our lives, always encompassing us with salvation. It is a splendid, perpetual "now."—Frances Ridley Havergal.

THE LORD IS GOOD.

The Lord is good. Sometimes we forget this. Sometimes we feel it. Always we know it. Very few people are really skeptical as to the goodness, the loving-kindness of the great God who is at the heart of things, who is at the heart of the whole universe as its Author and Upholder. We pity the man who has lost all faith in goodness and in God. The Lord is good. Let us fix this thought more firmly in our minds than ever before. And because he is good we owe him gratitude. We receive his blessings, therefore we ought to thank him. As some one has well said, "Thankfulness is politeness toward God." Thanksgiving ought to be a habit. It ought to be annual, not in the sense of occurring once in November, but annual in the sense of extending the whole year through. Paul says, "In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—New York Observer.

A PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING.

Ralph Wells Keeler.

There is no home but what has something for which to thank God on Thanksgiving Day. The experiences of the year may have brought heavy burdens. Sorrow may have made heavy hearts. Sickness may have worn out the bodies of those who have ministered with loving-kindness. Death may have brought heart-break. But through it all God's love and care have been the same. Looking back over the days and nights that seemed endless at the time, there is a something that we would not have missed. In the secret communion of our soul there is a strength that we knew not twelve months ago. Out of the living of the year has come spiritual development. We know God better. We have closer fellowship with Jesus Christ. In a larger sense than ever before we know whom we have believed. Let us, therefore, count our blessings. Let us be glad that we have a faith that sustains in every storm. Let us rejoice and be exceedingly happy, because we have Jesus Christ as Lord and Friend.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

REJECTED BLESSINGS.

No wonder so many of us are so poor in spiritual things. To our doors evermore come the heavenly messengers, their hands laden with rich blessings, which they wish to give to us. But we are so intent on our earthly ambitions that we do not see them, nor open our doors to them; and waiting long in vain, they at last turn sadly away, leaving us unblessed in our poverty. If we would but train ourselves to take whatever gift God sends to us, we should soon become rich. God's blessings are ever at our doors. He is the giving God. The trouble with us is, that we do not always recognize the blessings when they are offered us. Some of the richest of them come in forms of pain, struggle and sorrow. Let us learn to accept God's gifts, whether they shine in joy or are veiled in shadows.—J. R. Miller, D.D.

METHODISM IN WINONA.

By Rev. W. N. Duncan.

The Methodist Church of Winona, Miss., was organized in 1859. The first house of worship was erected in 1860, having been moved from old Middleton, a village two miles west of Winona. For the first ten years the membership was small, and with difficulty regular preaching services were maintained. In 1871 the Sunday school was organized, and within the next three or four years a more commodious building was erected. Bishop W. B. Murrah, who is to preside at the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference, was the pastor here for four years, his term of service beginning in 1882. In 1898, while Rev. G. H. Lipscomb was the efficient pastor, the present brick structure, which could not be duplicated for less than $20,000, was erected.

Twice already the North Mississippi Conference has met in Winona. It was held there in 1887, with Bishop J. C. Keener as president, and Rev. J. M. Wyatt as pastor; and again in 1901, with Bishop H. C. Morrison as president, and Rev. J. C. Park as pastor. The Church now has a membership of three hundred and sixty-five, having had thirty-four additions during the present year.

REV. W. N. DUNCAN,
Host of the North Mississippi Conference.

William Noah Duncan, son of Andrew Jefferson and Frances Rainey Duncan, was born in Hardeman County, Tennessee, Nov. 20, 1875. His early educational advantages were confined to the public schools of his native State. Later he attended the High School at Kossuth, Miss., for three years.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, AT WINONA, MISS.,
In Which the 47th Session of the North Mississippi Conference
Will Meet on November 29th.

In July of 1897 he was licensed to preach by Heslep R. Tucker, presiding elder of the Corinth District. In the fall of 1899 he entered Millsaps College, from which he was graduated in 1905 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While attending college he was called to serve as a supply pastor two different years. From February to December of 1900 he traveled the Tyro Circuit in Tate County, and from February to December of 1903 he traveled the Kosclusco Circuit in Attala County. At Winona in 1901 he was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Morrison, and at Grenada in 1905 he was ordained a local elder by Bishop Hoss. At the latter Conference he was admitted on trial into the traveling connection and was returned to the Pickens Circuit, which charge he had served the previous year as a supply pastor. Since his admission into the North Mississippi Conference he has been given the following appointments: Shaw and Boyle, Durant, Batesville, Senatobia, Holly Springs, and Winona.

Brother Duncan was married on September 20, 1905, to Miss Carrie Sue Foose of Tchula, Miss., who is an ideal pastor's wife and who had been to him a valuable helper in his ministerial labors.

As a preacher, Brother Duncan scarcely has a superior in the North Mississippi Conference. Well educated, studious, possessed of a fine presence, and a forceful and impressive delivery, his pulpit work is of a high order, and he gives promise of large usefulness in the future. It goes without saying that this gifted young pastor will leave nothing in his power undone to make the approaching session of the Conference both a pleasant and profitable one.

REV. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

Presiding Elder of the Winona District, in Whose "Diocese" the Forty-seventh Session of the North Mississippi Conference Will be Held.

Rev. Lee McDonald Lipscomb was born near Spartanburg, S. C., and, with his parents, James W. and Jeannette Lipscomb, moved to Winston County, Mississippi, when about seven years of age. He was educated at the Southern University at Greenboro, Ala., at which place he was married to Miss Nannie Louise DuBois on December 20, 1893, Rev. John Keener, then President of that institution, performing the ceremony. He was admitted into the traveling connection by the North Mississippi Conference in 1891, and has served the following charges: Sidon, Vaiden, Carrollton, Courtland, Coldwater, Senatobia, Durant, the Columbus District, New Albany, Sardis, Booneville, and the Winona District, on which he is closing his first year. Brother Lipscomb possesses a fine physique and is a man of genial and lovable personality. He is devotedly attached to the Church and ever carries its interests on his heart. He is pre-eminently a preacher, and as an expositor of the Word is perhaps quite the peer of any minister in Mississippi. He is most fortunate in having a helpmeet who is literary in her tastes, and who fully sympathizes with his aims and purposes. Together, they constitute a team that would be a valuable asset to any Conference.

MR. HUBERT S. LIPSCOMB,

President of the Epworth League at Winona, Miss.

The Leaguers of that progressive city are looking forward with interest to the meeting of the Annual Conference.

THE MEETING AT STONE CHAPEL.

Rev. George A. Cook in the Eastern Methodist.

Upon invitation of Dr. John F. Goucher, the ministers representing the Methodist Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, South, and the Methodist Protestant Churches of Baltimore, Washington and vicinity, met at Stone Chapel on Monday, October 9, 1916. It was a most delightful occasion, and one to be remembered by those fortunate enough to be present. The preachers of Wilmington were invited, and several of us attended. Those from Wilmington were: Robert Watt, D.D., Superintendent of the Wilmington District; T. R. Van Dyke, W. A. Wise, Superintendent of the Easton District; L. L. McDougle, J. G. Johnson, E. W. Jones, Milton McCann, and George A. Cook. Stone Chapel is twelve miles west of Baltimore and is a landmark in Methodism, being 130 years old. The church was crowded with ministers, their wives and daughters. Dr. Goucher gave a strong address, in which he reviewed the developments of the past year on the subject of the unification of American Methodism. He dwelt largely upon the action of our General Conference at Saratoga Springs. He was greatly pleased with what was done at Saratoga, and expressed the hope that American Methodism would soon be reorganized on a different basis, with a world outlook. He did not believe this could possibly be accomplished inside of three or four years, as the Annual Conferences would need to act on the proposition.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., of the Southern Church, now retired, and living in Baltimore, was present. Upon urgent request he addressed the meeting briefly, but appropriately. He expressed himself favorable to the idea of a united Methodism, but could see dangers in the way. He is one of the commissioners from his Church, and said he would not favor any deviation from the recommendations of the Southern General Conference.

After adjournment the company retired to the beautiful country home of Dr. Goucher where we were refreshed with a splendid luncheon, due to the bounty of our generous host.

The postponed exercises consisted of speeches on Methodist unification by Bishop Cranston, President Lewis, of the Methodist Protestant Church; Bishop McDowell, Robert Watt, D.D., and Bishop Collins Denny, of the M. E. Church, South. Bishop Denny is one of the commissioners to settle this important question, and his speech was serious. He expressed the opinion that no progress has been made toward unification for the past five years. We stand where we did five years ago. This sentiment gave occasion for sober reflection in view of what happened at Saratoga Springs. He expressed the belief that the Southern commissioners cannot go beyond the instructions and recommendations of their General Conference. If they hold to that position, our commissioners will need to yield a number of points before we can get together. Great as their desire is for organic union, it is doubtful if they will be willing to meet the terms. There are vast issues at stake, and there is a wide difference to bridge before there can be real union. The commissioners of the two Churches are to meet in Baltimore, December 28, 1916, to compare notes and try the matter out. Dr. Goucher earnestly requested the prayers of the whole Church for that meeting. It may not be amiss to suggest that the Church had better watch, as well as pray. We noticed Dr. D. G. Downey, of New York, and Dr. A. W. Harris, of our Educational Board, both of whom are commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They were interested listeners to all that was said, but took no part in the talk.

The Church, South, has had the episcopal veto over legislation for the past 46 years. This arrangement makes the Episcopacy a co-ordinate branch of the government, and articulates the responsibility of the Episcopate in conjunction with the General Conference during the session of their chief legislative body. The effect of this has been wholesome. It has protected the Constitution from overthrow at the hands of careless or designing delegates. With us the situation is different. Our General Conferences are a law unto themselves. The Bishops have nothing to say, except to give advice, and they need to be very careful how they give that, or some powerful boss will call them down. This is an evil and a nuisance that should be abated. In harmony with this misconception of liberty, our Conference at Saratoga recommended that reorganized Methodism should have a General Conference that is supreme in legislative, judicial and executive power, with constitutional restrictions and limitations. That is what we have now. Under the guise of democracy it lays the foundation of hossocracy or mobocracy. The doctrines of Methodism are protected by the Constitution, and they may explain why the rationalists are against the Constitution. We believe in the Constitution, doctrines and all. We favor Methodist union when it can be brought about on a real Methodist basis.

A number of the railroads of the United States are preparing to combat the Adamson Eight-Hour Law in the courts. It would be a rather singular development if, after having figured so prominently in the recent national election, this measure should be pronounced unconstitutional.

NOTICE!

To Our Subscribers—

On December 15, 1916, all delinquent subscriptions will be discontinued. There will be no exceptions. We have about 1000 to 1200 subscribers who are in arrears, and whose subscriptions are being carried at great expense to the Publisher.

The price of paper used in printing the Advocate has risen 101 per cent since January 1, and the Publisher is compelled to place the business of the paper on a cash basis.

Subscribers are requested to look at the little pink or yellow address label on their papers and see when their subscriptions expire. If your subscription has expired, please send us the money for arrearages and renewal at once. Subscriptions are due in advance.

Our preachers are earnestly requested to help their Conference organ by urging their parishioners to pay arrearages and renew their subscriptions. Fraternally,

CHAS. O. CHALMERS,
Publisher.

THE KING'S CITY.

Rev. H. N. Harrison.

There's a city for all nations,
Towering foursquare, grand and high;
And it stands on twelve foundations—
Jesus built it in the sky.

There is ne'er a city like it,
Nor inhabitants so strange;
Neither sin nor storms can strike it,
And it stands untouched by change.

Faith has seen the glory of it,
Hope has cast her anchor there;
Let me not earth's treasures covet,
Let me breathe a nobler air.

Soon the soul shall lift her pinions,
And on wings unwearied fly,
Through our Father's vast dominions,
To that city grand and high.

REV. S. C. STONE.

Rev. Samuel Calloway Stone was born on November 20, 1845, and died at his home in Belen, Miss., on September 26, 1916. He had not been in good health for many months, but he bore his sufferings with patience and resignation. Brother Stone was a native Mississippian, and was for many years a resident of Panola Connty. He was the son of a Methodist minister and the grandson of a Presbyterian divine of distinction, who served twelve years in the Senate of South Carolina. He had the goodly heritage of truly Christian training and became a member of the Methodist Church at an early age. Though quite young at the beginning of the war between the States, he volunteered his services to the Confederate States, joined a cavalry company, and was a faithful and valiant soldier. While thus engaged he was awakened to the fact that his duty was to leave all and preach the gospel of Christ. At once he entered upon his training and preparation for this work. He was educated at Summerfield, Ala. He had great gifts and a splendid intellectual equipment for the responsible work upon which he would soon enter. He joined the North Mississippi Conference of which his hrother, Rev. J. B. Stone, was a member, and served Pontotoc, Koscinsko, and other charges acceptably. He was then made presiding elder of the Greenville District, and was at that time the youngest man in the Church serving in that capacity; but he was equal to the task. He wrought faithfully in this new field and made many friends.

After filling this position, he was transferred to the Arkansas Conference and was stationed at Searcy. During his stay there he was a leading factor in the anti-saloon movement. He always took a strong stand on the side of temperance and education. As a preacher he was clear, forceful, and impressive. He was a close student, especially of the Bihle. He knew and loved that best of all books. His one desire was to know Christ and the power of His resurrection, that by the atonement he might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. After completing his work at Searcy, he was statloned at Malvern, Batesville, and other towns in that Conference. His work was most successful and was acceptable at each place. He then sought location, which was granted him, along with a certificate from Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald authorizing him to exercise his ministry as a local elder in the Church; and following this he returned to Mississippi.

He was first married to Miss Bettie D. Partee, of Panola County, a sister of Captain C. W. Partee, of Belen, Miss., who died during their stay in Arkansas. Several years ago he was married to Miss Mary Megginson, of Holly Springs, Miss. She, with two sons, Dr. J. Boon Stone, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. Pat Stone, of Lyon, Miss., survives him. His soul had achieved victory over every temptation, trial, and struggle, and he died in perfect peace and has entered into that rest that awaits God's children. There I shall meet my old friend again. A large sympathetic audience attended his funeral, which was conducted hy Rev. D. R. Wasson. In the Belen Cemetery he sleeps and awaits the resurrection of the just. May the Lord bless and sustain his sorrowing loved ones; and may they find comfort in the precious hope of meeting him again!

Jackson, Miss. S. M. THAMES.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

This is the time of year that we hear most the cry of "hard times." Conference time is drawing near; the preachers are busying themselves with their collections, the stewards are doing their best to see that the charges pay out, and the poor people, who have been putting off settling up with the Lord and Church to the last of the year are, as usual, raising the cry of "hard times." But here are some encouraging reports from charges in our District: Fikes, of the Brandon and Pelahatchie charge, has all the Conference collections up. He is the first of the district to report collections in full. Yeager, on the Fannin charge, also feels easy about the collections. He is ready to report, "In full."

A debt of $300 on the Pelahatchie Church has been raised this year, and the money secured to furnish and beautify the interior. When this work is finished, the Church will be ready for dedication.

Oliver, of the Eden charge, is happy to report a new church building at Coxburg, where they have been worshiping in a schoolhouse.

Lewis, of Madison, expects to have the church and parsonage there repaired and painted before Conference.

Brothers A. S. Oliver and A. S. Byrd have joined the "Ford Itinerant Party," thus making fifteen cars owned hy the preachers of the district.

Some good revivals have been held recently in the district. Rev. W. M. Sullivan assisted the pastor in good meetings at Brandon and Pelahatchie. In a union meeting with the Presbyterians at Camden, in which Rev. J. W. Ramsey did the preaching, our pastor, Brother Ferguson, received 24 members into the Church. Canton Methodism has had a gracious revival under the leadership of the pastor, with Rev. J. A. Bowen doing the preaching and Rev. J. S. Duke leading the singing. Fourteen were added to the Church. Waldrop, at D'Lo, is making great preparations for a revival there, to begin November 15, with the Conference Evangelist, D. E. Keliy, to do the preaching.

Rev. W. G. Henry, pastor of Galloway Memorial, the church with the largest membership in our Conference, together with his wife, has planned to receive informally the members and friends of the Church this week. They will be "At Home" from Tuesday through Friday at the hours, 3:30 to 5:30 and 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., and are inviting the members to come in alphahetical order, those whose names begin with the letters from A to E to come on Tuesday, and on Wednesday, those with G to L; Thursday, those with M to R, and on Friday, those heginning with S to Z. This is certainly a unique way for a pastor of a large church to get personally acquainted and in touch with all his members.

Two men, who 30 or 35 years ago found their wives in the Madison community in the Baptist Church, and had the pleasure of their companions coming with them into the Methodist Church, were passing through Madison Station not long ago, and, seeing that the churches where they had worshiped in their younger days were in need of new coats of paint, made generous propositions to the churches towards having all the church properties put in first-class repair and repainted. As a consequence, the membership of the two churches are bestirring themselves and expect to have the church properties there in first class condition before the winter sets in:

Brother Hardin, our presiding elder, has greatly endeared himself to the preachers and members of the district, and it is with sad hearts that we realize that the time limit takes him officially from the district with the close of this Conference year. ISOM.

HEARD IN THE CABINET.

By "Revelator."

The Annual Conference of 1914 adjourns. There is heard, around the depot, the familiar: "Well, Brother Reeder, where do you go?" Then, the reply of the unfortunate Brother: "Why, I go to Rollover Mission. I am getting tired of it. I have a notion to locate. I don't know what Piikins means; I thought he was my friend. Why, I follow that young fellow Snodgrass. They only paid him $414. I know I ought to have had a better place than that."

"Where were you last year, Brother Reeder? What did they pay on your former charge?"

"I was at Spoonerville and just received $409 over there. I had just been there one year and my entire official Board wanted me returned. There is no justice, or sense, either in it."

"Well, Brother Reeder, I think it is a promotion for you. It is a higher class appointment, paying a little more, and there are not so many churches. You had a hard circuit over at Spoonerville. You now have a fine order of people, a good parsonage, with your churches and membership all convenient to reach."

"Yes, I know, but look here: There is young Tenderfoot who has just been preaching three years and who goes to East Side on $600. I've heen preaching fourteen years and you see what they are doing for me. Oh, well, I know these presiding elders have their pets, hut I am getting mighty tired of it and am going to have something better or quit. I will not he hutchered any such way."

The Conference meets in 1915 and Brother Reeder arrives with the usual long face, which bears the mark of determination. He has fully made up his mind to ask for a location if there is no prospect for a better place. He is met at the depot by a young man with a little book in his hand who politely asks: "Your name, please." He receives a reply in tones a little gruff: "I. A. Reeder."

"Yes, Brother Reeder, I think I have heard of you; you go to Colonel Thrifty's, and, by-the-way, the Bishop is to be entertained in his home also."

Brother Reeder says, "I am much obliged. How far is it from the church? I am not right well and don't feel like walking so very far." The young man replied: "Only three blocks, and it is a nice home for you, Brother Reeder."

Brother Reeder was assigned to a room adjoining the one occupied by the Bishop. There was a double partition wall with fireplaces for the two rooms between them, and a small closet to the right of the fireplace in Brother Reeder's room.

On the first day of the Conference the Bishop said: "The presiding elders will please meet me in my room, at Colonel Thrifty's, this evening at eight o'clock." This summons they obey and are all on time. After devotional exercise and organization, a few questions of particular interest are asked. The general routine of work is assnmed amid a prevailing spirit of brotherly love. Meantime, Brother Reeder has returned to his room, a little indisposed, just in time to hear the Bishop speak of their duty to the Church and the responsibility of placing the men to the best advantage. He feels able to sit up a while, since he has seemingly been placed here by Providence. The thought of being made a presiding elder actually enters his mind, and he imagines that the purpose of this strange occurrence is to acquaint him with the gravity of his future duties. With the Conference Minutes in hand he noiselessly opens the closet door, thereby having only one thin wall between himself and that interesting company, revealing to his eager ear every word spoken; which, especially the discussions concerning the particular men and pastoral charges, are very interesting to him. He hears many things that surprise him, but agrees that they are true, though he had never thought of them before.

The first evening only a few of the appointments are made and Brother Reeder has a hope that he will not be placed on a district, since learning something of the responsibilities of a presiding elder.

The second meeting of the cabinet is a further revelation to him. His name has not been called. He continues to be unable to attend the evening sessions at the church and has asked to be excused from the meetings of the Epworth League Board, as he does not believe in the Epworth League, anyway.

The third day passes as usual. Many of the appointments are made, but he is unusually interested when Brother Pilkins asks for a man for Rollover Mission. The Bishop turns to the minutes and asks: "Have we provided for Brother Reeder? I see he has just been there one year."

Brother Pilkins answered: "Well, no, not yet, Bishop, but I think we can provide for Brother Reeder later." The Bishop asks why he cannot return.

Brother Pilkins answered again: "Bishop, Brother Reeder is a good man, but the people want a change and I think it justice to the man that we move him. I have in mind a good place in an other district and I am sure the appointment can be made. We can take care of Brother Reeder, so now let us provide for Rollover. The fact is, Bishop, I am sorry, but I have no suitable place in my district for Brother Reeder. He ought to have a better place than I can give him." The Bishop asks for the reasons why there is no suitable place in the Knowltown District for Brother Reeder. Brother Pilkins hesitates and sadly says: "Bishop, Brother Reeder is a good man, and, personally, I love him, but all my places demand a better preacher than Brother Reeder. He doesn't apply himself as he should, and I think to move him into another district would be an inspiration to the man. He is a good man and possesses many good qualities, but—but—well, Bishop, I cannot use Brother Reeder in the Knowltown District."

Rollover is filled with an applicant for admission on trial. An effort is made to place Brother Reeder on a charge in Elder Renfroe's district. Brother Renfroe objects by saying: "Bishop, I have two good places in my district composed of good active people. They are progressive and will stand by the church and pastor. I should be glad to take Brother Reeder for one of these charges—but—but—well—Bishop, I just can't use him."

"Why can't you use him?" asked the Bishop.

"Well—why—Bishop, for one thing, he is always late getting to his appointments. He ignores our order of worship, and I heard Brother Reeder say he had not made a sermon in three years, giving as his reason the fact that he had a sufficient supply on hand and did not need to make any new ones. I also heard him say that he had not read three books since he finished his Course of Study. My people must be given a different man from that." These places are all filled with undergraduates.

The next time the name of I. A. Reeder is called there is an effort made to put him at Newburg, a fast growing village in the Centerville District. Brother Simpkins arose and addressed the Bishop as follows: "Bishop, I wish I could use Brother Reeder; he is one of the best men I ever knew. He is consecrated and very able in prayer. He has a splendid wife who does all she can to help him, but I can't use him at Newburg."

The Bishop asked: "What is the reason, Brother Simpkins, that you can't use Brother Reeder at Newburg? You say he is a good man, and so on."

Brother Simpkins replied: "Bishop, Brother Reeder neglects his work, and I must have a man for Newburg who will stay with his people. Why, last fall, just forty days before Conference, I met Brother Reeder and asked him how his charge was coming up with the Home Mission assessment. He told me he had not collected anything on the benevolences. Before we parted he told me he had been away from home all the week and had made $6.30 clear of expenses, selling patent clothes-pins and said he carried a patent rat-trap as a side line. He said he was going to quit that and write life insurance, and sell, as he went along, a line of kitchen utensils." A suggestion was made to have his name referred to the committee on Conference relations, but he was only 39 years of age and physically strong. Then it was that Brother Pilkins moved that they let Brother Reeder ask for an honorable location. A feeling of deep sympathy for Brother Reeder prevailed, and it was agreed that they should try to provide for him in some way.

The days passed and the appointments were nearly all made, but Brother Reeder had not been placed. He acknowledged that everything was just as represented by the different presiding elders, but that he had never thought of it in that way. In fact, he had just discovered I. A. Reeder and would now be grateful for any appointment. He debated the question of asking for a location, but remembered his unfitness for anything else. He was getting $24 a month superintending a country cotton gin, and was paying house rent out of that, at the age of twenty-five, when he entered the ministry. Now, he was getting more than $400 a year with a furnished parsonage. He was, by this time, getting anxious to hear his name again and in connection with some appointment—he cared not which one—and concluded, since these revelations, that he would profit by these criticisms and yet be a man.

At the last meeting of the cabinet only a few appointments were to be made. Some new charges had been formed in the Knowltown District, on the new railroad. The Bishop had decided to place Brother Reeder on one of them, just eighteen miles from Rollover. To this Brother Pilkins objected on the ground that Brother Reeder would be too near Rollover; that he would be continually visiting on the former charge and meddling with affairs up there, which would cause his successor a vast deal of trouble. The Bishop seemed to think the objection not sufficient to hinder the appointment.

Brother Pilkins said: "Bishop, it is a fact that we had, at one time, to move Brother Reeder clear across the Conference to get him away from a former circuit where he caused no little disturbance visiting; he actually caused the pastor, who was a young man, to ask to be moved in the middle of the year." The Bishop decided to overrule Brother Pilkins' objection and place Brother Reeder at Laketown, and, personally, to call his attention to this serious trouble.

Brother Pilkins arose and said: "Bishop, I can not use Brother Reeder in my district at all. It would be a serious injustice to the man for me to keep him there. Why, sir, just this past year he caused considerable friction in the district amongst the preachers by gossiping about the men, and actually suggested slanderous things about some of them. He is not chaste in his conversation. He keeps up with all the scandal published by the daily papers and is conversant with all the gossip in each community, and in his visiting he dwells, even in the presence of young people and children, upon these things. Bishop, I am sorry, heartily so, but I cannot use Brother Reeder. I must have a different type of man for the place." Other cases were discussed. A few charges were assigned pastors who possessed a few of Brother Reeder's traits. However, Brother Reeder was not yet provided for.

Brother Ransome, who had been presiding elder on the Farmingtown District for just one year, had a new mission charge that had not been filled. To this the Bishop called attention. Brother Pilkins said: "Bishop, I think, since Brother Ransome is a new man in the cabinet, we should assist him in getting a good man for that important charge. I am willing to lend him any possible assistance." Brother Ransome thanked Brother Pilkins for his kindness and said: "I shall appreciate any assistance from the brethren." Brother Pilkins said: "Now, Bishop, I have two men in my district either of whom can ably fill the place. I will let Brother Ransome have either of them. I have a local preacher that I can use."

The Bishop asked Brother Pilkins for the names of these men. Brother Pilkins said: "Well—I can—I could—let him have Brother I. A. Reeder." Brother Ransome interrupted him by saying: "Bishop, if it makes no difference with you and Brother Pilkins, I will take the other man." It was agreed that Brother Ransome should have the other man. Brother Reeder was assigned to the new Laketown Mission, on the Riverview railroad. Brother Pilkins agreed to stand by Brother Reeder and the appointment to Laketown.

It was marvelous to see the improvement in Brother Reeder during the next year. At the next Conference Brother Pilkins received a letter signed by the official board of Laketown asking for Brother Reeder's return. As the towns grew the Methodist Church, through Brother Reeder's efforts, had grown with them. At the end of the second year the charge was divided and both new charges wanted Brother Reeder. At the end of the fourth year a man was sent to Laketown Station, and I. A. Reeder was in demand for many places. All because he had discovered himself.

Mr. John Hix, of Talladega, Ala., gave a few days since $5000 to the Superannuate Fund of the North Alabama Conference.

The vote of the North Alabama Conference on the question of making lay leaders ex-officio members of the Annual Conference was 115 for the proposal, and 124 against it.

The Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.) says: "Dr. George R. Stuart had a big Studebaker automobile stolen from him recently while he was attending a church service."

At the late session of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bishop Thirkield was designated to hold the Conferences of that denomination in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Dr. G. W. Eichelberger, who formerly was superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Mississippi and later in Georgia, has moved to Arkansas, where he will do evangelistic work for the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, of St. Louis, Mo., who was once a Methodist minister, but who for many years had been chiefly known as a weather prophet, died a short time since. The St. Louis Christian Advocate speaks in terms of high appreciation of his character as a Christian.

Dr. J. B. Hutton, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Jackson, Miss., recently celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his ministry to that congregation. The Jackson Daily News in an editorial speaks of Dr. Hutton as a scholar and leader with but few equals in any denomination.

Bishop A. W. Wilson attended the recent session of the North Alabama Conference and delivered the address to the class admitted into full connection, which was an able and appropriate utterance. Bishop Denny presided over that Conference for the third time, and the Alabama Christian Advocate highly commends his work.

At the advanced age of 87, the mother of the Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, lately a candidate for the Vice Presidency of the United States, died on October 30. Mr. Fairbanks, who is a well known Northern Methodist layman, is one of the representatives of his Church on the Unification Commission.

The presidency of Bishop Morrison is said to have given great satisfaction to the West Oklahoma Conference. Five thousand accession and a net gain of 1594 members were reported at the late session of that body. We note, in looking over the appointments, that Rev. W. L. Anderson, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, was assigned to the Clinton District.

The following utterance is from The Presbyterian Journal (New Orleans) of November 15: "The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have issued an address to their Church on the matter of Methodist Unification that is now pending. The two salient points in it are, first, a distinct planting of their feet upon the Oklahoma City enactment of 1914, and, secondly, an intimation that they are not willing to bargain away any of their great inheritance and glorious memories for any consideration, and that love among themselves is the most important matter just now to promote. Clearly they are not ready to endorse the proposition of the Saratoga General Conference of the Northern Methodists."

OBEDIENCE AND FAITH.

If the ten lepers had not obeyed the Master's voice to go and show themselves to the priests they never would have been healed. It is a significant part of the story, as they went they were cleansed. The healing depended on the obeying, and it is so in all Christ's blessing, it comes as we do His will. We show our faith by trying to do what he commands, depending upon him to give the strength as we make the effort to obey.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

REV. R. A. ELLIS.

Rev. R. A. Ellis, son of Jeremiah Ellis and Nancy (Allgood) Ellis was born in Blount County, Alabama, on August 21, 1842. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1856, when only fourteen years old. He moved to Mississippi in 1865, and on September 20, 1866, he was married to Mattie Susan Hudgins, daughter of Rev. J. E. Hudgins, of Oxford, Miss. He was licensed to preach on October 7, 1871, and was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at Corinth, Miss., in 1872. He was ordained deacon in 1874 by Bishop Doggett at Aberdeen, Miss., and was ordained elder in 1876 by Bishop Pierce at Sardis, Miss.

Brother Ellis served charges as follows: Calhoun Circuit in 1873; was junior preacher on the Oxford Circuit with J. W. Poston, 1874; Toccopola Circuit, 1875; Banner Circuit, 1876, '77, and '78; Oxford Circuit, 1879; New Albany, 1880, '81, '82; Baldwin, 1883, '84, '85, '86; New Albany, 1887; West, 1888, '89; Winona Circuit, 1890, '91. He then was transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference, and was stationed at Quannah and Childress, 1892; Atlas, Okla., 1893, '94; Itasca, Tex., 1894, '95, 96; Reagan, 1897, '98; St. Paul, 1899. He was transferred back to the North Mississippi Conference in 1900, and was sent to the West Circuit, which he served in 1901. He served the Pleasant Grove Circuit and Longtown in 1902, '03, and '04; Sallis in 1905; Belzoni, 1906, '07; Inverness, 1908, '09. In the winter of the same year he took the superannuate relation at Okolona, Miss., and moved to Yazoo City, Miss., where he spent the remainder of his life. His wife, who had been a true, faithful helpmeet in all his work, went to her reward in 1911. Brother Ellis lived his last years with his son, Mr. J. B. Ellis, who, with his wife, tenderly cared for him till the morning of May 13, 1916, when this "prince in Israel" went to his home above.

The dates show that Brother Ellis was 73 years, 8 months, and 22 days old when the final summons came, and that 37 years of that time were spent as a pastor without a break in his work, in which he was faithful to every trust committed to his care. He was a strong, thoughtful preacher who read carefully the standards of our Church, and he wrote himself some things helpful to the student of theology. He always endeavored to make his own life richer by what he read. He was devoted to his Church papers, and when he could no longer see to read them, would sit for hours and listen attentively to his son and his son's wife while they read them for him.

Brother Ellis leaned hard upon God's Word, and in his last days was longing for a deeper and richer experience in his own heart. He was always in his place in the church, and was ever ready to assist in administering the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to render such other service as he was called on for. He would often praise God for his mercy and, while as he approached the end (for he was conscious that it was near), his eyesight was almost gone, his speech much impaired, his step unsteady, he was cheerful. He did not think much of the past, but looked hopefully to the future. He was interested in the Church to the last. He was looking forward with deep interest and much prayer to the revival meeting that was soon to be held here in Yazoo City, when he expected to be associated with Rev. J. A. Bowen again, but instead he went home to live with God.

Brother Ellis was a member of Company K of the 19th Alabama Regiment in the Civil War, and for his country he was a faithful soldier. He leaves three sons to mourn their loss, Dr. Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn., one son in Snyder Okla., and Mr. J. B. Ellis, of Yazoo City, Miss. He belonged to a family of preachers, other members of which were Rev. D. G. Ellis, a superannuate of the North Texas Conference, and Rev. S. B. Ellis, who died while a member of that Conference several years ago.

He was a great help to this writer during the one and one half years he was associated with him. He loved humanity, the Church, and his Lord.

On Sunday morning, May 14, 1916, the funeral was conducted in the Methodist Church in Yazoo City by Rev. J. A. Bowen, assisted by the several preachers of the city, and the body was laid to rest in the city cemetery, the grave being covered with flowers by sorrowing friends.

We miss him, and hope to meet him in the great beyond.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

EVERYBODY A SERMON.

Saint Francis says to a young brother in the monastery: "Let us go into the town and preach." And into the town they go, turning now a corner and now that of the Assisi Streets, but saying never a word. At last the young brother says: "Father, when do we begin to preach?" and Francis answers: "My son, we have been preaching all along." Preaching is not dependent upon pulpits, neither must it be expressed in spoken sermons. Everybody is a sermon as he goes.—George Hodges.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

Autumn leaves! Russet and brown,
The virtue tell, that age should crown,
And will, if youth and manhood's days,
Are wisely spent in virtue's ways.

Autumn leaves! Purple and gold,
The glories speak of growing old,
If heart be pure from stains of sin,
And hands are full of good to men.

Autumn leaves! See how they fall,
From every bough, however, tall;
They fall to mingle with the dust,
Just as our earthly bodies must.

Autumn leaves, blown here and there,
With every movement of the air,
The symbol of all earthly things,
Which fly away—all taking wings.

Autumn leaves! They swift decay,
But hope looks to another day,
When leafy boughs shall proudly wave,
And we shall triumph o'er the grave.

WHAT AM I THANKFUL FOR?

Rev. William L. Stidger.

I'm thankful for each happy day
I see a little child at play;
For every blessed flower that grows,
For each refreshing stream that flows;
For mountains towering to the skies,
For every bird that sings and flies.
I'm thankful for the rain and sun,
For robes of green the earth has spun
Upon its loom of nights and days,
From sunset threads of gold and rays
Of light the sun doth wean
From out the ocean's breast of green,
To climb the sunlit stairs to God,
And drop again to bless the soil.
I'm thankful for the Hope that springs
Eternal in my heart, and sings
Within me all the winding way
When glory crowns the parting day.
I'm thankful for some work to do;
I'm thankful that God gave me you!
That friends He's sent me undeserved
Who love have given unreserved.
I'm thankful for my cot at night
And for the breaking of the light
That summons me to work and play
Another wondrous, happy day.
And as again the season brings
Thanksgiving Day, around which clings
A thousand memories of old,
A thousand precious bands of gold,
Which bind me to the other ways,
Those other precious friends and days
The day itself, thank God! it sings
A myriad blessed whisperings!

THEIR THANKSGIVING GUESTS.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

"Do you know, dear," said Mrs. Gardner, coming into the library where her husband sat reading, "that I am afraid we have been very remiss in the training of our children."

"In what way?" inquired Mr. Gardner, looking up from his book with a glad look of welcome in his eyes for his wife.

"Why, I heard Harry giving three cheers because he saw by the calendar that Thursday week was Thanksgiving day, and when I asked him why he was so glad, he replied, 'because it was a holiday.' I then asked little Ned what Thanksgiving day meant and he answered 'turkey.' Mabel added, 'and mince pie.' And so it occurred to me to find out what the day meant to each one. When Jack came in from school I said, 'What is next Thursday, Jack?' and he shocked me by saying, 'the day we all eat more than we can hold and groan because we have eaten too much, and the next day wish we had some of the good things we couldn't stow away.' Even Edith, when appealed to, declared it was the day we had all we wanted and more than enough."

"Well, isn't it all that?" laughed Mr. Gardner.

"Of course it is, dear, but Thanksgiving should mean so much more. The children talked as if it were the only day in all the year that we have anything to eat, when you know we have enough and to spare always. I fear we have all, old and young, drifted into a way of regarding Thanksgiving as a feast day only for gratifying our appetite, and that we are forgetful of all the year's blessings."

"Well, little wife, what do you propose to do—give us prison food this Thanksgiving and make us realize what a loss of our blessings would mean?"

"Why, no," replied Mrs. Gardner seriously, "but I thought instead of having our feast all to ourselves, or inviting our rich relatives, who could have just as much at home, that we would invite some poor unfortunates to dine with us."

"Quite a fine idea, my dear. I guess we are all rather selfish in our joys, so go ahead and make your plans, and whatever you say shall be done."

The next morning Mrs. Gardner made her proposition at the breakfast table and the young people made no objections.

"How many guests shall we have, mother?" inquired Mabel, "and will you get old ladies from the Old Folks' Home or children from the Orphanage?"

"Neither," said her mother. All institutions have a good dinner on these occasions; so we will look up some that would not have a treat of any kind—the destitute, the lonely, the stranger. There are seven of us. By putting all the leaves in the table, we can easily accommodate fourteen. So let each of us seek out one guest to dine here on Thanksgiving Day."

"Oh, mother," exclaimed Edith, who was at the romantic age and loved secrets, "let's not tell one another whom we invite, just for the fun of it, and see how many surprises will walk in on us Thanksgiving Day."

"Do you think it is safe to trust the children to make their own choice?" inquired their father.

"Why, I believe we will let them try. It will be a lesson to them to seek out needy cases, and I am sure they will be more mindful of their own blessings in future when they see the distress that is about us on every hand," Mrs. Gardner replied and then proceeded to call attention to several needy families that she had heard of and to tell of the loneliness and isolation of many.

"Mumsy," said little Ted, "what makes God give us so much and some people nothing? Does he love us the best?"

"No, my little lad," said Mrs. Gardner, putting her arms about him. "God loves us every one, but some are more fortunate than others, and God means for us to share our plenty with them, and He helps others through us. God depends upon us to scatter his sunshine and blessings and to spread his gospel."

The children had great times making their selection, hinting, telling their initials, etc., but not a soul really knew of any guests that were coming but his or her own.

When the festal day arrived, the table groaned under the burden of good things—a steaming brown turkey stuffed with oysters, rice like grains of snow, creamed potatoes, green peas, yellow yams, artichokes, cranberry sauce, jelly, pickles, chicken salad, and the odor of mince pies from the kitchen, and fragrant coffee. Great bowls of tempting fruit and beautiful flowers graced the table, sideboard and mantel, and all the house wore a festive look.

No one was surprised when Edith's guest walked in, a poor seamstress, who often came to sew by the day for the family, and whose tired face lighted up with pleasure at the cordial greeting that awaited her.

Jack's guest came next—the little boot-black who had a stand near his father's store and who had washed his face until it shone up to the roots of his hair, but he had a line of demarcation there and had entirely forgotten to ply his trade on his own shoes. He seemed greatly embarrassed, but Jack's grasp of the hand and an invitation to play marbles soon set him at ease.

Next came old Mrs. Joals, who took in washing by the day to support her little brood. All knew that Mrs. Gardner had brought her, for she had sent the little children there every year with a Thanksgiving basket.

Harry's friend was the night watchman, and when asked the next day why he had chosen him, he replied, "Why, you said ask some one who is lonely, and who could be lonelier than a night watchman, who never has a soul but bats and cats to keep him company?"

Mr. Gardner introduced his friend then, a drummer who could not get home to spend the festal day and who seemed more than grateful for the hospitality extended him.

Mabel paced the floor nervously for fear her motherless schoolmate would not show up, but she did at last and Mabel ran to meet her just as an electric carriage stopped at the gate. She almost forgot her little chum in the excitement, for she ran in exclaiming, "Who do you think is getting out and coming in our gate? Rich old Mrs. Tucker! What can she want here to-day of all days?" But little Ted was already bounding down the walk and in a few moments came in the parlor with Mrs. Tucker leaning on him, exclaiming, "Here's my company mother." Mrs. Gardner endeavored not to show the surprise she felt and gave a warning glance at the other children.

Now, Mrs. Tucker was considered hard and forbidding, and, knowing her great wealth, no one ever had an idea that she would accept an invitation to a dinner of this kind, but as little Ted said later, "I would like to know who could ever be more lonely than old Mrs. Tucker? No children, no friends, her house all shut up, and all by herself every day in her 'lectric carriage, not even anybody to ride with her." Teddy did not realize that lots of people would have loved to ride in that carriage, that is, had Mrs. Tucker resigned her seat; but so forbidding was her aspect, they preferred walking to sitting in such close proximity. Every Sunday she came to church in her electric coupee alone, walked up the church aisle alone, and out again, never acknowledging a greeting with more than a formal bow. Everybody seemed afraid of old Mrs. Tucker and stood in awe of her; so all the family wondered how little Ted ever had courage enough to ask her to dinner.

Mr. Gardner was very much afraid the old lady would be offended when she saw the guests. The younger children found it hard to keep from giggling, the other guests looked disconcerted, and both Edith and her mother were nervous; but Ted determined to do the honors; so he took Mrs. Tucker's bonnet, brought his chair close to hers, and immediately began to show her his new top and to chatter away as if he had known her all his life. When dinner was announced, Mr. Gardner ushered all the guests in, and, after the blessing, Mrs. Gardner said in her sweet, tactful way: "We planned this day as a surprise to each of us as well our friends. God has given us so much to be grateful for, we thought it a pity to celebrate alone; so each of us decided to invite some friend that would perhaps be lonely on that day, and not one of us knew whom the other would bring. We are so glad to have every one of you and we want you to feel perfectfully at home."

And they did. Nothing breaks down reserve more quickly than a good, hearty meal. Mr. Gardner's drummer-friend proved very entertaining, with a fund of anecdotes; the little seamstress was dimpled and smiled; the night watchman's hearty laugh echoed through the room; old Mrs. Joals fairly beamed, and every child's face was bright and joyous. Even old Mrs. Tucker smiled benignly, and when she went up the stairs to put on her wraps, she said, "God bless that kind little heart in the breast of your Teddy Boy, Mrs. Gardner. He saw through my loneliness. True, I have wealth, and I could buy many Thanksgiving dinners, but of all your guests, even to the very poorest, none could have been lonelier than I. I have no one to love me or care whether I live or die; perhaps it's my own fault; but this feast of yours has taught me a lesson. You have the right idea. I am not going to be unhappy and lonely any more. It is my turn to entertain next; so I want all of your family and every guest to come to a Christmas tree at my house. Let each one bring some one else who is sad and lonely, and even then I won't have enough; so I will send little Ted out to find others. He knows how."

WOULD BE INEQUITABLE AND IMPROPER.

The question of having the Conference and District Lay Leaders made ex-officio members of the Annual Conference is awakening a good deal of interest throughout the Church. At the late session of the North Alabama Conference, when the matter was under discussion, Bishop A. W. Wilson, the honored and beloved Senior Bishop of Southern Methodism, was called upon for an expression of his opinion and stated that he considered the measure a very unwise one.

It should be kept distinctly in mind that this is not a movement to increase lay representation—if it were that, we would give it our hearty support—it is a proposal to introduce ex-officio membership into one of the larger representative bodies of the Church. As has been stated in these columns, there has at times in the past been talk of making the Bishops and connectional officers ex-officio members of the General Conference, but all such suggestions have been quickly overruled and the representative principle has been preserved inviolate. But if this should be begun in the Annual Conferences, there is no telling into what this policy might soon develop.

But it is said that these Lay Leaders represent all the laity of the Church, and that hence they should be accorded this special privilege. We answer that they do not any more represent all the laity than do the laymen regularly elected by the district conferences to the Annual Conference, or those who act for the laity on the other Boards.

Nor should the fact be overlooked that the Laymen's Movement, as it is now constituted, sustains such a close relation to the Board of Missions as practically to form an adjunct to it. The Board of Missions largely directs and controls it. Wherein, then, lies the wisdom of giving the Board of Missions so great an influence over more than one-fifth of the members of Annual Conferences in the Connection? For it should be remembered if an Annual Conference has eight districts it would, if this measure passes, have only 32 regular members, and nine ex-officio members. The Board of Missions already has more power than any other Board in the Church—why then should it be given this undue advantage of the other Boards? Think of the vast number of these ex-officio members there would be in all the Annual Conferences in the Church and of the influence that they would have in sending men to the General Conference! Well may we hesitate before we give any body such a tremendous power as this.

But it is urged that these Lay Leaders need to go to the Annual Conference in the interest of the important work which they are expected to promote. Then let us give them the right to go there and be heard on the pending issues, without giving them the right to vote. The laymen appointed on the quadrennial Boards are expected to attend the Conferences when they are not elected as delegates and entertainment is usually provided for them; and doubtless they would be heard on the Conference floor if they should ask that privilege. Why not let this same rule apply to these Lay Leaders?

The point has, furthermore, been made that these Lay Leaders are elected by the district conferences, just as the other delegates are elected to the Annual Conference, and that, therefore, they would be equally representative. To this, we reply that it is quite conceivable that a district conference would like to elect a man to be a Lay Leader that it would not want to send as a representative to the Annual Conference. These Lay Leaders are elected for a specific function, and not for the purpose that other delegates to the Annual Conference are chosen.

There are two things that we should like to see the next General Conference do: (1) send down to the Annual Conferences a measure that would make provision for placing more laymen in them upon a truly representative basis; (2) detach the Laymen's Movement from any special relation to any particular Board and let it be equally the ally and helper of all the Boards.

It has not been our intention in any of the foregoing statements to reflect upon the Board of Missions to the slightest extent. We should have said the same things if any other Board had been involved. However worthy may be the object it has in view, no organization in the Church should be permitted to seek to accomplish it by the adoption of a method that is likely to prove more harmful than helpful in the coming years.

THE ELECTION.

The national election on November 7 was one of the closest and most exciting ever held in the United States. At first, when it was learned that practically all of New England and all the larger Middle Western States, except Ohio, had gone for Mr. Hughes, his election was considered assured, and even newspapers such as the New York Times and World, which had most strongly opposed him, proclaimed him the next President. But later it developed that there had been a landslide for Mr. Wilson in the farther West, and that he had carried all the States in that section except Oregon, South Dakota, and possibly Minnesota. The result is that at this writing the President seems assured of 272 electoral votes, with a probability of getting 4 more, while Mr. Hughes has 243, with the better chance of adding to his list the 12 votes of Minnesota. The number of electoral votes required to elect is 266. President Wilson's plurality of the popular vote promises to be around the half million mark. The United States Senate will continue to be Democratic by a good working majority, but at this writing it is doubtful which party will control the House. The prohibition vote will probably show up to be less than 500,000, and the Socialist vote a little in excess of 1,000,000.

A GREAT MEETING AND ITS LESSON.

On October 29 a gracious revival, which had been in progress for three weeks, was closed at Shreveport, La. It was a Southern Methodist union meeting, all the Methodist pastors in the city participating in it, and the services were held in our spacious First Church. The preaching was done by Rev. John E. Brown, of Siloam Springs, Ark., and the singing was led by Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Smith, of Chicago. Dr. G. S. Sexton's congregation, in whose house of worship the meeting was conducted, was well prepared for the evangelistic campaign, eighteen persons being baptized on the Sunday before it began, and some of the other churches also were in fine working condition at the outset. The services seemed to grip the community from the start and they steadily increased in power and interest. Toward the close of the meeting, the evangelist announced that he would deliver on five successive days addresses on the office and work of the Holy Spirit, and the people appeared to be more impressed by these discourses than they had been by any others. These searching messages seemed to find their way to the hearts of the great audiences that were in attendance and spiritual feeling and fervor were at high tide. So hungry, indeed, were the people for this kind of preaching that they requested Mr. Brown to speak on "The Holy Spirit and Consecration" at the closing service. This he did, and the hour is said to have been a marvelous one. A thousand people were present and hundreds pressed forward in response to an invitation and pledged themselves to live more Christlike and consecrated lives; and three young men professed to be called to the ministry and six young ladies offered themselves for the work of deaconesses. As a result of this revival campaign, there were 90 additions to our churches in Shreveport; but the greatest work done was in the extent to which the experiences of Church members were deepened and enriched.

In talking to us about this truly great revival, Dr. Sexton said he had learned from it this lesson: that the kind of preaching needed in this day is not that which deals with secular and catchy topics, but which unfolds the deep spiritual truths of the Gospel of Christ. He said that he was convinced that discourses of this character are not only the most helpful, but, when properly prepared and delivered, that they also have in them the greatest power to interest and draw the people. And we do not doubt that in this view he is correct. The Greeks who said to the disciples, "Sirs, we would see Jesus," were typical of humanity in all lands and ages. The deep cry of the human heart, stifled though it often is, is consciously to find and know God. There is real satisfaction in nothing else. The preacher who, in the hope of gaining the ear of the general public, shelves the Gospel, that he may air his opinions concerning the passing things of the world, though he may win a little temporary popularity, could scarcely make a greater mistake. Christ is the mightiest magnet of the ages, and the ministry that sets him forth most fully will be the most effective and fruitful.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the brilliant young pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, has had a notably successful year. With comparative ease, this congregation raised all its finances in full.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Rayville, La., will report the proceedings of the Louisiana Conference for the Advocate, and Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Shubuta, Miss., will report the proceedings of the Mississippi Conference.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Brother A. J. Bonnette, Oberlin, La., 2; Rev. J. W. Ramsey, Heidelburg, Miss., 2.

Rev. R. M. Brown, our pastor in Algiers (New Orleans), is finishing his fourth year in his present important field. He has wrought well, and will leave a good foundation for his successor to build upon. Brother Brown is a hard worker and an efficient pastor.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, the new President of the Seashore Divinity School, has the interests of that organization much on his heart and is endeavoring to work out plans to increase its future usefulness. Let all the brethren in the near-by Conferences lend him a helping hand.

Both the Publisher and the Editor will be out of the office quite a good deal of the time for the next two or three weeks attending the Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi. Our correspondents are requested to keep this in mind and bear with us patiently for a season.

Dr. H. M. DuBose expects to be present at the session of the Mississippi Conference, which will open on December 13. This will be gratifying news both to the members of the Conference and his host of friends in Jackson, where he served as pastor with conspicuous ability a number of years ago.

Rev. W. J. Wood, of the Winona (Miss.) Circuit, is pleased with what has been accomplished in his charge this year, and says that there are some as choice people within the bounds of his work as can be found anywhere. Brother Wood has our thanks for some subscriptions to the Conference organ.

The November Bulletin of the General Board of Education shows that both Grenada College and Whitworth College are now B-grade institutions, and that among the A-grade colleges Millsaps stands next to Trinity in the amount of its endowment. This is a fine showing for Mississippi Methodism.

A letter from Meridian, Miss., where Rev. J. D. Newsom, one of the honored superannuates of the North Mississippi Conference, now resides, states that he is not strong, but that he hopes to be with the brethren at Winona. We trust that nothing will interfere with his attendance upon the Conference session.

Under date of November 15, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, says: "Rev. C. A. Northington is the first to send in the educational assessment from the Corinth District." This is in keeping with Brother Northington's record as a hustler.

Brother A. R. Beasley, of Poplar Creek, Miss., sends us some subscriptions and makes the following reference to his charge: "Everything is moving along finely with us. I expect to have a good report at Conference. Our finances are in advance of those of last year, in spite of the fact that crops are shorter in this section than they have been in years."

Dr. Waights G. Henry, the capable pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson, Miss., was a visitor to the late session of the North Alabama Conference, which met at Bessemer. Dr. Henry seems to retain a fondness for his native State, but he has won a high place among the Methodists of Mississippi, who hope to keep him in their itinerant ranks.

Brother and Sister J. M. Watson, of Simmesport, La., were in New Orleans last week to attend the Livo Stock Show and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. They are active Methodist workers, Brother Watson being a steward in our church at Simmesport, and they expressed much interest in the present session of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, pastor of the Mary Werlein Mission and St. Mark's Hall of this city, has shown himself to be the right man in the right place in caring for the difficult work committed to his hands. He has plans in contemplation for erecting a substantial church for the Italians in New Orleans, and we hope to see this needed enterprise consummated soon.

Rev. W. C. Carisle, of Guntown, Miss., has our thanks for some additional subscriptions from his charge. From his letter we take the following note: "I forgot to say in my recent write-up of my summer's work that I found Rev. C. A. Northington very popular on the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit. He will make at Winona one of the best reports from the Corinth District."

We acknowledge the reception of a wedding invitation, which reads as follows: "Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Jones request your presence at the marriage of their ward, Estelle May Lozenby, to Rev. Claude P. Jones, on the evening of Tuesday, Decemher 5, 1916, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at their residence in Gulfport, Miss." We extend in advance our congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. A. J. Davis, of the Waynesboro (Miss.) Circuit, in a business letter to our office appends the following note: "Notwithstanding the bad crop year, I am expecting this charge to make a creditable showing at the Conference in Jackson." Brother Davis' communication brought us 5 subscriptions to the Advocate, 3 of which were new, and for this good service wo extend him our thanks.

From a personal letter to the Editor from Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, we extract the following: "You would have to go a long way to find a more loyal and faithful company of preachers and laymen than we have in this district. We are looking forward to the approaching session of the Mississippi Annual Conference with interest and anticipations of much pleasure."

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Norta Mississippi Conference, seems to have given a good account of himself in his important sphere of service this year. See Rev. J. H. Holder's appreciation of him and his work which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. We are gratified but not surprised to learn that this faithful toiler and long-time friend of ours has made a good record.

Rev. J. A. Smith, the pastor of Meridian College, reports a gracious revival at that institution, in which the preaching was done hy Rev. C. M. Dunaway, who is said to havo given messages of great power. One hundred and ten persons are stated to have professed regeneration during this meeting and the interesting announcement is made that now over 90 per cent of the entire student body are active Christians.

A message fram Bishop Murrah states that Rev. H. S. Spragins, who for the past four years has been presiding elder of the Greenville (Miss.) District, has been transferred to the Memphis Conference and stationed at First Church, Memphis. Brother Spragins is a choice man in every respect and a remarkably gifted and effective preacher. This appointment is an admirable one, but the North Mississippi Conference will give Brother Spragins up with much reluctance.

Dr. Dunbar Rowland, of Jackson, Miss., the accomplished Superintendent of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, is spending some days in the Crescent City in the interest of his work. He favored our office with a call last Monday, and had an engagement that afternoon to play golf with Mr. E. H. Roberts, President of the Bank of Orleans. Dr. Rowland, Mr. Roberts, and the Editor were students together and clubmates at the University of Mississippi, being members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

A press dispatch from Hammond, La., on Nov. 16 reads as follows: "Mr. W. T. Holland, Editor of the St. Helena Echo, published at Greensburg, La., passed through here to-day en route home from New Orleans, where he had been attending the Live Stock Show. He told his friends that he had purchased a carload of fine cattle and hogs and expected to run a stock farm in conjunction with his newspaper and law practice." Evidently Brother Holland, who is a worthy Methodist layman, has learned the fine art of living to an advantage.

Brother C. O. Chalmers, the Puhlisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, will attend each of the three patronizing Conferences of the paper to look after its financial interests. The brethren are urged to see him as early in the sessions as they can, as he may not be able to remain to the final sittings. The need of renewing subscriptions this fall is more urgent than heretofore, since the paper is to be put upon practically a cash basis and those in arrears will he promptly discontinued.

Major D. C. Peyton, President of the American Prison Reform Association, and Mrs. Joseph H. Byers, its Secretary, have heen spending some days in New Orleans in the interest of the Annual Convention of that organization, which is to be held here in 1917. In company with Rev. J. P. Sutton, they visited the Angola penal farm and other places for incarcerating criminals in Louisiana. Major Peyton delivered a strong address at the First Methodist Church at 11 o'clock a. m. last Sunday.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the beloved presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, writes as follows: "Rev. J. W. Thompson will report two new churches on the Meadville charge. This pastor is a great worker and a splendid Christian gentleman. Beulah Chapel, eight miles southeast of Meadville, was dedicated on October 31. The Bude congregation will have the opening of its new $3000 house of worship on December 3. The presiding elder of the district was honored hy being given invitations to attend both of these services."

During the three years of his incumbency as pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shreveport, La., Dr. George S. Sexton has received about 600 members, and five young men in the congregation have heen called to the ministry. Under Dr. Sexton's leadership, a mortgaged indebtedness of $60,000 on our magnificent First Church building was this year wiped out, which, together with the accrued interest and the amount due on the beautiful pipe organ which was also met, brought the total sum of the debt liquidated since the last Annual Conference up to $80,000. Truly, Dr. Sexton is a pastor who does things.

Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, and Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., who were designated by the Millsaps Board of Trustees to secure an oil painting of Bishop W. B. Murrah for the College Chapel, have sent out to the pastors of Mississippi a letter in the interest of this commendable movement. One gentleman has agreed to give $250, and the Alumni of the institution and the preachers and laity of Mississippi have been extended the privilege of having a part in thus honoring this distinguished minister, who was the first President of the College and who for eighteen years directed its affairs with such signal ability. Any funds for this purpose may be sent to Mr. Webster Millsaps Buie, Jackson, Miss.

In its session at Richmond, Va., last week, the Virginia Conference, which is one of the two largest in the connection, in dealing with the question of unification, adopted a paper which Dr. James Cannon, Jr., in a letter to the Editor, says "squarely face the difficulties which confront us, and yet express faith that the Churches will be able to devise a plan which will redound to the glory of God." The general Conference action in declaring for placing the Negroes in a separate Church was endorsed, and the Commission was urged to have its proceedings taken down stenographically and published in a daily bulletin, that the Methodist public may be definitely informed concerning all the deliherations of that body.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Alexandria, La., writes: "We are closing the Conference year with a week of revival services, in which the pastor is doing the preaching, and Rev. C. V. Breithaupt is leading the singing. Although the weather has not been conducive to such an attendance as we might have had, the interest has been good and about 30 persons have joined the Church up to the present. This brings the number of additions that we have had during the year up to nearly 100. The spiritual life of the congregation has grown deeper and richer, and we are looking forward to the day when this will be one of the great churches of Methodism." We like Brother Coleman's way of winding up the Conference year.

THE ORPHANAGE AND THANKSGIVING.

Just as we are about to close our forms, we are in receipt of the following message from Rev. J. B. Randolph, which we pass on to the brethren:

"Dear Brother Meek: Will you please call the attention of the pastors throughout Mississippi to the importance of observing Thanksgiving, and ask them to please present the claims of our 225 orphan children and take a free-will offering for them at the Thanksgiving service? We are feeling the high cost of living at the Orphanage and our needs will be correspondingly greater. In the case of the North Mississippi Conference preachers, who will be at the Annual Conference in Winona on Thanksgiving, please ask them to arrange for the Thanksgiving service in their churches before they leave for Conference. Everything is moving on nicely in the Home.

Jackson, Miss. "J. B. RANDOLPH,
"Supt. Methodist Orphanage."

A BIG JOB AND A BIG MAN.

The greatest task that confronts us to-day is the mobilization and training of the Methodist army. The best place to do this is in the Sunday school. Our great religious strategists and leaders have worked out and thoroughly tried out plans for doing this. They have put instructions in books and pamphlets, but the man of the hour is the man who has learned the best things and can give them to the pastors and people, the Conference Field Secretary. He is their teacher, helper, and drill master. We will never have an adequately trained, instructed Sunday School army until we put a sufficient number of these Conference workers in the field and let them give their whole time to this important task. This is the pressing need of the hour. This is the big job of the Church. It needs big men, trained men, hard-working men.

North Mississippi is exceedingly fortunate in having just such a man in Rev. R. H. B. Gladney. He is giving a good account of himself in the field. He is a hard worker. No idle bread does he eat. He is a gospel preacher and is touching the vital needs in every charge. He is a thoroughly well equipped man and is giving the Church the full benefit of his information and training. He is a big Sunday school man and should be kept at the job. The writer is in position to know whereof he speaks. No man in our Conference has done a greater work than Gladney. He has our thanks. Let every preacher rally to his support.

J. H. HOLDER.
Sardis, Miss.

FROM BATON ROUGE, LA.

May I speak a few words about our pastor, Rev. C. A. Battle, who has labored so faithfully among us for the past two years? He realizes the sacredness and solemnity of his office and his preaching is "sound speech that cannot he condemned," always exalting Christ above all and putting special emphasis upon the spiritual life as the "one thing needful." We sincerely trust that the Conference will see fit to return him, not only for one year, but to the limit of his possible term.

A MEMBER.

GIBSON MEMORIAL WINDOW FUND.

Since our last report we have received contributions on the Gibson Memorial window as follows: Geo. B. Hackett, $5; H. P. Lewis, Jr., $2; J. A. Wells, $2.50; J. W. Price, $5; W. W. Perry, La. Conf., $1, and B. W. Lewis, $2. I have an idea that all the preachers want to contribute to this fund and that most of them intend to do it, but, like many preachers often find themselves—they just have not the money now.

To overcome this embarrassment, if you will write to me and indicate how much you will give me at Conference. I can make arrangements to take care of the situation. Brethren, the cause is very urgent or I should not continue this appeal.

Thanking everybody for everything, I am your humble servant, L. L. ROBERTS.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the New Orleans District was held Monday in Rayne Memorial Church. Miss E. Isles led the devotional service, opening the meeting, and, after finishing the business of the morning session, the following addresses were made: Mrs. C. F. Neibergall, led the round table discussion on young people's work; "The Missionary Voice" and "The Young Christian Worker," by Mrs. R. H. Harper; "Missions within Our Conferences, St. Mark's, French Mission and the Mary Werlein," by Miss E. Illes and Rev. W. E. Thomas.

After a delightful luncheon served by the women of the Rayne Memorial Church and a devotional service, Mrs. S. H. Werlein told "How to Use the Bulletin;" Mrs. J. Carter spoke on Bible study; Mrs. William Lamb on mission study and Mrs. R. H. Harper on children's work. Mrs. C. F. Neibergall presented the budget plan, the harvest plan, and the Scarritt plan of financing the mission work.

NEW ORLEANS EPWORTH LEAGUE UNION.

The Union Epworth League of New Orleans held its monthly meeting Monday, November 13, at the Algiers Methodist Church. It was decided to change the name of the organization to The Orleans Epworth League Conference, which widens the scope of the work so as to include all Methodist Churches in the New Orleans District, about twenty in number, among those outside of the city being such as Bogalusa, Plaquemine, Donaldsonville, etc., it being proposed to organize a league in every charge. Louisiana Avenue League, newly organized, was represented for the first time.

Mr. S. A. Montgomery, a well known lawyer of this city, gave a lecture on "Men—Some I Have Known and Some Others." It was something out of the ordinary run of talks, depicting characters who influence our lives, and those present carried away an inspiration.

The crowd was entertained by the Algiers League, the home League taking the attendance banner, with Epworth Church League a close second. —Times-Picayune.

DR. COOPER APPRECIATED.

Whereas, in the providence of God, and in the workings of the Church, it has been our good fortune to have with us as presiding elder for the last eight months of this Conference year Dr. I. W. Cooper; and

Whereas, Dr. Cooper has proven himself faithful and efficient in this office, as in all other offices he has filled in the Church;

Resolved, 1, That we hereby express our high appreciation of his faithful service, brotherly and genial deportment, and very helpful preaching, which has been an uplift to our spiritual lives.

Resolved, 2, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this conference, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy presented to Dr. Cooper.

Signed: J. M. Wilson, J. G. Ainsworth, W. W. Kimble, J. B. Newell, B. G. Seliers, J. S. Decell, R. E. Welch, J. H. Grice.

The above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Bayou Pierre charge, Mississippi Conference.

Nov. 11, 1916.

IN COMMENDATION OF REV. J. I. HOFFPAUIR.

Whereas, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, has held the last quarterly conference of his quadrennium for our circuit, and has fulfilled his duties during his entire administration in a most acceptable and judicious manner, and has cooperated in every way possible in the promotion of the interests of the kingdom among us by his wise counsel and unwearying ardor; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Eunice charge, do hereby express our gratitude for these aforesaid services, and do exceedingly regret the termination of our official relations with Brother Hoffpauir for the time being. It is our sincere desire and prayer that God will bless him and continue his opportunities for future service, preserve his health and the health of his loved ones, and that success may as heretofore crown his labors.

Resolved, further, that we send a copy of these resolutions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: S. F. White, F. S. Crabtree, T. T. Steward, Committee.

A HAPPY PASTOR.

Dear Advocate: On the night of October 25 there was driven to Dr. J. S. Austin's garage, about 50 steps from the parsonage, a new 1917 model five-passenger Ford car, which has been presented to the Oak Ridge pastor to facilitate his pastoral work, and to this day we have been unable to find words to express our appreciation for this generous act on the part of our parishioners and friends. But upon the first opportunity after receiving the car, we got on our knees before God and thanked Him for causing the car to be given us and begged Him to enable us to use it to "spread Scriptural holiness over these lands."

The men instrumental in our getting it were F. L. Austin, steward at Oak Ridge, and J. L. Hintson, a citizen of the Oak Ridge community, though not a member of any church. These men can never know here just how grateful we feel to them, nor can the others who contributed know our feelings toward them. May God richly, abundantly, and constantly bless them all, and may not a single one concerned in the matter fail to have an abundant entrance after awhile into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus Christ! Amen!

Just before the car was ordered, Brother Austin said, "When you get it you must write to the Advocate about it," and I said that I intended to do so. I am writing, but my words fall far short of conveying my feelings. But, by the grace of God, we intend to show our appreciation in actions rather than by words.

I am glad to say that we are still moving towards a full report for Conference. We have necessarily been hindered some on account of affliction and death in my wife's family. However the Lord is touching hearts all over the circuit and we are encouraged on every side. Reader, please pray much for me.

Yours in Christ,
J. A. WELLS, Pastor.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

If men were as eager to discover good as evil and had the same delight in spreading the report of it; if good examples were made public as the bad ones always are, the world would be better for it.—Mormontel.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF
Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.
If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.
Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give ful information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Sunday School

OCTOBER TEACHER-TRAINING ENROLLMENT.

"Every Sunday school is challenged to face the following statement and to say how it will answer it: No Sunday school has a right to expect to 'find' a sufficient number of well-equipped officers and teachers for the effective accomplishment of its work. The Sunday school that does not select and train its teachers may expect, as a rule, to fail in finding efficient teachers and consequently to this extent will fail in its task as a Sunday school. The selection and the training of an adequate corps of teachers is not, therefore, a merely ornamental process of the exceptional school, but the essential condition of progress and efficiency for every school."—Rev. John W. Shackford, Superintendent Department of Teacher-Training, Southern Methodist Church.

An examination of the enrollment of teacher-training classes and students for the month of October shows that nearly one-half of the total number of classes enrolled and more than one-half of the total number of students enrolled for that month came from the seven Conferences of the Gulf Division. The figures are as follows:

Alabama Conference—three classes, 66 students, at Atmore, DeFuniak Springs, Montgomery. Little Rock Conference—One class, 13 students, at Hot Springs; one individual student. Louisiana Conference—four classes, 55 students, at Homer, Plain Dealing, Pioneer, Selma. Mississippi Conference—six classes, 66 students, at Brandon, Carpenter, Hazelhurst, Jackson, Moss Point, Silver City. North Alabama Conference—ten classes, 223 students, at Albany, Albertville, Bessemer, Bexar, Breenan, Covin, Detroit, Ensley, Hartselle, Hacklehurg, 23 individual students. North Arkansas Conference—one class, seven students, at Danville. North Mississippi Conference—eight classes, 55 students, at Crenshaw, Fulton, Potts Camp (2), Rosedale, Shannon, West Point, Winhorn. Total for the Gulf Division—33 classes, 509 students. The aggregate for the Church was 70 classes, 958 students.

Of the diplomas awarded during the month the Division secured four First Course at Montgomery, and one Advanced Course at Greenshoro, both in the Alabama Conference.

Brother Wolford, Field Secretary for the North Alahama Conference, again leads the Church in the number of classes and students enrolled for the month. Brother Gladney, Field Secretary for the North Mississippi Conference, comes second in number of classes, but the Alahama Conference, the Mississippi Conference and the South Georgia Conference lead him in number of students enrolled.

A. L. DIETRICH.

Don't think because you have taken many remedies in vain that your case is incurable. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured many seemingly hopeless cases of scrofua, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney complaint, dyspepsia and general debility. Take Hood's.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OCCASION.

In the annals of our Church it does not seem to have been a custom among pastors to call their official boards together for social enjoyment, and to feast. As a rule, the social feature of a stewards' meeting is all too lacking, and the real enjoyment there is not sufficient to make it very attractive. It is purely a business meeting at which business is dispatched as rapidly as possible, and when the last item has been disposed of, and the meeting stands adjourned, each member hastens to resume his own affairs without feeling, perhaps, that he has been drawn closer to his fellow-man.

Rev. J. L. Smith is rounding out his fourth year as pastor on the Gallman charge in good style. He has been faithful at his post each year, but his crowning work has been done this, his fourth year. Substantial improvements have marked his activities during the year. The parsonage has been enlarged and beautified; he reports all his church buildings in good repair, and he expects to go to Conference with full financial reports, and many added to the Church.

As an expression of his love and appreciation for their faithfulness, on the eighth day of November, he called his official board together at the parsonage and gave them a dining. Sixteen stewards, the presiding elder and his wife, four or five ladies, and this writer were present. The table was spread in the yard just in front of the parsonage. At 1 o'clock p. m. a sumptuous dinner was served. Immediately after dinner, Dr. Cooper arose and called Brother Smith, and with some appropriate remarks presented him with a beautiful gold watch given by the churches he had served so acceptably.

After an hour of social converse, the elder called the stewards together, in what we sometimes call a fifth quarterly conference. The small deficits that remained on the pastor's salary, and the collections ordered by the Annual Conference were satisfactorily guaranteed, and it was resolved that the pastor's salary for next year would be increased $100. See how a faithful pastor and a wide-awake presiding elder can prepare the way for the incoming preacher!

Brother and Sister Smith were truly royal in their entertainment. Nothing, on their part, was left undone in ministering to the pleasure of their guests. Late in the afternoon, as the company dispersed, we all felt that the day had been spent, both pleasantly and profitably, and we wondered why it had been left for Dr. Smith and his excellent wife to introduce an occasion so unique. H. L. NORTON.

Are You Out of Sorts, impatient, melancholy, pessimistic, down on the world? If so, your liver is out of shape. Healthy people look at the world through rosy glasses. Buy a bottle of Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Invigorator, price only 50 cents, and watch your spirits pick up. It cleanses and invigorates your sluggish liver and puts you on your feet again. No arsenic and no calomel. Purely a vegetable compound.

For sale everywhere. Manufacutred by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

TIME IS SHORT.

Oh, my friends, you who are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year; you who are keeping wretched quarrels alive because you can not quite make up your mind that now is the day to sacrifice your pride and kill them; you who are passing men sullenly upon the street, not speaking to them ont of some silly spite, and yet knowing that it would fill you with shame and remorse if you heard that one of these men were dead to-morrow; you who are letting your neighbor starve till you hear that he is dying of starvation; or letting your friend's heart ache for a word of appreciation or sympathy, which you mean to give him some day; if you could know and see and feel, all of a sudden, that "the time is short," how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do.—Phillips Brooks.

No evangelization is Christian that is not educational; no edncation is Christian that is not evangelistic.—J. F. Goucher.

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Bad blood is responsible for more ailments than anything else. It causes catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has been wonderfully successful in purifying and enriching the blood, removing scrofula and other humors, and building up the whole system. Take it—give it to all the family so as to avoid illness. Get it to-day.

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Heed the Warning If You Have a Cough!

The deep-seated cough that does not yield to ordinary treatment may lead to distressing pulmonary troubles. Or it may bring on a chronic bronchial affection. Many persons now incapacitated might have avoided such disastrous results by timely care and efficient medical treatment.

Among the latter Eckman's Alterative has an enviable record. It is a lime-bearing preparation which is easily assimilated in most instances. Where used in connection with nourishing food and proper living, it has given widespread relief.

Its freedom from poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any nature whatsoever renders it safe to try. And its content of calcium gives it tonic value. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast; and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

BACKACHE—KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Cut This Out—It Is Worth Money.

DON'T MISS THIS. Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2837 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, for bronchial and la grippe coughs, colds and croup; Foley Kidney Pills, for lame back, weak kidneys, rheumatism, bladder troubles; and Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic for constipation, biliousness, headache and sluggish bowels. You can try these three excellent remedies for only 5c.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Class of the First Year.

Each member of this class will please put into our hands before December 12 certificates of this grading, if he has stood examination on the Course in the Correspondence School or the Seashore Divinity School. If he expects to be examined by us at the Annual Conference, let us know; and be sure to meet us at 3 p. m., December 12, in the Sunday school room of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson. Please heed this.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, For the Committee.

CRAWFORD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are winding up for Conference. This has been a busy year with us. Our beautiful church at this place was destroyed by lightning on Sept. 13, 1915, and much of this year has been taken up in rebuilding it. We are now rejoicing over the new edifice which is completed, except for a little minor work. It is painted inside and outside. A good lighting plant has been installed. The house is seated with circular pews of mahogany finish. We added three Sunday school rooms (the first building had only two by division). We were presented with a very fine bell by Captain A. J. Ervin in memory of his sainted wife. The church is insured, and every cent that we owed on it is paid. It is now ready for dedication, and we are happy.

I was assisted in my meetings by Brothers Halfacre and Baird. These young men acquitted themselves well. We had a spirituai uplift at each of the two churches, and, as a result, we added 16 to our membership.

Brother Woollard, our presiding elder, has been faithful in his work. He held our fourth quarterly conference yesterday. We can not yet report in full on finances, as no part of our State has been hit harder by the boll weevil and the general failure of crops than this section. But we will do our best.

Well, we hope to meet with the brethren at Conference, and we trust that we shall have a good session. Let our young men suffer a word of exhortation. That is, let them be at their places when their names are called. How often does it happen when a young man's name is called that he is out of the house, and may be out of the town. This absence will never help to prepare him for usefulness in the ministry or to learn the polity of our Church. D. W. BABB, P. C.

BE UP AND DOING.

"Up and be doing" is the word that comes from God for each of us. Leave some "good work" behind you that shall not be wholly lost when you have passed away. Do something worth living for, worth dying for. Is there no want, no suffering, no sorrows that you can relieve? is there no act of tardy justice, no deed of cheerful kindness, no long-forgotten duty that you can perform? Is there no reconciliation of some ancient quarrel, no payment of some long-outstanding debt, no courtesy, or love, no honor, to be rendered to those to whom it has long been due; no charitable, humble, useful deed by which you can promote the glory of God, or good will among men, or peace upon earth? If there be any such deed, in God's name, in Christ's name, go and do it.—Dean Stanley.

A HEALTHY BODY.

Do you suffer from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, or other forms of liver trouble? A healthy liver means a healthy body. When constipated don't poison yourself by failing to take the proper treatment. Don't force your perspiration to carry off through your skin pores more than its share of the impurities of your body by failing to keep your bowels clean and healthy. Take Van Lax for your liver. It is harmless, contains no calomel or habit-forming drugs, is pleasant in taste and results. It promotes a healthy condition in your entire digestive system. Take Van Lax and keep your body healthy. Sold by all reliable dealers. In bottles 50c. Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

"STAND FAST IN THE LORD."

We as Christians should have our faith so strongly anchored in God as to make us as unshakable as the Rock of Gibraltar, which in the English language is a symbol of immovable firmness, assaulted as it is by the rough waves of the Mediterranean Sea. False philosophies and erroneous religious teachings surround us on every hand. They come to us disguised so as to appear to be the truth, though they are far removed from it; and the evil one succeeds in entrapping many thousands of souls in these nets which he has so shrewdly spread. We are bewildered and almost overwhelmed by the snares which magnetic personalities, affecting great piety, but being really and truly tools of the devil, whether consciously or unconsciously (that matters little, so far as we are concerned), have laid for those people on whom the Church has a weak hold and who are not fixed in their convictions about anything. But we have had sufficient warning to enable us to prevail against the wiles of the devil. Christ said, "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." And again, "For there will arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch, that, if it were possible, they would deceive the very elect."

The rise of many isms and the tendency of the thought of the world toward materialism as regards religion have clearly shown the truth of the Master's words just quoted. Nineteen hundred years ago, more or less, the Samaritan woman said unto Christ at Jacob's well, "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet," and to-day in the twentieth century we are beginning to realize partly, if not yet fully, that hers was a true statement. We are living in perilous times, so far as our spiritual life is concerned. Men and brethren, what shall we do? Let us not be quick to go off after fads or to take up with things that are a mere semblance of Christianity. We must remain true to "the faith once delivered unto the saints." Doctrinal soundness must be stressed as never before. Our grip upon God must grow firmer each day that we live and our trust in Him more implicit.

It is well that we should seek the good that is in our fellow-men and that we should try to cultivate it, but we must not be discouraged if to begin with we find a preponderance of evil in the barren and uncultivated soil of many of God's prodigal sons and daughters. The unregenerate human heart has never been and never will be much affected by Christianity indirectly, for it is only directly by conversion that any change of thinking and living can take place in the heart of man, from which proceeds every good and evil thing. The fight between right and wrong has been going on through countless ages, but it is fiercer now than ever. Let us make a final stand for righteousness and truth in this world. We go forth to meet the foe not in our own strength, but in the Lord's strength, remembering the words of our God, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit." May every true believer be strengthened, and may he be given understanding in all things!

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

Small Wounds Often Fatal.

It is the little cuts, bruises, sores or burns that so often prove fatal by their being neglected and resulting in blood poison. There is no use taking any risk when a 25c box of Gray's Ointment will give you protection. A little of this extraordinary ointment, if applied at once to the affected part, will allay pain and heal the wound. For nearly a century it has been in daily use in a vast number of homes and its effectiveness is attested by hundreds of letters which we have received from those who use it. For sale at most drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

REDUCED RATES.

All railroads in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference have granted special rates for the meeting of that body. A certificate must be secured each time a ticket is purchased in going to the Conference. These certificates, when properly signed by Rev. Olin Ray and the agent of the I. C. R. R. at Winona, will secure reduced rates returning.

Fraternally,

TRUE CHARITY.

Charity does not require of us that we should not see the faults of others, but that we should avoid all needless and voluntary observing of them and that we should not be blind to their good qualities when we are so sharp-sighted to their bad ones. What if others are weak, is that a reason for you no longer keeping any friendship with them? You who complain of their troubling you, do you give nobody any trouble? You that are so shocked at the faults you see—if all to whom you have been troublesome should return the trouble they have had with you, you would be oppressed with the weight. And, besides, even supposing that men had nothing to reproach you with, yet consider further what obligations you lie under from God to show forbearance towards others, for which you know you have such abundant occasion at His hands. —Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

NEWTON DISTRICT NOTES.

The Laurel (Mississippi) First Church was honored by having the Missionary Council field worker, Mrs. S. S. Harris, occupy the pulpit at the morning and evening services on Sunday, Oct. 22. Her messages were so intensely interesting and the great need for more workers so clearly explained that it was no surprise at the close of the night session when a splendid young Christian woman volunteered, with the assistance of her Sunday school class, to support a Bible woman in China. This only illustrated Mrs. Harris' often repeated statement that when Folks heard Facts, Funds were the natural result.

Newton came next, and an afternoon and an evening meeting were held, both being well attended and great interest being manifested. It was a great pleasure to have present several representatives from Forest, Hickory, Decatur, and Union. The hospitality of the Newton people added largely to the pleasure of the visitors, and a few hours spent with our beloved Mrs. J. M. Weems was a benediction to the District Secretary. We have the promise of at least one new auxiliary as a result of Mrs. Harris' inspiring talks at Newton.

The last visited in the Newton District was Philadelphia, where two services were held, as usual. The interest manifested was very gratifying, and the hospitality of the good people of Philadelphia was lavish. The only regret in regard to Mrs. Harris' visit was its brevity. Her mind is such a storehouse of knowledge and her heart so full of human love and sympathy for her fellow-man, that her very presence was an inspiration, and if we could have had her long enough to reach each auxiliary, we feel that the district would have grown by leaps and bounds; but we are exceedingly grateful to the Council for sending Mrs. Harris, even for a short stay, and we believe that her work will result in great good, not only to the auxiliaries, but particularly to the District Secretaries, who are bound to be more efficient workers, from their association with this good woman.

Mrs. J. C. CLARK,
Dist. Secretary.

A MEETING AT ST. MARK'S HALL.

Dear Mrs. Harrell: I want to tell you and the readers of the Advocate of a meeting that the ladies of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, held at St. Mark's Hall, Tuesday, November 7.

Some two weeks ago I had the pleasure of meeting Miss Gibson, the new head-resident of St. Mark's, Miss Isles, Miss Capers, and Miss Cason at a luncheon and found them so charming and so enthusiastic about their work that the thought came to my mind, why not arrange a reception for these ladies that the ladies of Carrollton Avenue Church might have the pleasure of becoming acquainted with them and gain the inspiration that had come to me? After asking Miss Gibson if the plan would be agreeable to them, arrangements were made to have the reception at St. Mark's Hall.

Every one was enthusiastic about it from the start. Several of our members filled their automobiles, these stopping at Mary Werlein Mission, where Mrs. Herr, our missionary there, showed them over the building and gave them a splendid talk. Mrs. Herr joined the ladies in the trip to St. Mark's and was one of the honoraries of the occasion. The other ladies went together on the street car, and later we found that we numbered about forty-three in all.

The large rooms on the second floor were filled with lovely flowers, and the committees arranged for served the delightful refreshments, which were furnished by the Carrollton ladies.

After an inspection of the building and the different kinds of work being carried on there, the ladies assembled in the chapel and, led by our pastor's wife, Mrs. N. E. Joyner, held a short but very precious prayer service.

Miss Gibson told of how we could help in the work there. Some personal workers were needed in the sewing school; one, who could play the piano, in the kindergarten; old magazines and children's books, also scrap-books for the reading room; sofa pillows, pictures, or any furnishings for the girls' domestic science rooms; clean, soft rags for the clinic; new pieces for models in the sewing classes.

As she talked, one could see that every person in the room was deeply interested, and we trust that many who read these lines may see the wonderful opportunity and will help supply these needs. More than all else, let our prayers ascend to our God for this work and for the lovely Christian women who have given their lives in his service there.

Mrs. JOHN CARTER.

A LETTER OF ENCOURAGEMENT FROM NASHVILLE.

My Dear Sisters:

The reports for the last quarter are so good that we come to you with a note of rejoicing. The Treasurer's report shows an increase of $37,877.98 in the Conference collections for the three quarters over the same period in 1915. Never before have the collections been more encouraging. For this we praise God.

The pledge however has fallen below our expectations, and we face the fact that the last quarter must be our most important, and that there must be earnest effort to crowd into the remaining two months that which we have failed to do in the first ten.

At the Council, $231,753 was pledged, and $123,526 has been received. Referring to your records (Mississippi Conference), we find your Conference promised $5000, and that $2644.21 has been received, which shows that $2,355.79 must be collected before the end of this year, if you measure up to your pledge. Please send this message to our auxiliaries, and urge them to fulfill their pledges. Our missionaries and institutions depend upon you, and He who has called us to this service is keeping a record of our efforts. We cannot fail Him or them.

Remember we serve not ourselves in this beloved work; nor, as dearly as we love it, is the work done for the Church. This work is done for Christ, "whom having not seen we love." Our missionaries and deaconesses and teachers are his hands, his tongue, his feet; and we make it possible for them to take his message.

Yours with love,
Mrs. R. W. MacDONELL,
Mrs. E. B. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Corresponding Secretary for the Mississippi Conference Society, sends us a copy of a letter sent to the District Secretaries, relative to the above. In it she says: "It speaks of their urgent concern and voices my own very great desire that you push the matter of the pledge NOW—early in the fourth quarter. Will you not make out for each auxiliary in your district an itemized statement of the amount due from that auxiliary on the dues, and the amount pledged at the Annual Meeting; credit the statement with the amount paid during the three quarters now past, so that each one will know what we are expecting of them this quarter?

"Ask if it would be possible to close up this account by or before the first of January. If there should be a slight shortage on the pledge (and there has always been), and I could know it by the first of January, I could raise it before the twentieth. But as we are slow in closing up the accounts, I do not find out what the shortage is until the books are closed. Let us make an effort to have this different this year.

"Remember our Resolution to have a Harvest Day."

STOPS TOBACCO HABIT.

Elder's Sanitarium, located at 513 Main St., St. Louis, Mo., has published a book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be stopped in three to five days.

As they are distributing this book free, any one wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

A LITTLE UNUSUAL.

Dear Dr. Meek: I think we had an unusual quarterly conference last night for the New Albany Church (and I am inclined to think it would be unusual for most churches). Everything was reported "In full" by the Board of Stewards, and I had the pleasure of making out my statistical report to the Annual Conference before the meeting of the quarterly conference. We have "hard times" up this way, and prices are high with us; but we don't talk about it. I do not recall having heard a steward mention hard times in discussing Church matters. I am sure you have surmised that this board must be a faithful, loyal, hopeful, and royal set of men, and so they are. S. L. POPE.

New Albany, Miss., Nov. 15, 1916.

Turn Hair Dark With Sage Tea

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE."

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am not given to much writing, but I can not refrain from speaking a word of appreciation of the article in a recent issue of the Advocate entitled "Millsaps Preachers' League." Three things prompt and give me courage to let my voice be heard in your paper:

1. A deep and genuine appreciation for the message from that much-loved organization—the Millsaps Preachers' League. It is the first definite news I have heard from the League since 1911.

2. To correct a seeming error or misstatement. Relative to the present enrollment (twenty-eight of the thirty-five in the college), the writer said: "This is a better showing than was made any year since the establishment of the College." If, from the founding of the College in 1891, all records were available they would show that for the years 1906-'07, and, with one exception in 1908, every ministerial student in Millsaps College was an active member of the Preachers' League. The records would further show that for the sessions of 1909 and 1910 this organization maintained about the same ratio (28 to 35) as the present ratio; and during the sessions 1906-'07-'08 and '09 the League held weekly meetings.

3. To let the Millsaps Preachers' League know that I am deeply interested in it, and rejoice with untold fullness in its success. I think I speak the minds of all true Leaguers in the above utterance. It does my heart good to hear that the League is striving to take its rightful place above the various other organizations of the College. If the "specially called of God" can not take the lead in every phase of life, I ask the question, Who Can?

I want to thank Mr. Butler for writing this good and encouraging news. To me it was like a letter from home, for Millsaps College is next to my childhood country home in love and fond recollections.

I hope the League will favor us with a "write-up" occasionally.

A. JOE BEASLEY.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

"God's hold on us makes our hold on Him eternal."

BOYCE CHARGE (La. Conf.)

Dear Advocate: As the Conference year is approaching a close, a few words with reference to the work accomplished on the Boyce charge this year may be of interest. When Brother Perry came on this work this year our Sunday school was well organized and thriving. Through the year the school has grown in interest, in helpfulness, and in service. This was then the only Methodist Sunday school north of Alexandria on this side. Since that time, Brother Perry, with the help of Mr. J. A. Ingram and others, has organized schools at Zimmerman, Collins, and Eden, near Boyce, and others near Chenevville, the southern end of the charge. Brother Perry is a splendid Sunday school pastor and he has won and held the love and esteem of the workers of all denominations in this parish. While no spectacular methods have been used, our church work has gone steadily forward and the year just closing has marked a deepening of the spiritual life of our members and a great ingathering of souls for the Master. This has been chiefly due to the fearless, yet loving preaching of our pastor this year.

The interests of our church paper have not been neglected, and our charge is leading the State in the number of subscriptions to the Advocate.

The Church has prospered in a material as well as a spiritual way. Our parsonage has been improved and beautified, and plans have been laid for building Sunday school rooms to our Church. Like the Psalmist, we feel able to say, "Bless the Lord, O my Soul."

LITERARY NOTICE.

God's Minute—A book of 365 daily prayers—60 seconds long—arranged in calendar form—a prayer to a page, with a verse of Scripture at the top of the page on encouragement to worship. The prayers were written expressly for this book by 365 of the most eminent evangelical clergymen and laymen in the English-speaking world. Cloth, 334 pages; price, 35 cents net. The Vir Publishing Company, 200 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The idea of the book was suggested by the thought that so many Christian people offer as an excuse for not having family devotions, that they haven't time. This spiritual contribution to the Christian world's literature proves that only a minute devoted to the worship of God can be made an inspiring one to begin the duties of the day.

Among the contributors to the book are Wilfred T. Grenfell, Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, Reverends John Clifford, F. B. Meyer, Washington Gladden, Hugh Black, Timothy Stone, Bishop Quayle, Russell H. Conwell, David J. A. L. Burrell, Hoyt M. Dobbs, Ira Landrith, Floyd W. Tomkins, Bishop Woodcock, Maud Ballington Booth, President E. Y. Mullins and many others eminent in the evangelical religious world. The first edition of 21,000 copies was sold in advance of publication. The publishers have made the book possible of the widest circulation by the modest price at which it can be purchased.

We ought to rejoice when we find ourselves being tried. It is a sign that trouble is being taken over us, that God is fighting for us. We may comfort ourselves with the thought that God would not allow us to be in a position where honorable escape was impossible.—W. E. Orchard.

To Live Long!

A receipe given by a famous physician for long life was: "Keep the kidneys in good order! Try to eliminate thru the skin and intestines the poisons that otherwise clog the kidneys. Avoid eating meat as much as possible; avoid too much salt, alcohol, tea. Try a milk and vegetable diet. Drink plenty of water, and exercise so you sweat—the skin helps to eliminate the toxic poisons and uric acid."

For those past middle life, for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation, as backache, scalding "water," or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, "rusty" joints, stiffness, get Anuric at the drug store. This is a wonderful eliminator of uric acid and was discovered by Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. If your druggist does not keep it send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package and you will know that it is many times more potent than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

WHEN IT LOOKS DARK to any weak or ailing woman, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to her help. For "female complaints" pains, internal inflammation or ulceration, bearing-down sensations, and all chronic weaknesses and derangements, this is the proven remedy. It's the only one so sure that it can be guaranteed. "Favorite Prescription" will benefit or cure, in the case of every tired and afflicted woman.

An easily procured vegetable pill is made up of May-apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloes, and the root of jalap, made into a tiny pellet and coated with sugar. It was first put into ready-to-use form by Dr. Pierce nearly 50 years ago. Almost every drug store in this country sells these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c—simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They have Dr. R. V. Pierce's stamp.

BENEVOLENCE NOT RELIGION.

A man recently undertook to justify himself in a conversation with me for abstention from church-going and from saying his prayers. He said: "It seems to me that doing one's duty to one's neighbors as one would be done by is good enough religion for anybody." I told him it was not religion at all, for it had nothing to do with God. Religion is concerned with our relations with God; and to practice religion means to cultivate these relations and to get continually into more effectual personal touch with God. "Suppose," I said, "I were to say to my father, 'I love you with all my heart, and therefore I am going to do all I can to serve your children, my brethren; but I had rather let it go at this, and not be obliged to meet you;' would that be a proper state of affairs? Surely not, and yet it would be strictly as logical as to make the doing to our neighbors as we would be done by an excuse for refusing to enter the house of God and cutting His acquaintance."—Rev. FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Whoever is conscious of a desire to live better than he has been living, to him Christ comes as truly as He ever came to men who were mending their nets beside the Galilean lake. We make a mistake when we wait for any other call than that.—George Hodges.

The remedy against death is God; He caused us to live; He implanted in our hearts this mysterious terror; but why did He? He did it that we might learn the more to trust Him as being ever present with us; as being around us; sustaining us, taking us, as it were, in His arms — the arms of a loving Father.—Capes.

When thou prayest, remember to say little, and to mean every word. Rather do not pray at all than pray without thinking. Ask for the Holy Spirit, that He may never leave thee. Pray as if Jesus stood beside thee listening; pray anywhere, and at any time, especially at evening and morning, remembering that prayer from a pure heart is sweet as the fragrance of flowers.—Robert Bird.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 63—No. 48. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3171.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1916. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

EDITORIAL.

"By all means use some time to be alone;
Salute thyself—see what thy soul doth wear;
Dare to look within thy chest, for 'tis thine own;
And tumble up and down what thou find'st there."

* * *

The Master honors reliance upon him. In the spiritual kingdom the self-sufficient are the inefficient, and they who know their own weakness are strong in the power of God. There is a Scriptural basis for the old aphorism, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."

* * *

The spirit of the preacher in the pulpit colors his message, either strengthening or weakening it. No sermon can be separated from the true personality of the man who delivers it. Character is never dumb—on the contrary, it ever speaks, whether one is conscious of it or not.

* * *

The following appeared in a secular daily just prior to the late national election: "In one of the leading Methodist Churches in St. Louis, instead of the regular prayer meeting service, the election returns will be announced, private wires having been installed for that purpose. During the evening refreshments will be served." We scarcely need to say that if there was any foundation for this report, we think that the minister who set aside his prayer meeting for the purpose assigned is to be pitied. We confess that we are somewhat skeptical about the matter, however, as few churches hold their regular prayer meetings on Tuesday nights.

* * *

There is a strong and subtle temptation to seek to achieve what the world calls success in Christian work; but the important question is, when the Master scrutinizes the record, what will he adjudge to be the chaff, and what the wheat? There is undoubtedly in this day much counterfeit Christianity, which parades with great glitter and show. One of the most discouraging things in the existing situation is that the world has come into the Church sufficiently to corrupt largely its ideals. This is all the more reason why the true disciple of Jesus should remember that his "citizenship is in heaven" and strive in his labors to accomplish results that are in harmony with its standards.

* * *

We do not think that Methodism has been helped by its drift toward ritualism. We can hardly hope to rival the Catholic and Episcopal Churches in that respect. If people are hunting that, they are apt to go where they can get the best that is to be had in that line. Neither can Methodism boast of an antiquity reaching far back toward the days of the Apostles. The simplicity of its worship, the Scripturalness of its teaching, and its emphasis upon heartfelt religion have constituted the glory of our Church in the past, and if she is wise she will adhere to these same characteristics in the years to come. If she is true to her Lord and true to herself, her best days, we dare say, are yet to be.

BUT ONE WAY.

There is no new road to heaven. The way our fathers went is the way that we must go. There are some things that do not change. A child comes into the world in the twentieth century in the same manner that he did in the first century; and the human soul finds its way into the divine kingdom by the same process now as in the beginning. And along precisely the same path it must go forward to the acquisition of spiritual strength, holiness, and fitness to dwell with the pure and good forever in the Father's house on high. The essential elements of Christianity are immutable. And so, for that matter, are the fundamental principles that underlie all the established sciences.

BISHOP ALPHEUS WATERS WILSON,

Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who fell asleep in Jesus at his home in Baltimore, Md., on Tuesday, November 21.

Bishop Wilson had just visited some of the Annual Conferences, at which he spoke with remarkable clearness and force. Though feeble, it was not thought that the close of his extraordinary life was so near at hand, and his death was unexpected. The news of it has created widespread sorrow throughout the bounds of Southern Methodism. The loss of this majestic minister would have been great at any time; but at this critical period, from a human standpoint, it seems wellnigh irreparable. For nearly half a century he had been a commanding figure in the Church to which he devoted his life, and the historian will give him a large place in its annals. Being in our office for only a few hours between Conferences, we cannot at present write of his great career—his monumental work. Concerning that we shall have something further to say later. We extend sympathy to the bereaved relatives, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them.

CHRISTIAN HYMNS OUT AND THE DANCE IN.

We take the following from the Times-Picayune of November 10:

"From Dr. Mendel, editor of the Jewish Ledger, a note was received by the New Orleans School Board, at its meeting Thursday, protesting against the practice of singing Christian hymns during Christmas celebrations in the schools. The communication stated that singing hymns violated the secular sanctity of the schools, and gave offense to a number of parents, and attention was called to the decision of the Supreme Court of March 22, 1915, which was that all secular teaching and even the reading of the Bible in the schools should not be permitted. The board decided that while the celebration of Christmas should be continued in the schools, care should be taken by the teachers in selecting hymns to use only those that would not be offensive to the non-Christian pupils."

Along with this announcement, our city papers have recently carried pictures of groups of girls attending the public schools who were scheduled to dance before the crowds at the Farm and Live Stock Show lately held in New Orleans. With Christ and the Bible ruled out of our public schools and dancing being given increasing attention in them, the outlook is not bright as to the moral influence they shall exert in the future.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION.

The following press dispatch was sent out from New York on November 16:

"Pensions amounting to $687,000 were paid to 331 college and university professors and 127 widows of teachers during the past year by the Carnegie Foundation, according to the annual reports of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president, and Mr. Robert A. Franks, treasurer. During the eleven years it has been in existence 53 professors and 152 widows have received from this fund benefits aggregating $4,912,000."

While obviously it has been of great assistance to some, we have never seen a statement concerning the work of the Carnegie Foundation for the pensioning of teachers that we have not been impressed with the small number of its beneficiaries. That a fund which helps less than 500 persons should have created the stir in the world that this Foundation has, even swinging honored and historic institutions from their denominational moorings, presents rather a humiliating picture as to the mighty power of money and the weakness for it of even men who are far above the average in point of intelligence and earning capacity.

As was stated in the Advocate some weeks ago, it is expected that this Foundation will in the future be operated more in the nature of life insurance, with old age endowments (for which teachers are expected in some measure to pay), than as a wholly free pension fund as heretofore. We infer, however, that the ban against Church schools will still be maintained, as we have seen no announcement to the contrary.

"The best remedy for self-conceit is to be well introduced to yourself."

LOSS OR GAIN.

To talk with God no labor's lost.
Talk on—talk on!
To walk with God no strength is lost.
Walk on—walk on!
To wait on God no time is lost.
Wait on—wait on!
To grind the axe no labor's lost.
Grind on—grind on!
The work is quicker, better done,
Not needing half the strength laid on.
Grind on—grind on!

Work without God is labor lost;
Full soon you'll find it to your cost!
Little is much if God is in it;
Man's busiest day's not worth God's minute;
Much is little everywhere
If God the labor do not share;
So work with Him, and nothing's lost!
Work on—work on!
Who works with Him does most and best.
Work on! Work on!

PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY.

A few months ago mention was made on this page of the refusal of a man to write advertisements for cigarettes at $1500 a year. A subscriber writes us of his acquaintance with a member of one of our large churches in northeastern Pennsylvania of the same type. At a time when misfortune in the family made increased pay necessary, he was offered twelve dollars a week to write a half-page advertisement for a wholesale liquor dealer. The offer was declined with thanks, saying that "booze money is blood money, and I can't betray my Lord nor my brother at a price." The dollar was not "almighty" with this man.—Baptist Commonwealth.

THE AIM OF THE CHURCH.

Any Christian Church that has come down to the altogether inglorious task of trying to save itself has testified to men and to angels that it is not worth the effort that it is making. There is only one worthy ideal and purpose that any Church that names its Master's name can have, and that is the ideal and purpose that was His, of giving and spending itself to redeem and to save the world. The Church that thinks more of itself, of its own success and growth, than it does of the intellectual, moral, and religious needs of the community in which it exists, has ceased to be a Church at all in any high meaning of that word. The Christ who said that men can save their lives only by losing them stated a great divine principle that has application to organizations quite as much as it has to individuals. The Church that is succeeding in a wordly way, whose pews and whose coffers are both full, and yet which has not a great overflowing heart of love for the human need all about it, is a Church out of which the Christ of the Church has departed.—The Christian Guardian.

A TRIBUTE TO THE POWER OF CONSCIENCE.

A remarkable testimony to the power of conscience is found in the so-called Conscience Fund of the United States. This fund was started in 1811, when a letter was received containing five dollars, which the writer confessed having taken from the Government. This was given to the Treasury, and records of such contributions have been kept ever since, although the money itself is not kept separate. Nothing further was received until 1872. From that date until the present year only one year has passed without additions to the conscience fund. During the last fiscal year, $54,923.15 was received, including one contribution of $30,000 and another of $10,000. It was the largest income during any one year. The total fund now is $498,763.54.

It has been truly said that the conscience fund preaches a sermon. It shows that there are men and women who are not satisfied with ill-gotten gains, but who feel the constraining influence of a desire to be honest. Square dealing is essential to a mind at peace, and the frequent contributions to the conscience fund demonstrate that not until a wrong is rectified can the human mind find rest. —American Messenger.

THE PAST.

(An extract from the great address of the lamented S. S. Prentiss, of Mississippi and Louisiana, on the occasion of the centennial celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims.—Editor of the Advocate.)

The human mind cannot be contented with the present. It is ever journeying through the trodden regions of the past, or making adventurous excursions into the mysterious realms of the future. He who lives only in the present is but a brute, and has not attained the human dignity. Of the future but little is known; clouds and darkness rest upon it; we yearn to become acquainted with its hidden secrets; we stretch out our arms towards its shadowy inhabitants; we invoke our posterity, but they answer us not. We wander in its dim precincts till reason becomes confused, and at last start back in fear, like mariners who have entered an unknown sea, of whose winds, tides, currents and quicksands they are wholly ignorant. Then it is we turn for relief to the past, that mighty reservoir of men and things. There we have something tangible to which our sympathies can attach themselves; upon which we can lean for support; from which we can gather knowledge and learn wisdom. There we are introduced into nature's vast laboratory, and witness her elemental labors. We mark with interest the changes in continents and oceans, by which she has noted the centuries. But our attention is still more deeply aroused by the great moral events, which have controlled the fortunes of those who have preceded us, and still influence our own. With curious wonder we gaze down the long aisles of the past, upon the generations that are gone. We behold, as in a magic glass, men in form and feature like ourselves, actuated by the same motives, urged by the same passions, busily engaged in shaping both their own destinies and ours. We approach them and they refuse not our invocation. We hold converse with the wise philosophers, the sage legislators, and the divine poets. We enter the tent of the general, and partake of his most secret counsels. We go forth with him to the battlefield, and behold him place his glittering squadrons; then we listen with a pleasing fear to the trumpet and the drum, or the still more terrible music of the booming cannon and the clashing arms. But most of all, among the innumerable multitudes who people the past, we seek our own ancestors, drawn towards them by an irresistible sympathy. Indeed they are our other selves. With reverent solicitude, we examine into their character and actions, and as we find them worthy or unworthy, our hearts swell with pride, or our cheeks glow with shame. We search with avidity for the most trivial circumstances in their history, and eagerly treasure up every memento of their fortunes. The instincts of our nature bind us indissolubly to them, and link our fates with theirs. Men cannot live without a past; it is as essential to them as a future.

MESSAGE OF THE BRITISH CONFERENCE.

The following communication, being the answer of the British Conference of 1916 to the address of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was received by the Secretary of the College of Bishops, read to that body, and directed to be given to the Church:

"Dear and Honored Brethren: The yearly Conference assembled in London, under the presidency of Rev. Dr. Tasker and meeting for the first time in our new church house in the city of Westminster, received with unfeigned pleasure your address. We give God thanks for the success which you report to us and for the spirit of hopefulness which inspires you. We regret that the circumstances of the time prevented our receiving and welcoming a delegate from your great Conference. It would have been our joy to have listened to his voice and shown him similar courtesies to those which were showered upon our representative, who told us in his own graphic way of the greatness of your work. We are all well aware, and not least those of us who have visited America, how difficult it is to realize your conditions. You think in millions and work in cities of magnificent distances which make our islands shrink in proportion. But we remember 'the essential oneness of Methodism,' to borrow your own words, and in this we rejoice.

"We are not able, judging by figures only, to report the success our hearts long for. There are many explanations, into which it is not possible to enter in this communication. Taking a wider survey of our influence, we are thankful to remember that at no former period have we touched the nation's life as we do to-day. The impalpable in Christian work will not submit to representation. We are touched by the eloquent references you make to our fiery trial of war. A visitor to our country at this moment might easily misunderstand the strange calm of the people. He would attribute it to indifference born of ignorance. The reasons are much deeper. Never before did we engage in a conflict as a nation. Our soldiers were professional and to some extent apart from the general life. This battle is fought by the people. There is scarcely a home, from the palace of the king to the cottage by the wayside, that has not sent a son to the field or a daughter to nurse the wounded or to work in the munitions factory. Death that enters one house to-day may enter the next to-morrow. We are like one family whose interests are identical. We are sustained by the grace of God, because our own cause is just. Our Conference responded whole-heartedly to the words of our President in his inaugural address when he said: 'If we had kept out of this conflict, it would have been the loss of our honor.'

"We note your generous wish that we may be represented at your next General Conference. We feel that circumstances must decide when the hour strikes.

"We again assure you of our sincere and prayerful interest in all your affairs, of our gratitude for your sympathy, and may your God and ours guide you continually!

"Signed on behalf of and by order of the Conference. SIMPSON JOHNSON, Secretary."

LIFE'S PICTURE.

Mrs. V. T. Ellis.

You are painting a picture in life,
And one you'll view again some day;
Do not let it be marred with strife—
Let it be one of spotless ray.

In the great drama of this life,
In its whirling and seething throng,
Joys, sorrows, age, and youth are rife.
And mingled are its wail and song.

Let the Great Artist dye his brush
And paint for thee—"THY WILL BE DONE."
This only can our heart-throbs hush,
And 'quaint us with God and his Son.

Peace will reign on submission's brow,
Love, faith, and trust make it complete;
And lo! the painting in the now
Will show wherein it is replete.

THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. H. N. Harrison.

First Day—Wednesday.

The seventy-first session of the Louisiana Annual Conference was called to order promptly at 9 a. m., Wednesday, November 22, 1916, with Bishop E. E. Hoss in the chair. After singing hymn No. 355, the Conference was led in prayer by the Bishop. Hymn No. 106 was then sung. The Bishop selected for comment the opening verses of the 7th Chapter of Matthew. There is, he said, in these verses a prohibition of harsh, critical, and censorious judgment. We are to remember that we are to be judged by the same rule. A man must forgive if he would be forgiven. Nothing is truer than that a man gives himself away in the judgments he passes upon others. A man declares his own character when he makes declarations about other men. While there is no prohibition of one's right justly, properly, and fairly to guage and weigh a man's worth and character, yet we need caution in setting ourselves up as critics of others. Do not pull motes out of your brother's eye when you have a beam in your own. Be sure that you are not living in a glass house, and in particular if you should pull a mote out of another's eye, do not preserve it in a cabinet for future use. Perhaps the most important lesson in these verses for us is that we should be more severe in our judgments of ourselves than of others. Let us be more and more tender, tolerant, and charitable towards our brethren. Let us be increasingly kind and gentle, and let us not forget that harsh and cruel judgments must be recognized as sins just as much as certain gross forms of wickedness.

At the conclusion of these comments the Bishop announced hymn No. 492, "Oh for a Closer Walk with God."

Rev. F. S. Parker, secretary of the last session, was requested to call the roll, after which he was unanimously elected secretary of the seventy-first session.

The bar of the Conference was made to include the whole auditorium, and the hours of meeting and adjournment were fixed at 9 a. m. and 12 o'clock m.

A resolution was adopted requiring the preachers to file their reports on the first day of the Conference, and a further resolution was submitted and adopted that an assistant statistical secretary be appointed for each presiding elder's district to edit the reports of the preachers.

The following were appointed: Alexandria District, W. W. Perry; Baton Rouge District, H. T. Young; Lafayette District, C. E. Fike; Monroe District, H. W. Ledbetter; New Orleans District, H. B. Carré; Ruston District, W. L. Doss; Shreveport District, J. C. Rousseaux.

Rev. W. W. Holmes for the presiding elders announced the annual committees, of which the following are the chairmen: Conference Relations, J. B. Williams; Memoirs, J. D. Harper; Public Worship, C. A. Battle; District Conference Records, J. C. Rousseaux; Church Publications, R. H. Harper; Sabbath Observance, Geo. S. Sexton; Temperance, S. H. Werlein; Lay Activities, W. S. Holmes.

Dr. W. F. McMurry was then introduced and said a few words.

Prof. H. N. Whaling and also Frank Reedy from the Southern Methodist University were introduced to the Conference.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Mississippi Conference, was called to the front by the Bishop and introduced to the brethren.

Question 19 was called, "Who are the supernumeraries?" Their names were called and characters passed. Rev. Geo. D. Anders was placed on the effective list. The name of Rev. P. H. Fontaine was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations.

The names of the superannuates were called and their characters passed. The honor roll of the Conference lacked one name—Rev. J. A. Parker. God had called this noble veteran to his eternal reward during the year. His name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs. Rev. C. F. Staples, having recovered his health, was returned to the effective list.

The name of Rev. F. N. Sweeney was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. Rev. H. T. Bolz requested that he be placed on the superannuate list and his name was referred to the proper committee.

The Bishop then called for the reports of the presiding elders, which were as follows:

H. W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District: Have the best district in the Conference. The last year has been the best. Have twelve more churches and fifteen hundred more members than when I started.

H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District: Fine year. Increase in nearly every charge in finances and especially in additions on profession of faith.

J. J. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Lafayette District: Increase on nearly all lines. Have had a splendid year, notwithstanding considerable sickness amongst us. A great many accessions and a good financial showing.

A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District: Over 1000 accessions in the district. Have helped in fourteen revivals. Increase in finances is marked.

W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District: Faced a great task all the year, occasioned by the terrible storm which swept the city of New Orleans. Churches have been rebuilt, progress has been made, and the people are very hopeful and encouraged. The outlook is fine.

Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Ruston District: We have a splendid band of workers in the Ruston District. Have had a heavy net gain in finances and members. By far the best year of my quadrennium.

C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District: Have put emphasis on five things this year. (1) Evangelism, 1000 accessions; (2) the child and the Sunday school; (3) Church Extension, building five new churches, four parsonages, also a district parsonage; (4) the place of woman in the work of the Church; (5) the benevolent collections. Raised $3000 for the Orphanage. Nearly all the preachers paid in full.

Dr. F. R. Hill, Sr., then arose and in a very feeling statement requested to be put on the supernumerary list, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations.

Telegrams of greeting were ordered sent to the Baptist Convention in Mansfield, to the Christian Convention in Alexandria, and to the Presbyterian Synod in New Orleans.

O. J. Chandler was reported as transferred to the Kentucky Conference.

The names of the preachers in the Alexandria District were called, their reports made, and characters passed.

After a number of announcements had been made, the doxology was sung, and the first day's session came to a close.

Second Day—Thursday.

Bishop Hoss conducted the devotional services by giving out hymn No. 354 and by reading and commenting upon the 7th Chapter of Hebrews concerning the unchangeable priesthood of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Bishop magnified the mediatorial office of our Lord, and laid emphasis on the words, "He ever liveth to make intercession for us."

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, from the Mississippi Conference, was introduced and represented the interests of the Seashore Divinity School.

Question 4, "Who are admitted into full connection?" was called, and the following names were read: W. R. McPherson, J. L. Evans and A. D. George. After some very earnest words of counsel and exhortation, the Bishop asked the candidates the usual questions. They were admitted into full connection and then elected to deacons' orders.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson spoke on behalf of the General Board of Education, and was followed by Prof. H. N. Whaling, of the Southern Methodist University, who earnestly represented the highest ideals in Methodist education and made a very strong appeal for students. Mr. Frank Reedy gave a most intersting description of the founding and progress of the great Southern Methodist University at Dallas. The University possesses assets amounting to $2,210,000.

Prof. Bobbitt was then introduced and represented Mansfield Female College. The College has 68 girls in the dormitory and has room for only 7 more. Graduates from this school may teach in the public schools of the State without having to undergo any further examination. Send your girls to Mansfield.

Announcements were then made, the doxology was sung, and the second day's session came to a close.

Third Day—Friday.

The session was opened by the singing of hymn No. 312, "O happy day that fixed my choice," after which Rev. J. D. Harper was called on to lead in prayer. Hymn No. 313 was sung, and the Bishop read and commented upon Paul's prayer as found in Ephesians, 1st Chapter. St. Paul was a man of prayer, especially of intercessory prayer. The power that works in a Christian man is the same power that raised our Lord in triumph from the grave. Let us have the fulfillment of this prayer in our hearts and catch the vision and spirit of the great Apostle. These were some of his suggestions.

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

Dr. F. S. Parker rose to a matter of personal privilege, and in a few feeling and well chosen words presented to Bishop Hoss in honor of his forty-fourth wedding anniversary a lovely silver tray as a token of esteem and affection from the members of the Louisiana Conference. The Bishop made a most happy and feeling response in appreciation of the kindly sentiments which prompted the gift.

Telegrams of greeting from the Baptist Convention in Mansfield and the Christian Convention in Alexandria to the Louisiana Conferece in session at Baton Rouge were received and read by the Secretary.

Dr. R. H. Wynn was then accorded the privilege of the floor, and represented the claims and interests of Centenary College.

Rev. W. W. Drake followed Brother Wynn in a very strong address in which he urged the preachers to make it a point of conscience to raise the educational assessment for our schools.

Rev. J. M. Henry, D. D., also presented very clearly and forcefully the great opportunity and responsibility we have in Centenary College in Shreveport. The Bishop added some very strong words of counsel in which he urged the ministers to stand by the institution we have in Shreveport, using the words, "Don't give up anything you have in Louisiana. Keep every bit of your property." The Bishop took up a subscription for Centenary, heading the list with $100, and a sum amounting to $2000 was soon raised.

Mrs. A. P. Holt was introduced and represented very forefully the work and interests of the Woman's Missionary Society in Louisiana. The work of the Woman's Missionary Society is showing fine progress in organizing new societies and in raising money for the work of the Master.

A telegram of greeting was received from the Presbyterian Synod in New Orleans, extending best wishes to the Louisiana Conference.

The names of the preachers of the Baton Rouge District were called, their reports were made, and characters passed.

A. L. Dietrich was introduced as the representative of our General Sunday School Board, and gave some very interesting information on teacher-training, missionary work in the Sunday school, and the systematic development of childhood.

The names of the preachers in the Lafayette District were called, their reports were made, and characters passed.

Rev. M. C. Holt was located on his own request.

Announcements were then made, and, the hour of adjournment having arrived, the hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," was sung, and the Conference adjourned.

Fourth Day—Saturday.

At the opening of the fourth day's session, the Louisiana State University Glee Club gave the Conference a rare treat in the singing of Beethoven's "The Heavens Resound." The young gentlemen acquitted themselves most happily and their effort was heartily enjoyed and appreciated. This treat will long be remembered by the ministers of the Louisiana Conference.

After prayer by Rev. Thomas Carter, the minutes of the third day's session were read and approved. The question whether the Conference lay leaders and the district lay leaders shall be ex-officio members of the Annual Conference came before the Conference, and after discussion pro and con, the vote stood 67 for and 64 against.

The Monroe Disrict was called, the preachers made their reports and their characters were passed.

Rev. Mr. Dunning of the Christian Church was introduced to the Conference.

The New Orleans District was called and the preachers gave their reports. Dr. F. S. Parker spoke most hopefully of the progress and prospects of the Epworth League and of the circulation of The Era. Dr. H. B. Carré and Dr. Thomas Carter gave interesting accounts of the work in which they had been engaged in Nashville.

The Ruston District was next called, the preachers made their reports and their characters were passed. W. W. Drake gave a very fine report of the work in the Minden Church and stated also that there had been an increase in the circulation of Church literature.

The Shreveport District was called, the preachers reported fine progress all over the district, and from every quarter came most commendatory remarks concerning the administration of the presiding elder.

By a rising vote the Conference passed the character of Dr. R. H. Wynn.

Question No. 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and the following were voted on and admitted: B. D. Watson, James M. Boykin, Q. R. Henry, R. T. Ware.

Question 2, "Who remain on Trial?" was called, and F. B. Hill, R. W. Smith, B. H. Andrews, and J. L. Lay were passed in character and their names were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. The characters of E. G. Wood and A. C. Searcy were passed and they were continued in the Class of the First Year.

The Question, "Who are re-admitted?" was called, and the name of A. C. Holder was reported; but, at his own request, his name was withdrawn.

The name of Rev. S. A. Steel was reported as recived by transfer from the Upper South Carolina Conference.

Wesley W. Lanthrip, from the Methodist Protestant Church, was received in elder's orders.

Question No. 9, "Who are the deacons of one year?" was called and the names of T. L. Bryson, W. A. Mangum, and W. F. Henderson were reported and they were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year. W. B. Perrit requested that his name be stricken from the roll of the ministry of the M. E. Church, South. C. M. Thompson requested to be located.

C. E. Fike, James Cady, and J. A. Alford were elected to elder's orders.

On motion the Conference adjourned to meet at 2:30 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

After religious services, which were conducted by Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, the minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

The report of the committee on Conference Relations was read and adopted. The report of the Church Extension Board was read and adopted.

Dr. McKenney was introduced and presented the cause of our Representative Church in Washington, D. C., and stated that the Louisiana Conference, as such, had not yet identified itself in a financial way with this enterprise, and urged our ministers to set apart a subscription for this cause and raise it in their respective charges. The total amount so far raised from all sources for this enterprise had reached the sum of $312,500.

In a resolution submitted by a committee and read by Dr. S. H. Werlein, the Bishop was authorized to appoint a committee of seven men, one from each district, to present the cause of our Representative Church in the charges of each district and raise a fund of $2500 for this enterprise. This resolution was adopted.

The report of the Sunday School Board was read and adopted.

Question 52, "Where shall the next Conference be held?" was called, and Rev. W. W. Drake nominated Minden. The nomination having been duly seconded, Minden was unanimously selected as the next place of holding the Annual Conference.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Education was then read. In this report the Board recommended that the Bishop appoint Revs. Thomas Carter and H. B. Carré to professorships in Vanderbilt University. The Bishop raised the question as to why this recommendation was made when it was understood that he would not accede to it, and explained the grounds of his refusal to appoint men to Vanderbilt. He further said that he felt that the Board had not dealt properly or fairly with him in making these recommendations, since the Board understood very well his views and judgment in the matter and knew that he would not and could not appoint these brethren to Vanderbilt. Much discussion ensued, in which Dr. Carter, the Bishop, and others, took part, and the item recommending the apopintment of these brethren was by vote of the Conference stricken from report No. 2 of the Board of Education.

On motion the Conference adjourned to meet at 9 a. m. Monday.

REV. H. S. SPRAGINS,

The newly-appointed Pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Memphis, Tenn.

Brother Spragins has just finished a notably successful quadrennium on the Greenville (Miss.) District. Prior to that, he served with great acceptability pastorates at Corinth, Oxford, and Greenwood, Miss. Attractive in appearance, an earnest student, a gifted preacher, and a faithful, conscientious pastor, he gives promise of large usefulness to the Church. We heartily commend him to the Methodist of Memphis and the brethren of the Memphis Conference.

THE METHODS OF LIQUOR JOURNALS.

The following article appeared in the September number of "Facts," a liquor journal published in New Orleans:

Seattle is Hard Hit.

The Los Angeles Times prints the following letter from a woman describing conditions in Seattle, Wash.:

"I was reading in the Seattle Times of August 4 about a 'Los Angeles Paper Shedding Tears Over Seattle' in regard to the dry law.

"Well, I have lived in Seattle over ten years, and prohibition has about finished the place. We have all the troubles that come with the dry law. Seattle is a fine city, but we have not the right people in office. We have more preachers and reformers talking politics and siding with the Mayor who is nothing more in the estimation of many people than an agitator destroying property. This will not stop drinking. I think the State that can not regulate the liquor question is a weakling, and sooner or later will fall.

"Everywhere you go in the city of Seattle to-day you see the sign, 'For Rent.' Any person seeing so many signs can come to but one conclusion—that something is wrong.

"Tourists are not very many this year and they make connections so closely that Seattle does not see them. Many go by way of Vancouver to Alaska and return home by way of Canada.

"It would pay you to visit Seattle and see the empty stores. On First Avenue I think everyone is selling out. Second Avenue has plenty, too; plenty of offices to rent, also, and houses. You get tired of counting them.

"Thousands of people have left Seattle; had to leave; could not get any work, as the work was taken from them. Times are dull and taxes are awful. I know, as I own property. I have advised many of my friends in the East not to think of coming to Seattle at the present time. Seattle is a big blow town, and the drinking is going on just the same. Prohibition is a farce, and I hope the people of California will keep their minds and will not bring poverty on their heads and have to go to another State to make a living. I know as soon as I can sell what I have I will go back to Detroit. Warn the people! "MRS. HANNA WOOD."

What Investigation Showed.

Noticing the extreme and surprising statements contained in the above-mentioned article, Mr. Robert Babington, of Franklinton, La., wrote to Mr. McGill, the Mayor of Seattle, and received from him in reply the following communication:

"Robert Babington, Esq.,
"Sheriff's Office, Franklin, La.

"Dear Sir: I have your letter of Sept. 22, enclosing clipping signed by one Hanna Wood, purporting to discuss the dry situation in this city.

"The article is being reproduced generally throughout the country wherever the liquor fight is on and I have previously been asked to give the same information.

"The county and city records here fail to show that any such person ever owned any property or paid any taxes whatever in this city or King County, in which Seattle is situated. Neither does the city directory show any such name for this or some years previous to this year. I think the person is entirely fictitious as many similar ones have been proven to be when used in this connection. As to the "facts," the article is false in its entirety. "Very truly yours,

"H. G. GILL."

(It is scarcely necessary to comment on the foregoing disclosure. Hard pressed, indeed, must be the cause that resorts to such tactics.—Editor of the Advocate.)

A MESSAGE FROM BROTHER STOCKWELL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our home is made to rejoice to-day at receiving the following telegram:

"We arrived in New York to-day, and are at Hotel Girard. My wife was sick on the way over, but she is better now. Lambuth and I are both well. I will wire you from New Orleans.
(Signed) J. A. Stockwell."

We hasten to let our friends and brethren know the glad news and rejoice with us. You will hear from us again. Yours most truly,
A. M. MAYO.

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 23, 1916.

THE ADVOCATE COMMENDED.

Dear Dr. Meek: A word of thanks to you for the truly great paper you are sending out to bless the Church and the world. Its mission is a great one. Why don't the preachers and laymen open wide the door of every Methodist home to its entrance and almost miracle-working power? As a transforming agency it is at work day and night in all climes to which it has access and under all conditions. Its influence is subject to no arithmetical computation. To the Church it is a Bishop, presiding elder, preacher in charge, and a multitude of good things. Rightly appreciated, a flood of subscriptions would deluge your office. Effort will do it. Worthy, worthy, worthy is the Advocate. You are giving us good measure "shaken together, pressed down, and running over." The Church is not responding accordingly.
C. W. SCOTT.

ADDRESS TO THE BISHOPS.

To the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Dear Brethren: At a meeting of the representatives of the Commissions on Unification appointed by our respective General Conferences, which meeting was held in Baltimore, October 9, 1916, the following action was taken:

1. It was voted that the first meeting of the commissioners in joint session should be held in Baltimore, opening at 10 a. m., December 28, 1916, at the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

2. It was agreed that at 10:30 the commissioners would hold prayer service in their session room, to be followed by public service and the holy communion in the church auditorium, Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson preaching the sermon and Bishop Earl Cranston conducting the communiou service.

3. It was further advised, subject to the decision of the Joint Commission, that all business sessions of the Commissions should be private and that all social functions should be avoided in the interest of the work of the commissioners.

It was further agreed that the commissioners should attend a watch-night service in a body at Trinity Episcopal Church, South, Baltimore, Sunday night, December 31; that the ministerial members be requested to make no engagements for Sunday morning except in co-operation with the joint committee appointed by the Union Preachers' Meeting of Baltimore, and that all commissioners should avoid engagements in conflict with the watch-night services at Trinity Church; and that Bishops Wilson and Cranston, as chairmen of their respective commissions, should be requested to submit to the Bishops of both Churches for their action a common paper calling them to issue a common appeal to both Churches, urging every Methodist congregation to observe the closing hours of the year as a time of special prayer to the Divine Head of the Church to guide the commissioners in the consideration of the grave questions involved in the unification of the two Churches.

Now, therefore, dear brethren, we are communicating to you the requests and suggestions contained in the foregoing; and at the same time, in order to facilitate the obviously valuable suggestions of a common appeal from the Bishops of both and to save your time in correspondence, we take the liberty of inclosing a form of appeal which we trust may be acceptable to our colleagues of both Churches.

Yours faithfully,
A. W. WILSON,
EARL CRANSTON.

MESSAGE TO METHODISM.

To the Presidlng Elders, District Superintendents, Pastors, and People of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church—Greetings:

You have already been advised that the commissioners appointed by direction of the General Conferences of the above named Churches, twenty-five from each Church, have been called by their respective representatives to meet in Baltimore, Md., on December 28, 1916, for the consideration of the very grave and important matters committed to them. The date named seems to be the very earliest possible consistent with the official and business engagements of these commissioners.

That you may better apprehend the gravity and far-reaching significance of this meeting, we subjoin an outline program of the initial and preparatory services contemplated by the commissioners as indicating their own estimate of the serious and sacred task upon which they are to enter.

The commissioners will meet at Baltimore on Thursday, December 28, 10 a. m. At 10:30 they will engage in prayer service. At 11 o'clock a public service will be held, with a sermon by Bishop A. W. Wilson, followed by the holy communion. At 3 p. m. the first business session (private) will be held. Friday, the 29th, will be devoted to consultation sessions of the Commissions and to organization; Saturday, to such business as the Joint Commission may determine. On Sunday, the 31st, every minister of the Commission is expected to preach on "The Spirit of Methodism," and it is earnestly desired that every pastor in both Churches may hold the same theme before his congregation. On Sunday night, the 31st, the commissioners in a body will attend watch-night services at Trinity Methodist Church, South, and they jointly request that every congregation of both Churches shall observe watch-night and make the work of the Joint Commission on Unification the subject of special prayer during the closing hour of the year. In the interest of their work the representatives of the Commission hope that all social functions may be avoided during their sessions.

It seems to us as the Bishops of these two negotiating branches of Methodism that the time and place for the first meeting of the Joint Commission are most happily chosen. Our Churches will be reminded of the Christmas Conference held at Baltimore in 1784 and the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America as the outcome of the faith and wisdom of that Conference. We are also deeply impressed that our two Churches, having a common heritage in the work of the pioneer fathers who composed that devout assembly, will approve, as we heartily do, the purpose of the commissioners to approach their great responsibility in the very presence of God and through a spiritual preparation without which their conclusions would be futile and untrustworthy.

We therefore unite with our respective commissioners in earnestly and affectionately entreating all our Churches and people to wait reverently and beseechingly before God in devout supplication for his blessing upon the commissioners in all their meetings and discussions, and that he may so lead and direct their individual thoughts and feelings that their joint labors may result in such agreements and constructive plans as may in the largest measure glorify his name and advance the kingdom of our Lord through the people called Methodists.

We also urge all presiding elders, superintendents, and pastors to observe the program of services requested by the commissioners for Sunday, December 31. May great grace rest upon every minister of God who preaches to his people on that day on "The Spirit of Methodism," and marvelous power be witnessed at every altar especially sanctified by the observance of the watch-night service throughout all our borders and in all the tongues that proclaim our gospel of free and full salvation!

A. W. WILSON,
COLLINS DENNY, Secretary;
EARL CRANSTON,
LUTHER B. WILSON, Secretary.

WHO IS SHE?

I know the dearest little girl,
About as big as you,
Her eyes are black or brown or gray,
Or maybe they are blue;
But, anyway, her hands are clean;
Her teeth are white as snow;
Her little dress is always neat;
She goes to school, you know.
This little girl—I love her well,
And see her often, too—
If I to-day her name should tell—
She—might—be—you.

BILLY'S SUCCESS.

For two days Billy had been trying to establish himself in business as a newsboy and bootblack. But the people didn't seem to pay any attention to his cries, and the big boys even abused him. At last the poor little fellow—he was only seven years old—crept sobbingly into the station out of the sight of his tormentors.

Sister Louise, a deaconess, who spent several hours every day at the station, went to comfort him.

"What's the matter?" she asked.

"I can't sell a paper," whimpered Billy, "and can't get a shine."

"Well, maybe its because you're hungry and don't look good-natured. Come and get something to eat."

Billy was hungry; he had had no breakfast, and the lunch from a box which a traveler had left did make him feel better natured. When he had finished he was ready to answer the deaconess' questions. His father was dead. His mother was sick and very poor. He must earn his own and his mother's living.

"But I can't earn anything," he said again. "The boys chase me off and the people won't buy."

"What do you say when you ask for a shine?"

"Black yer boo-oo-ots!" The voice was a disagreeable whine.

"But you must be cheerful and polite if you want to succeed. You must say, 'Please, sir, have a shine? Only five cents!'" The deaconess' voice was animated and her face beamed.

Little Billy caught the enthusiasm, and a smile broke through the tears. They started out to find a customer.

"There's a man who needs a shine," the deaconess said.

Billy ran with all his might. "Please, sir, have a shine?" he shouted. "Only five cents."

The man looked into the boy's expectant face and put out a soiled boot. Billy fell to work, pausing only to give the deaconess an occasional exultant glance. When he had finished he ran back to show her six cents the man had paid him.

"Did you offer the gentleman a paper for the extra cent?" she asked.

This was a new idea, and the boy darted away again. The man bought a paper and gave the boy another cent.

"I must go now and take the money to my mother," he exclaimed. The deaconess gave him the rest of the box of lunch and watched him trudge away in high spirits.

But there was a storm brewing among the older boys. Business was done too brisk, and the smaller boy was likely to damage their trade. Billy would fare worse than ever at their hands when he returned flushed with his success. So the deaconess told them Billy's story. "And, boys," she finished, "you don't know how hungry he was this morning. And he was crying when I found him."

"We'll give him a fair show, then," they promised heartily.

And Billy has gone bravely on with his own business, and has never been molested since.—Lutheran.

MY MISCHIEVOUS LITTLE NEIGHBOR.

Louisa A'hmuty Nash.

Somebody would ring our door-bell, and then scamper off; and we could never discover the culprit.

One evening at dinner, it rang, and we saw a little boy running in the next door. My husband went over to complain. His father was at home and he whipped him.

We had not lived long on the street, so I called next day, for friendliness' sake. The mother told me, that it was five-year-old Effie who rang the bell and not Jimmie!

Soon after from my opposite neighbor's window I saw Effie, smearing our panes with dirt. I ran across and said, to her, "Do you want my daughter who is coming home to-day, to say to me, 'How can you be so careless, mother, about your dirty window?'"

She looked ashamed, and I added, "You help me clean it, won't you, like a good little girl?"

I took her with me into the house to fetch the requisites, with an extra rag for her little fingers. When done, she looked up at me beseechingly, asking, "What next, please?"

So I brought her in, saying, "I saw your dolly with a very old, ragged skirt. Suppose we make her another one?"

She ran home, brought the doll, and helped me take measurements on paper. Then pinning the paper on some pretty bright calico, I proposed that she should do the cutting. Having done that well, I started the sewing. I found that she had not a notion of managing her needle, but she learned quickly, first on a piece of rag.

She sewed for half an hour, when I said, "You must go home now, dear; it's your lunch time!"

"May I come again?"

"Why, yes, come to-morrow morning dear, about eleven o'clock." And I kissed her good-by.

When the dolly was fitted out, I asked her if she would like to draw with my pencil.

"I don't think I could!"

"O, yes you could, if I show you the way. Scribble on that bit of paper while I get your drawing ready!"

I made a heavy outline of a vase on the table, and pinned a piece of thin paper over it, saying, "Next time we'll put some flowers in it."

I was surprised how well she copied the lines. "I'll take it home and show it to daddy!" she said. I was seated, and to-day, she kissed my cheek of her own accord.

She gradually traced more complicated drawings, the vase flowers among them, and after a time she began to make little drawings herself. On alternate days we sewed.

My typewriter was a delight to her. I showed her how to pick out words from a copy. To her delight, she one day typed a little letter to her daddy, who was away from home.

The child was so quiet and so self-contained over her occupations, that mine were scarcely interfered with at all.

After a while we left the city; I heard later from my old neighbors that Effie was quite transformed. She never bothered a doorbell, or did anything mischievous to anybody.

It was just a lack of occupation that had made her what she was. The busy child is the good one and the happy one!—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A BOY WITH TWO FACES.

I've heard about the queerest boy,
A boy that has two faces;
One face is round and full of joy,
As out of doors he races.
But when his mother calls him in
He changes to the other,
And that is long and sour and thin—
I'm sorry for his mother.

—Little Folks.

I am sorry for those people who grouch that they could be successful in their respective fields of endeavor, if blessed with opportunity. They are losing one every time that they stop to complain.—Herbert A. Schloss.

IN MEMORIAM.

(A tribute—Mrs. H. C. Montgomery, who died November 1, 1916.)

Beautiful Spirit, wing thy flight
Across life's sunset skies afar,
To lands beyond the realms of night,
Where shines the bright, and Morning Star

Dark is the sea of shadows o'er
Whose vast expanse thy spirit flies,
Yet morn breaks on the other shore,
'Tis there eternal morning lies.

I know not where the ransomed spirit
Finds its eternal resting place,
I know not where the good inherit
The matchless mercies of His grace!

I know not where the Harbor lies,
Upon whose shining golden strand
The home-bound see with glad'ning eyes
The Galilean Pilot stand.

But, ah, full well I know somewhere,
Triumphant reigns the sov'reign soul,
And love seeks there, finds only THERE,
Its ultimate, its final goal

And well I know, while here to-day
Her body rests beneath the sod,
Her soul hath burst the bonds of clay,
And kneels before the throne of God.

Fold o'er the heart the tired hands,
Dear heart and hand that ever strove
To honor duty's least command,
The first to hear the call of love.

The loving smile, the tender grace,
The selfless life, the gentle heart,
Woven with hints of her dear face,
Are of our lives the better part.

There is no death. To such as these
Love's all is never given in vain,
But in God's vast eternities
It reaps a harvest rich in grain.

Home, Home at last! The tired eyes
On sights and sounds celestial gaze;
The glows and gleams of Paradise,
The smile of welcome on His face.

"FRET NOT THYSELF BECAUSE OF EVIL DOERS."

Worry is energy spent for a useless purpose, and what is thus consumed is that much gone to sinful waste. The problem presented by evil-doers in society is too great a burden for the shoulders of one man to bear or for a human mind to attempt to solve. If a person undertakes such a thing, he is likely to become either a pessimist or an optimist, when he ought not to allow himself to be given over entirely to either of these extreme states of mind. As the old saying goes, "It takes all sorts of people to make a world." To begin with, they are neither wholly good nor are they wholly bad—the former estate they can never hope to attain to in this life; the latter they may, by stifling the best impulses of their nature. If we see people who possess noble qualities of character, we are quick first to admire and then to love them afterwards. On the other hand, when we see those whose characteristics stand openly condemned before us we do not merely detest what we see in them, but we deplore the fact that human nature ever presents itself in such an unlovely and unlovable manner.

The world is so very large that it is difficult for man, with his short sight, to see but one little part of it at a time, and what he sees even then depends to a large extent upon what he is looking for. A man may be confined to a very small area, and, having no first-hand knowledge of what other men in other parts of the earth are doing, and under what conditions they are living, may judge the whole world to be good or bad according to the moral and religious atmosphere that exists around him, and by his very limited experience. Often he who sees the evil people in the world and their doings forgets that there are good people also and presumptuously sits down to mourn over the fact that he is the only godly man on the face of the earth, as if it were so and he could change things in this way. He wants to die because he thinks that he alone of all the children of men is righteous. How foolish he is! The Lord is not slow to make him conscious of his mistake.

A man may possess health, wealth, and a reasonable degree of happiness, and consequently, for awhile at least, he may feel that earth is a heaven so far as he is concerned; and his brother man, on the other hand, may be ground down by the heel of poverty, affliction, and trouble until he thinks that the world has no good in it at all, and he would be quick to declare it to be the direct opposite from a heaven to him. We fear that no man extremely rich, poor, happy, or miserable is capable of holding a safe and sane view of conditions in society. All are partly right and partly wrong. So far as society is concerned, there is much to rejoice in and much to weep over. But the whole duty of each man is to act his part in the affairs of the world as he would that others should theirs, regardless of what men may think, say, or do, and to leave the rest to God and to his fellow-men.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Work Day" for the Louisiana Orphanage brought to that institution about $5000. But it still needs assistance, and our Methodist congregations would do well to remember it on Thanksgiving Day.

Rev. T. M. Brownlee has had a fruitful year at Belzoni, Miss., and will carry an excellent report to Conference. Brother Brownlee is an efficient worker, and one of the growing young men of his Conference.

An optimistic note comes from Cedar Bluff, Miss., where W. A. Bowlin is the appreciated pastor. He says: "We are going to have a good report from this work—probably the best within a number of years—notwithstanding the boll weevil."

Mr. T. L. Boswell, of Nashville, Tenn., a son of Dr. J. W. Boswell, has our thanks for $2, which he kindly sent us for our "Helping Fund." Brother Boswell was himself connected with the publication of the Advocate, while his honored father was its editor.

Rev. J. W. Bell is finishing a four-year term on the Aberdeen District of the North Mississippi Conference, which has made considerable progress during his incumbency. Brother Bell is noted for his poise and good judgment, which are valuable characteristics for a district superintendent.

In a business note to our office, Rev. J. T. McCafferty, who is winding up a notably successful quadrennium at Eupora, Miss., appends the following note: "Our people here are completing an eight-room parsonage. It will be a comfortable home for its preacher." Eupora Methodism has been forging forward in more respects than one within the past few years.

Mrs. G. W. Musser, of Gayle, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, adds $1.50 to be used in the way that we think will accomplish the most good. It will be applied to our "Helping Fund," which is designed to send the Advocate into needy homes into which it could not otherwise go. We scarcely need to say that we are grateful for this generous remembrance.

As a result of the death of Bishop Wilson, Bishop Murrah, the first episcopal reserve, will become a member of our Commission on Methodist Unification. Another change in the personnel of that body has been brought about by the resignation of Judge J. L. Kelly, who, because of business engagements, felt that he could not serve. This places on the Commission Judge H. H. White, of Louisiana, the first lay reserve.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Strongs, Miss., says: "We finish pleasantly at Strongs and Prairie, with a net gain in membership, and the payments for all purposes, in proportion to numerical strength, will overtop many of the big stations, and are beyond the records of last year." Brother Williams is a forceful and impressive preacher, and we are pleased to know that his labors this year have been crowned with a goodly measure of success.

Mr. J. H. Johnson, of Clarksdale, Miss., who is one of the leading laymen of the Mississippi Delta, in a personal note to the Editor, expresses much regret at having to give up Rev. H. S. Spragins, who has been assigned by Bishop Murrah to First Church, Memphis. Brother Johnson is by no means alone in this feeling. The North Mississippi Conference has sustained a great loss by the transfer of Brother Spragins, who was perhaps its most popular member.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

By the Editor.

Dr. F. S. Parker is a master of the secretarial art, having had years of experience in that work, and he had a capable corps of assistants in the persons of Rev. J. F. Foster, Dr. Thomas Carter, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. H. T. Young, and Rev. H. W. Cudd.

The Conference was finely entertained in Baton Rouge, the historic Capital City of the State. Brother Battle made an unsurpassed Conference host, and he and Sister Battle dispensed a generous hospitality in their parsonage home, having at their table at different times a large number of the preachers.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker came all the way from Atlanta, Ga., to attend the session of the Conference, and the brethren gave him a warm and heartfelt welcome. He is a great favorite with Louisiana Methodists. He gave a glowing report of the work which is being done by the Theological Department of Emory University, in which he is the brilliant professor of Systematic Theology.

The transfer of Dr. S. A. Steel to the Louisiana Conference was gratifying to his many friends and admirers in this State. There was not a little speculation as to whether he would go to First Church, Shreveport, or to Rayne Memorial, New Orleans. He was pleasantly greeted on every side, and his eloquent address on Francis Asbury on Sunday afternoon thrilled the large audience that heard him.

One of the interesting events of the session was the presentation by the Conference to Mr. H. H. Ahrens of a very fine gold fountain pen as a token of its appreciation of his services in reporting its proceedings. He has been doing work of this character for twenty-five years, and Bishop Hoss, who made the speech of presentation, was highly complimentary as to the excellence of it. Brother Ahrens' remarks in reply were appropriate and happy.

Among the visitors at the Conference, we noted Rev. G. H. Thompson and Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Hattiesburg, and Rev. L. L. Roberts, of Vicksburg, Miss. Brother Crisler made an address in the interest of the Seashore Divinity School, in the course of which he announced that Dr. Charles L. Goodell, of New York; Dr. Henry Churchill King, of Ohio, and Bishop W. A. Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will be among the lecturers at the next session of this school.

The night evangelistic services, under the direction of Rev. J. G. Snelling, with Rev. R. P. Shuler, of Texas, doing the preaching and Mr. J. D. Swaggerty, of Siloam Springs, Ark., as the leader of the singing, attracted much attention and were largely attended. Brother Shuler's messages were earnest and stirring. A well laid plan for an evangelistic campaign covering a period of seven months, which is expected to extend throughout the entire State, was adopted by the Conference. The paper setting forth this plan will be published in the Advocate at an early date.

The past year was a good one for Louisiana Methodism. There was a gain of more than 2100 in the membership of the Church, and an increase in the work in practically every respect. The Conference statistics, with the exception of those which pertain to the property of our educational institutions (which were omitted because of their incompleteness), appear elsewhere in this number of the Advocate. In them it will be noted that the Conference organ shows a gain in circulation, though the Publisher has been hewing much more closely to the line than heretofore in cutting off delinquent subscriptions.

Obviously one of the most beloved members of the Louisiana Conference is Dr. R. H. Wynn, President of Centenary College. The brethren lost no opportunity to show this. Dr. Wynn is making a great sacrifice to remain where he is, and they appreciate his spirit and the service which he is rendering. The quickness with which a subscription of $2000 was secured to meet the pressing needs of Centenary, in response to an appeal from Bishop Hoss, showed that it has a strong hold upon the affections of the Methodists of the State. When all the Centenary men in the Conference room were asked to stand up, about 45 arose. The influence which has gone forth from this school in Louisiana and other States is immeasurable.

We take the following from the report of Rev. H. H. Ahrens in the Times-Picayune of Nov. 28: "The feature of the morning and afternoon sessions of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to-day was a long and somewhat heated discussion on the subject of the unification of all American Methodist Churches. Dr. S. H. Werlein presented a resolution strongly indorsing union, and other similar documents were offered. A resolution offered by Rev. W. H. Coleman was accepted as a substitute for Dr. Werlein's paper, and adopted by the Conference. Pending its adoption speeches were made by Bishop E. E. Hoss, C. A. Battle, S. H. Werlein, W. H. Coleman, and Briscoe Carter. While the Conference favored union, it was evident that the Methodist ministers are far apart as to the final terms of that union."

Bishop Hoss's personality was perhaps never more outstanding than it was on this interesting occasion. Though physically weaker than in former years, his great intellect sparkled and shone forth with unabated brilliancy and vigor, and his spirituality seemed to be even deeper and more impressive than in other days, while the overflowing graciousness and courtesy for which he is so distinguished were at their best. His morning talks were luminous, stimulating, and truly helpful. His address to the class admitted into full connection was magnificent, and his sermon on "The Fatherhood of God" on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. was of the very highest order—beautiful in exposition, searching in its appeals, and overpowering in its pathos. At times his voice rang out like a trumpet, while at others it vibrated with an emotion that few could resist. Handkerchiefs were in evidence on every side. It is safe to say that Baton Rouge will never forget the visit and public ministrations of this remarkable minister. We counted it a rare privilege to hear him again and he gave us a spiritual uplift such as we have not had in many a day.

The feature of the Conference which perhaps awakened the most feeling was the settlement of the question as to whether Dr. Thomas Carter and Dr. H. B. Carré should continue to be appointed professors in Vanderbilt University; but it should be kept in mind that this issue was one that involved a great principle and which in no sense was a personal one. Because of the peculiar relations existing between Vanderbilt University and the Church, and the efforts of that institution to compete with our own schools in the training of our young ministers, the College of Bishops in its recent session at Atlanta decided that it was best, all things considered, to cease to appoint professors and students to it, and entered into an agreement that this hereafter should be their policy. Bishop Hoss made it plainly known to his cabinet and to the Conference generally that he would adhere to this rule and would make no such assignments. The Conference Board of Education, however, decided to ask the Conference to request the appointment of these brethren and submitted a report with this end in view. What was intended to be acomplished by such action, it is not for us to say. There were various explanations of its purpose. When the report was read, Bishop Hoss inquired as to the object of it and stated his reasons for the position which he had taken. Then followed an extended debate which was spirited and at times somewhat acrimonious. Those who participated in it were Rev. W. W. Duke, Dr. J. M. Henry, Dr. Carter, Dr. Carré, Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, Rev. W. H. Coleman, Colonel I. D. Wall, and Bishop Hoss, who in the very nature of the case was directly involved in the pending action. The speeches of the Bishop, Dr. Thomas Carter, and Colonel I. D. Wall, of Baton Rouge (who is a grandson of the renowned Dr. William Winans and who stood with Bishop Hoss on the issue), were notably able, many remarking that they had never heard them equaled at any General Conference. A motion, made by Rev. W. H. Coleman, to strike from the report of the Board of Education the request for the appointment of Drs. Carré and Carter, finally prevailed by a large majority. This discussion took place on Saturday afternoon, and on Monday afternoon Dr. Carré was located at his own request. Subsequently Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, made a motion to locate Dr. Carter, which, after discussion, prevailed by a vote of 73 to 33. A statement was then made by Dr. Carter, after which "he and Bishop Hoss clasped hands, while members of the Conference wept." Resolutions expressing affectionate regard for Drs. Carter and Carré were then adopted. It should be distinctly understood that Bishop Hoss was ready at any time to give these brethren appointments in the Conference, with the understanding that they would fill them. Indeed, he would have been powerless to do otherwise.

WHAT CAUSED THE WAR.

In the New Orleans Advocate of August 3, a writer says: "That bloody four years' war was the direct sequence of the division of Episcopal Methodism," but farther on in this same communication the writer proceeds to state, "Having read the history of that division, I do not see how mortal man could have avoided it; possibly it was the purpose of our Father that the division should occur." But if the division of the Church was compelled to occur, and it was the purpose of God that it should occur, where comes in the blame to the M. E. Church, South, and to the M. E. Church for this separation, and for the present existence of the two distinct Churches; and wherein is the blame to them for the coming about of the war?

If it was God's purpose that these Churches should divide and the division produced the Civil War, then, of course, God brought on the four years of strife and of death and loss, and no blame attaches to the Churches. The tree had grown up and must "shoot out branches" (Mark 4:32) at the proper psychological time; but surely the growth of the big Methodist "mustard stalk" had nothing to do with producing the war. The conditions at the North and also at the South demanded the division, and it was consummated in great sincerity and in perfect innocence, and no doubt under the direction of the great Leader of the Church. The triumphant perpetuity of these Churches would not indicate that the division had caused the war. How could an all-wise and compassionate God preside over a Church division, when a fearful and disastrous war would certainly be the result of the legislation directed by Him? Satan might stir up strife and produce a war—such would be like the antagonist of the Church—but such procedure would be very unlike God, who is the Leader of the Church.

The history by John Clark Ridpath says, on page 644, in the Review of Reviews edition: "The most general cause of the Civil War in the United States was the different construction put upon the National Constitution by the people of the North and the South." Also this same historian mentions as causes: "The different systems of labor in the North and in the South," "The want of intercourse between the people of the North and of the South," "sectional books," "professional politicians," and "slavery as a controlling factor that led to the estrangement of the two sections;" but the war is not mentioned as the "natural sequence" of the legally and devoutly arranged Church division.

God greatly honored this division by making it a wondrous benediction to the people, both in the North and in this Southern country; so much so, that if "playing the fool" and "wandering in the wilderness" were true of the M. E. Church, South, as contended by some, it would by all indications be eminently wise to wander in the wilderness some more—for several generations to come—that the desert places may continue to bloom yet more, and that other millions yet may be saved. Our fathers and our mothers were saved during those wanderings, and a great Church has developed as a result of "playing the fool." The good work should continue. To be "fools for Christ's sake" is apostolic, anyway, and directly in line with God's plans for the world's salvation.

Strongs, Miss. A. H. WILLIAMS.

BILLY SUNDAY ON MILITANT CHRISTIANITY.

"The Christian needs to be a fighter. Booth went into the London slums and lifted up the submerged tenth of Christ. What are you doing, you lazy sinners? Frances Willard aroused two continents to the horror of the liquor traffic. What are you society dames doing? Grenfell established the Labrador mission, and you sit here toasting your shins. I'm through preaching on how to control your temper. The average church member hasn't any temper worth controlling. He'll rage over a lost collar button, but remain quiet while the body politic rots into hell.

"People of America, do you know the soil you walk on, the coin of your pocket, the flag above you, were all bought by the blood of martyrs? The world needs men willing to fight and die for the good of mankind. They are the real Christians.

"It is told of Robert Bruce that when he died, he told the Earl of Douglas to take his heart and put it in the sepulcher of the Savior. Douglas started out with a gallant band of Scots, and they were attacked by savage Moors.

"Douglas and his men were hard pressed by an overwhelming force. The battle was going against them. Finally Douglas raised the jewel box in which rested Bruce's heart, and flung it into the midst of the enemy. 'Lead on, O heart of Bruce,' he cried. 'Lead on, O heart of Bruce that never knew fear of defeat! We follow thee!' And they did follow, and the Moors were vanquished."

Here Mr. Sunday raised his hands as if about to fling a jewel box far out in front of him:

"By the 600,000 drunken slaves who reel and stagger out of the saloons," he cried, "by the weeping women, by the broken-hearted mothers who wring their hands over the graves of lost sons, I call you to battle, my friends. Go out, O heart of Christ. We'll follow to victory."

A STRIKING SIMILARITY.

There is a striking similarity in the resolutions adopted by our Annual Conferences on the subject of unification. One Conference—one of those in Missouri we believe has varied the stereotyped form by declaring that they are looking to the future and not to the past. Is there then a propaganda being carried on by somebody, or somebodies, in the interest of what is called unification?

It is also noticeable that most of these resolutions that have been adopted favor merely unification—few of them even going so far as to indicate upon what basis the unification is favored or desired. Very little is being said about the plan adopted by our General Conference on this matter.

Again we raise the question, Is there abroad the Church somewhere a propaganda favoring just any sort of unification, or union with the Methodists Episcopal Church? And is this advocacy intentionally leaving out what our General Conference endorsed that the Commissioners may feel themselves free to adopt any plan that the majority will favor? It would seem that the members from our Church on the Joint Commission will have no authority to agree to anything that is not contained in the general outline for the unification of Methodism by reorganization adopted by our last General Conference. Why then this indefinite sort of resolution that simply commits the Church as far an Annual Conference resolution can do it to the abstract something called the unification of Methodism? Our Church is through its highest legislative authority committed to a certain kind of unification and to nothing else.

All of this indicates that there is need for our people to see to it that nothing that is done, or that is proposed shall divide us as a Church. Nothing can be done until the Church through its constituted channels has acted on any plan that may be proposed.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE BEGGAR.

James Russell Lowell

A Beggar through the world am I—
From place to place I wander by
Fill up my pilgrim's scrip for me,
For Christ's sweet sake and charity!

A little of thy steadfastness,
Rounded with leafy gracefulness,
Old oak, give me—
That the world's blasts may round me blow,
And I yield gently to and fro,
While my stout-hearted trunk below
And firm-set roots unshaken be

Some of thy stern, unyielding might,
Enduring still through day and night
Rude tempest-shock and withering blight—
That I may keep at bay
The changeful April sky of chance
And the strong tide of circumstance—
Give me, old granite gray

Some of thy pensiveness serene,
Some of thy never-dying green,
Put in this scrip of mine—
That griefs may fall like snow-flakes white,
Ready to be an angel bright—
O sweetly-mournful pine

A little of thy merriment,
Of thy sparkling, light content,
Give me, my cheerful brook—
That I may still be full of glee
And gladsomeness, where'er I be,
Though fickle fate hath prisoned me
In some neglected nook

Ye have been very kind and good
To me, since I've been in the wood,
Ye have been gone nigh to fill my heart,
But, good-bye, kind friends, every one,
I've far to go ere set of sun,
Of all good things I would have part,
The day was high ere I could start,
And so my journey's scarce begun

Heaven help me! How could I forget
To beg of thee, dear violet!
Some of thy modesty,
That blossoms here as well, unseen,
As if before the world thou 'dst been,
O, give, to strengthen me

It was to the Psalms that the suffering Savior turned in the hour and power of darkness.—H. J Swallow.

CALLIE KNOTT (nee Youngblood), was born in Natchitoches Parish, La., on August 31, 1872, and departed this life on Nov. 3, 1916. The deceased was the wife of George Knott, a loyal steward at old Beulah Church. Of this happy union were born two sons and one daughter, all of whom, together with the husband and two brothers, live to mourn her departure. Converted at the age of seventeen, she united with the Church and ever remained true and faithful to the Master's cause. To loved ones and friends watching by her bedside during her illness she expressed her faith in the Lord, and asked them to meet her in heaven. She died as she had lived, leaning on the arm of the Savior. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

J. T. LITTLE.

ANNIE LORA OSBORN, the six-month-old infant of Mr. Wall Osborn, was born on Jan. 28, 1916, and was carried from earth to heaven by the death angel on July 29, 1916. When she was six weeks old her mother was called to the heavenly home, leaving little Annie Lora in the care of relatives. For some time she was with her grandmother, Mrs. Crews. About two weeks before her death she was carried to Kentucky to her father's people. She was not well when she arrived there, and her illness increased until the angel of the Lord took her from a world of care to a world of bliss—there to be with her mother throughout eternity. All was done for her that loving hands could do; but to no avail. She was a sweet child, and was loved by all who knew her. Jesus loved her too, for he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

Weep not, father and relatives. God makes no mistakes. "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." May God greatly biess and comfort the father and relatives who survive her, and keep them ready for heaven at all times!

S. C. MOODY, P. C.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, on Nov. 3, 1916, God, in his infinite wisdom, called from this world to her heavenly home, Mrs. Kate Eldrige, a faithful and beloved member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shannon, Miss., and a charter member of our society; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society at Shannon, Miss., have sustained the loss of a faithful friend and coworker, and that in the losing of her who was one of our senior members we have had taken from us the noble example of Christian sacrifice and service which she in her life constantly set before us.

2. That her true and loyal life of devotion to her Church, her family, and her friends will ever be an inspiration to those who knew and loved her for the worth of her character.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to our loving Savior, who alone can speak words of condolence that will bring consolation and comfort to their grief-stricken hearts.

Signed: Mrs. M. P. Muse, Mrs. Mattie Neal, for the Society.

We ought to rejoice when we find ourselves being tried. It is a sign that trouble is being taken over us, that God is fighting for us. We may comfort ourselves with the thought that God would not allow us to be in a position where honorable escape was impossible.—W. E. Orchard.

WHAT IS HIGHER CRITICISM?

In a conversation with one of our preachers, and a president of one of our Colleges, he said that Mr. Wesley and Dr. Adam Clarke were higher critics. Is this statement correct, or does it misrepresent these two illustrious scholars and fathers in Methodism? What is higher criticism, and what do we understand to be the meaning of the term when used with reference to the Bible? Webster's definition of the word 'critic' says, "One skilled in judging; a fault-finder." So when this term is used in connection with Bible study it is commonly understood to mean finding fault with certain parts contained therein, raising a doubt as to its divine inspiration.

Mr. Wesley, who was no doubt one of the best educated men of his day, and who was a profound and close student of the Bible, never in all of his writings, notes or sermons criticised or found fault with or created a doubt as to the divinely inspired Word of God. But, on the contrary, all that he said or wrote has been edifying to the Christian, strengthening him in his faith in the Bible, and has been used to the glory of God in the salvation of sinners, causing a new reverence for and love of the inspired Word of the Lord. Who that has read the preface to Wesley's sermons could for a moment think of him as being among those who criticised or found with any part of the Bible? And the same may be said of Dr. Adam Clarke who, like Mr. Wesley, had his peculiar views about some minor things, but who never let them get in the way of his influence and teachings concerning the inspiration of the Bible, which produced a reverence for the Holy Book and strengthened the faith in the divine record among those who read these writings in his day, and they have the same effect upon those who read them now.

Dr. Charles F. Deems, who was once a Southern Methodist preacher, but afterwards pastor of the Church of Strangers, N. Y., Editor of Christian Thought, and also author of a most helpful book, entitled "Light of the Nations," called the higher critics "the destructive critics." Spurgeon in referring to higher criticism, said, "In the dogmas of modern thought there is not enough mental meat to bait a mouse-trap. As to food for a soul, there is none of it. An ant would starve on such small grain. No atonement, no regeneration, no eternal love, no covenant—what is there worth thinking upon? Those who preach the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ are the terror of modern thinkers. In their heart of hearts they dread the preaching of the old-fashioned gospel, and they hate what they dread."

DON'T USE SOAP
on your hair. It is too strongly alkaline and will do a great deal of damage. The hair should be of a soft and silken texture. Each individual hair is of delicate construction and requires scientific, careful treatment. If your hair is harsh, dry, course and scanty, then you are not giving it proper treatment. The hair needs food just as the rest of your body, and in order to keep your scalp nourished and your hair plentiful and beautiful, you should supply it with the proper food and treatment. The Creoles of Louisiana possessed a formula for keeping the hair beautiful and for many years kept the secret to themselves, but now you may enjoy their discovery by using "La Creole" Hair Color Restorer, the same recipe which the Creoles used. It darkens hair in the natural way and keeps the scalp in healthy condition. For sale by all reliable dealers. Price $1.00. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.
There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

NOTES FROM PORT GIBSON DISTRICT.

Affairs are encouraging at Woodville. Finances will be paid in full. After three years' service the pastor grows in favor with his people. A movement was started for the building or purchase of a new parsonage, or for a thorough remodeling of the old one. At Woodville I was the guest in the home of Brother Lyt Lewis, and no presiding elder was ever more pleasantly situated. I assisted the pastor in an eight days' meeting. The good and faithful choir was ably led by Rev. C. W. Hillman, a student of Port Gibson College. Ten persons united with the Church.

At Centerville a good congregation attended the service and the conference on Monday morning. The prospects are for salaries in full, with some advance in the benevolent collections. Harrell is rounding out a four years' term of acceptable and useful service.

At Gloster I spent a night with Brother Simmons, whom I found sick but with his usual interest in the work. On the next morning—that cold Tuesday—I went with the pastor in his auto to Mt. Vernon, fourteen miles away, where the quarterly meeting was to be. Despite the bitter cold, a good congregation assembled. The consolidated school took a recess, and more than a hundred pupils with their teachers crowded the house. The building, which is just finished, is one of the best country churches in the Conference. Made of the best heart pine and covered with cypress shingles, unless destroyed by fire or storm, it should stand for near a century. It cost about $1500, and is nearly paid for. The stove had not been put in, and it was cold.

Liberty and all of the country churches pledged salaries in full. We are expecting Gloster also to come up. I am sorry that the collections have not fared quite so well to date. Williams is closing his third year with the love and confidence of his people.

A cold ride to Gloster, a trip home, and then a severe cold that for a week has stopped my journeying followed in succession. I expect to start again in the morning. Brother O'Neil kindly went to Nebo in my stead, and reports that Loftus and his people are doing splendidly. I am sorry I did not get to see them this time.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

WHAT CHARLESTON LEARNED.

The brewers are flooding the malls with circulars to voters in Kansas City warning them that prohibition will increase taxes. One way to judge whether it will or not is by looking at the experience of other cities.

Charleston, S. C., used to receive $53,000 license revenue from fifty saloons. It closed them July 1, 1914, and has been dry ever since. Mayor G. E. Bruce of that city writes:

"Now as to the financial condition. The city has forged ahead and has built in the last two years forty miles of streets and kept pace with all improvements, kept the streets clean and the city in good, sanitary condition. This was done without increasing the taxes, but instead we have been able to reduce the levy from seventy-nine cents to fifty-five cents for the running expenses of the city, or in other words, we have reduced the levy twenty-four cents and have ample cash on hand to pay all obligations. This comes about by a large reduction in the police department, a large reduction in the court expenses and a large reduction in the poor fund. These reductions greatly exceed the $53,000 we received from the fifty-three saloons in the city. Real estate is much more valuable and the closing of the saloon has increased the merchandise and food consumption."—Kansas City Star.

COLLAPSIBLE THEOLOGY.

In their out-of-door summer preaching, our Unitarian friends in New England are using a collapsible pulpit—a phrase which has caused not a little mirth in some quarters unfriendly to liberal theology. Collapsible pulpits are suggestive of collapsible theology.—Standard.

A GREAT SUBJECT.

The noted English preacher, Dr. John Clifford, after a long and fruitful ministry, has retired. Recently he visited his native village and preached. He began his sermon with this personal reference: "Sixty-four years ago I preached my second trial sermon as a candidate for college from this pulpit. I chose then a great subject. Young men are not always as modest in their choice of texts as those of riper years and fuller experience. My text on that occasion was, 'Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.' That was the subject with which I began my ministry. I come to you to-day as a tired old man, after sixty-four years' service and fifty-seven as the pastor of one church, and I have the same message and the one I have tried to preach all these years."—Central Christian Advocate.

SAVED BY PRAYER.

A life-boat went out on a dangerous coast to the relief of a ship-wrecked vessel. The waves ran high and threatened to swamp the boat. At last the captain said: "Mates, shall we turn back? We are going to certain death. The ship has sunk, and doubtless all hands have gone down with her." There was a moment's hesitation and then one man cried out, "No, let us go on. As I ran down the beach I passed two ladies on their knees praying for the lives of the men in yonder wreck. I believe God will hear them. I believe we may find some alive." His words had such an effect on the crew that they plucked up courage and rowed on midst the breakers. They picked up five poor fellows, one by one, clinging to wreckage, and otherwise supporting themselves. The prayers of those two ladies had saved those lives.—Bombay Guardian.

Established 1879

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. It is a simple, safe, effective and inexpensive treatment. Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose. The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights. Cresolene relieves the irritating, hacking cough of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria. Cresolene's best recommendation is its 37 years of successful use. Send postal for descriptive Booklet.

A VISIT TO MY OLD HOME.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Monday, October 23, 1916, my family and I left our home here in Meridian, Miss., to visit our relatives at McComb, Auburn and Wesson, Mississippi. We spent eight days with our dear homefolks at Auburn. We found my father "stuck up;" yes, very busy making up his ribbon cane molasses. The crops on an average, as best I was able to learn, in that immediate farming section are fairly good compared with previous years. To say that we had an enjoyable time at each place with our relatives does not begin to express our feelings.

I found the faithful and energetic pastor on the Adams charge, Rev. R. H. Barr, in a fine humor, and optimistic. He is doing a splendid work on that charge, I was asked by him to preach for him at my old home church, Adams, and I reluctantly consented to do so. Though the fifth Sunday was an off day, we had a real good little congregation, and I surely did enjoy meeting the dear good home people again, and having the blessed privilege of preaching to them. As I looked over the congregation my heart was made sad to find that some of the faithful ones of my old home church had fallen on sleep, and had gone out to live with the God whom they loved and served so faithfully while they were with us here in this world of mutation. Although we miss seeing their smiling faces in the house of the Lord, and hearing them give in their ardent testimonies, witnessing to the great fact that the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleaneth us from (not in) all sin, infusing new life, hope and joy into these cold hearts of ours. Thank God, this morning for the touch of their lives upon our lives. They are gone, but not forever. We expect to meet them again in the City Celestial. Their memory is precious to us. That the blessing of our Heavenly Father may abide ever with the faithful pastor and his people on the Adams charge, is my prayer.

My brothers at McComb, Miss., informed me that their wide-awake pastor, Rev. W. N. Thomas, of East McComb, was in high favor with his people, and doing all in his power to lead his flock nearer to the Lord Jesus.

While we were visiting relatives at Wesson, Miss., I had the happy privilege of meeting my dear, good, young friend, Rev. I. L. Peebles, and I found him cheerful, optimistic, and young and happy in the love of Jesus. Brother Peebles is doing a good work on the Wesson charge. Any people that may secure him as their pastor, can rely on this one fact, that they have got a splendid preacher, and one of the best pastors to visit his people in our Conference. When it comes to preaching the doctrines of our Church none can excel him. If you hear him once, you will want to hear him again. I want to say as a young preacher that Brother Peebles' life and ministry have proven to be very helpful and inspiring to me in more ways than one. Thank God for such true men as he!

Things are still going well with us here at the Seventh Avenue Church, and also up at the Marion Church. Souls are still ploughing their way through to victory and a full salvation in Jesus' name. To God, we are careful to give all the glory! The Sunday services and the prayer meeting services are all being well attended. When a people are Spirit-filled, and ready always to testify to the saving power of the gospel of the Lord Jesus, it isn't any wonder that the Lord Jesus is with them in every service to bless and gladden the hearts of His children. We are looking toward the sunset of life with our hearts filled with the love of Jesus and a passionate desire to lead souls into the life abundant, which can only be found in Jesus Christ our Savior. May God continue to bless and use you in his service. I am as ever,

Faithfully yours,
HILARY WESTBROOK.
Meridian, Miss.

Ladies! Darken Your Gray Hair

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

THE REAL SOURCE OF POWER.

Amid all the calls for "visions"—"enthusiasm" — "organization" — in Church and Christian work, let us never forget that the only way we can help others to a better life, nearer to Christ, is to be near Him ourselves; and the only way to be near Him and receive of His strength is to * * * be near Him, live near Him.

The new life is strong or weak as we live much or little with Christ, He speaking with us in the study of His Word, we communing with Him in prayer.

The enthusiasm, so called, which comes from men is a mere galvanizing to apparent life, which does not last.

"Alone with God," in heart-to-heart fellowship with Him, is the only real source of life and vision and enthusiasm that lasts, and brings results to the world.—Presbyterian Record (Montreal).

HIGHLY COMMENDED.

Whereas, our beloved presiding elder, Rev. G. H. Thompson, has completed his quadrennium on the Hattiesburg District and, under the law of our Church, must be assigned to another field, therefore, be it resolved by the officials of the Ellisville charge, in fourth quarterly conference assembled:

1. That we are indebted to him for much spiritual uplift because of the sermons he has delivered, and the kindness, patience, and brotherly love with which he has presided over the quarterly conferences during the past four years.

2. That we regret to give him up, and feel that in his going, we are losing a friend and brother on whom we could rely, and a presiding officer without a superior in the Mississippi Conference. We commend him to the people in any field of labor to which he may be sent, and pray that God's blessings may ever attend him in his efforts to advance the work of the Master.

3. That these expressions be made a matter of record and that their publication in the New Orleans Christian Advocate be requested.

(Signed by the officials, and unanimously adopted.)

That Well Known Saying

"Beauty is only Skin deep," is certainly true as regards physical beauty. There are many beautiful faces and beautiful hands that have been made extremely ugly by some skin trouble. The fragrant Tetterine will rid you of any skin disease. Absolutely harmless. 50c a box from druggists or by mail from

SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

REV. J. H. GRICE APPRECIATED.

Resolved, 1. That we, the members of this (the Bayou Pierre) charge in the fourth quarterly conference at Pleasant Valley, hereby express our appreciation of the earnest and faithful service in our behalf which our beloved pastor, Rev. J. H. Grice, has rendered during the four years that he has been with us, during which time he has made himself very close and dear to us as a man, as a brother, and as a minister of the Gospel.

2. That we shall always rejoice in whatever success may attend his labors in the vineyard of the Lord.

3. That happy indeed will be the charge that secures the services of Brother and Sister Grice.

Signed: J. G. Ainsworth, J. M. Wilson, J. S. Decell, and others.

TELEGRAPHING IN JAPANESE.

The Japanese, like the Chinese, have no alphabet in the ordinary sense, every word in their written language being represented by a separate character. In telegraphing in those languages, therefore, about 10,000 words are selected, and figures ranging for 1 up to 9999 are allotted to each word. Each word of a message to be transmitted by telegraph is then first given its proper number by the telegraph clerk, by means of a dictionary which has been prepared under the authority of the government. These numbers are then transmitted by the Morse alphabet, and when received the message is translated back in the Chinese or Japanese characters by reference to a corresponding dictionary.—Cassier's Magazine.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climatic conditions.

Secure from your Druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a light tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment remember that first aid to relief is found in abundance of fresh air—day and night—freedom from over-exertion and pure food.

Attention to these matters should do much to arrest the progress of he malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where Nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited.

Under such circumstances, try Eckman's Alterative, which has been used with large benefit by many sufferers. In numerous cases it has helped to bring about recovery. Also it has been successful in treating asthma and bronchial troubles.

And since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, its use is not attended with danger. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Bookiet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which, if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood, causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate at the drugstore. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

NOTES FROM ST. MARK'S HALL.

Clinic.

This is one of the most interesting and far reaching features of our work. If you could see the crowd of patients gathered in our yard and waiting room on Clinic days, you would feel repaid if nothing else was accomplished at St. Mark's. The work is in three sections—the General Clinic, the Eye Clinic, and the Child Welfare Clinic. The work of the latter is largely preventive.

Boy Scouts.

Possibly it can be said without fear of denial that our Boy Scout Troop is the most interesting in the city. Our Scout Master is faithful and self-denying. When a worker praised him for what he did for the boys, he replied: "But just think what it means to me. I have to live up to the ideals I have for my boys." Besides investing his life, he uses his means. Almost every night in the week the boys are given right-of-way at St. Mark's Hall.

The Sewing School.

The sewing school opened with an unusually fine attendance. Both scholars and teachers came back full of enthusiasm. Two new features were added—the Little Mother's class, in which the girls make baby clothes for the Clinic, and a fancy work class for last year's graduates. The story hour given at the opening is a most interesting feature.

Kindergarten.

This department is growing steadily. The fine co-operation of the parents gives a degree of stability not often found in kindergartens. There are rare possibilities wrapped up in this work with the children. We are sadly in need of a volunteer to play the piano or assist with games.

Milk Station.

St. Mark's has one of the six stations of the City Child Welfare Association. Milk is distributed daily by one of their trained nurses, who looks carefully after the health of the babies. This department is doing excellent work.

Statistics.

Number visits received, 165; number visits made, 679; number phone calls, 161; number letters and cards written, 25; average attendance, Sewing School, 49; average attendance, Kindergarten, 16; average attendance, Children's Choir, 7; average attendance, Boys' Clubs, 31; average attendance, Sunday School, 66. Dispensary: number General Clinics 14, consultations 405; number Eye Clinics 5, consultations 63; number Child Welfare Clinics 8; consultations 120; number bottles milk distributed 1350. Receipts: Dues from Kindergarten, $2; dues from Clinic, $6.50; total, $8.50.—St. Mark's Bulletin.

THE BELGIAN CONGO.

Three young women have been appointed to work in the Belgian Congo. The Belgian Congo is in West Central Africa and has a population of about 15,000,000. There are a number of tribes, speaking about one hundred languages and dialects. The Southern Methodist Mission is among the Batetela tribe, which numbers about 400,000. The chief station of the Mission is at Wembo-Niama, which is about four degrees south of the equator, with an altitude of eighteen hundred feet. Our first missionaries reached Africa in the very last of the year 1913. The work as at present organized consists of evangelistic work largely under the direction of the native evangelists who came to us from the Southern Presbyterian Mission. The church at Wembo-Niama was dedicated on January 3, 1915, and there were present about 350 persons. There is a mission school, with an average attendance of 65. Medical and clinic work is carried on in the Mary Long Hospital. The Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, the Beatitudes, and some small portions of the Old Testament have been translated into the Batetela language. Some valuable work in translation has also been done in school text-books.

MISS BENNETT AND MISS HEAD IN JAPAN.

Miss Bennett and Miss Head describe very enthusiastically the greeting they received as they landed at Yokohama: "Miss Atkinson, Miss Hackney, and Miss Worth were the first to greet us, followed by Dr. Wainright, and Brothers Hager and Callahan. This and the large package of letters that was handed as we left the steamer made us know that a royal welcome awaited us in all our missions in the Orient."

They write further: "We had our first ride in Jinrikishas to the Tokyo depot, where we took the train, and in about half an hour were in the hospitable home of Dr. Wainright. At 2 p. m., we left for Nikko, a little resort where the Emperor has his summer home, world-famed for its beauty. Far more interesting to us than the Emperor's palace was the little Japanese house where Miss Atkinson and a small party of missionaries from China and Japan had been gaining strength for another year's work. The four hours' train ride to Nikko and two days' stay there gave us our first view of Japanese life, with its wonderful mixture of ancient and modern civilization. We saw a Japanese man dressed in up-to-date American clothes, Panama hat, spotless linen with an English walking cane, and gloved hands, sitting opposite us in the railroad coach, and with perfect sangfroid change his costume to the usual Japanese kimono and wooden shoes, regardless of the spectators, native and foreign. We saw our own missionaries buy small bottles of milk and pots of tea (ocha) from the numberless venders of all kinds of flesh, fish, and fowls, who called out their wares at every station. The buying was less entertaining to us than the drinking of these beverages, as they sat Japanese fashion on the car seat with the upturned bottles and refreshed themselves. We were apt pupils and at once began to follow that fashion. Ocha (tea), milk, and ochabo (red cap) are our stock in trade when we stop at the stations now."

GOOD NEWS FROM HOLDING INSTITUTE.

Electric lights have been placed on Holding Institute campus. No danger of being lost on the campus now. Beds for only three more girls are available in the girls' department, though there is room for more boys in the barracks. The campus is now made safe in the event of fire by introducing fire hydrants within easy reach of the different buildings. They need a small chemical outfit for extinguishing fire inside. This would cost $185. Anybody who wants to give it is free to do so.

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again." —Mrs. Fred Behnke, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well." —Mrs. Thos. Dwyer, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

REV. R. F. HARRELL APPRECIATED.

Whereas, Rev. R. F. Harrell has been our pastor for four years, and will have to leave us on acount of the time limit; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we tender him an expression of our appreciation of his untiring efforts and of the faithful and efficient service that he has rendered while with us.
2. That we heartily commend him to any people to whom he may be sent.
3. That we pray God's blessings upon him, his family, and his labors in the Master's vineyard.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Centerville Jeffersonian and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

JOHN L. ASH, Secretary.

The above resolutions were adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Centerville (Miss. Conf.) charge, M. E. Church, South.

PAYING THE PREACHER.

Dear Advocate: Some months ago I wrote you a short article somewhat along the lines which herein follow. However, I am so convinced that my position is practical and beneficial that I beg space to call attention to the subject again. As our Conferences will soon convene I am trying to emphasize the idea of the different boards of stewards making a cash collection before the preacher arrives and delivering it to him at the beginning of his work. My notion is that too many good preachers are embarrassed when they reach their new appointments because they have no money on hand. They have expenses like other people and pride as well.

My original plan was like this: Take an appointment where the salary is, say, $1200. That would be $100 per month, or $300 per quarter. In a congregation of that size it would be an easy task to find twelve persons who would readily pay as much as $25 on their pastor's salary at the beginning of the Conference year. Thus he would have $300 without any further ado about it, and this would relieve all immediate embarrassment. Let us next take a circuit which pays $600. That means $50 a month, or $150 a quarter. It would be easy to find ten men who would pay $15, or fifteen men who would pay $10 to start with.

One serious objection I have heard urged against this plan is that the pastor's first money would likely come largely from the board of stewards and that the rest of the congregation would hold back their payments because of the idea that he did not need it. That argument, I think, is met by the fact that the board frequently has to sign a note with the new preacher and have him borrow the first money on his new work. What is the difference in getting the cash and being done with it and in signing the note? Besides that, if this plan were announced openly, and the congregation understood it, there would be a lot of money paid in at the start which is held back. Let's try the plan. What board of stewards will first adopt it and make up a purse as above indicated and hand it to their pastor upon his arrival? Then he would feel free and easy and better prepared to enter upon his Master's work.

Meat Cause of Kidney Trouble

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Can You Write a Letter Like This?

Mrs. Theo. Kuker, Florence, S. C., writes us under date of Aug. 29, 1915, as follows: "I have ordered 'RENWAR' for several people and many others come to me for the name and address. As my recovery has heen so wonderful I am happy to recommend such a sure remedy. It has never failed to relieve those who used it." This is only one of such letters received by us almost every day. You, too, can be well, if you will. "Renwar" relieves rheumatism by removing the cause, uric acid, from the blood. For sale by all druggists, 50c per bottle, or sent postpaid on receipt of price if your druggist cannot supply you. WARNER DRUG CO., Nashville, Tenn.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of this (the Jackson) District, who has found his way deeply into the hearts of the people of the Sharon Circuit, will be removed by the operation of the time limit at the sitting of the Annual Conference for the present year; therefore be it resolved:

1. That he has proved himself a faithful and efficient presiding elder.
2. That he has been brotherly and kind in his administration at all times, being happy in the possession of an excellent Christian spirit.
3. That, we heartily commend him to any field to which he may be sent by the appointing power, and our prayers are that the lines may fall to him in pleasant places.

Signed: A. S. Byrd, W. H. Coulter, W. C. Joiner, H. L. Walker, W. J. Leggett.

The above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Sharon Circuit, Jackson District, Mississippi Conference.

OAK RIDGE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: On the night of November 19 there was rendered at Oak Ridge a program for the benefit of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, and, considering the practice the children had had, it was indeed a success. Every one on the program did his part well indeed, and the two ladies, Mrs. S. P. Grant and Miss Elmer Austin, who were responsible for the occasion certainly deserve credit for their part. We took up a collection for the Home and received $15, for which we were very thankful. You can always depend on Oak Ridge to do its part when the cause is worthy. The longer I am among these people the better I like to reside in their midst. We are behind with our Conference collections, but there is a movement all over the charge to pay them in full. The Lord bless every effort toward this worthy cause!

Drinking of Water

(BY W. LUCAS, M. D.)

The general conclusions of the latest Medical Scientists proves that drinking plenty of pnre water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not ice water), both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Anuric before meals. These Anuric tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK—of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases—means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if the liver is inactive and the blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in the germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," or soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself.

It cures troubles caused by torpid liver or impure blood.

"The Common Sense Medical Adviser," latest edition, in French cloth binding, will be sent free on receipt of four dimes or stamps to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address Dr. Pierce, Prest. Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

PROHIBITION ITEMS.

In Montgomery, Ala., in one case the other day, they destroyed 2300 half pints of liquor and yet "prohibition don't prohibit."

"Only one line of business in the South has been injured by prohibition and that is, the number of convicts has been seriously lessened," says the Manufacturers' Record.

Arrests for drunkenness in Toronto during two weeks of the wet month of September, 1915, were 457 and for the same period during the prohibition month of September, 1916, the number was 88. The arrests for all offenses were 742 during the prohibition period and 1665 during the license period.

Under Minnesota's local option law, 44 counties have voted dry and 1050 saloons have been closed in less than two years.

Wise counsel may accelerate or mistakes delay it, but national prohibition is sure to come.

ADDRESS OF AN AGED MINISTER TO HIS PALSIED HAND.

Old hand, what ails you? Cannot you be still for a moment? Seventy and six years have left their marks on you. But bless the King in Zion this day for all the service you have been able to render Him. How often have you handled the sacred pages of His Word! What use you have been in preaching His gospel! How often you have baptized loving disciples! How many you have received into fellowship in His Church! For how many you have broken the emblem of His broken body! Poor old hand! I remember when you were fair and young and strong. Never mind the past. Thank my loving Lord, it will not be long before you put your fingers into the print of the nails in His hand; not long before you will lay a crown at His feet; not long before He will stretch out His own hand, mighty to save, and grasp you and greet you, and His touch will heal your palsy and send immortality thrilling through your every vein and fiber. Be of good cheer, old hand! You shall soon touch more than the hem of His robe, and be healed forever!—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

NOT PEACE, BUT A SWORD.

Christ's statement that He had come to bring strife and a sword on earth did not mean that He wished any such results to accompany His coming and His work, but that such results were inevitable. Christ sets up a standard that arouses the antagonism of evil-minded men. He tells people to be unselfish, helpful, self-sacrificing, and because people are naturally greedy and selfish and self-seeking, they not only refuse to accept His standards, but oppose and attack those who do. Every moral reform is opposed by those who do not wish to be just and right, and whose self-interests will be injured by the triumph of righteousness. Christ has come to bring peace, but before peace can reign wrong must be overthrown, and wrong cannot be overthrown without a struggle. The "foes" referred to doubtless mean literally the members of one's own family circle who oppose the cause of righteousness and love. There have been countless cases in which this sad prophecy of Christ has been literally fulfilled, and a man or woman, or perhaps a child, found that his opponents, in his zeal for Christ's cause, were those of his own household.—The Christian Herald.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. It is characterized by a discharge through the nostrils or into the throat. It usually begins with a cold in the head. Beginning in the nostrils it spreads to all the mucous membranes of the body. The nasty discharge being swallowed, it upsets the stomach and from the stomach it is taken into the blood, and poisons and deranges the whole body. The discharge is all the time inclined to work its way from the nose back into the head—down into the throat—into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Herein is its greatest danger. Catarrh often destroys the organs of hearing and removes the sense of smell.

Try This. Pleasant Herb Smoke Free

(CONTAINS NO TOBACCO)

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted 42 years to the treatment of catarrh, is the originator of a combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. This smoke vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the warm healing antiseptic vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. This Remedy fights and kills the catarrh germs where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly go. It is a most reliable remedy and is so simple and convenient that it can be used at home by any man, woman or child. It is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drug. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be he wants to show you what the Remedy will do for you.

CHURCH NEWS.

(Compiled by the Nashville News Bureau.)

The East Oklahoma and West Oklahoma Conferences propose to cooperate in raising $60,000 for the endowment of a chair in the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, Dallas.

At the recent session of the North Alabama Conference there was presented to the Conference a check for five thousand dollars, the gift of Mr. J. H. Hicks, of Talladega, Ala., to the superannuates and other Conference claimants. This generous contribution was distributed to the claimants and gave to each an increase of nearly fifty per cent above the amount that otherwise would have been provided.

Rev. D. L. Coale, of San Antonio, Tex., one of the general evangelists of our Church, reported to the West Texas Conference at its recent session that during the year there had been four thousand conversions in meetings held by him. One hundred young men and boys gave their lives to the work of the ministry, and ninety young women and girls pledged themselves to special work as missionaries or other Christian service.

The November Bulletin of the Board of Education classifies the schools of our Church as follows: Two universities, sixteen A-grade colleges, eleven B-grade colleges, twenty-six junior colleges and C-grade colleges, thirty-one academies, and four missionary training schools. For all of these schools the properties are valued at $15,008,196, and endowments amount to $9,160,467. The number of students enrolled during the past session was 19,649.

Dr. O. F. Sensabaugh, who has completed four years of service as presiding elder of the Dallas District, made the following report at the session of the North Texas Conference: Members received this year, 1655; total in four years, 6933. Total paid pastors, $27,772; net increase in four years, $10,182; average salary, $1621; average per member, $14.80. Total for all purposes, $121,261; total for all four years, $536,795. All leading churches out in full; four new parsonages bought or built; church and parsonage debts either paid or provided for; five new churches built.

It is stated that the Nobel Peace Prize will not be awarded this year, and that the amount of money usually thus applied will be carried over to 1917.

EDITORIAL.

Affectation of learning abounds, but real scholarship is still regrettably scarce.

If Methodist Churches are to choose their pastors, Methodist pastors should be allowed to choose their churches.

He cannot fail who works with God, and he who works against Him cannot but be defeated in the end. The omnipotent and omniscent One must inevitably triumph at last.

BISHOP MURRAH'S WORK AT WINONA.

Bishop Murrah's presidency at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference gave great satisfaction. He presided with ease and was at all times courteous and considerate in the chair, though he was prompt and firm in his decisions and dispatched business without needless delay. His platform utterances were to the point and quite impressive. His address to the class admitted into full connection was appropriate and able, and his sermon on Sunday at 11 o'clock held the close attention of the great audience and elicited much favorable comment. His work in the cabinet was highly commended by the presiding elders, and we do not think that we have ever known the appointments at a Conference to give more general satisfaction. Mississippians have abundant reasons to be proud of their Bishop, who is a worthy successor to Robert Paine and Charles B. Galloway, whose names are so imperishably written in the annals of Southern Methodism.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND UNIFICATION.

We are publishing in this issue of the Advocate the resolutions of the North Mississippi Conference concerning the unification of American Methodism. Respecting this action, we desire to call attention to the following facts:

1. The Conference planted itself squarely on the Oklahoma City plan of unification. The necessity of placing the Negroes in a separate Church is specifically stated. Not a single speaker ventured to proclaim a willingness to break away from the specifications of this plan at any point.

2. There was not in the remarks that were made a single commendation of the Saratoga enactment. The resolution touching upon it does not undertake to construe its significance, but leaves the interpretation of its meaning to the Northern Commissioners, who are soon to meet with our representatives in Baltimore.

3. The resolutions recognize it to be the function of our Commissioners to "elaborate and perfect" the tentative plan formulated by the Joint Commission and endorsed by our General Conference, with the important modification concerning the colored Methodists. There is no hint that they are considered to have power to revolutionize this plan or to devise another.

As will be seen, the Editor of the Advocate signed these resolutions, and he stood for their adoption. He did not write them, however, and they are not in every particular expressed as he should have preferred to have them. But we were in general accord with them, except as to the seemingly hopeful view they take of the outlook for the consummation of the unification movement,

REV. PAUL D. HARDIN,
Presiding Elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District.

Brother Hardin is finishing his fourth year on the Capital District of Mississippi, where he has made an excellent record. He is a vigorous and effective preacher, an able administrator, and a wise and tactful leader. The work of the Church in all departments has made gratifying progress in the territory under his supervision during the past four years, and the pastors and people in the charges embraced in it will sever their official relations with him with much regret. Brother Hardin is in the prime of life and gives promise of large usefulness in the future. He was a member of the last General Conference, and is one of the most popular men in the Mississippi Conference.

which is a very immaterial point. We agree with Bishops Hoss and Denny that, according to the terms laid down, the two great Episcopal Methodisms do not now seem to be any nearer together now than they were five years ago. We stated, however, in the beginning of the present unification agitation that we would stand for the Oklahoma City plan as it was originally interpreted, both in the South and in the North, and this we have done, and shall continue to do. But if any effort should be made to break away from any of the basal principles of this plan, we shall vigorously resist the attempt. We told the Conference that we would never support any scheme of unification which would not preserve the substantial integrity and autonomy of the Southern Church in the South proper and group the colored Methodists in a separate communion, and by this declaration we shall resolutely stand. To the splitting of our Church with the Mississippi River as a dividing line, or to the chipping off of the Texas Conferences, we will never give our consent.

It is well known to those who have talked to us within recent months that we have held the conviction that the wisest course for our Annual Conferences to pursue was to have nothing to say at present on the subject of unification—the course which most of the Northern Annual Conferences seem to be following. The Annual Conferences sustain a vital and official relation to this movement, and must sooner or later pass upon any plan of relating the two Churches more closely that may be agreed upon. Therefore, their utterances in the present confused state of things, unless very carefully worded, may be misunderstood and made to carry a significance that they did not intend to give them, and consequently embarrass them at a later time. So, our first efforts were to persuade the brethren who wished to make some deliverance to consent to await further negotiations by the Joint Commission, which, so far as we know, no one in the Church is seeking to hinder; but, being unable to bring them to this view, we deemed it best to try to keep the Conference united by concurring in a declaration in favor of the Oklahoma City plan, rather than to stir up within it the spirit of factionalism, when in reality there was yet no issue before it. This desire to avoid dividing the Conference was not, however, fully realized, since a considerable number of the brethren (estimated by some to be about one-third of the body) stood against even this deliverance in favor of the Oklahoma enactment.

On the whole, we are more firmly convinced by the late developments than we have ever been that an attempt upon the part of the extreme unionists to jam through a scheme of union that would shiver to pieces the Church, South, would stir up a tremendous storm and result in immeasurable disaster to Southern Methodism. The Oklahoma plan would stop overlapping, allay friction along the border, and give concert of effort wherein it is needed. These are the great ends to be achieved, and with their realization every reasonable and Christian demand would be met. We are fully satisfied that there are hundreds of thousands of our people who would not stand for anything beyond this. This conclusion is based upon information derived from conversations with pastors and leading laymen and other dependable sources of knowledge as to the situation.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Jones.

First Day—Wednesday.

The forty-seventh session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the enterprising little city of Winona on November 29, 1916, at 9 o'clock a. m., with our beloved Mississippian, Bishop W. B. Murrah, in the chair.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the Bishop, assisted by Brothers W. S. Lagrone, R. O. Brown, J. A. Hall, and Dr. J. W. Boswell. The service was impressive and brought to all hearts the consciousness of the indwelling Christ and His coming to earth again. This service closed with a prayer by Bishop Murrah and the hymn, "Savior, more than life to me."

Bishop Murrah arose and expressed great pleasure in meeting with his own Conference, after an absence of seven years, from which Conference he was not absent for a period of thirty-five years until seven years ago. He mentioned the fact that many of the brethren had answered to the roll call in the skies since he met with the Conference.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, Secretary of the last Conference, called the roll.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, for many years the efficient secretary of the Conference, was unanimously re-elected. Rev. Olin Ray was elected Railroad Secretary. Revs. J. J. Baird and A. T. McIlwain were elected Statistical Secretaries.

The usual committees were announced. Rev. J. H. Holder moved the nomination of a special Orphans' Home Committee. The motion carried and the committee was appointed, after a brief address by the Rev. W. W. Woollard.

The Bishop addressed the Conference, commending the special mention of the death of the Senior Bishop, A. W. Wilson, by the Committee on Memoirs.

The hours of opening and adjourning were fixed at 9 a. m. and 12 m., respectively.

Rev. J. H. Holder suggested that a special memorial service, in which tributes might be paid to the memory of Major R. W. Millsaps, founder and friend of Millsaps College, be held at some suitable time. The entire Conference heartily concurred.

The following brethren appeared at the bar and were introduced to the Conference: Dr. Pinson, Dr. Brown, Dr. Stuart, Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Mississippi Conference, and Mr. Fitzgerald, of the Publishing House. Mr. Fitzgerald made a brief address to the Conference, referring to impressive words of the lamented Bishop Galloway, which had been of inestimable worth to him ever since he heard them. He then mentioned the products of the Publishing House and spoke encouragingly of the success of the House in the distribution of religious literature.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham was placed on the Board of Education in place of Rev. H. S. Spragins, who had been transferred to the Memphis Conference.

Rev. J. W. Dorman was placed on the Epworth League Board to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dr. H. G. Henderson.

A communication to the Board of Education, in which was noted the abundant success of Emory University, was read by the secretary of the Conference.

Bishop Murrah spoke briefly concerning the appointment of the Educational Commission and its responsibility in the midst of confusion and bewilderment, of the meetings at Birmingham and Atlanta, of the growing conviction that the South must have a university whose power and influence should be felt throughout the world. The result of these meetings was the magnificent donation of a million of dollars by Mr. Asa Candler. The conditions now are flattering and without precedence. The demand of the Church is for two universities, one west and one east of the Mississippi River, that the humblest as well as the wealthiest shall have the benefit of, as well as have stock in the same. He said, "A university is a matter of growth, and is never complete." He emphasized the importance of the local colleges. Bishop Murrah is a member of the Educational Commission.

Mr. J. H. Sherard offered the report of the Trustees of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The report described the plan for the building, which will be begun at an early day. The fourth Sunday in January was set apart as 'Hospital Day,' and the trustees asked the prayers of the Church in behalf of the movement.

The Bishop called Question 22, "Are all of the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The following presiding elders made reports from their respective districts:

Rev. J. W. Bell—700 net gain in membership in the Aberdeen District. Preachers all faithful, having done their best.

Rev. W. W. Woollard reported 1000 accessions to the Church in the Columbus District; heroic work done by all the preachers. He spoke in commendatory terms of the stewards, who in the midst of much discouragement had fought bravely against the odds, as he also did of the Sunday school superintendents and the women of the district.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey reported a forward-movement in the Corinth District, good revivals in all charges, and much improvement in the church property and parsonages.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of the Durant District, reported advancement, many old debts having been paid, and an increase in insurance on parsonages and churches and many members received into the Church.

Rev. H. S. Spragins said: "The salaries of all the preachers were paid in full; 14 out of the 17 charges had paid all the assessments for all purposes." Special mention of the new church at Clarksdale to cost over $50,000 was made. Brother Brown is working heroically and finds the spiritual life of the church revived since the efforts to build the new house of worship. Brother Spragins commended the work of the preachers in his district.

Following the report by Brother Spragins, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of Corinth, addressed the Conference, expressing his surprise and regret that Brother Spragins was leaving us. His remarks were highly enjoyed by the Conference and called forth approval and applause. Dr. Boswell contributed to the occasion with brief remarks.

Rev. L. A. McKeown brought greetings from the Rev. R. M. Davis, who was on his couch suffering his last earthly affliction. A telegram was immediately sent to Brother Davis, who is loved by all the preachers and has contributed to the life of many of the most useful men of the Methodist Church in Mississippi.

Rev. J. H. Holder reported from the Sardis District a good increase in membership and splendid revivals. The number of organized classes in the Sunday school had been doubled and Sunday school rooms are being provided in the country churches; two new parsonages and a new district parsonage have been built; preachers all loyal.

Rev. J. H. Felts, of the Holly Springs District, reported finances $5000 ahead of last year; approximately 800 accessions to the church; harmony and good-will prevailing in the district.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb reported 700 accessions to the Church in the Winona District. The work done by the women of the district deserved special mention, as they were very active, one Missionary Society having raised $700, and another $1100. Belzoni and Moorhead are beginning the erection of new houses of worship.

Bishop Murrah addressed the Conference, commending the men for the success achieved under the discouraging conditions. He said, "No one can ever know what the North Mississippi Conference has done for the country." He mentioned the success of the Hospital and called attention to the interest the city of Memphis is taking in the movement.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, who is known to all, addressed the Conference in behalf of the Hospital. He said: The magnificent plan for the building is the result of time and the product of conservative thought. It takes time to do big things. Ample provisions are being made for all necessities, convenient and commodious operating rooms are being designed. The buildings are to be 5 and 7 stories high. Enthusiastic men of Memphis are ready to begin the city campaign. Three and a half millions of people are looking to Memphis for hospital service. Other Churches are now compelled to take care of our preachers and laymen by the scores. There is need for a Christian Hospital with a special pastor and chaplain to minister to the dying within its walls.

Brother Holder read a communication from Rev. W. C. Harris under the recall of Question 22. His name, with others, was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

Dr. T. C. Wier was present and made a report of his labors for the year.

The name of Rev. J. T. Lockhart was left on the effective list.

The Bishop asked the presiding elders to meet him at 3 o'clock.

Rev. H. M. Ellis invited the preachers all to visit him. He lives on the Hospital property, which we should see.

The morning session adjourned with the Doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

Wednesday Afternoon.

The service opened with the hymn, "I love Thy Kingdom, Lord," and a prayer led by Dr. Tucker, who represented The American Bible Society in Brazil. The 16th Chapter of Luke was read. Dr. Tucker addressed the audience, giving a brief description of the work of the Bible Society in Brazil. He said, "God is truly blessing the study of the Scriptures in Brazil. The soldiers in the trenches are calling for the Bible."

The choir sang hymn No. 349, "Savior, thy dying Love," after which Rev. Robert Selby, of the Mississippi Conference, announced a text in Matthew 25:15, and preached an able sermon on the subject of "Christian Stewardship." He called attention to the great issues and said, amongst other striking truths: "There is a sense in which we may retrieve, but past failures remain. We have been so busy preaching and as careless about the cultivation of the talents in the field that we have lost more than words can express. Not so much the quantity as the quality of the work done receives commendation."

Service closed with Hymn No. 312 and the benediction by Dr. Boswell.

Wednesday Evening.

Service opened promptly at 7:30 o'clock, with a song by the choir, "The Holy City." Rev. J. E. Thomas announced the hymn, "My Faith looks up to Thee." The congregation was led in prayer by Rev. W. C. Lester. Rev. J. A. Hall read the scripture lesson from the 9th Chapter of 1st Corinthians. Rev. W. N. Duncan, the popular pastor and energetic host of the Conference, announced Hymn No. 544, which was sung by the congregation, after which the Wisdom Sisters sang, "I'd rather be the least of those who are the Lord's alone, than wear a royal diadem and sit upon a throne."

Rev. J. R. Stuart, representing the Superannuate Endowment Fund, addressed the audience. His address was remarkable because of the instruction and inspiration he brought to the Conference. Some of the remarks of Dr. Stuart were: "There is an awakening sentiment regarding old age provisions in the atmosphere of modern times. Thirty railroads are pensioning their superannuated employees. Business concerns are doing the same. The national government has for a long time been making ample provision for the aged who have served in the various departments. An army chaplain is now retired on $2200. The average preacher on about $150. The right of support inheres in the gospel ministry; it is founded upon divine truth. Divine sanction of it is found in the Levitical law, which resembled our regulation of ministers. The preachers take a vow to abstain from business." He paid a beautiful tribute to the wives of itinerant ministers, saying, "If there is a set of people more heroic than itinerant ministers, it is the wives of itinerant ministers."

After the address, which deserves to be called a strong message from a warm heart, the Wisdom Sisters sang with fervor and expression, "I saw a wayworn traveler in tattered garments clad."

Rev. J. E. Thomas arose and said: "I have been authorized by a layman to say, 'If there is a superannuate preacher without a home who will come to his town he will give him a home as long as he lives.'"

The service closed with the doxology and benediction by Rev. Thos. Porter.

Second Day—Thursday.

The Conference opened at the usual hour, with Bishop W. B. Murrah in the chair. A Scripture lesson from Psalm ciii was read, after which the congregation sang with one accord, "O, for a thousand tongues to sing my great Redeemer's praise!" Rev. Ben P. Jaco led in prayer.

The following visitors were introduced: Mr. C. O. Chalmers, publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and President A. F. Watkins of Millsaps College. Dr. Watkins read the report regarding the success of the College and the encouraging features relative to the opening of the 25th session of same. He emphasized the Bible study department and said 33 preachers have matriculated this year, and that there are more in sight.

Mr. J. H. Sherard read a second report from the Orphans' Home, stating that the directions of the Government experts are being carried out in the management of the Home, in regard to sanitation and a well balanced diet. There has been prosperity on the farm, good health in the home, religious service every day, with preaching on Sundays, and 50 of the children have joined the Church this year.

Dr. Howard, of the Candler School of Theology, was introduced to the Conference.

Bishop Murrah called Question 22, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?"

At this time a telegram was read from Rev. T. W. Lewis in which he said: "My heart turns toward Winona this morning." A suitable Scripture reference was mentioned. It was the pleasure of the Conference to hear the report of the Rev. J. W. Boswell, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., former Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

A report containing greetings and an account of the work in the army from Chaplain J. A. Randolph was read by the Secretary.

The calling of Question 22 was suspended, and Rev. W. W. Woollard read a report from the Efficiency Conference held at Grenada in the spring. The report contained many things that evidenced great results. Rev. J. R. Countiss read a memorial asking for the perpetuation of the Efficiency Conference.

The Bishop resumed the call of Question 22, and the preachers responded as their names were called. All reports were favorable. It was noticeable that there was very little said about the discouraging conditions. This evidenced the strong faith and zeal of the men, both ministers and laymen.

When the name of Rev. D. L. Cogdell was called, he made a report of his work, gave a brief survey of his life as a young soldier, and also as a minister, after which he said he was ready to retire from the active service. The Conference, led by L. M. Lipscomb, voluntarily sang "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord."

Rev. W. G. Burks reported a good year on the Dumas charge.

At 11 a. m. the congregation assembled for the Thanksgiving Service. Dr. A. F. Watkins announced Hymn No. 2, "Come thou Almighty King." Dr. Watkins led in prayer. Dr. Howard, of Emory University, read Psalm 24, and a lesson from Romans 13. The choir sang a special song, "Praise ye the Lord." Dr. Howard announced as a text, Psalm 127:1, "Except Jehovah build the house they labor in vain that build it," etc. Extracts from the sermon are: "This nation began as a spiritual enterprise. Christianity is fundamental to the constitution of society and the organization of human government. Life in the Church and State is founded in the family. The home of the humblest is his castle. The family is the ark of the most sacred interests of the State. Marriage is not so much a provison of the statutes as an ordinance of the creation. Marriage was written in the precepts of God before shameful lust stained the statutes of modern States." The interests of the public schools was mentioned; "through these the foundation of our religious civilization might be threatened. Pagan teaching makes pagans. If there is a Christian document outside of the Bible it is the Mayflower Compact. Paganism has never built an enduring State. Christianity is the only sure builder of empires. Seventy-four per cent of our criminals are under the age of 20 years. We inherit the past, but we create our future. Let us have a uniform justice for the Court-house and the Church." The service closed with the song, "Children of the Heavenly King," by the Wisdom Sisters, a collection for the Orphans' Home was taken up, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Murrah.

At three o'clock, Rev. J. M. Bradley, of Aberdeen, preached an impressive sermon to an appreciative audience.

The religious services are characterizing the Conference as a great occasion to all the people, both residents of the town and visitors.

Evening Service.

Missionary Anniversary Occasion.

Hymn No. 631 was announced by Rev. W. L. Duren, President of the Conference Board of Missions. Rev. T. H. Dorsey led in prayer. Rev. W. L. Duren read the report of the Board of Missions and announced Hymn No. 415, "Faith of our fathers living still." The congregation sang. The Wisdom Sisters sang, "When the Lord passed over Egypt." Rev. W. L. Duren made some brief remarks, and introduced Dr. W. W. Pinson, General Secretary of the Mission Board, from Nashville. Dr. Pinson addressed the congregation on the great subject as announced, "Methodism and Missions." Respecting the duties of the Church to the mission work, Dr. Pinson said, "It looks as if we do not measure up to the demands, and that God will have to raise up those who will." Speaking of the work of the women he said, "They have done better than last year. They do not pay much attention to as little things as the boll weevil. Methodism and Missions are two words that are not strangers to each other. Methodism is one of the surprises of the world." Reference was made to Woodrow Wilson's book on "The Life of Wesley." "Methodism is only a protest against lifelessness and irreligious practices. Wesley put emphasis on old Scriptural doctrines, empowering the doctrines so that they would not only make martyrs but rejoicing saints. When you come to the rock bottom, predestination is not preachable. Had it not been for missions we would not have had any Methodist Church. It was the missionary passion that swept Wesley out. Lots of men know religion in the books who do not know it in the heart. Wesley said, on hearing Maxwell, 'Let God do what He will.' This is the foundation of our Church.' The laymen of the present were commended; many are offering their service to the preachers. A plea was made for less controversy and more love. A striking portrayal of the rise and evolution of the Methodist Church was as inspirational as it was providential. To be a Methodist church member, or a Church or Conference, you must be missionary." The address was instructive, inspirational and helpful in many ways. May its impression remain in our hearts!

At the close of the address the congregation was inspired by the awakening song, "Out in the breakers are perishing souls," sung by the Wisdom Sisters. It is characteristic of them to make suitable selections for all occasions.

The service closed with Hymn No. 610, and the benediction by Dr. Pinson.

Friday—Third Day.

The Conference met at the usual hour, after a song, "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," sung by the Wisdom Sisters. Hymn No. 349 was announced. Dr. Howard led the devotional exercises. He spoke of the goodness of God in answering our prayers in a larger measure than we expect when we are prayerful.

The minutes of the preceding session were read and approved.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, and the pastors of the local churches were introduced to the audience and welcomed with fitting remarks by the Bishop.

On motion, Rev. L. P. Wasson was placed on the Board of Church Extension.

Rev. J. W. Bell, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, announced the voluntary withdrawal of Rev. S. B. Myers from the Methodist ministry and the surrender of his credentials. The Conference accepted Brother Myers' withdrawal.

The following were admitted on trial into the traveling ministry, under Question 1: W. R. Lott, Jessie T. Simmons, Wesley S. White, A. F. Moore, Simon W. Bryant, R. G. Halling, and J. R. Robertson.

The Bishop called Question 2, "Who are continued on trial?" and the answer was as follows: A. J. Beasley, W. C. Beasley, S. H. Caffey, S. F. Harkey, R. G. Lord, C. D. McGee, R. G. Moore, C. A. Parks, W. I. White.

At this juncture the Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of the Committee of the First Year, spoke in commendatory terms of the Class of the First Year.

C. O. Pate was discontinued at his request.

The following were elected Deacons: A. R. Beasley, W. D. Bennett, C. R. A. Brantley, H. M. Cochran, J. B. Conner, G. L. Lauderdale, A. T. McIwain, Guy Ray, R. H. Ruff. Other members were continued in the same class, not having met the requirements of the Discipline as regards the necessary preparation for the examinations.

The following, having met the necessary requirements, were advanced to the Class of the Fourth Year: J. H. Brooks, C. T. Floyd, I. F. Holland, F. H. McGee, D. R. Wasson, Melville Johnson, and J. D. Wroten.

The following not having met the requirements were continued in the same class: W. W. Bruner, W. N. Dodds, J. R. James, and W. J. Wood.

T. E. Yancey was, at his own request, located.

Rev. E. S. Lewis read the report of the Sunday School Board, which commended the activity of the Field Secretary, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, and recommended his reappointment to the same work.

The Bishop called Question 14, "What traveling preachers are elected elders?" The following were elected: J. H. Bell, A. M. Bennett, B. F. Bullard, R. I. Collins, T. L. Houston, P. F. Luter, D. R. McDougal, T. H. Mills, T. L. Oaks, W. V. Shearer, E. D. Simpson, E. R. Smoot, A. W. O'Bryant.

M. A. Burns was continued in the same class.

The name of G. W. McLain was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

Olin Ray, having been at the university at Atlanta and not having served the required time, was continued in the class, but passed in the examination.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference, making a good report of the work being done in the College. He spoke of the friendly feeling existing in the College, and of the cooperation of the student body with the faculty in active religious work. The graduates from Millsaps are standing at the head in the various professions in which they are engaged.

Question 22 was resumed, and many of the preachers made good reports; amongst them was J. T. McCafferty, who reported a good, new parsonage at Eupora; the people want the preacher to have as good a house as any of the people in town have. (A good example.) 'Mac' moves on acount of the time limit—guess some hearts are turned toward Eupora's good parsonage.

J. J. Garner, S. A. Brown, V. C. Curtis, W. J. O'Bryant, J. D. Simpson, and G. W. Gordon made good reports from their respective charges, evidencing faithful work on the part of the pastors

GALLOWAY MEMORIAL CHURCH.

By Dr. W. G. Henry.

By an act of the Legislature of Mississippi on May 13, 1836, the ground known as square No. 12, north, was set apart for the purpose of the use of the denominations then in existence in Jackson—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopalian. The Methodists paid $50 for their lot, which is on the corner of North Congress and Yazoo Streets. There is no doubt as to the validity of the deed, as it was made by the State of Mississippi directly to the Methodist Church.

The present structure is the third house of worship to be erected on this lot. The First was called the "Methodist Church," the second, the "First Methodist Church," and the present one, "Galloway Memorial," bearing the name of the matchless orator and statesman, Bishop Charles B. Galloway.

Under the leadership of Dr. A. F. Smith, the

DR. W. G. HENRY,
Host of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. Waights G. Henry is a native of Alabama, having been born in that State, not far from Columbus, Miss. He is well educated, being a Ph. D. of Yale University. He has an inquiring mind and continues to be a diligent student, notwithstanding his fine equipment for the work of the ministry. He took a course in Sociology last summer, and is at present studying law at Millsaps College. He has grown steadily upon the people of Jackson as a preacher and pastor during the three years that he has been in charge of the Galloway Memorial Church, which is the largest congregation in Mississippi, and is to-day more popular with his flock than he has ever been. Under the leadership of Dr. Henry, the magnificent church edifice in which his congregation now worships, which had been started by his predecessor, Dr. A. F. Smith, has been brought to completion, free of debt, at a cost of approximately $100,000. This is considered the finest and best equipped structure for religious work in the Magnolia State, and all the Methodists of Mississippi feel a pride in it. Dr. Henry is busy getting things ready for the Conference session, which is expected to be a memorable one.

work on the present building was begun, and it was brought to completion under the administration of the present incumbent.

The membership of the Galloway Memorial is large, and during the work of erecting the building the membership kept up all specials for missions at home and abroad. Indeed, it has been an era of enlargement in many directions. They have not sung, "Hold the Fort," but their chorus is, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

The building is equipped with all modern conveniences, and we are prepared to furnish each Committee or Board with a room without sending them away from the building.

The former pastors have wrought well. Such names as Watkins, Du Bose, Bolling, Black, Galloway, and a host of others will show how greatly Jackson Methodism has been favored. But this does not tell all of the story. Some of the most princely of laymen have been and are now members of this church. The membership is singularly free from worldliness, and the spirit of loyalty to the Church is beautiful.

It has been nine years since an Annual Conference was held in our city, and it is the wish of the citizenship of Jackson that this coming session may be the best.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

and people. Marvin Langley reported 4 churches, 4 prayer meetings, 4 Sunday schools and everything in full. W. F. Rogers, J. A. Poe, and C. P. Moss all made good reports and said nothing about the boll weevil. H. M. Young reported good results from his labors. J. B. Randolph was present, but withheld his report about the great Mississippi Orphanage until a later time.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, the Wisdom Sisters sang, "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound," and Rev. W. W. Woollard pronounced the benediction.

Afternoon Service.

A service under the auspices of the Evangelistic Committee was conducted by Rev. W. S. Lagrone. After singing Hymn No. 361, Rev. W. M. Young led in prayer. Rev. J. H. Bell read Isaiah, 6th chapter. Brother Lagrone announced Hymn No. 19. The following brethren made appropriate remarks: W. S. Lagrone, J. H. Bell, and J. A. Bowen.

The Wisdom Sisters sang an appropriate song, after which the Rev. W. M. McIntosh preached a soul-stirring sermon on "The necessity of keeping the upper connection," or the necessity of supernatural power. The Spirit came upon the audience as the evangelist preached and a real Pentecost was enjoyed.

The service resulted in two conversions and a few reclamations. At the close a reconsecration service was held, in which all the preachers offered themselves for a fuller usefulness in God's service. Rev. J. A. Bowen led the closing prayer and the Wisdom Sisters sang the Gospel in their usual way. The song was the prayer, "O, Lord, send the power and baptize every one."

Evening Service.

The evening service was the Sunday school anniversary.

The Sunday School Board were seated on the rostrum. Judge J. G. McGowen, President of the Board, announced Hymn 545. Dr. Henry led the opening prayer. Rev. J. T. Lewis read the first six verses of the first chapter of Second Timothy. Judge McGowen introduced Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the Field Secretary, who made a brief report of his labors during the year. He had made 116 visits, 50 of them being to country Sunday schools. Brother Gladney said: "The Sunday school is a religious educational institution. Education without religion is dangerous. The missionary spirit registers the heart-beat of the Church." The four factors in the Sunday school were discussed, namely, the preacher, the superintendent, the teacher, and the parent. We need the co-operation of the parents to meet the emergencies of the day.

A. L. Dietrich, Divisional Secretary, spoke briefly but profitably. He sounded a very optimistic note.

The Wisdom Sisters sang, "There are Lights Along the Shore," and Judge McGowen introduced the chief speaker of the hour. We were all inspired and the entire audience was lifted to the heights as we listened to the Rev. C. D. Bulla. He discussed in his characteristic way the work of the Wesley Bible Classes, of which work he is General Superintendent.

The service closed with a solo by the Hon. Mr. Whitehurst, of Leland, the song being, "The Ninety and Nine," and benediction by Dr. Bulla.

Saturday—Fourth Day.

Conference opened at 9 a. m., with Bishop Murrah in the chair.

The Wisdom Sisters sang, "There is a happy land far, far away." As this song was lifted to heaven by these gospel singers we felt that an angelic invitation was being given to all to head that way.

Rev. J. E. Thomas read the 121st Psalm and announced Hymn No. 334, "My faith looks up to Thee." Brother Thomas led in prayer. After the reading of the minutes of the preceding session by the Secretary, whose minutes need no revising, Rev. J. C. Park read the report of the Ministerial Relief Association: "$948 have been paid to four

THE GALLOWAY MEMORIAL CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.
Where the Mississippi Conference Will Meet on December 13th.

beneficiaries during the year 1916."

Dr. Bailey, of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, addressed the Conference. Following are some extracts from Dr. Bailey's address: "It is an honor to any one, even a Bishop, to stand before the North Mississippi Conference." "We need not to disturb the temperance and prohibition question, but to build on the foundation we have laid." He discussed the undermining methods of the enemy, the liquor crowd, and the way the Lord is delivering us from them. "Local option was the best first step toward perfection, and I believe we are exhorted to 'Go on to perfection.'" "Mississippi is as dry as the people and the officers will let her be dry." Rev. L. M. Lipscomb moved that we express our gratitude and assure Dr. Bailey of our co-operation by a rising vote. This was done.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone asked that the name of R. A. Tucker be placed on the Evangelistic Committee in place of the name of S. A. Brown, whose duties forbade his service.

The Bishop called question 22: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The Greenville District men were called. W. C. Lester mentioned good work by the women. E. M. Shaw reported good improvement in buildings. R. O. Brown, good Sunday school, collections in full, and a church under construction. This had been mentioned in previous report. J. E. Stevens—One church built, $1,070 paid to Hospital, and Coahoma leads the State in contributions to the Orphans' Home. J. R. Bright—Two Woman's Missionary Societies, excess in salary, and the contemplation of a church building with ample room for the Sunday school. J. T. Lewis is providing for 16 Sunday school rooms at Greenville. R. W. Evans made a good report, but was not satisfied with his work, as there had been no conversions in the charge. E. H. Cunningham, the competent reporter for the Commercial Appeal, whose reports are accurate, since he is thoroughly conversant with all the terms used in the Conference, made a fine report: 32 members received into the Church, had a visit from the Bishop during the year, and has a lawyer who can sing. W. W. Jones reported an increase in financial contributions of $1000 over any previous year, but a deficit in benevolences. (This deficit was largely provided for by a telegram later.) The writer being called out, the items of the reports of J. W. Ward and W. C. Galceran were missed, but they can be vouched for as good from these men.

Rev. R. A. Meek made brief remarks, thanking the brethren for their support, and further stated that the North Mississippi Conference was leading all the patronizing Conferences in subscriptions. Rev. A. C. McCorkle reported the liquidation of a church debt and 23 members received into the Church on profession of faith.

The Bishop called question 28. The name of R. G. Carisle was announced as coming to us from the Congregational Methodist Church.

The class for admission into full connection was called to appear before the Conference and the Bishop delivered an appropriate address, extracts from which are as follows: "I remember when I stood in the same place that you now occupy." "I believed I was asking rights and privileges of the best and noblest brotherhood on earth." "The Conference had a right to know something of me, spiritually and otherwise." "The man is as high on the humbiest circuit as in the largest city church in the connection." "The completest perfection is a mother's love; she will sacrifice her life for the child; why should we not attain this degree of love for God and our brother?" "Never disparage the function of preaching." "If you are to be effective preachers or pastors you must know your people. There is a great demand for pastors in the true sense of the term." "Many laymen would dislodge great preachers for a warm-hearted pastor." "Nothing is of greater importance than that we visit from house to house in a purposeful, tactful manner." "Be diligent; much time is lost in loitering." The usual questions were very impressive; this is characteristic of our beloved Bishop. When the question, "Are you in debt so as to embarrass you?" was asked, the Bishop said, "Debt sounds very much like 'death' to me."

The promising-looking young men constituting this class are: A. R. Beasley, W. D. Bennett, C. R. A. Brantley, A. T. McIlwain, Guy Ray, R. H. Ruff, J. B. Connor, G. L. Lauderdale, H. M. Cockrum, and R. G. Carlisle.

Mrs. Conger, President of the Woman's Missionary Society, addressed the Conference, bringing greetings from the women of the Conference, and expressed thanks for all the aid rendered by the preachers. Some of the remarks by Mrs. Conger were: "The Woman's Missionary Society is a channel through which the women of the Church contribute their work." "There are 300 Societies in the Conference." "There is felt a need for more Young People's societies." "The year closes Dec. 31st. Look for the last quarter's report; it will be the best report of the year." "Extension of the work depends upon the organization of the country churches. Lay hold upon the young life in the country."

The Bishop submitted the question handed down by the General Conference of 1914: "Shall the Conference Lay Leader and the District Lay Leader become members of the Annual Conference?" Dr. J. W. Boswell asked for some one to speak in favor of the measure, as he "wanted to oppose it." Judge E. V. Hughston, of Greenwood, then did so. In his address to the Conference he expressed the confidence of the laymen in the preachers and as being "satisfied with the way they are doing things." He said there should be a Conference in which the preachers had the chief authority.

Dr. Boswell mentioned objections, namely: "It discriminates against other boards." "It enlarges the membership of the Annual Conference in the wrong way." "It introduces a species of aristocracy." Dr. Meek spoke briefly, stating the concise and definite results of the measure. He said: "Lay Leaders are elected as Lay Leaders, and not as members of the Annual Conference." After a thorough discussion of the measure by those who held opposite views, the vote was taken and the measure lost by a vote of 88 to 44.

P. T. Callicott read the report of the Joint Board of Finance. It was gratifying to note the increased interest in the support of the Conference Claimants.

The following announcements were made for preaching on Sunday:

Methodist Church—11 a. m., Bishop Murrah; 3 p. m., memorial service; 7:30 p. m., Dr. W. F. McMurry.

Baptist Church—11 a. m., J. C. Park; 7:30 p. m., L. P. Wasson.

Presbyterian Church—11 a. m., J. A. Hall; 7:30 p. m., J. E. Cunningham.

Bishop Murrah pronounced the benediction.

Afternoon Session.

The Conference opened with a Hymn, "My soul, be on thy guard," by the congregation. Rev. W. M. Young led in prayer.

After the reading of the minutes of the preceding session by the secretary, Bishop Murrah called Question 22: "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" Rev. L. A. McKeown made a good report from Byhalia. (Luke McKeown's report never needs any comment.) Rev. W. L. Storment's report was as you would expect of the man, good. Rev. R. A. Tucker reported many additions to the Church membership; $11,000 had been subscribed to Grenada College. Rev. W. J. Lott, who had been serving Holly Springs since the death of Dr. H. G. Henderson, reported good things from that church. Rev. W. S. Selman has 4 churches, 4 Sunday schools, 3 prayer-meetings, and full collections. Rev. A. S. Briscoe's report was excellent. Rev. E. S. Lewis has received 32 into the Church and has a Sunday school roll greater than the Church membership. The presiding elder answered very favorably for D. H. Crowson, who was called home on account of sickness in his family. Rev. T. J. Hopper increased his collections over last year. Rev. J. W. Dorman has an A-grade Sunday school, thoroughly organized, and a religious congregation. In answer to a special question by the Bishop, Brother Dorman said he learned some things while a presiding elder, i. e., how to be a better pastor. Rev. C. W. Baley has had a good year. Rev. J. R. Countiss answered with a brief remark when his name was called. Rev. B. P. Jaco had traveled 10,000 miles in the interest of Grenada College, visited 80 places, and had averaged speaking to a congregation "every other day during the year." He had raised in cash and subscriptions over $37,000; had enjoyed the work to which the Church called him a year ago. Rev. W. H. Mounger's report was in keeping with his record and characteristic of the man. Rev. E. G. Mohler had well-organized Sunday schools and active W. M. Societies. Rev. H. G. Roberts reported good missionary societies and collections. Rev. W. D. Wendel had a Sunday school educating a Chinese preacher. The women of Como are supporting a girl in the Vashti Home. Rev. W. R. Goudelock had increased his Church membership and made good collections. Rev. J. A. Biffle had doubled his church membership. Rev. G. A. Baker had all his Sunday schools graded and has more organized classes than any other charge in the Conference. Rev. James Porter reported Sunday schools in all the churches, good prayer-meetings, and Woman's Missionary Societies. Rev. T. H. Porter had 41 accessions, good Sunday schools, teacher-training classes, and increased insurance on the property. Rev. J. C. Park's good Sunday school reported many items of special activity. Rev. J. A. Patterson, not being present on account of sickness, was represented by his presiding elder, who gave a good account of him and his success. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney had visited 36 of the 38 circuits in the Conference. He called attention to the inaccuracies in the reports from the various charges; this was timely. He has distributed more than 800 books during the year. He expressed gratitude for all the help he has received from the brethren. He is anxious to visit all the pastoral charges. Rev. T. M. Brownlee had received 47 into the Church; had two W. M. Societies; pastor's salary and Conference collections in full. Rev. J. H. Smith reported finances better

THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. H. N. Harrison.

Fifth Day—Sunday.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer conducted the love feast at the First Methodist Church beginning at 9 o'clock.

After the love feast Bishop Hoss announced a hymn, and Rev. Jno. F. Foster led in prayer. The Bishop selected the 100th Psalm for responsive reading. As the second lesson, the 12th Chapter of Hebrews was read. Hymn No. 355 was then sung. The Bishop preached from the text, "Our Father which art in heaven." (Matthew 6:9.) He said that there are some truths which differentiate Christianity from all other religions, such as the truth set forth in the text—the Fatherhood of God. This truth is found nowhere else in the religions of the world. The Bishop made a strong presentation in his discourse of the significance of suffering.

At the conclusion of the sermon the Bishop ordained the following to deacons' orders: W. R. McPhearson, James L. Evans, A. D. George, J. E. Craig, J. G. Sawyer.

The Bishop then proceeded to ordain to elder's orders the following candidates: C. E. Fike, J. S. Cady, J. A. Alford, F. B. Hill.

Alonzo Early was received in elder's orders.

A memorial service was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon for Rev. Jas. A. Parker, who had died during the year.

Dr. S. A. Steel delivered a very eloquent address on Francis Asbury, which was a great treat to those who heard it.

At night Rev. Robert Schuler delivered a sermon to an overflowing congregation.

Sixth Day—Monday.

The Bishop opened the Conference by announcing hymn No. 4. Rev. H. W. May led in a most earnest and fervent petition for divine guidance in the business of the Conference. Hymn No. 91, was next sung.

The Bishop took occasion at this point to speak of the late Bishop Wilson, and related many interesting facts of his life and ministry. Some of these grew out of a long personal acquaintance with the Bishop. "He carried a flaming torch as a Bishop throughout the Church, and was in my opinion the greatest preacher our Methodism has produced. No man so profoundly influenced my life as the Bishop and I shall never get away from the touch of his powerful personality."

Hymn No. 611 was announced and sung.

The minutes of the afternoon session of Saturday, November 25, were then read and approved.

The report of the Committee on Evangelism and the report of the Committee on Church Publications were read and adopted.

Rev. H. T. Young and Rev. J. D. Swaggerty were recommended as Conference Evangelists by the Committee on Evangelism.

The Trustees of the New Orleans Depository resigned, and desired to turn over to the legal conference the property which they have been holding in trust. After much discussion the matter was referred to a committee which should report later, submitting the names of men who would serve as trustees in place of those who resigned.

The reports of the Epworth League Board and the American Bible Society were read and adopted.

The report of the Orphanage Board was read and adopted. R. W. Vaughan presented the cause and present condition of the Orphanage, and made an appeal to the Conference to assist him in providing more ample accommodations for the children who are ever appealing to him for a home and shelter, which now must be denied them. He said, "Many children have been turned away because we have no room for them, and we desire a new and commodious building to meet these exigencies. Will you brethren join with me in providing such a building?"

At this point some of the brethren from the Lafayette District, through Brother Brumby as their spokesman, presented Rev. J. J. Hoffpauir with a beautiful watch foh.

Dr. S. H. Werlein presented a series of resolutions on the subject of unification signed by 81 members of the Conference. A prolonged debate ensued on these resolutions, during which a motion was made to adjourn and resume the discussion at 2:30 p. m.

Before adjournment Rev. E. K. Means, on behalf of the preachers of the Ruston District, in a very happy speech presented Rev. Briscoe Carter with a handsome gold-headed umbrella and a beautiful collar button as a token of affection and esteem.

The Conference re-assembled at 2:30 p. m., and resumed the discussion of Dr. Werlein's resolutions. Rev. W. H. Coleman submitted a substitute for these resolutions, which was duly seconded. This substitute covered and conserved the fundamental principles adopted at the Oklahoma Conference. The substitute was adopted by a vote of 68 to 65.

The committee to which was referred the nomination of a new board of trustees for the New Orleans Depository reported the following names: H. F. Foster, G. D. Shands, C. H. Wasson, Paul Renshaw, E. H. Prescott, Dr. A. C. King, W. B. Summers, W. F. Sherwood, and H. H. Ahrens. The Conference adopted the report.

A motion was made to strike from the report of the Committee on Church Publications the words, "We are fortunate in having," referring to the incumbency of Dr. Meek as Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The motion was defeated by an overwhelming majority.

The Committee on District Conference records made its report, which was adopted.

By vote of the Conference the General Board of Church Extension was invited to meet next year in New Orleans.

Rev. H. B. Carré was located at his own request.

The report of the Committee on Temperance was read and adopted.

W. S. Holmes was elected Conference Lay Leader.

A resolution of thanks was submitted by Rev. A. I. Townsley, expressing the appreciation of the Conference for the splendid entertainment extended to the members of the Louisiana Conference by the good citizens of Baton Rouge.

The Conference adjourned to meet at 7 o'clock p. m.

The Conference met for its final session at 7 p. m.

The Committee appointed to investigate the character of Rev. W. T. Woodward reported no trial necessary in his case.

Rev. J. G. Snelling addressed the Conference on the subject of a State-wide evangelistic campaign, suggesting that we take one district at a time, and a goal of 7000 new members for 1917. This plan will be taken up by the Evangelistic Committee in co-operation with the presiding elders and preachers of the various districts.

On motion of Rev. H. W. Bowman, which was seconded by Rev. H. W. May, the Rev. Thomas Carter was located by a vote of 73 to 33.

Question 53, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" was called, the appointments were announced.

SECULAR NEWS.

The Territory of Alaska has voted for prohibition by a large majority.

It is estimated that 28,000 Americans are fighting in the service of the Entente powers in the European War.

The battleships to be constructed for our Navy during the year 1917 will be named Colorado, Maryland, Washington, and West Virginia.

In an election held October 28 Australia voted against conscription for army service. The election, however, was very close, the vote being about in the proportion of 9 to 8.

Our country's output of aluminum in 1853 was 83 pounds. In 1914 it was 80,000,000 pounds, and this year it is expected to mount up to 200,000,000 pounds. This metal is said to be supplanting copper for many purposes, being much cheaper.

The foreign trade of the United States for the year 1916 will approximate $8,000,000,000, which is about one-fifth of the international trade of the world. This is a 50 per cent increase over 1915, and is about 100 per cent in advance over the foreign trade of 1914.

In twenty-four months the British Army in Europe has increased from 200,000 to more than 4,000,000—the largest volunteer army ever mustered in the history of the world. Providing for this immense body of men is a stupendous task. For instance, it has taken in twenty months to meet the needs of these soldiers nearly 20,000,000 blankets, 23,000,000 knives and forks, and 21,750,000 pairs of boots.

Of the 551 members of the present Congress of the United States, 308 are lawyers, 74 are from the ranks of business men, 63 are grouped in the class of educators and journalists, and only 16 are farmers. The remaining 80 are grouped under the heading, "all others," their occupations being difficult to classify. It is interesting to note in this connection that there are in the United States about 120,000 lawyers and 7,500,000 farmers.

A writer in the New York Herald claims that the plan adopted by Congress to relate the State malitia to the regular Army of the United States by having those willing to become a part of the National Guard to take a new oath to serve actively with the colors for three years in the dual capacity of State and Federal troops, and to be subject to the call of the National Government for three additional years if necessary, is not working successfully. It is reported that of the 130,000 soldiers in the organized State militia, more than 40,000 have refused to pledge themselves to military service in the desired manner.

CLEAN APRONS.

Two little girls in clean aprons were out walking one sunny afternoon.

"I will try to keep mine clean," said Mary.

"Yes," said Margery, "I must, too, for mother does not like to see me all mussed up.

The two little girls walked quietly along, picking flowers. Suddenly Margery drew back her hand, half scared. Mary asked her what she saw.

"There is something moving among the flowers," said Margery in a whisper.

Carefully they pushed the flowers apart, and there, in a miserable little heap, lay a tiny puppy. He looked up at the two little girls with big, pleading brown eyes and tried to stand up. But he was too little and too weak to do so.

"He is nearly starved," said Margery.

"Poor little thing!" she said gently. He is lost and hungry. I shall take him home to mother.

"Oh, he is only a dog," said Mary. "Just see how dirty he has made you."

"Mother won't mind, I know," Margery answered, and held the puppy close.

When Margery reached home she laid the little dog down in a corner of the porch and went to mother.

"Why, Margery!" her mother began.

Then Margery told her all about the poor little dog and took her mother down to see it. She gave it a big bowl of bread and milk and while Margery went up-stairs to dress for tea, mother gave the puppy a good bath, too. Margery hardly knew him and was delighted with him—especially when her mother told her that she might keep him for a pet.

Margery ran to her mother and hugged her ever so hard. "Then you were not angry, were you, mother dear?" she asked.

Mother smiled and shook her head. "No, indeed, dear," she said. "A little girl with a tender, loving heart is all right in mother's eyes and in God's eyes, too."—Eugene T. Finn, in The Sunbeam.

THE SENTINEL.

Fred had been reading for a long time, it seemed to Elsie, and she did wish that he would stop and play with her instead. Suddenly he looked up and asked, "Papa, what is a sentinel?"

"Well, Fred," said papa, "I usually find that the best starting-point for such a question is the dictionary, and here is what it says: 'Sentinel. One who watches or guards; specifically, a soldier set to guard an army, camp, or other place from surprise, to observe the approach of danger and give notice of it.'"

"Oh, yes, I know!" said Fred. "A sentinel is a soldier with a blue uniform and a bayonet," and his eyes sparkled as he spoke.

"Well," said papa, "a soldier may be and often is a sentinel, but there are sentinels who are not soldiers, and, come to think of it, I believe there is one out in the yard now."

"Oh, where?" asked Fred and Elsie in the same breath, and looking out of the window eagerly.

"Put on your hats and come with me," said papa.

Fred looked doubtful; he was a little afraid his papa was joking, and Elsie, with her mind full of soldiers, held very close to papa's hand.

They went out through the garden and close to the barn-yard fence. "Now," said papa, very quietly, "see who can find the sentinel first."

Fred and Elsie looked about. There was nothing alive in sight but the geese, and they were fast asleep. Then they noticed that one great white goose was not asleep, but was standing awkwardly upon one leg, looking here and there.

"Oh," exclaimed Fred, "I know—" But before he had finished the sentence there was a loud "Quack! quack!" from the big white goose, and instantly the whole flock was wide awake and noisily flapping their wings.

Then how papa and Elsie and Fred laughed! "He was a sentinel, sure enough," said Fred, "for he not only watched, but he gave the alarm. Do geese always have a sentinel on guard when they sleep?"

"Yes," said papa, "they never sleep without one of their number on guard."

"Well," said Fred, with another laugh, "they're not such geese as we take them for, after all, are they?"—Julia D. Cowles, in Olive Leaf.

WHERE ENGLAND GOT THE NAME OF JOHN BULL.

In the "Question and Answer Department" of The New Orleans Times-Picayune of November 19, appeared the following:

D. H. S., Pass Christian, Miss.: Please tell me why and when the term "John Bull" was applied to the British?

The term "John Bull" was first given to Great Britain by John Arbuthnot, a Scotchman, a noted British physician and man of letters and a great wit, in his satirical work, "Law is a Bottomless Pit," published in 1712. He also gave the name Nicholas Frog to the Dutch, and Jean Crapaud (toad) to the French people.

Noticing this inquiry and answer, Dr. A. Gordon Bakewell, a highly esteemed Episcopalian minister of New Orleans, who is 94 years of age, but who is still in the active work, informed the Times-Picayune that he did not concur in the view that it had set forth in its reply to its correspondent, and sent to it the following letter bearing on the subject for publication, which he said expressed his opinion of how the English secured their nickname, after a careful investigation of the matter:

To the Editor of The Times-Picayune:

In the region of the Taurus mountains (as will be found on our maps), in the southwest promontory of Asia Minor, there dwelt, about the year 525 B. C., a tribal people known as "Taurica"—their tribal standard being "Taurus" (a one-horned bull)—which was the standard of Ephralium (the son of Joseph) one of the northern tribes of Israel.

From cumulative evidence they appear to have been one of the northern tribes of Israel who, upon the approach of the invasion of Palestine by Tegiath-Telizer, king of Nineveh—about 736 B. C.—escaped by land to the region of the Taurus mountains, where they remained until the main body of their fellow northern tribes, who had been carried captive by Teglath-Telizer, escaped from exile, during the disturbances of the wars between the Assyrians and Babylonians, and who journeyed westward; and according to the Bible (2nd Esdras), settled for a time in the region of the river "Serath"—the Danubian provinces of Austria.

In the course of time this main body of the escaped northern tribes emigrated northwest, their objective point being Britannica.

Later in history the "Taurica" followed the trail of their fellow tribes until they located in an angle of country between the northern part of Saxony and the southern part of Denmark (which in modern time is called Selwick, as seen now on our maps).

There they were known as "Angles" or "Engies," from the "Angleor Engleland"—where they dwelt. Both words, "Angleland" or "Engleland," being of Saxon and Danish origin. (See Webster's Dictionary).

But, upon their tribal banner was still depicted the "Taurus" (one-horned bull) (Deut. 33-17), which was the origin of the "Unicorn," now upon the royal coat of arms of Great Britain. And from which circumstance they were called not only Angles or Engiesh, but also Bullmen.

Finally, when those Anglo or Englo Saxons conquered England, and dwelt there, this nickname became (not without reason) the familiar burlesque appellation of John Bull.

A. GORDON BAKEWELL.

MRS. RANSOM J. JONES.

The end of the long and beautiful earthly life of Mrs. Sarah Frances Mounger Jones came suddenly on the morning of September 18, 1916. But the summons, all unlooked for, as it was, had no terrors for this "handmaiden of the Lord," who for nearly seventy-nine years had walked by his side. The summons could hardly be counted sudden to her, who because of the great company gone before, had her face every hour more heavenward than earthward.

She was born on October 3, 1837, at Paulding, in Jasper County, Miss., being the daughter of Henry Mounger and Celia Millsaps. Her father was a prominent lawyer, and was a judge of the Circuit Court for a goodly number of years. Her mother was the daughter of Uriah Millsaps, a wealthy, benevolent, widely connected citizen of the county. From both sides, she inherited those characteristics, as far as they can be inherited, of culture, mental strength, refinement, and religion, that have made the names of Mounger and Millsaps conspicuous in Mississippi's civil and religious life.

One understands her character the better to read from a tribute by one who knew her well: "She was brought up in a home where religion was vital and potent, morning and evening prayers being offered without fail. A true and beautiful piety consecrated all the scenes and incidents of that long ago."

In her youth she gave her heart to God and became a member of his Church. She had the benefit, even then, of the faithfully kept country Sunday school, and "all about there were instances of fervent and devoted piety." To the end of her life, she bore the stamp of the best Methodist womanhood, characterized by a mingling of large culture and unaffected devoutness.

Her education was received at Pleasant Hill and Paulding, in Jasper County, and at Pierce's Springs in Clarke County. These advantages taken up by a strong quick mind, together with a great love of private reading, developed a mental life thoroughly furnished and rich. The same writer, quoted above, says of her: "All these things were seen in her alert and vigorous and cultivated mind in the after days, and especially in her fluent conversation, and in her superior ability in letter-writing. To get a letter from her was a pleasure hardly to be matched."

In 1858 she was married to the Rev. Ransom J. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, and for forty-two years she filled faithfully, splendidly, the delicate, responsible, fruitful field of an itinerant's wife. With a beautiful and helpful spirit, she accepted what the Providence of God brought, making the parsonage home one of rare sunshine and joy, and proving a partner and helper in her gifted husband's life work.

Sister Jones was the mother of five children. A little girl, Mary Lou, died a number of years ago; Mrs. J. E. Reed (of Meridian) died about a year ago, and Mr. Watson E. Jones has passed away since his mother's death. There remain—two sons, Mr. H. Mounger Jones, of Vicksburg, and Mr. Charles G. Jones, of Meridian.

The sixteen years of her widowhood have been mostly spent in Meridian in the home of Mrs. J. E. Reed, and her motherhood received a large compensation in the love, reverence, and devotion of all of her children.

She was a sister of Dr. E. H. Mounger, of the Mississippi Conference, and between them existed a beautiful comradeship.

While confined within a narrow circle during the last few years, she never lost her large, keen, intelligent interest in every movement of Christ's kingdom.

The funeral was held from East End Church on the afternoon of September 19, and her body was laid to rest here by the side of her sainted husband.

Who shall adequately write a tribute to the wives of itinerants? It has not yet been done. But by an angel's hand in the Book of Life, we shall find their names written in letters of gold.

H. B. WATKINS.

Meridian, Miss., Nov. 1, 1916.

We should not be blind to the immense truth that whatever has been made known to us by revelation has always been true.—Bishop of Calcutta.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Prof. Thomas Carter and Rev. W. E. Thomas were in the Advocate office last week. We regret that the Editor did not have the pleasure of seeing these brethren.

Rev. Robert Randle, of Harrisonburg, La., and Rev. H. N. Harrison, now of Franklin, La., visited the Advocate office this week. We scarcely need to say that we were glad to see them.

We have been asked by Rev. L. L. Roberts, the pastor, to announce the fact that Dr. H. M. Du Bose will dedicate the Gibson Memorial Methodist Church of Vicksburg, Miss., on Sunday, Dec. 10, at 11 o'clock. All former pastors are cordially invited to attend this service.

Rev. J. M. Morse, our pastor at Brookhaven, Miss., sends us the following item of news on a postal card: "We will lay the corner-stone of our new Methodist Church on Dec. 12, at 10 a.m." We congratulate Brother Morse and his worthy flock upon the progress they are making in carrying forward this enterprise.

Rev. H. T. Young writes us as follows: "My permanent address for the year will be Jena, La.. This promises to he a very husy year for me. I have had already several calls for December and January and have made engagements for a number of spring and summer meetings." As our readers will remember, Brother Young was made Conference evangelist for Louisiana, a work for which he is considered admirably equipped.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, sends us the following note: "Rev. E. L. Alford, who is closing his fourth year on the Anguilla (Miss.) charge, reports all of the finances in full, with some surplus, and a remittance for every assessment in the hands of the treasurers of the Boards one week hefore the Conference session." Thls is, indeed, a fine showing.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Donaldsonville, La., paid the Puhlisher of the Advocate a business call last week, but found him out of the city, attending the Conference at Winona. Brother Lipscomb looks zealously after the interests of the Advocate in his charge, and in doing so he sets an example which is well worth following. He is preparing to leave Donaldsonville for his new charge, Pleasant Hill, La.

We have in hand a letter from Rev. L. S. Jones, written from Hattiesburg, Miss., which reached us too late for publication In this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. We regret very much to note that Brother Jones has been confined to his room with illness for six weeks, and that he does not expect to he ahle to attend the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference. The brethren will miss this worthy itinerant, who, notwithstanding his afflictions, writes most cheerfully.

From the Donaldsonville (La.) Chief of December 2, we take the following: "Members of the Methodist congregation and friends in other denominations are gratified over the reappointment of Rev. P. O. Lowrey as pastor of the local Methodist Church. Mr. Lowrey has been stationed here for the past year, and has proved to he an earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard and a citizen of high ideals. He returned from Baton Rouge Tuesday morning, after attending the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. F. M. Wall, which occurred on Sunday, Nov. 12, at the ripe old age of 71 years. Commenting briefly upon her character, her son-in-law, Rev. J. A. Wells, says: "She was one of the most loyal and consecrated souls that I have ever met. She knew how to have audience with God in prayer. She really prayed, and oh, how I am going to miss her!" Sister Wall resided near Hickory, Miss. Her obituary will appear later. We extend sympathy to the bereaved and commend them to the Heavenly Father, whose message unto those that mourn is that they shall be comforted.

In his weekly Bulletin of December 3, Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of our First Methodist Church at Baton Rouge, La., made the following statement to his congregation: "The pastor desires to say for himself and his wife that they are happy in being reappointed to First Church, Baton Rouge, for another year. For the many words of commendation and love we feel especially grateful and assure the congregation of the utmost reciprocity. Never shall be forgotten the evening of Thanksgiving Day, when a large number of friends brought gifts to the parsonage as expressions of love. This was a happy occasion; it touched our hearts, and, if possible, it knitted us closer together."

We did not see or hear read the paper on unification that Dr. S. H. Werlein submitted to the Louisiana Conference, or the substitute for it that was offered by Rev. W. H. Coleman and adpoted. Therefore, we can not speak from first-hand knowledge as to what was done; but it will be noted that our reporter, Rev. H. N. Harrison, states that the Oklahoma City plan was adhered to in the resolutions that were passed. The attention of our editorial confreres who have seemed disposed to twit the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate upon standing alone in this State in his position concerning this issue is respectfully called to Brother Harrison's account of what took place.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

"Whereas, from the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1845, our Church has endeavored to keep the spirit of the Plan of Separation adopted by the General Conference of united Episcopal Methodism in 1844, and in all our official declarations we have been the first to extend the olive branch of concord and co-operation, and as well to extend the hand of an honorable fraternity and federation, and to that end have taken the lead in suggesting the different Commissions organized by Northern and Southern Methodism for a more fraternal and a closer relationship, and that from the Federal Council of Methodism, created, at the instance of our representatives, by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and our own beloved Church, clothed with ample authority thereunto, there was worked out a series of suggestions, called a "General Plan," for the Unification of American Methodism by Reorganization, which suggestions were submitted to our General Conference at Oklahoma City for adoption, amendment, or rejection, and later were submitted to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the same purpose; and

"Whereas, our General Conference thereupon, with great earnestness and by unanimous consent, made declaration (1) that it 'considers the plan outlined in the suggestions as tentative, but nevertheless containing the basic principles of a genuine unification,' and (2) that it 'regards the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by the plan proposed, as feasible and desirable and hereby declares itself in favor of the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in accordance with this general plan of reorganization,' and (3) that our representatives in the Federal Council 'are hereby instructed and empowered to act as Commissioners in elaborating and perfecting the tentative plan which has been proposed and in carrying forward such negotiations as have for their purpose, and may result in the consummation of the proposed unification in accordance with the basic principles enunciated in the suggestions which were adopted by the Joint Commission and reported to the General Conferences,' and which plan was also passed upon by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Saratoga Springs, with certain recommendations following, and also their representatives were instructed and empowered to carry forward the negotiations; and

"Whereas, in these declarations hy our General Conference, it was distinctly recommended 'that the colored membership of the various Methodist hodies be formed into an independent organization, holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church;' and

"Whereas, the Joint Commission has been called to meet on December 28, 1916, and our venerable, and now ascended, patriarch, Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson, and the venerable patriarch, Bishop Earl Cranston, Chairmen alike of their respectlve Commissions, together with the Secretaries of the Commission, the Rev. Bishops Collins Denny and Luther B. Wilson, have issued a message to Methodism in which it is said that 'it is earnestly desired that every pastor in both Churches may hold same theme ('The Spirit of Methodism') before his congregation on Sunday, December 31, and they jointly request that the night following every congregation of both Churches shall observe watch-night, and make the work of the Joint Commission on Unification the subject of prayer during the closing hour of the year; and

"Whereas, our revered Bishops have solemnly declared 'that as Bishops of the Church we consider ourselves bound to support this action (of our General Conference) to the full extent of our ability and influence—any statement to the contrary, by whomsoever made, being utterly without foundation in fact,' and that nearly every Annual Conference, held this fall, has expressed its approval of this action of our General Conference; therefore,

Resolved hy the North Mississippi Annual Conference, "(1) That we believe God sat enthroned over the councils of the General Conference of 1844, and that, though the good and earnest men composing that Conference held views apparently irreconcilable, yet the guiding hand of providence was discernible in their deliberations and conclusions in adopting the 'Plan of Separation' and that we look with pride on the history of our Church, not only as to its evangelistic zeal and fidelity to the faith of our founders, but as well to its fraternal dealings with our sister Church of the North. It gives us pleasure to recall that the great Joint Commissions of Methodism, commencing with the Cape May Commission of 1876, then the Commission on Federation of 1894, and later the Federal Council of Methodism of 1906, had their conception in the brains and hearts of our leaders; and that from the council of these Joint Commissions have grown a sincere fraternity, a co-operation and federation, which, it now appears, is ripening into a unification of all our forces for the spread of Scriptural holiness, free from the rivalry of conflicting altars.

"(2) That we express our hearty approval of the action of our General Conference at Oklahoma City in its declarations concerning 'unification by reorganization,' and in instructing its representatives to continue the negotiations in elaborating and perfecting the general plan proposed for the unification of American Methodism. We are persuaded that the task of forming a final plan for unification acceptable to the preachers and people of both Churches is one of tremendous proportions and responsibilities, involving many difficult points of adjustment, and demanding not only great patience and wisdom on the part of the negotiators, but as well the guiding mind of the unerring Holy Spirit, without which all our plans will come to naught.

"(3) That we approve the recommendation of our General Conference concerning the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies being organized into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church. We believe it to be best for them. We believe, further, that these relations should be so close and vital as that the Bishops and preachers of the reorganized Church may have opportunity to co-operate with those of the colored Church for all betterment of their people, and that the boards of the reorganized Church should co-operate with the boards of their Church in assisting them to work out their problems. We are not disposed to forget or to shirk our obligations to our colored people.

"(4) That in keeping with the call of 'the message to Methodism' we ask all our pastors to use the 11 o'clock hour on December 31, to hold before our congregations the theme, 'The Spirit of Methodism,' and that we call our people to an hour of earnest intercessory prayer at a watch-night service, especially interceding and importuning that the Holy Spirit may control the deliberations and lead to the conclusions of the Joint Commission in their meetings.

"(5) We believe it would conserve the best interests of Methodism for a stenographic record to be made of all the proceedings of the Joint Commission, to be published in full after its work is finished for the information of our preachers and people; and that as far as may be compatible with the interests of the negotiations in progress we believe it would be well to give to the Church from day to day information of the Commission's proceedings.

"(6) That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the secretaries of our Commissioners."

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

than last year and 30 accessions to the Church. Rev. W. S. Lagrone had a great year; 12 family altars had been established; a debt of $3000 against the church was paid. The presiding elder represented Rev. J. J. Brooks in terms of praise.

Rev. J. A. Hall reported an increase in church membership of 57; $7000 raised in the charge. Rev. J. H. Mitchell had received 18 into the Church, including a Chinaman who never misses service; good Sunday school and men's class. Rev. O. W. Wagoner received several into church membership on profession of faith; had one graded Sunday school. Rev. W. S. Shipman had a well-organized church and collections in full. The name of Dr. J. W. Price was referred to the committee on Conference Relations for the supernannuate relation. A free-will offering was made for Dr. Price. Rev. L. W. Cain had churches and Sunday schools well organized, and doing well. Rev. A. A. Martin had received 26 on profession of faith, and reported an advance in finances. Rev. Joe H. Ingram had had fine meetings, a $15,000 church under construction, collections in full. Rev. E. B. Sharp mentioned special work of the Woman's Missonary Society. Rev. John Ritchey had organized a good charge and had a good year. Rev. J. A. Coleman reported a good year, "all in full." Rev. O. L. Savage reported all collections in full, an increase in membership of 84. Rev. W. N. Duncan, Conference host, reported an increase of 39 in membership, 2 Woman's Missionary Societies, which raised $768; good contributions to Orphans' Home.

The Bishop called Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of Winona District, anewered, J. Hendrix Mitchell.

Rev. W. W. Woollard read and moved the adoption of a paper endorsing the Oklahoma plan of unification by reorganization with the M. E. Church. After a thorough discussion of the paper and the issue by Brother Woollard, Dr. Meek, Dr. Boswell, Rev. J. Ritchey, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Rev. J. R. Countiss, and others, the paper was adopted.

Bishop Murrah called Dr. Meek to the chair, which place he occupied with grace and ease.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus District, asked that J. M. Carpenter be discontinued at his own request. The Conference ganted the request.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham addressed the Conference relative to the placing of the oil painting of Bishop Murrah in Millsaps College. A contribution was made.

The name of Rev. W. J. Burt was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

Judge E. V. Hughston read the report of the Committee on Lay Activites. Judge Hughston was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

Rev. A. H. Williams read the report on the American Bible Society, which was adopted. Rev. E. B. Sharp read the financial report from the same committee, which stated that the committee had made the same assessments as were made the previous year.

Conference adjourned with the benediction by Rev. J. W. Raper.

Saturday Evening.

Service began promptly at 7:30 with the singing of hymn No. 361, "Day is dying in the west." Rev. E. S. Lewis led in prayer. The Scripture lesson, 6th Chapter of Galatians, was read by Rev. O. W. Bradley, former pastor at Winona. The Wisdom Sisters sang, "Jesus is all the world to me." Rev. W. N. Duncan made announcements for the following day, after which the congregation sang, "Savior, more than life to me." Rev. L. A. McKeown announced his text, Galatians 6:17, and preached a helpful sermon on "The Marks of the Lord Jesus."

"The marks of the Lord Jesus are: First, Love; second, Patience; third, Self-Sacrifice." (Truly, Luke McKeown bears them all.—Reporter.) The preacher said, "They that enter the gate must bear the marks." "Great sacrifice brings about great things." The Wisdom Sisters sang, "Jesus paid it all." Rev. L. A. McKeown pronounced the benediction.

OVERCOAT LOST.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you please announce through the columns of the Advocate that some one took my overcoat off the piano in the basement, or Sunday school auditorium, of the First Methodist Church in Baton Rouge last Monday morning, Nov. 27? (The name of my coat is the "New Progress;" or the "Keep-Dry.") I should be glad if the brother who has it would express it to me here, or at Sicily Island, La. I will get it at either place. W. T. WOODWARD.

Oak Grove, La., Dec. 2, 1916.

LOST.

Some one exchanged overcoats with me on the east-bound Southern train out of Winona on Monday afternoon, Dec. 4. My coat is a dark-gray cravenette, "style-plus" make, with a copy of the New Orleans Advocate in the pocket. The coat I have in the exchange is a dark-gray cravenette, "style-plus" make, with a copy of Monday's Commercial Appeal and a rusty nail in the pockets, with the mark on the inside, "Sold by Kennington's, Jackson, Miss." The coat I lost is new, and the one left to me shows considerable wear.

W. E. STOKES.

On Aug. 27, 1916, EDGAR STYLES FISHER, a son of G. W. Fisher, of Pace, Miss., left his friends of this world to join those of the spiritual realm. It is natural for us to say good things about a person after he is gone. However, Styles' death does not cause us to speak kindly of him—rather it was his life that calls forth such expressions.

He was what a young man ought to be, for he was clean both in soul and body. This was the testimony of all who knew him. He had the highest regard for his father, always asking his advice regarding places of entertainment.

Styles was a young man twenty-five years of age and had for some time been an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, always attending upon its ordinances. His voice was charming and was used for the glory of God. It was very striking that on "Mothers' Day" he sang very sweetly, as a solo, "Tell mother I'll be there."

He left a father, sister, little brother, and scores of friends to mourn his departure. We pray the Father's richest blessings upon the bereaved ones, for their's was a great loss. His pastor,

J. D. WROTEN.

MRS. R. A. BAKER.

Mrs. Louise Wing Baker, whose mother was a cousin of Abraham Lincoln, was born at Brewster, Mass., on March 19, 1836. Thence, in early life, with her family she moved to Michigan, where, in Medina township, she was married in 1854 to Reusalear A. Baker, and there lived on a farm until her husband's death in 1883; after which, with her three children—Engene, Carrie, and Herbert—she moved to Morenci, Michigan, which place she ever afterwards considered her home. In 1894 she came to Whitecastle, La., to live with her son, Herbert L. Baker, who had a year before accepted a position with the Whitecastle Lumber Co., at that place.

Following a custom of spending the summer months with friends and home folks in Morenci, from which she had only varied once since coming South, it was on the occasion of this annual home-going visit, in company with her granddaughter, Miss Olive Baker, who was acting as both her companion and her nurse, that she ascended to "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," on Friday morning, Oct. 20, 1916, while a guest of Mr. V. E. Baldwin, a brother of Mrs. H. L. Baker.

Assisted by the pastor of the home Baptist Church, of which Sister Baker had continued to be a member, and the pastor of the local Methodist Church, the funeral was conducted by Rev. C. E. Wakefield, a member of the Michigan M. E. Conference, a long-time friend of the family, and a member of the firm of the Baker-Wakefield Cypress Co., of Plattenville, La. The pallbearers were old friends of the family from the Medina Baker home community, and the music was rendered by the local Methodist choir.

Since Sister Baker was a lover of flowers, and took special notice of them as love tokens at the burial of friends and dear ones, it was a happy coincidence that her casket should have been profusely covered with these fragrant emblems of love and purity. For, since they could not be present in person, her friends and the employees of Brother Baker's lumber mill at Plattenville, La., where as a member of the family his mother had spent the last years of her life, sent through Northern florists a very beautiful offering of artistically arranged flowers, the arrangement being a green wreath with a crescent of dainty flowers to the lower right, and a bow of lavender tulle in the upper left corner, the wreath being supported by a pedestal that rested on a base of green leaves set in cut chrysanthemums. The members of the Donaldsonville Sunday school, where Brother Baker is the superintendent, also sent a spray of ferns, pink rosebuds, and white carnations. Members of the family, too, placed on the casket a spray of white rosebuds and Easter lilies, as their tender good-by love token. And besides the various floral remembrances from other friends, the ladies of the local (Donaldsonville) Baptist Church presented a bouquet of pink and white carnations. To the flowers from Donaldsonville was attached a card bearing the inscription: "A love token from Louisiana friends who were blessed by the last years of her genuinely pious and unselfish life."

While from other standpoints Sister Baker was a most exemplary character, it was in her home that her practical saintliness was seen to the best advantage, and her mother love was seen to be most beautiful. Her son, with whom she lived, was her ideal and her joy—her own boy, "Bert." And his wife and daughter were to her as dear children, and ministered to her needs during the years of her increasing feebleness with a tenderness all but as rare as it was beautiful, and in them was her life wrapped up.

But Sister Baker's interests and service did not stop in the home, for every cry of human need appealed to her, and she was a close observer and student of the times, even to having a lively interest in the political issues of the country, and never forsook the way of her early training in being a Republican. And the Church never had a more devoted and consecrated adherent than was she.

Her characteristics, as nearly as any one whom we have ever known, were those set forth as marks of the ideal woman in Proverbs 31:10-31. She "stretched out her hand to the poor and to the needy, * * and was not afraid of the snow for her household * * . She opened her mouth with wisdom and the law of kindness was on her tongue. * * Her children rise up to call her blessed."

No more perfect saint were we ever blessed in knowing, and the value of her life in establishing the worth of Christian character where she lived and served is beyond estimate. She was patient, kind, unselfish, consecrated, spiritual, and Christlike. She was "Grandma Baker," the mother to her community—the sinner's friend, the mourner's comforter, and a minister to every one who had need.

"Many daughters have done excellently, but thou excellest them all."

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR
FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Make your cakes better by using "Eagle Brand." It also improves your tea, coffee, chocolate and cocoa.

Don't Let a Cold Get a Good Start

The way to check a cold is to fight it from the first. Even the worst maladies often are easily conquered if attacked early enough. Colds may leads to asthma, bronchial troubles and pulmonary affections. In the treatment of these one of the first needs is to build up body resistance.

Eckman's Alterative often has assisted in such upbuilding. As a treatment for the troubles named, it has been used for more than twenty years. And in many instances it has effected lasting relief.

As with any other medicine, it should be regarded only as a first aid to right care and hygienic living—and a safe one. For it contains no narcotics, opiates or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

NEED OF BIBLES FOR THE SOLDIERS.

"Don't try to tell me the value of furnishing Testaments to soldiers; my Christian life dates from the gift of a Gospel by a member of the Peniel Mission in the Philippine Islands," said the chaplain of the 1st Oklahoma Infantry, when approached by the Bible man from the American Bible Society seeking to provide Testaments for the Chaplain's men.

Chaplain Herbert Stanley Smith, of the 3rd U. S. Infantry, writing of the need for Testaments among the regulars, says, "From an experience of nearly twelve years, I can say that probably not one in forty has a Testament. * * * There certainly is a crying need for a 'Fund for furnishing New Testaments to soldiers.'"

Chaplain W. W. Brander, of the 8th U. S. Cavalry, speaking of religious conditions in the army said, "I cannot say that among the regulars there are any per cent who make a profession of Christianity. Indeed, it is generally considered among them weak and effeminate to make such a profession."

Chaplain D. C. Bateman, of the 14th Cavalry, writes of his own regiment, "The need for the Scriptures has always been greater than any chaplain unaided could supply. The help that I have received has never been adequate to the demands."

One of the best known business men of El Paso reports that a soldier recently came to a Sunday service where he made a profession of faith in Christ and asked to be admitted into the Church, attributing his action to the result of reading of a khaki Testament handed him only a short time before by a colporter of the American Bible Society. He said that he had been in the army eight years and had not previously owned or read any part of the Bible.

Many army chaplains, Y. M. C. A. workers, and others have recently made very strong statements regarding the need of the American soldiers for an adequate supply of Scriptures adapted to their use. There has also been reported many instances showing the splendid results arising from the reading of the khaki Testaments furnished by the American Bible Society.

The government has cared splendidly for the necessities of the soldiers in the service, providing many comforts. The Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, and other organizations have supplemented this care with many things for the soldier's comfort and moral betterment. It is the spiritual welfare of these men that needs special emphasis at this time, and the responsibility for this certainly is with the Churches.

The American Bible Society is a co-operative organization supported by Protestant denominations for the missionary distribution of the Scriptures, and the 10,000 khaki Testaments which it has already supplied the men is a first step in the right direction. Among the intelligent Americans composing the army, in their new environment and with unusual opportunity for undisturbed thought, the reading of a New Testament cannot but be effective. It is conservatively estimated that there are 40,000 more American soldiers who may be supplied with Testaments to their spiritual profit if the Churches will but provide for the work to be done. J. J. MORGAN.

TO PREVENT A COUGH GROWING WORSE AT NIGHTFALL

Take Foley's Honey and Tar

A cold usually tightens up toward nightfall and an increasing cough means a night of discomfort. Bronchial coughs, hoarseness, tickling throat, a sore, tight feeling over chest and in the bronchial tubes, may be eased and soothed very promptly, the wearing cough loosened and the phlegm raised without painful effort, by the aid of Foley's Honey and Tar. This standard family cough medicine is without opiates or harmful drugs. For croup it is invaluable. All dealers everywhere sell it.

PREACHING.

There are ministers who preach what might be described in the whimsical phrase of Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, as "a more or less little sermon." It may be a nice little discourse, expressing various pretty sentiments and adorned here or there with some apt poetical illustrations, but it is less rather than more pungent and powerful because it lacks the throb of a vital message and indeed appears to have no particular reason for its own delivery save the effort to entertain an audience for a scant half hour. It cannot be expected that all clergymen will be deep scholars, keen logicians, or great orators; but no minister really need preach a little sermon if only he himself be a true man of God, exalting not his own views, but his divine Master.—Zion's Herald.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid disease, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was cured."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or from any chronic disease, accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

doesn't become you and it is as unruly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke. Sent Free By Mail.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, doucbes, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medical cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

SEVERE RHEUMATIC PAINS DISAPPEAR

Rheumatism depends on an acid in the blood, which affects the muscles and joints, producing inflammation, stiffness and pain. This acid gets into the blood through some defect in the digestive process.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old-time blood tonic, is very successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It acts directly, with purifying effect, on the blood, and improves the digestion. Don't suffer. Get Hood's to-day.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER HOGG.

Dear Brethren: I am almost ashamed to send in a notice and to write this little note just as the year closes, when I recall that this is my only message for the year. But a moment's reflection assures me that you know what a year of afflictions I have had, and I therefore refuse to fear that you will be hard on me.

Our Church closed its budget practically two weeks ago. Everything is paid out and a great ingathering in our recent revival gives us great delight. Our Thanksgiving offering for our Orphans' Home was $97.14 in cash and about $95 worth of good, new clothing and groceries. A substantial payment on our small church debt has been made during the year. So the pastor's heart is light with these burdens rolled away, yet another rests heavily when the year's end is at hand and so much more might have been done. The Advocate has been neglected in this field, but give me a reprieve, and, in the next year's field, I promise to do better.

Yours fraternally,
WM. B. HOGG.

DAINTY COOK BOOK FREE.

This year make some delicious home-made CHRISTMAS CANDIES for your own use, or put up GIFT BOXES for your friends. We will send you FREE for the name of your grocer a copy of our recipe book "Dainty Desserts for Dainty People," which shows you how to make these candies with KNOX GELATINE. The book also contains a recipe for a wholesome, easily digested Christmas Plum Pudding, which would be a treat for your Christmas Dinner, as well as recipes for all kinds of Jellies, Desserts and Salads. If you wish pint sample of KNOX SPARKLING GELATINE send 2c. stamp, or 15c. for two quart package, if your grocer does not sell it.

KNOX GELATINE,
201 KNOX AVE. JOHNSTOWN, N. Y.

THE COMMISSIONER.

Well, the elder dropped in, and, says he to me, says he, "Don't you want to write something for the Advocate?" Says I to him, says I, "I am under promise to let the fellows rest until after the conclave at Jackson. But I've something too good to keep." Say that Ware at Fayette is riding at high tide, with prospects of "in full" bright, and that Caln at Washington is coming with a whoop a long way ahead of the hounds. Well, now, that's worth recording in black and white and is a feather in the cap of each of these Millsaps boys (now if this results in the elder losing two of his choicest young men he must suffer the blame, and Fayette and Washington will be the losers).

I am just in from Jefferson Street with cheering news, only the brethren there are pressed over the benevolences, as elsewhere in the district, for Jefferson Street is not alone in having an annual tug at those strings. How much better it would be if all interests were kept abreast throughout th year!

Doctor, I sometimes wonder if John Wesley had lived in this day if he would say that a "house-going pastor makes a church-going people," with the Sunday papers and the popular automobile, and then again I ask if we Methodists haven't carried the suggestion to extremes. A few Sabbaths ago I chanced to hear a most excellent sermon—indeed I was so interested and helped that I thought if I could hear such a sermon every week I'd excuse the pastor from visiting me and take it in good preaching; yet one of the very first homes I entered in that community I heard the complaint that the pastor had been in that home only twice during the year, but the autos passed and repassed the church. But I musn't violate my pledge of keeping quiet for a season.

Roberts is working hard to have Gibson Memorial dedicated before Conference.

The last quarterly conference at Crawford Street is to be held Monday night, and we are hoping for "all in full," yea, groaning, so to speak.

T. B. H.

DR. COOPER APPRECIATED.

Resolved (1) That the members of the quarterly conference of the Fernwood charge recognize with pleasure the efficient and valuable service rendered by Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., as presiding elder of the Brookhaven District.

(2) That to have associated with him has been a great blessing to us and to the membership of the church.

(3) That it is with great regret we are forced to give him up, but our warmest sympathy, our best wishes, and our prayers follow him.

Signed: P. H. Enochs, Rev. F. L. Applewhite, W. H. Saunders, R. B. Austin.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

"To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drugstore but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

CHRIST THE CURE FOR IT.

We believe that the prevailing godlessness of this age has much to do with the increase in insanity and numerous forms of mental disease. Worry, disappointment, depression, and despair arise from the spirit of man being without the support of faith, from the obscuration of God, from the loss or failure to experience that sweet fellowship with Jesus Christ that bears a man up under discouragement. The mind of man requires faith in God to continue in a healthy condition. Think on Christ, and the dark hours which tempt to self-destruction will not linger long. The return of faith to this age will bring an increased resistance to the destructive forces of this world.—Western Christian Advocate.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

"TRY RELIGION."

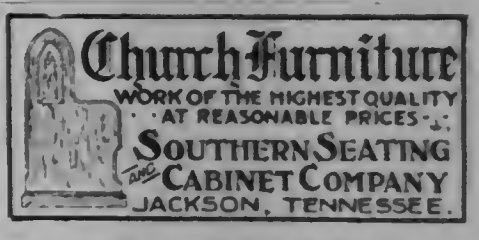
Horace Greeley once received a letter from a woman stating that her Church was in distressing financial straits. They had tried every device they could think of—fairs, strawberry festivals, oyster suppers, a donkey party, turkey banquets, Japanese weddings, poverty sociables, mock marriages, grab-bags, box sociables, and necktie sociables. "Would Mr. Greeley be so kind as to suggest some new device to keep the struggling Church from disbanding?" The editor replied: "Try religion."

Church suppers and fairs are devices to make the goats pay for the pasturage of the sheep.—Exchange.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.

Sorrow is a valley through which all of the human family must travel. There is no escape. Death in a happy home circle will come. It cannot always be stayed. Loss of property, loss of friends, loss of health, loss of many things held dear in human life are all among the common heritage of men. The deeper sorrows of sin and tragedy come to some. There is but one path that leads out of the shadows into the light—the path of fidelity. Rebellion of heart hurts the heart more than the sorrow. Infidelity of life leads to the chasm and the plunge into bottomless blackness. Faith and obedience emerge sooner or later into God's open sunlight, where flowers bloom and heaven's balm sends to earth an advance breath. Courage and trustful loyalty to the right alone can banish the night and usher in the glad, sweet day of peace. The Midland Methodist.



10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly Ended

Home-Made Remedy that Saves You $2—Does the Work Thoroughly.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RUSTON DISTRICT MEETING.

The Ruston District meeting was held in the Methodist Church at Minden, La., on Oct. 19, 1916, with the district secretary, Mrs. J. R. Miller, presiding. The devotional service was led by Mrs. W. H. Luck, after which the regular business was taken up. There was a roll call of delegates from the following places: Athens, Arcadia, Bernice, Duhach, Homer, Haynesville, Haughton, Minden, Plain Dealing, Ruston, Simsboro, Winnfield, and Cotton Valley. Only three auxiliaries gave reports. Several of the other societies had expected to send delegates, hut, on account of the heavy rains the day before, were prevented from doing so, as they had expected to come in automobiles. Reports were given by the following societies:

Minden has 61 adult memhers; dues collected, $122.70; pledge, $180.65; Week of Prayer, $23; scholarships, $40; Scarritt fund, $2.

Ruston reported 64 adult members; 2 new memhers during the quarter; numher of subscrihers to Voice, 21; numher of memhers in study class, 13; pledge, $125.70.

Ruston received the pennant for organizing more societies than any other auxillary in the district, the women there having organized two new societies.

Arcadia reported 24 adult members, 3 new memhers, and raised on pledge $56.75.

Cotton Valley is a new society just organized, therefore had no report.

Mrs. Henry conducted an Institute on Children's Work, which was very interesting and instructive.

Mrs. Means read a fine paper on "Missions within Our Conference," telling of the work in our own State to be done along this line.

The afternoon session was called to order hy Mrs. J. R. Miller. After a song by the congregation, Mrs. Henry gave a Scripture lesson from Luke.

Mrs. Wilty Ledbetter, Superintendent of Study and Publicity, gave a very instructive talk, explaining all the work coming under this head. She lamented the fact that we have only six study classes in this district. She was followed by Mrs. Wynn, who spoke interestingly and earnestly on Bible study.

Mrs. J. J. Holmes, Conference Treasurer, gave a talk on "Finance" and showed how necessary it was for all departments to come up with their dues in order that the Conference should have sufficient funds for its many needs. The Conference pledge from all the auxiliarles amounts to $4425. Mrs. Holmes stressed the observance of "Harvest Day," and suggested that the first meeting in December be observed as such, the object heing to have all members come prepared to pay In full their remaining dues and pledges.

Mrs. W. T. Cunningham conducted an Institute on Young People's Work, and spoke of the great opportunities presented by this department. She also dwelt upon methods of keeping them interested. Mrs. Cunningham was proud of her two delegates from the Orphanage in Ruston, Misses Earle and Greer, President and Secretary of the Ruston Young People's Society. These young ladies gave interesting accounts of their work.

Minden was selected as the place for the next district meeting.

The District Secretary placed the number of adult societies In the Conference at 98, the Young People's at 27, and the Juniors' at 50.

Mrs. Wynn gave an interesting talk on "Plan of Organization."

After prayer and a hymn the meeting adjourned until the evening session, at which Mrs. Sloan conducted the devotional exercises. A vocal solo rendered by Mr. C. M. Roberts was enjoyed hy all.

Mrs. Sloan discussed our missions in the French sections of Louisiana and showed great familiarity with the work. She spoke of the eagerness with which these people hear the gospel and how they are anxious for a deeper knowledge of God's Word.

Our slogan for 1917 is, an auxiliary in every church, and every woman, hoy and girl a memher. Our goal is: 3000 adults, 600 young people, and 2000 Juniors.

Rev. W. W. Drake made an eloquent address, his subject heing "A World-wide Opportunity." His message was full of inspiration and carried a quickening impulse to the heart of every one present.

Mrs. D. W. STEWART,
Recording Secretary.

NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the Council of Women for Home Missions will he held at the Broadway Tabernacle, Broadway and 56th Street, New York City, on January 9-10, 1917. The opening session will he at 2 p. m. on Tuesday.

A NEW TEXT-BOOK FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Council of Women for Home Missions has issued a new book for young people, "From Plaza, Patio and Palm." The book is in line with our theme for the year—Latin-America—and leaders of young people's societies will hail with delight this new book on Spanish-speaking Americans in Cuba, Porto Rico, and the United States. The book is compiled by Eva Clark Waid, and the author's personal knowledge of the subject, as well as an intimate acquaintance with the group for which she writes, have resulted in a charming study book for the "teen-age." The six chapters deal as follows:

I. When the Old World Sought the New.
II. New World Plazas.
III. Sunshine in the Southwest.
IV. The Palms of Cuha.
V. Porto Rico Patios.
VI. What the New World Gives the Old.

Price, postpaid, 30 cents. Order at once from denominational headquarters.

ITEMS HERE AND THERE.

Total new auxiliaries for third quarter, 278. Total numher of new members, 7948.

Louisiana pledged at her last annual meeting $4485, and has paid $3185.67 of this amount.

Mississippi's pledge is $5000, of which $2644.21 has been paid.

North Mississippi pledged $4500, and at the close of the third quarter had paid $2618.15.

Read hetween the figures, sisters, and see what your task is hefore the fourth quarter closes. Do not let 1916 see a deficit on our records. We have fallen into the hahit, it seems, of not paying our pledges in full. Are we not rohhing God when we fail to give to his work what we have promised? What if "times are hard?" Make a little more sacrifice and you can fulfill your vows. Give until you feel, and great will be the joy which you will experience, and God will bless you abundantly in spiritual things; and, after all, it is the treasure in heaven which is the only treasure worth striving for.

A Christian trained nurse is wanted by the management of one of the cotton mills where we have a flourishing Wesley House. If you have a friend who wants to take advantage of this rare opportunity, have her communicate at once with our Home Department.

You May Borrow an Epworth FREE for the Holidays

As usual in presidential years the excitement of the election somewhat interferred with our November business and we still have on hand about a hundred of the magnificent Epworth pianos which were finished up extra fine for holiday presents. I have decided to pay the freight and send these splendid Christmas pianos for demonstration in a hundred music-loving homes for and then if necessary they may be returned and at my expense. I can afford to do this for I know by experience that when you see and hear one of these beauties and learn the wonderful bargain in price and of the easy payments without interest, that ninety-five out of the hundred Epworths will be kept permanently.

Send for My Wonderful Holiday Offer

No matter where you live I will gladly pay the freight and loan you one of these magnificent pianos until February 1st for the privilege of advertising the Epworth in your locality and among your friends. During the last thirty years we have sold many thousands of Epworth pianos and organs throughout the South to Methodist preachers, Methodist people and Methodist churches, but there are still many music-loving people who have never had the opportunity of becoming well acquainted with the Epworth.

From the Field

Meadville (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Advocate: We are closing out our quadrennium on the Meadville charge. The work has made good progress during these four years. Over 250 members have been received by us into the Church, and the spiritual condition of our membership has improved every year. There are good Sunday schools and Woman's Missionary Societies at each of the three churches. A good deal of improvement on the parsonage and parsonage property has been made. A debt on the Meadville Church was paid, and some money was spent upon the church. A lighting plant has been placed in the Meadville Church, and the church at McCall's has been ceiled. This year we have built two churches—one at Beulah, eight miles southeast of Meadville, and one at Bude, the mill town east of Meadville. Each of these buildings meets the needs of the respective congregation. Our church at Bude is as pretty a frame structure as may be found in the Mississippi Conference. Dr. I. W. Cooper dedicated the little Beulah Church on October 31, and we expect him to dedicate the Bude Church on Dec. 3. The people of this charge are fond of Dr. Cooper, and they appreciate his administration as presiding elder of the Brookhaven District.

I commend the people of this charge to the man who may serve them during the next Conference year. He will find a number of true, loyal, appreciative Methodists.—J. W. Thompson, P. C.

Dec. 2, 1916.

Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I will try to give a brief statement of the work here. Three years ago Bishop Candler sent me to Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg. I packed my goods and moved this way. I had no trouble in finding Vicksburg. However, when I began to look around for Gibson Memorial, behold! it was not, but instead I found a hole in the ground where some one had dreamed dreams and seen visions of a new brick church. After looking carefully over the situation I set myself resolutely to the task, and, as best I could, have pushed it along to completion, and will dedicate on December 10 as good a building for its size as can be found anywhere, with Dr. H. M. DuBose to preach the sermon. Whatever success we may have attained in this building enterprise, much credit is due to my predecessor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, who labored faithfully for four years doing the preliminary work, selling the old church, finding a new and better location, buying the lot, interesting the Church Extension Boards, etc. But after considering all that all of us have done, as we look over the situation we are convinced that the task could never have been acomplished but for the fact that it was the will of God, and His hand has guided the workmen in every step. We are at present paying off a $2000 debt and finishing the basement for our Sunday school classes, Epworth League, and Woman's Missionary Auxiliary. We are now in a position to take our place among the churches of the city, and, I think, to do a great work for God and humanity.

During these three years of constructing the building we have tried to look after the spiritual interests of the Kingdom and, as a result, we have received 136 members into the Church, 54 of them on profession of faith. We have baptized a number of infants, conducted about 100 funerals, and married more folks than in all our fifteen years' previous ministry. I guess I might say to the Bishop, "We have had three good years."—L. L. Roberts.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Winona District held a most delightful and profitable all-day session in Indianola, on Nov. 22. About 45 delegates and visitors were in attendance. Our District Secretary, Mrs. A. M. Pond, presided.

Mrs. J. H. Mitchell, in a beautiful speech, heartily welcomed the body to her most hospitable town.

Good reports were brought from almost all auxiliaries and splendid papers were read by those on the program.

The addresses by Mrs. Conger, the Conference President, and Miss Willingham, Field Agent of the Illiteracy Commission, were especially enjoyed.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, we learn from the morning papers that death has again invaded our College of Bishops, and called from his long and faithful labors our venerable Senior Bishop, Alpheus W. Willson,

Resolved, That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, now in our annual meeting at Indianola, Miss., do hereby express our sorrow that this great chieftain and leader is to be no more among us. We feel that we have lost a friend indeed, for he was preeminently a Missionary Bishop. We bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and give thanks for the life of this great and good man, and extend love and sympathy to the sorrowing family.

Resolved, further, That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the Commercial Appeal for publication.

Signed: Miss Francis A. Gardner, Mrs. J. A. Hicks, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Committee.

A rising vote of thanks was accorded the good ladies of Indianola for their royal hospitality and the delicious lunch so abundantly provided for all the delegates and visitors.

Schlater was chosen as the place of the next annual meeting.

The meeting was adjourned with benediction by Rev. J. H. Mitchell.

A DELEGATE.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Uric Acid Poisoning!

The most eminent physicians recognize that uric acid stored up in the system is the cause of rheumatism, that this uric acid poison is present in the joints, muscles, or nerves. By experimenting and analysis at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute in Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce discovered a combination of native remedies that he called Anuric—which drives out the uric acid from the system, and in this way the pain, swelling and inflammation subside. If you are a sufferer from rheumatism, backache, pains here or there, you can obtain Anuric at any drug store and get relief from the pains and ills brought about by uric acid; or send Dr. Pierce 10c. for trial pkg. Anuric which you will find many times more potent than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Anuric is a regular insurance and lifesaver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints.

A WOMAN'S HEAD is level and her judgment good when she puts her faith in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. There is no beauty without good health. Nobody expects to become really beautiful from the use of complexion beautifiers.

Bright eyes, clear skin, and rosy cheeks, follow the use of the "Prescription."

All women require a tonic and nervine at some period of their lives. Whether suffering from nervousness, dizziness, faintness, displacement, catarrhal inflammation, bearing-down sensations, or general debility, the "Prescription" is sure to benefit. In tablet and liquid form.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets were first put in ready-to-use form nearly 50 years ago, and will always relieve the inactive liver and biliousness. Insist on getting Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—there is none so good.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe said, If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good, you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin another is burdened with unhealthy fat, some are so weak they can hardly walk, some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble, some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc. often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron for example is pleasant to take does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

WRITE THE GOOD THOUGHT DOWN.

Have you had a good thought to-day? Write it down ere it passes by, that the thought may do thee good another day and help thy brethren on their way. Whence cometh the good thought, friends? Is it not God's good gift to man, yet not for you alone? It will soon be on the pages of the past—write it down. Phantom-like they pass us by, yet if we would have them do us good, let us keep them in our hearts and thoughts to-day. In memory may they ever dwell. Thoughts of Jesus, his life and works for men, divinely sent words to guide us in our lives while here. Words to draw us within the circle of his love, such his teachings and such his life for us.

Pass on a good thought to-day, unfold the beauties of His word, making life radiant with inward peace, reflecting a glow of love and brightness, casting no shadow, sorrow or discontent to mar his perfect creation, remembering he has said, "Lo, I am with you alway," and thus the divine light cometh into our lives, bringing the peace of God to all who love and seek his ways. Is it not to-day that we should be radiant within and reflect our higher creation?—E. Howard Leggett.

GIVE YOURSELF.

In all relations of life you will find success and every pleasant thing by giving more than is absolutely necessary for you to give. If, when you have a friend to stay with you, you think of every possible way to give him or her pleasure, not stopping at the perfunctory, expectant way of doing things, but reaching forth and brimming over the cup of welcome, you have won from your friend, by just the excess of loving thought, a deep gratitude and appreciation, and awakened depths of feeling impossible to gain by stereotyped duty giving only.

If, whatever you are doing, either for yourself or others, you do not rest until you have done your work as well as you possibly can, putting in every additional beautiful touch you can think of to complete it, those extra touches, that deep-souled giving, full measure, pressed down and running over will redound to your credit; you will reap also in deep measure.

If everyone were to make it a steadfast rule of life just to give themselves abundantly to their present life, living beautifully wherever they are placed, they would soon reach their heart's desire.—Mary Yeates.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 63—No. 50. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South Whole No. 3175

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1916. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

EDITORIAL.

"We plan and plan, then pray
That God may bless our plan.
So runs our dark and doubtful way,
That scarce shall lead unto the day—
So runs the life of man!
But, hearken! God saith, 'Pray'"
And He will show His plan.
And lead in His shining way
That leadeth on to perfect day,
Each God-surrendered man!"

Not all charges are equally as remunerative or desirable, from a human standpoint; but all furnish an opportunity to do a great work for the Master. To save or strengthen a single soul is a task worthy of an angel's brain and heart.

Have you welcomed the new pastor? If not, by all means do so as soon as you can. Your handclasp and kindly words may encourage him. And this action upon your part will also likely prove helpful to you. The sooner those who are to work together get into touch with one another the better.

The Southern Methodist Church is putting increasing emphasis on an educated ministry, and rightly so, since the general intelligence of the people is being continually raised to a higher level. But the thing of the first importance is to have preachers who know God in the forgiveness of their sins and who are filled with the Holy Spirit. The proof of this is seen in the fact that some of the Churches that have always stood for an educated ministry have made rather a poor showing in the mighty work of bringing the world to Christ.

The peace of God never exists apart from righteousness. The sinner must get right with his Maker before there is a cessation of warfare in his soul and sweet peace sets up its happy reign therein. And this must also be true upon a larger scale in human society. As long as evil remains entrenched and dominant, the followers of Jesus must attack and combat it, whether it be inside or outside of the Church. Lovers of ease and quietude in Zion who desire tranquility at almost any price certainly are not in "the apostolic succession."

Visiting from house to house is an important part of a Methodist preacher's work, and he is obligated to do this by the assumption of a solemn vow. Indeed, no minister can succeed in the highest and truest sense who does not come into touch with his people with a warm and tender heart. But while this is true, a pastor needs also to guard resolutely his hours and habits of study and personal devotion. Unless he reads and thinks and prays, he can not attain to the largest efficiency either in his pulpit or daily personal work. His own mental and spiritual strength must be kept up or he cannot uplift and inspire others.

"BISHOP WILSON'S GREEK TESTAMENT."

We think the following from the Baltimore Southern Methodist of last week is worth passing on.

"Miss Nina Wilson, daughter of Bishop Wilson, in looking over the pages of the Bishop's Greek New Testament, found that her distinguished father had read the little volume through thirty-two times during the past five years. It is little wonder that he was so familiar with the Greek text and so often thought in Greek. How this record shames so many of us younger men who had a working knowledge of Greek when we left school, but have let other things crowd out our systematic study of that rich tongue."

It was very generally known that Bishop Wilson was a constant and painstaking student of the Holy Scriptures. Such every Christian minister should be, whether he is so fortunate as to be able to read them in their original languages or not. It is well for a preacher to be widely read and informed; but the most important thing is for him to master as fully as he can the books of the Bible.

Perhaps few of our ministers are so familiar with the Greek New Testament as was our great ascended leader. Bishop Hoss, however, probably equalled him in this respect. He never goes anywhere without having with him one or two Greek texts, and he literally revels in them. And what a marvelous exegete and expositor this has helped to make him!

CHRISTIAN WEALTH AND PAGAN POVERTY.

An English journal thus comments on the wealth of the Christian nations of the world:

"The statement recently made by Mr. McKenna that the wealth of the Christian world to-day is, roughly, £87,000,000,000 (approximately $435,000,000,000) conveys little impression of its vastness to the mind.

"We get, however, some idea of it when we learn that the gold represented by these colossal figures would be so heavy that it would require two thousand strong locomotives to transport it, and that it would outweigh the combined populations of Australia, New Zealand and Canada!

"It represents as much gold as all the mines in the world could yield in nine centuries at their present rate of output, and £1000 for every sovereign current in Great Britain before the war. To count these thousands of millions of sovereigns would keep an army of nearly 7000 cashiers busy for a year, counting at the rate of one sovereign a second for ten hours a day.

"Of every £100 of the world's wealth it is interesting to discover that the United States claimed, before the war, £28; the United Kingdom £17 and France £14. Germany takes fourth place, with £13; Russia follows, with a share of £8, and Italy, with nearly £5." (The per capita wealth of the United States is more than $2000.—Ed. Ad.)

It is one of the outstanding truths that confronts the observer of world conditions that the Christian countries of the globe are the possessors of most of its wealth, and that paganism and poverty seem to go hand in hand. Bishop J. M. Thoburn, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, dwelt impressively upon this last mentioned fact in an address before the great Missionary Conference of our Church held in New Orleans in 1901. Among other things, he said:

"You have no idea how poor the nations are that know not God. It is a common belief, much more common formerly than now, that India is one of the richest countries in the world. The papers have been telling for the past two years that China is perhaps the very richest nation on the globe, and in many senses there may be a gloss of truth in a statement of that kind. But in India and China and pagan Africa there will be a hundred million of people who will lie down and sleep to-night without having had more than one very frugal meal during the day, and without any shelter over them except perhaps the branches of a hospitable tree. * * * I have known men by the tens of thousand have been stumbling over them these forty years, who lie down just where night finds them. They lie down as the dog lies down, in the nearest place where they can get room enough. You will find them along the pavements of Calcutta, you will find them all through the streets of Bombay. Then when you come to think of their wives and children the idea of poverty is such that there is no person in this room, except the half-dozen missionaries around me, who ever saw a poor man. You think you have seen one, but you never did. The very tramps who roam over the country in these United States, if out yonder in India would be recognized as 'swells' by the people."

Since they have the wealth of the world so largely in their hands, how great are the obligations of the Christian nations to the suffering perishing millions of mankind!

"A PRETTY KETTLE OF FISH."

The following is from a recent issue of The Baptist Chronicle (Alexandria, La.): "The English Baptists are leading, through Dr. Shakespare (so the papers tell us), in uniting all denominations in one non-descript body. The Baptists are to yield close communion and congregationalism as now practiced, while the pedos will give up infant baptism. All the forms of baptism now administered to adults—sprinkling, pouring, and immersion—will be practiced at the pleasure of the applicant. This may do. God knows—but I, for one, sure renig." We do not much like our brother's word "renig" (more properly written "renege"), but we are ready to join him in his opposition to this program. We should be heartily ashamed of a Methodism that would consent to have children denied the sign and seal of the great Divine Covenant that extends back to the time of Abraham.

The best interpretation of "the spirit" of a body is found not in the mere words that it may utter, but in its definite enactments. Here, as everywhere else, "Actions speak louder than words."

A PRAYER.

Thy will to do. Thy work to make
More forceful on this fallen earth:
Thy love in some lone heart to leave,
Thy word to give where spirits grieve.
To teach a downcast soul its worth,
Into some fettered soul to take
Thy freeing power; for some one's sake
To give of self as Thou didst give—
For such a mission let me live!

—Phllip Phillips, Jr., in G. F. S. Quarterly.

THE HEART'S OUTFLOW.

What people think about they will talk about. The hest method of promoting religious conversation is to get a little religion into people's hearts and heads.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

EARTH'S HAPPIEST PLACE.

Is there any happiness so sweet, so dear and so much like heaven as that of home? No; there is not another place in the wide, weary world where unrest is dumb and powerless to mar the blessed peace. Around such a home no influence can even break the peaceful spell. The dash of the rain, the moaning of the midnight winds and the beating of the tempest cannot ruffle the great ocean of peace.—Mrs. M. A. Holt.

HOW MIGHTY IS YOUR PRAYER?

A Sunday school teacher's influence is no stronger than his prayer life, hut how strong is his prayer life?

W. B. Anderson gives a very striking answer to this question. He says: "A man cannot live in sin and really pray that others he delivered from sin; nor can he live his own life in selfishness and pray that others may have their lives filled with love; nor himself live far from God and pray that others may he drawn near to Him. A man may pray as much as he lives, and all the rest of his attempts at prayer are mockery."

The power of the Sunday school teacher's prayer, therefore, is dependent upon the power of his life. There is an old proverh which says: "Praying breath is never spent in vain," hut like most proverbs, this is only a half truth. Praying hreath is never spent in vain when he who prays is living as he prays, but the prayers of others accomplish nothing.

If the teacher prays that the number in his class may increase, he must work hard to get a larger enrollment. If he prays for a more enthusiastic class, he must himself hecome more deeply in earnest. If he prays for conversions, his motive must be not that of making a record for himself, but the desire that others shall know the joy of fellowship with Christ, which means so much to him.

This, then, is the spiritual order—character, prayer, influence. Influence springs out of prayer, while prayer gains its might, on the human side, from the character of him who prays.—New York Christian Advocate.

FRIENDSHIP.

"Ye are my friends," the Master said to men
In sorrow, sitting in the Upper Room.
The gospel of His friendship, uttered then,
Through all the ages since doth vanquish gloom.
The years that stretch between our own and those
Are lit with golden lamps of loving hearts;
For, since He spake, a flood of friendship flows
From Him through men to men and sin departs.
'Tis thus the Master plans that sin shall end:
No soul is saved for self. His Spirit saith;
But each is sent to be like Him a friend,
To bind with love the bonds of Hope and Faith.
Thus serving Him as friends, we'll find
His life of friendship still redeems mankind.

PRAY FOR THEM.

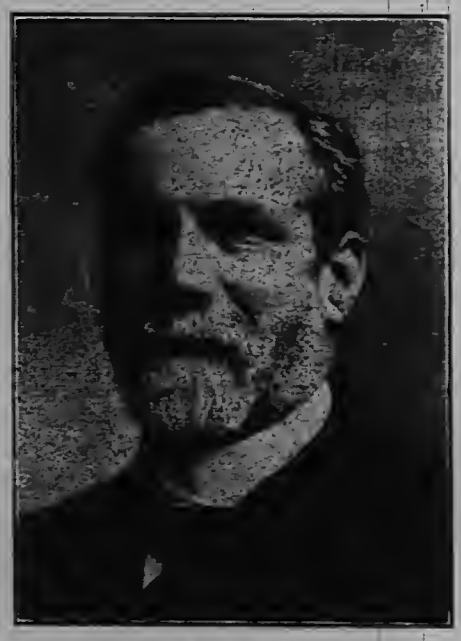
"It takes courage even for youth to choose the way of the Cross, to face and accept the sacrificial callings. But they are ready for it. Let prayer he made for students everywhere, that they may do the present duty and face the future task with courage and devotion worthy of the Christ to whom their lives belong."

RECOLLECTIONS OF BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

Rev. Beverly Carradine, D. D.

The subject of this life sketch and myself were college-mates at the University of Mississippi. The former had the advantage of an unbroken school term during the Civil War, while I, through my mother's removal from Yazoo City to a plantation on Bee Lake, was deprived of two or three years of scholastic privileges. I made up for it as well as I could hy devouring the libraries of my friends and relatives, but the rigid college examination made a difference of two years hetween Charles B. Galloway and myself.

My first impression of him was favorable. He was handsome, manly, courteous, and refined. He was quite studious, and stood high in his class. We frequently met on the campus and in the gymnasium and elsewhere, and his hearty, genial laugh and invariably gentlemanly deportment remain as a vivid and beautiful memory with me to this day. A victory I obtained in a Latin class of 70 young men impressed his Fraternity and I received a cordial invitation to join the Delti Psi Club, but did not do so hecause of a condition I imposed which was not acceptable. This prevented a closer intimacy in our college life. Still, we met frequently and every recollection is an agreeable one, and most favorable to C. B. Galloway.



Bishop Charles B. Galloway, D.D., LL.D.

He was a regular attendant at the Sabbath services of the Methodist Church, of which the Rev. J. J. Wheat, D. D., a most gifted preacher, was pastor. With shame and regret I write that I never attended church a single time, hut studied or read, according to my mood or preference, in my room.

In the second year, there was quite a revival in the Methodist Church, in which Brother Galloway was either converted or felt called to the ministry, I do not know that I ever went to a solitary service.

On leaving college, C. B. Galloway entered first the North Mississippi Conference, and was later transferred to the Mississippi Conference. Immediately he took superior rank in that hody and was stationed at Port Gibson. Through the exercise of some ecclesiastical power, perhaps through some misunderstanding, this well hred, well educated and first-class young preacher was not returned to Port Gibson, hut sent to an appointment considered of less importance, called the South Warren Circuit.

It was there, I think, he first met his future wife, a handsome, intelilent, attractive young lady; so the appointment was right after all, as his happy married life proved.

But he had only been on the circuit a few months when Yazoo City, a more prominent station than Port Gibson, hy some remarkable occurrence, was suddenly made open for a pastor, and he was sent to that larger field.

It was there I met him in a store after a separation of fully five or six years. His pure, white, spiritual face sent a profound pang to my heart by very contrast, and may have been the beginning of a conviction which slumbered until I was converted two years later.

On entering the Mississippi Conference, I was assigned to Vernon Mission and the stewards of the Methodist Church in Jackson, Mississippi, where Charles B. Galloway was pastor, doubtless through his influence, and that of Dr. Linfield, secured a hrick cottage for my abode close to Brother Galloway's dwelling and parsonage; hence we were much together, read and talked a great deal about what we had read, and attended various camp meetings in company. His home was a most hospitable one and his wife entertained all his visitors with unbroken kindness and cordiality. To this day I can see Brother Galloway in his parlor and his two little girls, sitting on his knees, singing some Sunday schobl hymn together. Also to this day I recall the deep interest he manifested in all the preachers, his hospitality, his going down to the train to have a passing word with them when they could not remain over, or call on them at the hotel where they would be waiting for a later train.

His conversation was nearly always on instructive lines, though he had a delightful spirit of wit and humor. But he seemed to he desirous of hroadening his vision, knowing everything and everybody worth knowing.

Once at the Seashore Camp Ground, where fully one hundred preachers were in attendance, in a long, narrow building which accommodated fifty or sixty, his cot was next to mine, and I observed how he pondered the faces of the men of God who were in conversational groups or lying resting on their couches before or after pulpit labors. At the time I speak of he suddenly touched my arm, and said, "Look at the face of yonder preacher lying on his couch studying his notes; is he not marvelously like Daniel Webster?" With a glance I saw that his impression was correct. He was speaking of Allen S. Andrews of Alabama.

One night after a service of great spiritual power, neither of us could speak for several hours and almost instinctively our hands reached out and were clasped together in the darkness.

Later he was sent to Vicksburg. The yellow fever swept the country during his pastorate there, and he, with his wife, became victims of the dreadful disease, refusing to leave their posts assigned to them by the Bishop and Conference. Sister Galloway's case was not as serious as that of her husband. He had what was generally the invariable precursor of death, the "black vomit." She had herself carried in and laid by his side, to he near him when he died. The Church had heard of his desperate condition and congregations hy the hundred assembled and prayed God to spare his life. God, as we all know, heard those prayers.

In my pastorate I followed him later to Vicksburg, where I found how he had endeared himself to the people. A year or so after, both of us were sent to New Orleans, I as pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, and he as editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. His ability there was as marked as was his fervor and eloquence in the pulpit; so in the fourth year of his editorial career, he was elected a Bishop in our Church, the youngest in years that has ever been elected before or since to that office.

In his Episcopal labors, he went all over the land and finally around the world. I was sent to St. Louis, became an evangelist, and held meetings in every State in the Union hut two; so, for years we never met. One night on a train in Tennessee, exhausted from much preaching in a revival meeting, I was stretched sound asleep in a seat. Bishop Galloway came aboard at some town, and my singer, Prof. Rinehart, recognized and spoke to him. He finally told him I was asleep on a seat farther hack in the coach. My singer afterwards told me that the Bishop came and stood hy me, looking in a kind, and, I suppose, reminiscent manner, on my unconscious face.

I could easily fill a number of pages devoted to the recollections of this gifted man of God, but space forbids.

When I heard of his death, sorrow-stricken, I telegraphed my sympathy and condolence to his wife and felt like saying to all, as I do now, as one in the Bible said of another, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

THE LOUISIANA EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN.

PROGRAM.

The program and plan as recommended by the Committee on Evangelism and adopted by the presiding elders in a called meeting at Alexandria, Louisiana, October 26 and 27, 1910, are as follows.

December.

Let the Evangelistic Committee and the Conference lay leaders and the presiding elders meet as early in December as possible to discuss the details of the work as concerns each district and to choose a particular month for each district.

January.

We recommend that the presiding elders call a meeting of all the preachers in their respective districts the first week in January to plan the revival work. We suggest that as far as possible at this meeting the dates for holding revivals in each charge be fixed and spiritual men be selected, either evangelists who have been endorsed by the Evangelistic Committee, or pastors who possess evangelistic fervor. We would further suggest that, where a pastor serves several churches, he unite these churches in a central community and plan for a longer meeting than usual. Where this is not practicable let the pastor select the most important places in his charge for the months chosen for his district and hold meetings at the other points at a later date.

February.

We recommend that particular emphasis be given by the pastors to soul saving themes, that prayer circles be organized and that the last week of February be observed in all of our churches as the Week of Prayer.

That March, April, May, June, July, August and September be chosen for the revival campaign throughout the district.

Let all of God's people pray and endeavor to "WIN ONE TO CHRIST."

PLAN.

The plan presented by the Conference Committee on Evangelism to the Presiding Elders' Conference in session in the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, Louisiana, October 26, was read and after thoughtful discussion it was decided that the Committee on Evangelism perfect the plan, have it printed, and that it be recommended to the Annual Conference in special session at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, appointed for November 22, 1910.

The Plan is as Follows:

Whereas, There has been a concerted revival effort in our Conference in many years, and, whereas believing that the most important work of the Kingdom is to win men to Christ, and whereas our Church provides for special emphasis on evangelism, we the Conference Committee on Evangelism recommend to the Annual Conference now in session the following plan:

1. Resolved, 1st, That we prepare in our own hearts deeper consecration for the task before us, we begin by holding Conference evangelistic services during Conference week.

2. That during the year 1911 we conduct organized revival effort throughout the State giving special emphasis to personal evangelism or the "Win One Plan."

3. We would emphasize the importance of holding special meetings for men, women, young people and children. That canvasses be made for membership by the Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Missionary Societies, and all organized classes and organizations in the Church. We would discourage union meetings at this time, unless those in charge think larger results could be obtained by that method.

4. That the pastors organize prayer bands, publicity committees, that the evangelistic committee appointed in each church carefully tabulate reports and furnish information of the progress of the work to the presiding-elders, and that the presiding elders keep our Bishop posted as the work advances.

5. That all committees be instructed by the presiding elders and pastor as to their duties, that they may render every assistance by giving publicity to the meetings through our Conference organ and daily papers. We recommend that the pastors read Dr. Todd's book on evangelism and furnish personal workers with helpful leaflets on "How to Win Men to Christ." That the evangelistic committee in each local church distribute tracts and leaflets on the various causes of our Church.

6. That the presiding elder and preacher in charge, together with the recording steward, check up the church roll and endeavor to get a correct roll, finding out those who have moved away and where they are, sending their certificates of membership to the pastor in the charge where they reside, hoping by this means to enlist the hundreds of Methodists who are not now in touch with church work or worship.

7. By all means let the work be done decently and in order, and to prevent confusion we would suggest that a committee on finance in each charge be appointed to arrange for the expense of the meeting by free will offering and personal solicitation.

We earnestly invite our Bishop to be with us during the revival campaign all of the time he can spare.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Jones.

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY.

A Great Love Feast.

A large congregation having assembled at 9 o'clock a. m., Rev. W. S. Lagrone conducted the Conference Love Feast. The congregation sang, "We Praise Thee, O God." The service was strictly devotional. Many of the brethren, including many laymen, took part in it, making appropriate talks. It was noted that in the testimonies many of the young preachers paid beautiful tributes to the older brethren who had encouraged them during the first years of their ministry. At the suggestion of Rev. S. L. Pope, the congregation sang the old hymn, with chorus, "I Am Bound for the Promised Land." (Rev. J. J. Brooks was called from the service to the telephone and was summoned to Lyon, Miss., to conduct the funeral services of Mr. W. E. Lackey.)

After many in the congregation had made talks, the Wisdom Sisters volunteered an expression of joy and faith in the Lord by singing a stanza of "Sweeter as the Years Go By."

Rev. W. N. Duncan, the pastor at Winona, requested special prayer for some afflicted ones who were deprived of the benefits of the service. Judge J. G. McGowen led in appropriate supplications.

Miss Myrtle James, a volunteer for service in the foreign field, expressed her one desire to enter upon the work. She said: "The Kansas City Training School helped me to surrender to Christ."

By request the Wisdom Sisters sang "Savior More Than Life to Me," as the preachers pledged their faith and trust in God by soaking hands with Rev. W. J. O'Bryan, who was on the floor. The congregation responded by singing, "I Love to Tell the Story."

Rev. S. M. Thames expressed a strong desire to get "closer to God, heaven, and the brethren."

Rev. W. N. Duncan, the Conference host, in behalf of the people of Winona, expressed thanks to God for the Conference and the brethren.

The Love Feast closed with a special prayer for a son for whom his mother requested prayer.

Eleven O'clock Services.

After a chant by the choir, "Praise ye the Lord," Bishop Murrah announced Hymn No. 6, "Before Jehovah's Awful Throne." After the song and the recital of the "Apostles' Creed," Rev. W. Woolard led in prayer. The [illegible] was the 14th Psalm, and the [illegible] was the 12th Chapter of [illegible], both being read by Bishop Murrah. While the offering was being made, the choir sang, "[illegible] on Nothing Less Than Jesus' Blood and Righteousness."

Bishop Murrah announced [illegible] 12th Chapter, 26th and 27th verses, and [illegible] great faith-strengthening sermon on "The Coming Glory of the New Covenant." Some of the salient remarks were as follows:

"Some thing [illegible] to pass. Some things are shaken [illegible] their very nature cannot be.

"In the realm of religious things [illegible] the world through [illegible] while there is [illegible] shaken.

"It makes no difference as to what [illegible] the white horse [illegible] respects the great heart of [illegible].

"Paul would not object [illegible] saw a tendency to make [illegible] effect be political [illegible].

"Human opinion [illegible] Truth were responsible [illegible].

"The attitude of the [illegible] of thought and investigation [illegible] that of absolute confidence. Things can be shaken let them be shaken. The Word of God stands sure.

"Religion is a necessary [illegible].

"The burning sands and [illegible] Sahara can not give up the fathom line of the declaration of a Godless soul.

"Truth is the harmonious blending of facts in their right relation. Jesus is the interpreter of facts.

"Many of the Bible [illegible] can not be accounted for.

"The eminent [illegible] God's Word will stand forever.

The Bishop then held up the Bible and said: "Precious treasure of [illegible] dear old Book. I promise [illegible] pose obligation."

"As Jesus' stable [illegible] band of disciples without an influential or political name among them, declaring that in one simple lesson pervade the entire world, and permeate society, [illegible] the new [illegible] world."

"Should Bishop [illegible] pierce made [illegible] to take of simplicity from [illegible] and burnish to course of its history, [illegible] of these unshakable truths [illegible], these [illegible] should be removed and the mountains be carried into the sea."

"Her [illegible] a Founder" was [illegible] congregation; and the [illegible] pediments, deacons, [illegible] Communion [illegible]. The entire congregation stood as witnesses while [illegible] were assuming their vows and [illegible], and the congregation was dismissed while on their knees with the apostolic benediction by Bishop Murrah.

Sunday Afternoon.

The Conference met [illegible] o'clock; [illegible] Hymn 49, "[illegible]." The Scripture lesson [illegible] D. W. Bain, and the [illegible] J. W. Lomax. [illegible] preaching preacher and the [illegible] deceased preachers [illegible] man, C. A. Ellis, [illegible] deceased.

Suitable memoirs of [illegible] were read as follows:

That of Rev. J. W. Powell by Rev. [illegible]; that of Rev. G. W. Buchman, by Rev. [illegible]; that of Rev. R. A. Ellis by Dr. J. [illegible]; that of Rev. J. R. Roberson by Rev. W. [illegible]; that of Dr. H. G. [illegible] by Rev. J. W. Lomax.

A special tribute to Bishop A. W. Wilson was [illegible] by Rev. J. W. Hale, and a remark to Major

R. W. Millsaps was read by Rev. W. W. Woollard.

Several of the brethren spoke of the life and labors of these departed ones.

The memorial session adjourned with the benediction by Rev. E. S. Lewis.

Sunday Evening.

The house was filled thirty minutes before the time for the service to begin, even the Sunday school rooms being taxed to their utmost capacity, and many were turned away.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, after the Wisdom Sisters had sung "I will Sing You a Song of that Beautiful Land," referred to the earnestness of these heaven-sent gospel singers, and their burden for the salvation of souls. The congregation expressed gratitude for their service with a contribution. The choir sang "Savior, Thy dying Love."

Bishop Murrah then appeared and asked that the candidates for elder's orders come to the chancel, whereupon, assisted by Revs. J. M. Wyatt, J. C. Park, O. W. Bradley, and T. H. Dorsey, he ordained a promising class of young men, while the congregation stood as witnesses to the imposition of hands.

Dr. W. F. McMurry then took charge and announced Hymn No. 208, "I Love thy Kingdom, Lord."

Dr. McMurry said in the course of his great address: "Bishop McTyeire said he had never heard a General Secretary speak when he seemed to have liberty. Well, he had never heard me.

"The past year has been the best year in the history of our Church Extension work. When you build God a house you are laying a foundation for civilization worth while.

"We must build in the country if we as a Church expect to hold it, or God will raise up those who will and we will lose our crown.

"Money put into churches goes ten times as far to regulate the life of the community as that put in jails and court-houses.

"The gospel of the church-house makes any community worth while to live in.

"Great business men are using the Church Extension Board as a channel for the distribution of large sums of money."

The Wisdom Sisters sang "The Church in the Wildwood," after which Dr. McMurry, at one time their pastor at Macon, Mo., paid them a high tribute. He said, "You can say all the good things you can think of about them and sign my name to it."

The service closed with the Doxology, and benediction by Dr. McMurry. Other pulpits in the city were filled by members of the Conference. Rev. J. C. Park preached at the Baptist Church at 11 a.m., and Rev. L. P. Wasson at 7 p.m. Rev. J. A. Hall preached at the Presbyterian Church in the morning; and Rev. J. E. Cunningham at night.

Sixth Day—Monday.

The Conference met at 8 a. m., with Dr. R. A. Meek in the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. C. Lester, who read the 23d Psalm and led in prayer.

The Secretary read the minutes of the Saturday afternoon session and the memorial session.

A communication was received from J. M. Carpenter, voluntarily surrendering his credentials.

The following reports were read and adopted: That of the Church Extension Board, which was presented by Rev. J. T. McCafferty; and that of the Sunday School Board, which was read by Rev. E. S. Lewis. The latter contained a number of items of interest and showed that the Sunday school work had made gratifying progress during the past year.

Rev. R. M. Evans read the report of the committee on the Spiritual Interests of the Church, which urged the importance of family altars, Sabbath observance, and the study of God's Word.

The report from the Orphans' Home was read by Rev. R. A. Tucker. The reappointment of Revs. J. B. Randolph and G. L. Lauderdale to their respective offices was requested. J. B. Randolph mentioned the purpose of the managers of the Home so to adjust matters as to be able to participate further in the benefits of the public school fund.

J. R. Bingham presented the report of the Committee on the Memphis Methodist Hospital, which set forth the purpose of those in charge of this movement to press energetically the work of securing funds for this projected institution and to open its doors as soon as practicable. Mr. J. H. Sherard addressed the Conference briefly in this connection, and in the course of his remarks he urged the brethren to raise $5000 to endow a preachers' ward, and pledged himself to give $1000 of this amount. On motion, it was resolved to appoint a committee of three to secure the other $4000 of this fund, and the Chair placed on this committee Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, and Rev. J. T. McCafferty.

Rev. A. S. Raper read the report of the Committee on District Conference Records, which was adopted.

Rev. W. L. Duren submitted the report of the Board of Missions, which emphasized the need of a purposeful leadership. The week preceding Easter is set apart as a week of prayer. The reappointment of Revs. J. A. Bowen and J. H. Bell as Conference Evangelists was recommended. J. H. Brooks read the treasurer's report, after which Rev. W. L. Duren addressed the Conference, defining the purposes of the Board of Missions as being to carry out the letter of the law, and as not desiring any discrimination against other boards in favor of the Board of Missions.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb read the report of the Board of Education, which showed this feature of the work to be in a wholesome condition.

The appointment of Rev. T. M. Brownlee as Commissioner for Greneda College was recommended, Rev. B. P. Jaco not desiring to continue longer in that capacity. The report contained commendations of Rev. J. R. Countiss and B. P. Jaco.

The second Sunday in April was designated as Vocational Day, when every preacher is requested to preach upon the subject of the call to the ministry, and to take up a collection for ministerial education.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, then addressed the Conference. He said, "Millsaps College is the Church at work in one of its departments. There is a rising sentiment in favor of Christian education. There is a necessity for the culture of character rather than the development of skill."

Dr. Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, was next presented and addressed the Conference in the interest of this great Southern Methodist institution. He said: "It is forever the property of the M. E. Church, South. This is the condition on which Mr. Asa Candler's magnificent donation for the founding of the institution was made. We have a Christ-like man at the head of the Law Department. Rev. D. W. Babb had contributed the largest sum given by any member of the North Mississippi Conference, the amount being $250, and was given a 'Founder's Certificate.' One man in Georgia has contributed all the polished marble needed for the construction of the university buildings."

President J. R. Countiss, in his characteristic, concise manner, spoke concerning Grenada College, which is the only piece of property wholly owned by the North Mississippi Conference. He emphasized the purposes of the Trustees and President to meet the various demands of the public for a greater college, and heartily commended the labors and success of the retiring Commissioner, Rev. B. P. Jaco.

Bishop Murrah took the chair.

Rev. J. W. Bell requested the reference of the name of A. W. Langley to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. Rev. W. W. Mitchell also requested that the name of W. J. O'Bryant be referred to the same committee for a like relation. Bro. O'Bryant said he had served many hard appointments, but was asking to-day for the hardest appointment he had ever received. The appreciation by the Conference of Brother O'Bryant was expressed by a contribution of more than $100.

Rev. W. M. Young read the report of the Evangelistic Committee, commending the work of Revs. J. A. Bowen and J. H. Bell and requesting their reappointment as Conference Evangelists. They have had over 2000 conversions during the year. The report recommended that revivals be held in the winter and early spring. Special mention was made of Local Evangelists W. M. McIntosh and W. B. Bass, and the valuable service which they had rendered.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb read the report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals. Mention was made of the encouraging condition of the Advocate's affairs as was developed at the late meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Dr. Meek made brief remarks, thanking the brethren for their support of the paper and expressing appreciation of the work of the Publisher, Brother Chalmers.

Dr. J. W. Boswell, formerly Editor of the Advocate, made a strong plea for the New Orleans Christian Advocate on the merits of the paper. Dr. Boswell said: "It has never had a stancher supporter of our Methodist doctrines and polity than Dr. Meek. He stands for the M. E. Church, South." Bishop Murrah also called attention to the strong editorial conduct of the paper.

Oxford was chosen as the place for the next meeting of the Annual Conference.

Rev. Olin Ray read the report of the Epworth League Board, which asked for a hearty co-operation on the part of pastors with the Board.

Rev. H. G. Roberts read a good report from the Committee on Sabbath Observance.

Rev. W. L. Duren tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Trustees of Grenada College. Rev. R. A. Tucker was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Brother Duren's resignation.

Rev. W. C. Galceran read the report of the Committee on Conference Relations.

A resolution of thanks was offered by Rev. W. D. Wendel, in which mention was made of the splendid hospitality dispensed by the people of Winona, and appreciation was expressed of the courtesies extended by the railroads and newspapers, and of the services of the Wisdom Sisters, the choir, the Bishop and Secretary, and all others who had contributed to the success of the Conference. These resolutions were adopted by a rising vote.

Bishop Murrah called the questions pertaining to the statistics of the Conference, which were answered by the Statistical Secretary.

Bishop Murrah announced the Hymn: "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" which the congregation sung with earnestness and fervor, after which Rev. John Ritchey led in prayer.

The Bishop then called Question 53, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" following which the appointments were read.

Bishop Murrah pronounced the benediction and the Conference stood adjourned.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By the Editor.

Winona entertained the Conference most delightfully, and Brother Duncan made an admirable host. We did not hear a syllable of complaint from any quarter.

The sermon on Thanksgiving Day, which was preached by Dr. Harry Howard of the Candler School of Theology, was a scholarly and unusually able deliverance. Dr. Howard is a speaker of much force and is fast becoming one of the really strong men of the Church.

Dr. John W. Boswell seemed to be perfectly at home among the brethren, who gave him an enthusiastic reception. He spoke a number of times, and, as is usual with him, his utterances were incisive and went straight to the mark. There is no trace of alloy about this noble veteran—he is pure gold. One could not think of any concealment or any kind of misdirection in connection with him. Would that there were more men like him!

The North Mississippi Conference is fortunate in having so choice a group of evangelists. Brother Bowen and Brother Bell had both had notably successful years, having led many precious souls into the Kingdom, and Rev. W. M. McIntosh, who is in the local ranks, stated that many of his meetings had developed scenes of extraordinary power. Brother McIntosh preached one afternoon during the Conference and those in attendance sat together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.

Brother and Sister Thames, who now reside in Jackson, were present at the Conference and were shown many courtesies by the people of Winona, among whom they formerly lived. We were glad to see them looking so well. Another honored veteran who added to the pleasure of the occasion by his presence was Dr. T. C. Wier of Starkville. We were also pleased to note the attendance of Brother and Sister H. C. Morehead of Sidon, who appeared to take a deep interest in all that was going on.

We do not know of a Conference anywhere which has in it a more promising body of young men than the North Mississippi Conference. Seven were admitted on trial, and all of the undergraduate classes seemed to make a good showing as to the examinations. There appeared to be a decided improvement in this respect over last year. We predict that the Methodists of North Mississippi are going to have in the coming years a better grade of preaching than they have hitherto enjoyed.

We were happy to note frequently the presence of Captain D. L. Sweatman, of Winona, in the Conference room and to observe that time seems to have dealt kindly with him. Captain Sweatman has had a highly creditable career as a lawyer, and he has long been an ardent and devoted Southern Methodist. That princely Christian gentlemen, Colonel J. G. Hamilton of Durant, was also on hand to witness the Conference proceedings. Though advanced in years, he is still youthful and sunny in spirit, and a nobler face than his one would have to search far to find.

A much appreciated visitor at the Conference was Rev. T. W. Lewis, the brilliant pastor of St. John's Church, Memphis, who was cordially greeted on every side. We were interested to learn that Brother Lewis is thoroughly sound on the subject of Methodist union, and that when the "Saratogaistic" resolutions that were adopted at Junaluska last summer were pending he openly lifted up his voice against them. In this connection, may we be permitted to say that, though his name appeared affixed to them, Bishop Murrah did not sign that pronouncement. He was announced as a member of the Committee on Resolutions, but did not remain at Junaluska long enough to serve on it, and did not see the paper that was sent out until it appeared in the public prints. Bishop Murrah is now on the Joint Commission, having succeeded Bishop Wilson, and we think it is well enough to let the above stated fact be known.

The Publisher of the Advocate was entertained in the charming home of Mr. Henry Hart, his associate guests being Rev. J. M. Wyatt of Booneville and Dr. W. T. Johnson of Greenwood. It scarcely needs to be said that there was good fellowship in that company. Brother Chalmers speaks in terms of high appreciation of the generous hospitality of which he was the recipient.

No better address was made to the Conference than the one that was delivered by Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, who represents a great cause and whose heart is evidently in his work. Brother Selby is a very impressive speaker. He has a becoming dignity, a splendid voice, and enough fervor to catch and hold the attention of an audience. He is already quite up to "connectional size," and there is no telling "whst-unto" he may grow. Let the brethren open their pulpits to this capable representative of our new University. He does not ask them to guarantee him contributions from their congregations, but he does ask for a chance to be heard.

Two laymen who were specially attentive to the work of the Conference were Judge E. V. Hughston, of Greenwood, and Mr. J. H. Sherard, of Sherard. The former is a member of the Board of Education and he never missed a single session of that body. He made an earnest speech in favor of having the Conference and District Lay Leaders made ex-officio members of the Annual Conference, and was keenly alert to all the Conference proceedings. Brother Sherard carries our Orphans' Home work and the interests of the Memphis Hospital continually on his heart, and never misses an opportunity to plead for these institutions. When the Hospital report was under consideration he urged the ministers to raise $5000 to provide a preachers' ward therein, and offered to give $1000 of this amount. A splendid benefaction!

At the suggestion of its Board of Education, the Conference named the second Sunday in April as "Vocation Day," when every pastor will be expected to preach on "The Call to the Ministry," and take up a collection for ministerial education. The Board of Education will likely prepare and distribute programs for this occasion and in every other possible way emphasize its importance. The object in view is to try to provide funds to assist needy young preachers to prepare themselves for their life work. It is not probable that the Church could invest money in any cause that would yield larger returns than this.

The educational institutions in Mississippi with which the Conference is connected were strongly represented. Rev. J. R. Countiss spoke at some length of the situation at Grenada, setting forth the character of work being done there and outlining the future plans of those in charge of its affairs. Millsaps College had two representatives on the ground, Dr. A. F. Watkins and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, both of whom had something to say concerning its needs and the service which it is rendering. Never was the outlook for these two schools so bright as it is to-day.

Rev. B. P. Jaco, the Commissioner for Grenada College, made a good report. The amount secured in the campaign in which he had been the leader was more than $37,000, of which something over $12,000 was in cash. Brother Jaco declined to continue longer in this capacity, and has been succeeded by Rev. T. M. Brownlee, who is one of the bright and resourceful young men of the Conference. Let the brethren open the way for the new Commissioner and give him their hearty co-operation. He represents a worthy cause and well deserves such assistance.

One of the interesting side features of the Conference was the presentation of a handsome gold watch to Rev. H. S. Spragins, who had finished a quadrennium of service as presiding elder of the Greenville District, this gift being made by the pastors and other friends in the charges of which Brother Spragins had had the oversight. This interesting event took place at the Wisteria Hotel, with Rev. J. T. Lewis making the presentation speech. Brother Spragins "countered," so to speak, on the brethren, by making each of the preachers in his district a present of a beautiful morocco-bound copy of The Methodist Hymnal with his name printed upon it in gilt letters. The editor of the Advocate, who holds his membership in the Greenville District, was included in this highly favored list. It is safe to say that no man has ever served the great Delta District of North Mississippi who left behind a better record or more fragrant memories than this gifted son of Mississippi, who has now been appropriated by the city of Memphis.

The following brethren, not elsewhere mentioned, represented important interests outside of the Conference, and did it well: Rev. C. W. Crisler, the Seashore Divinity School; Rev. J. R. Stewart, the Superannuate Endowment Fund; Rev. H. M. Ellis, the Memphis Methodist Hospital; Rev. Charles D. Bulla, the General Sunday School Board; Dr. W. F. McMurry, the General Board of Church Extension; Rev. H. C. Tucker, the American Bible Society.

We would not undertake to give anything like a full list of the visitors in attendance upon the Conference, but we write down hurriedly the following whom we chanced to see: Judge Percy Bell, Greenville; Dr. and Mrs. T. L. Wilburn, Kilmichael; Mrs. T. H. Bingham and daughter, Carrollton; Mrs. Hart, McAnerny; Mrs. S. C. Taylor, Mrs. Howell, and Dr. and Mrs. Sparkman, Cleveland; Mrs. Frank Jones, Greenwood; Mr. John McRae and Mrs. R. P. Johnson, Acona; Mrs. Dr. Howard and Mrs. W. H. Stokes, Durant; Mr. J. W. Wyatt, Memphis, Dr. Minor, Hollywood; Mr. Jack Wilson, Grenada.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of Corinth, Miss., in referring to the migration of Mississippians to Memphis, made quite a facetious speech on the opening day of the Conference, which was thus in part set down by Rev. E. H. Cunningham, the efficient reporter for the Commercial Appeal: "Why, Mississippi furnished Memphis a mayor—grown in Holly Springs. We furnished her Rev. S. A. Steel, Rev. E. B. Ramsey, Rev. J. W. Lowrance, Rev. R. A. Clark, and Rev. T. W. Lewis, and we have given the Memphians the only Bishop that they have ever had. And now they have come down here and taken away our beloved P. S. Spragins. If they keep this thing up, they will after awhile get hold of some of our best men."

Dr. J. W. Boswell made an interesting speech in behalf of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, strongly commending its present editorial policy. The Editor knows of no man in the Church whose favorable opinion he would more highly appreciate than that of Dr. Boswell. In the course of his remarks, the Doctor pleasantly referred to the fact that we have sometimes let the words, "district superintendent," appear in our columns and expressed his disapproval of this designation. We would be quite as much opposed to doing away with the term, "presiding elder," as would Dr. Boswell, and when we have used the term, "district superintendent," it has been where our own designation for this officer had just preceded, our object being to avoid a lack of euphony in our writing. It is difficult to do this when there are no synonyms or substitutive words that can be pressed into service. We hope that this assurance of our soundness on this question will satisfy our honored friend.

Dear Dr. Meek: It was with especial pleasure that I received my appointment for the fourth year to this good church and people. Our Board of Stewards did two things at their meeting last night worthy of mention: (1) They raised the pastor's salary $100; (2) they readily and heartily agreed to an "Every member canvass" for missions, the canvass to be taken Sunday, December 31. We are expecting most satisfactory results from that canvass. I really wish that this note would act as a suggestion to many of our good laymen who compose the official boards of our churches.

It is stated that of 255 women candidates for county offices in Kansas, 151 were victorious in the recent election. It is quite obvious that those who imagine that women may be given the ballot and yet kept from becoming office-seekers are very much mistaken.

Captain Joseph T. Jones, who had done so much for the development of the coast section of Mississippi, and who was President of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad and of the Gulf Coast Traction Company, died in Buffalo, N. Y., on December 6. He was a public-spirited and largely useful citizen and was supposed to be worth several million dollars. His decease is widely mourned.

Billy Sunday is conducting a revival meeting in Boston, which is steadily deepening and widening in interest. People are reported to be coming from various parts of New England to hear his stirring messages.

Bishop J. H. McCoy and Miss Mary N. Moore, former President of the Athens (Ala.) Woman's College, were announced to be married in Gadsden, Ala., on December 2. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the distinguished bride and groom.

Dr. Andrew Gillies, one of the most effective pastors in the Methodist Episcopal Church, who for some time has been in an impaired state of health, has accepted the Chair of Homiletics in the Boston University School of Theology. He will not, however, enter upon the duties of this position until the fall of 1917.

We are informed that the mortgage on the great building erected by our Trinity congregation in Los Angeles has been foreclosed and that the property has passed into other hands. The Trinity congregation, however, is still worshiping in the auditorium of this fine structure, paying for the use thereof an annual rental of $5000. Rev. C. C. Selecman is reported to be still preaching to large audiences.

In a late issue The Presbyterian Journal (New Orleans) says: "Some of our brethren who are considering the question of the unification of the Methodist Churches argue the case from the movement in Canada looking towards the same process there. They are probably not aware of all that is going on in Canada. From present indications, a very strong minority will oppose the coming together of the different bodies which have had the matter in hand. The opposition is so decided that there is likelihood, if the measure be carried out, that, instead of making fewer denominations, it will result in simply adding another to those already established there. It sounds very pretty to say that our Canadian neighbors are about to subordinate their great differences to the essential unity of all true believers in Christ. They are not likely to do this. There is no lesson in Christian unity ready just yet in the Dominion."

WHY MEN ARE NOT ENTERING THE MINISTRY.

We are delighted to note an awakening interest in ministerial supply. Likely a felt need has something to do with it. Anyhow, it is obtaining.

The direct question, "Why men are not entering the ministry?" is being asked and various answers are being given to it:

1. The commercialism of this age is offered as one answer to it. By commercialism we are to understand money-making, property-owning, enlarged possessions, etc.; but we must confess that we believe honestly that that has very little to do with the call to the ministry or a response to the call to the same. In truth, the ministry is more inviting to commercial spirits now than ever before, should we take commercialism as a motive in the matter. Preachers are paid more and have better houses and better furnished houses than at any other period in the history of the Church; and, besides, the houses and furniture are all free of charge. All things considered, there are very few preachers in the ministry (if any) who are not receiving more in material things than they would if they were thrown out on their own resources in the struggles of the cold, selfish, competing world to do honest and honorable businesses.

2. Another answer is that greater preparation is required of the ministry than formerly; but in this answer it seems to be forgotten that greater preparations are being demanded in nearly every department of life's activities than ever before. Diplomas from high schools and the most reputable colleges are being required of applicants for positions in business, etc., and if they can not produce them, their applications are not considered at all.

3. Another answer given is, that more preaching on the call to the ministry is needed. Preaching on the call to the ministry will not hurt any one likely, if it is properly done and at the right time and place; but still that may be done, and really it is being done more than in the past, and yet the ministerial ranks are not being properly supplied.

4. Another answer given is, that the Church is not praying for men to be called to the ministry. The Church is praying for them to be called, and yet they are not called.

We might continue with answers to this question, and yet it would not be answered; and hence another question arises, What is its answer? Its answer is this: The Church is losing its spirituality, and, of course, its power with the Trinity. The ministry as well as the laity is losing spiritually, and hence in power, too. Education and finances have so engrossed it that there is little or no place for spirituality. The Churches are seeking the gifted and cultured preachers more for a display and entertainment than for spirituality, and hence the proper summation of the whole matter of ministerial depletion is that it is due solely to lost spirituality, and that, therefore, the Churches are lacking in suitable material for the ministry. God would call, but the Churches have not brought forth the spiritual, God-fearing sons, suitable for the call. They have not those suitable for God's call that would say: "Lord, here am I, send me," or as Paul said: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." (1 Cor. 9:16.) To change this condition, let the ministry and laity therefore consecrate themselves to God as required and live the holy and diligent life commanded. When this is done, right things will happen among ministers and laymen. God will call and there will be responses to his calls, for there will be proper ones to call, and hence responses.

AFTER CONFERENCE.

(To the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.)

It is lonely since they left,
But their influence lingers yet;
And the blessings that they brought,
We never shall forget.

Their happy beaming faces,
Aglow with love Divine,
Chased away the shadows
And caused the sun to shine.

Some have humble circuits,
In which to serve their Lord;
Others to larger places
Are sent to preach the Word.

But, no matter where they labor—
In stations large or small;
If only they are faithful
The Lord rewards them all.

Conference brings sadness, too;
Not all smiles, but sighs,
For some have been transferred,
And stationed in the skies,

And perhaps the humblest one,
Who on earth ne'er won renown,
In heaven now is wearing
The brightest starry crown.

And when all are gathered home,
And the harvest song they sing,
These humble circuit riders
The brightest sheaves will bring.

"A NEW FUNCTION OF THE CHURCH PRESS."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Southern Methodism's most ably edited weekly, in its issue of November 10, contained the following editorial utterance, which we think is worth reproducing:

"We have been for many years a rather constant reader of the press of our Church, but not until the last few weeks, so far as we recall, have we ever seen in any paper of our Church an effort to disparage the influence of the address of the College of Bishops to the Church. When our General Superintendents do what the Discipline requires them to do, and are criticised, practically censured in the Church press for it, we have verily come to a time when the Church press is assuming a function entirely new to Southern Methodists. If our General Superintendents, coming together as they do, from all parts of the connection, cannot see the peril of the Church, it is difficult to know what men among us can foresee danger or tell the Church of it."

A NUTTING SONG.

Fannie Fernald Painter.

Did you ever go a-nutting
When the frost was in the air,
When the autumn leaves were falling
Red and glowing everywhere,
When the goldenrod was lighting
Every roadside, hill, and vale,
When the aster's dainty sweetness
Peeped from out each sunny dale?

Did you ever go a-nutting
When the trees were loaded down
With a wealth of burrs, their lining
Cradling chestnuts plump and brown?
Did you ever "thrash the branches"
Till their riches fell like rain?
O, if you have been a-nutting,
Let these memories throng your brain.

THE BOY WHO LIKED TO READ.

Some more than a century ago, or, to be exact, in the fall of the year that George Washington completed the first year of his first term in the Presidency, two young lads of ten and eight, respectively, were sent from their father's house in Salisbury, N. H., to "Hoyt's Store" at the "corner" to buy some groceries that the family stood in need of.

It was a cool, frosty morning in the last of October, but both boys were barefooted, and they trudged along the country road, stopping now and then to throw a stone at a chipmunk they saw sitting on the fence, or to pick a few belated berries that hung from the bushes along the way. They made no long halts, however, and in little more than an hour's time they were entering the little store at the "corner."

The store was kept by a Mr. Holt, who, besides being a storekeeper, also kept the district school in the winter. He knew the two boys quite well, for they had been among his pupils the preceding season. He was waiting upon a customer as they entered, and the lads busied themselves taking an inventory of the stock of goods, which to them seemed quite wonderful.

"Good morning, boys," said the proprietor at last. "How's your father, the Squire, and what are you going to buy this morning?"

"Father is well as usual," answered the elder boy, "and he has sent us to get four pounds of salt, a half-pound of tea, an ounce of pepper, a pound of gunpowder and two pounds of shot, and he says he will draw you a cord of wood as soon as there is a fall of snow."

"You can tell the Squire he needn't worry about the wood," said the merchant. "I suppose you will both attend school this winter."

"I shall come half of the time and Daniel will come the rest of the time."

"That's right; and you, Daniel, I hope you have not forgotten what you learned last winter."

The boy's unusually dark eyes flashed with a sudden brightness.

"Oh, no, sir; I have ciphered to long division, read the Bible half through."

"That is very good, my lad. Keep on and perhaps you may teach school some day, though you will never be much of a hand at setting copy. Ezekiel is a much better penman than you are."

"I can improve," said Daniel, quietly.

"That you can, and so can we all," declared the storekeeper, encouragingly. "And now is there anything else?"

He had measured the commodities enumerated and had them done up in nice little packages for the boys to take home.

Daniel was eyeing a cotton pocket handkerchief which hung on a line above the counter and seemed to have something written upon it.

In those days, when books and papers were comparatively rare and difficult to obtain, it was more or less customary to combine literature with homely usefulness by printing reading matter of some kind on cheap cotton handkerchiefs.

"What kind of a story is printed on that handkerchief?" he inquired, indicating the article.

"It is the Constitution of the United States," replied the storekeeper, "the government we live under, you know. Would you like it?"

Daniel began to feel in his pockets. "What's the price?" he asked.

"Twenty-five cents."

Now the boy had just a silver quarter in his pocket, which he had earned that fall by helping a neighbor pick potatoes, and he had thought to keep it till the next July Fourth to buy gunpowder with; but the handkerchief with its printed legend was too great a temptation. He had but an indefinite idea of what the government was, and he thought he would like to know more about it.

He exchanged the precious coin for the handkerchief, and very carefully stored it away in his jacket pocket.

"It is a good purchase," said Master Hoyt, approvingly. "Study it and learn it, and you will be the better man for it."

"Yes, sir," returned Daniel, "I will try to remember it, though it looks pretty hard."

The two boys trudged home with their purchases, Daniel every now and then taking out his latest acquisition to scan the printed words. But he had no time really to study it until evening arrived, and the family gathered around the friendly blaze of the open fireplace. Then in the flickering light of a huge pine log the pioneer boy brought out his precious treasure.

"What have you there, my son?" asked his father, noting the lad's studiousness.

"It is a handkerchief, Father, with the Constitution of the United States printed on it."

"Dan spent all his money for it at Hoyt's store this morning," volunteered Ezekiel, in explanation.

"Well, well, he might have done worse," declared his father, gravely. "It will do him no harm to read the Constitution of his country."

With this assurance of his father's approval, the boy devoted himself to the reading of that famous document of which in after years he was to become the stanch supporter and defender. For this pioneer boy grew up to be one of the foremost men of his day, and left a name and fame to which all patriotic Americans will point with pride for all coming time.

The slender little boy, with the swarthy face and the dark, burning eyes, was Daniel Webster, who is known to us as the "Expounder of the Constitution." — Congregationalist and Christian World.

HER HAND IN CHRIST'S.

A little girl lay on her death-bed. She had been suffering from a sad and painful disease. The doctors had tried all they could to cure her, but in vain. And now they had given her up. They could do no more for her. Not long before, this dear child's step had been as light, her face as bright, and her heart as joyous as those of any of her companions. But now her body was racked with pain, death was laying his cold hand upon her. Her loving father sat by her bedside, watching the look of pain on the pale face of his suffering child.

"Nannie dear," he said, with quivering lip, and his eyes filled with tears, "do you feel sad at the thought of dying?"

"No, dear papa," she replied, as a sweet smile lighted up her dying face, "my hand is all the while in the hand of Jesus', and he will not let it go."

How beautiful this was! And how tender and loving it was in Jesus to come near in this way to the dear child when she was dying, and take all her fear away by making her feel that he was holding her hand in his, and would not let it go. —The Presbyterian.

GOOD EVIDENCE.

One day a teacher was having a first-grade class in physiology. She asked them if they knew that there was a burning fire in the body all of the time. One little girl spoke up and said:

"Yes'm: when it is a cold day I can see the smoke."—National Monthly.

CHURCH EXTENSION AND THE TWO METHODISMS.

A comparative statement of the work of Church Extension by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and her big sister, the Methodist Episcopal Church, may interest our people, and particularly at this time when no little is being thought, said and done upon the subject of the unification of American Methodism.

The figures given below, so far as they refer to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are taken from the Church Extension Hand Book of 1916, and the item of "Special Contributions" mentioned does not include receipts on refunding bonds and some miscellaneous sundries.

The facts and figures concerning the Methodist Episcopal Church are taken from the official report of the meeting of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension held in Philadelphia, November 16-18, 1916, and published in the Christian Advocate, New York, November 23, 1916.

The figures from both Churches cover the period of their last fiscal years, that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ending March 31, 1916, and that of the Methodist Episcopal Church, October 31, 1916.

I.

Receipts from Conference collections, M. E. Church, South	$205,112.41
Receipts from Conference collections, M. E. Church	191,553.69
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church, South	$ 13,558.72

II.

Special contributions, M. E. Church, South	$ 56,968.78
Special contributions, M. E. Church	33,528.57
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church, South	$ 23,440.21

III.

Contribution to the Loan Fund Capital, M. E. Church, South	$118,286.49
Contribution to the Loan Fund Capital, M. E. Church	73,080.37
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church, South	$ 45,206.12

IV.

Total contributions to Donation and Loan Funds, M. E. Church, South	$380,367.68
Total contributions to Donation and Loan Funds, M. E. Church	298,162.63
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church, South	$ 82,205.05

V.

Total Loans made during the year, M. E. Church, South	$150,750.10
Total Loans made during the year, M. E. Church	123,425.03
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church, South	$ 27,325.07

VI.

Loan Fund Capital at close of year, M. E. Church, South	$ 804,629.08
Loan Fund Capital at close of year, M. E. Church	1,835,830.29
Difference in favor of the M. E. Church	$1,031,201.21

If our folks will give us the one million dollars necessary to make our Loan Fund Capital equal to that of our big sister, we will do business that will cause the saints to "sit up and take notice."

"MY SOUL BE ON THY GUARD."

In the moral and religious realm men possessing self-confidence, and hence feeling self-sufficient, are the first to fall. They build their character upon the treacherous sand of self-righteousness instead of humbly laying the foundation of it upon Christ Jesus, the Rock of every man's salvation, and when the testing time comes, as it must surely do, they fall, and great is their fall. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." This is one of the well established truths contained in the Bible which has been exemplified in actual life many times both before and since the Apostle Paul gave it expression. The temptations that confront a person in the world to-day are so multifarious that it is never wise for him to boast proudly in word or deed that it is impossible for him to descend from his lofty estate in the sight of God and of men to one of shame and degradation, thereby losing even his own self-respect. It is foolish for one blindly to believe that he can stand in his own strength against sin. Many who were not weaklings either mentally or physically have thought the same way about this matter, and have gone through life, as it were, scorning the help of the Almighty. They made shipwrecks of life, finding out when it was too late that they were wrong. Peter declaring one moment that he would not deny his Lord and doing it the next is a striking example of the great weakness of human nature when left unaided by the power of God. In the beginning of his career as a disciple of Christ, Judas probably never thought of betraying his Master. Men don't become bad in a day, but, as they go by, the days, the weeks, the months, and the years tell the sad story of their lives of sin. No man starts out doing things that are questionable thinking that he will go far enough for harm to come to him. No, no, he feels that he can go just so far and no further. Too often however, one can not retrace his steps. He who leans over the precipice often loses his balance, and, being unable to recover it, falls to the fatal depths below.

NEED FOR MORE EXACTNESS.

The Nashville Christian Advocate of December 7, says:

"The North Mississippi Conference adopted resolutions declaring for the unification of Methodism."

"Resolutions in favor of the unification of Methodism were adopted by the Alabama Conference."

Are not these statements, thus unqualified, liable to mislead the public who do not see the organs of these Conferences? As a matter of fact, as we showed last week, the North Mississippi Conference endorsed the action of our last General Conference concerning unification and did not go at all beyond that sentiment. It did not declare for unification. The resolutions adopted by the Alabama Conference were as follows:

"Whereas, The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the session of 1914 passed resolutions authorizing the formation of the Joint Commission on Federation or Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; looking to unification of these two great branches of Episcopal Methodism; and

"Whereas, The General Conference of the Methodist Church, in the session of 1916, passed resolutions on unification differing from the resolutions passed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and

"Whereas, The 28th day of December has been appointed as the time of the meeting of the Commission, and

"Whereas, A call has gone out to our Church to be in prayer for Divine guidance of the Joint Commission; therefore,

"Reseloved first, That we as a conference heartily endorse the action of our General Conference, and are in sympathy with the terms of the resolutions adopted by the same.

"Resolved second, That we call upon our people and preachers to take this matter to God in earnest prayer, especially during the time the Joint Commission is in session."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Rayne Memorial Church of this city will be in the care of Dr. George S. Sexton until a pastor is secured for it.

Brethren who have been assigned to new appointments should write the office where they desire to have the Advocate sent, giving both their old and new addresses.

Dr. J. M. Blume, of Castor, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated visit last Saturday afternoon. He is doing some postgraduate work in the Tulane Medical College.

The following was the vote of the Alabama Conference on the question of making Lay Leaders ex officio members of the Annual Conferences: For the proposal, 0; against it, 171.

Bishop W. R. Lambuth wishes to secure two preachers for the Northwest—one for St. Paul's, Butte, Mont., and one for Willow Creek, Mont. Applicants may address him at Oakdale, Cal.

Read the statement concerning the Louisiana Evangelistic Campaign which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. We hope soon to see revival fires ablaze all over the Pelican State.

A North Mississippi physician renews his subscription, and adds $3.50 for our "Helping Fund." He requests us not to mention his name, however. We highly appreciate this generous assistance.

At the late meeting of the Little Rock Conference, Rev. N. G. Augustus was appointed to Lake Village, Ark. We congratulate the people there upon having secured the services of so scholarly and able a minister.

Rev. R. H. Harper, the accomplished pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of this city, has been heartily received for his fourth year. Brother Harper is one of the most gifted young men in the Louisiana Conference.

A note from Rev. N. E. Joyner, bearing date of December 7, stated that he and his family had reached Lake Charles safely, and that he was already at work." It scarcely needs to be said that these itinerants were given a warm welcome.

Dr. Theo. Copeland has been changed from Central Church, Hot Springs, Ark., to Lakeside Church, Pine Bluff. The Hot Springs New Era, in an editorial of some length, pays a high tribute to Dr Copeland's work in the city which he is leaving.

We are indebted to Rev. W. W. Hopper, of Mayersville, Miss., for some good work in behalf of the Advocate and for kindly words of commendation. Brother Hopper lives close to the Master and is an able expositor of the Word. May his bow long abide in strength!

Rev J. A. Biffle, pastor of the Rudora (Miss.) charge, says: "We have bought a home at Horn Lake for a parsonage, and we will move there at once." This means that Horn Lake will hereafter be Brother Biffle's address. The acquirement of this property is a good beginning of the new Conference year.

The proposition to make District and Conference Lay Leaders ex officio members of the Annual Conferences has evidently been defeated. The Nashville Methodist News Bureau declares that it will not receive a majority vote in the Conferences, to say nothing of the three-fourths vote necessary for its adoption.

Rev. A. P. Vaughan was in his pulpit at the Carrollton Church this city, last Sunday and made an excellent beginning. A sacred concert will be given in this church on Monday, December 18, beginning at 8:15 o'clock p.m. The program, which has been carefully prepared, will be rendered by the choir and other well-known local musicians, and the occasion promises to be one of much interest. The general public is invited.

Have you renewed your subscription to the Advocate? If not you would do well to do so, as the Publisher intends to place our paper on practically a cash basis. We are going to try to make ours the livest periodical in Southern Methodism during the next twelve months, and you will not want to miss a copy. The Advocate would serve well for a Christmas present. Why not send it to some of your friends for that purpose?

Rev. A. Inman Townsley passed through New Orleans on Friday, December 8, en route to his new charge, Bogalusa. He had preached there on the preceding Sabbath, where he made a fine impression. He took 7 members into the Church in this initial service of his pastorate. Mrs. Townsley and the children are at present spending a few days with relatives in New Orleans, after which they will join Brother Townsley at their new home.

We extract the following from a note from Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District: "Rev. J. L. Evans, recently appointed to the Wilson charge, was married to Miss Sophie Kemp of Hammond, on December 4, at 7:30 p.m. It was my pleasure to officiate. Brother Evans will reach his new appointment on Thursday, Dec. 14." We extend to the bride and groom our hearty congratulations and wish them a large measure of happiness.

A letter from Bishop Hoss, written from Battle Creek, Mich., a few days ago, stated that Mrs. Hoss seemed considerably improved, but that he himself lacked much of being well. The Bishop expects to remain at Battle Creek for a couple of weeks longer, and then to go from there to the meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification in Baltimore on December 28. He stated that he intends, God willing, to visit Louisiana again in the late winter.

Do not overlook Dr. McMurry's comparison of our Church Extension work with that of the Methodist Episcopal Church. As will be seen, we are outstripping our big sister. Those who are given to imagining that Southern Methodism is a trailing organization are specially invited to put on their spectacles and view carefully these figures. The truth is, there is no Church in Christendom that is giving a better account of itself in the Master's work than ours.

Under date of December 8, Rev. W. W. Jones, of Lula, Miss., writes: "We are at home and are glad that we do not have to move. We should have regretted to miss the hearty welcome back that has been given us here. Taking the charge as a whole, these are the most agreeable people that I have ever worked among, and I have served some capital folks, too." Brother Jones is, indeed, fortunate. It is a great privilege to be in the Greenville District, and, moreover, he is near Moon Lake, the angler's paradise.

THE DESIRE OF BISHOP WILSON'S FAMILY.

(From the Baltimore Southern Methodist.)

It was the desire and purpose of Bishop Wilson's family and intimate friends to have those who had been closest and dearest to him in personal and official relations (associates in his College of Bishops, and old men in the Baltimore Conference) to speak beside his bier and at the church, and they were sadly disappointed that so few of those classes could reach Baltimore in time for the funeral services; for it was felt that the tributes of these bound to him by such tender and intimate ties would give to his life just the interpretation the great Bishop would have wished. While grateful for the tributes paid by those who spoke, his family and friends wish those who would have spoken and could not, to know that the sound of their voices and their interpretation of his life were longed for and missed by those who knew him best.

FROM BILOXI.

Dear Brother Meek: We began a protracted meeting on the 5th of November, with Brother C. A. Klein, of Nashville, Tenn., as preacher, Mr. S. H. Renshaw, of Detroit, Mich., as leader of the music, and Mr. Glenn Grace, of Bloomington, Ind., as pianist. They make a strong team and a very pleasant bunch of men to have in your home and community. We had a splendid meeting, which closed on November 26.

Brother Klein is a man of prayer and great faith and in his preaching does not excuse or modify sin as he finds it. Some of our evangelists do surface dressing, others do deep plowing; but I believe in comparison that Brother Klein does real subsoiling. As a result of his insisting upon men and women living strictly up to both the spirit and the letter of the law, a great many people criticise him, and some will not stay with him through his meetings; but for those who are really in earnest and want to know the truth and are anxious to live it, he certainly will do them good.

The visible results of the meeting were not as great as we had expected, though our church has been wonderfully helped and several members were added to the roll; also a greater number are testifying and praying in public than had been doing so before.

We have had two splendid meetings this year. The first one in February and March, led by Brother Dan E. Kelly, our Conference Evangelist, and the last one by Brother Klein. We are very grateful, indeed, that we were permitted to have the services of these two splendid workers and the result of their prayers, sermons, and labors with us are very much in evidence. We bid them God speed, and pray that an opportunity may be given us in the future to use them again.

H. F. TOLLE.

THEIR APPRECIATION SHOWN.

The meetings of the Methodist Preachers' Association of Jackson, held each week at the Galloway Memorial Church, have always been full of interest, but the meeting this week, held Wednesday afternoon, was especially so.

The chairman of the association, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, has served his quadrennium as presiding elder of the Jackson District, and, as the Annual Conference will convene next Wednesday, this was his last meeting with the preachers in this capacity. And it was a very pleasant surprise to him, after the business session was over, when the Secretary, Rev. Jas. S. Duke, rose to a point of personal privilege, and in a few well chosen words, presented him with a handsome suit of clothes, the gift of the preachers of the Jackson District.

In accepting this token of their love and esteem, Brother Hardin spoke with deep emotion of the loyalty and spirit of co-operation of the preachers, commending them for their devotion to the work of the Church. The members of the Association who were present then spoke briefly of their appreciation of Brother Hardin's labors, and the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, who has been the very efficient, earnest, faithful and attentive presiding elder of this, the Jackson District, for the past four years, esteemed and beloved by pastors and people, will leave us for some other field of labor, be it

Resolved (1), That we regret to lose his delightful fellowship, his wise leadership, his courteous control of men and measures, the influence of his dignity, and his pure and pious example.

Resolved (2), That we, the Methodist preachers of Jackson, will remember him as one worthy of our highest esteem and affection, and that we will pray for his success and happiness, as well as that of his beloved family, in whatever part of God's kingdom Providence may locate them.

A MEMBER.

TO THE PREACHERS OF LOUISIANA.

Dear Brethren: Beginning in New Orleans on January 7, former Governor, M. R. Patterson, of Tennessee, and Major Dan Morgan Smith, of Chicago, will tour the State of Louisiana in the interest of National Prohibition. The above-named gentlemen are Christian laymen, Gov. Patterson being a Presbyterian and Major Smith a Roman Catholic. Please co-operate with us, and our meetings will be successful. We have many reasons to believe that we shall see National Prohibition within the next five years.

A "FORCE BILL" INTRODUCED IN CONGRESS.

The following dispatch was sent out from Washington, D. C., on December 5:

"Senator Penrose, Republican, of Pennsylvania, to-day introduced measures which he said were designed to prevent the disfranchisement of the Negro in the Southern States. One of the bills is the old force bill, giving supervision of elections to the Federal authorities, which caused a bitter fight and prolonged filibuster in Congress 26 years ago. He also offered an amendment to the corrupt practices bill now before Congress which would amplify the provisions of the force bill. Senator Penrose's measures provide that all elections must be conducted under Federal supervisors, appointed by the United States courts. No military force shall be used at any election, the bill says, 'unless it be necessary to repel armed enemies of the United States or to keep peace at the polls.' Severe penalties are provided for interference with elections."

One of the strange things of these remarkable times is that, while the South remains politically as solid as she ever was, because of the presence of 10,000,000 Negroes within her bounds, and the attitude of the Northern people toward this great problem has undergone no appreciable change, there should be those among us who would have the Southern States and Southern Churches to break down the walls of self-protection and defense. The election of Woodrow Wilson is no evidence that sectionalism is dead. Mr. Wilson is to all intents and purposes a Northern man, having spent practically the whole of his adult life above Mason and Dixon's line. No political party would think for one moment of nominating a Southern man for the Presidency.

I was surprised to see in one of our Church periodicals not long since a suggestion to the effect that the day has come when it is desirable to shatter the solid South. And this suggestion was made without any apparent appreciation of the conditions which keep the Southern States together. As I read it, I thought of the great speech which Senator L. Q. C. Lamar made in the United States Senate on this subject some years ago. After showing that the Southern Senators in that distinguished body had exhibited by their votes as much independence of thought and action as those from any other section, Mr. Lamar, who was perhaps the ablest representative that the South has had at the National Capital since the Civil War, closed his great utterance with the following words:

"But there is one point upon which they (the Southern people) are solid, and on which they will remain solid; and neither Federal bayonets nor Federal honors can break that solidity. They are solid in defense of and for the protection of their society, their civilization, their religion, against the rule of the incompetent, the servile, the ignorant, and the vicious."

Is it not an astounding development that there should have risen up among us men who seem to think it would be a great religious achievement to accomplish through Church agencies what the Republican party has not been able to do in nearly half a century, namely, to divide up the South politically and thereby imperil her most sacred interest, while she is menaced by a race problem such as can hardly be paralleled on the habitable globe?

The Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago recently made a loan of $5,000,000 to the Chinese Government.

Miss Jane Addams, whose work in connection with the famous Hull House of Chicago has won for her great distinction, is reported to be suffering from Bright's disease.

The Teutonic forces seem to be continuing to overrun Roumania, Bucharest, the capital of that country, having fallen into their hands last week. On the whole, Germany and her allies apparently have come to the winter months in better military plight than was considered possible in the early fall.

Miss Mollie Elliott Seawell, who was the author of widely read historical romances and stories for boys, died in Washington, D. C., on November 15. She was a native of Virginia and a niece of President John Tyler. Perhaps her best known volume was "Little Jarvis," which made its appearance in 1890.

Mr. Houston, the national Secretary of Agriculture, has lately made the following statement in a public address: "The American farmer has become the most efficient agriculturist in the world. He does not produce more per acre than the farmer in some of the other nations, but he does produce three or four times as much per man."

The death of Henryk Sienkiewick, which occurred at Vevey, Switzerland, about the middle of November, was much regretted by his many readers in this country. He was born at Okreja, Podlasia, about 74 years ago, and was educated at the University of Warsaw. His most admired volumes were "Quo Vadis," "The Knights of the Cross," and "Children of the Soil."

The effort to break the will of Mrs. Frank Leslie, who left between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 for the promotion of woman suffrage work, on the ground that she was the daughter of a Negro slave, was defeated a few days ago by a decision of the Supreme Court of New York. This suit was instituted by Arthur Leslie, a grandson of Frank Leslie, the well known publisher. Mrs. Leslie formerly resided in New Orleans.

On November 15 the direct wireless service between the United States and Japan commenced operation, the first message being sent to the Japanese Emperor by President Wilson, which was as follows: "The Government and people of the United States of America send greetings to your Imperial Majesty and to the people of Japan and rejoice in this triumph of science which enables the voice of America from the Far West to cross the silent spaces of the world and speak to Japan in the Far East, hailing the dawn of a new day. May this wonderful event confirm the unbroken friendship of our two Nations and give assurance of a never ending interchange of messages of good will! May the day soon come when the voice of peace carried by these silent messengers shall go into all the world and its words to the end of the world!"

A crisis developed in the British Cabinet a few days ago, which finally resulted in the displacement of Mr. Asquith as Prime Minister, which position, after being declined by Mr. Andrew Bonar Law, has finally gone to the Hon. David Lloyd George, who is engaged at this time in forming a cabinet. The disruption of the Asquith regime came through the effort of some of the English leaders to provide methods for prosecuting the European war more vigorously, and their insistence, as a means to this end, that a smaller War Council, independent of the Cabinet, should be constituted. To this demand, Mr. Asquith refused to accede and in consequence his leadership has been set aside. Mr. George, who is a lawyer, is said to be the first Welshman ever called to the premiership of Great Britain. He is a brilliant orator, and since the outbreak of the present titanic conflict, in which his country is engaged, he seems to have grown steadily in power and influence.

Mr. J. C. RAINWATER was born on July 6, 1856, and died on Sept. 28, 1916. He was married to Miss M. E. Saxon on Oct. 28, 1877. For thirty-nine years they lived happily together. Six children were born to them, of whom five are living—two sons, Luther and Foster; and three daughters, Mesdames Mollie Gatlin, Willie May Leggett, and Miss Phrona Lee. Brother Rainwater has 25 grandchildren, of whom 22 survive him. He was a respected and honored citizen of Wayne County for many years and a member of the Clear Creek Baptist Church. For over 12 months he was incapacitated for discharging the usual duties of the farm, being almost a constant sufferer from muscular rheumatism. The writer was always spiritually refreshed after visiting his home and engaging in prayer with the family. His frequent testimony was that all was well with his soul and that no cloud shadowed his spiritual horizon, and he confidently anticipated the time when relief would come from physical pain. The daily faith and hope of eternal life, which he possessed, was comforting to all. He was a devoted husband, father, and a good neighbor. The end came peacefully, when he was surrounded by the grief-stricken family and several friends. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at New Hope Church, where a large gathering of relatives and friends were assembled. Interment was made in the cemetery near the church. His loss is keenly felt in the home and community; but there is consolation in the fact that he was ready to answer the summons to come up higher.

CHARLES E. DOWNER.

Mr. JOHN A. GORDON was born in Wayne County, near Waynesboro, Miss., on Dec. 25, 1860. In later years he moved to Clarke County, and, while a young man of 26 years, joined the M. E. Church, South, and was a consistent member of the same until death, only changing from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant. Miss Mattie Leggett and he were united in marriage on Jan. 11, 1887. Their home was blessed with eleven children, three of whom are deceased. The wife, with two sons—John Wesley and Shelby, and six daughters—Mrs. May Freeman, of Laurel, Misses Mattie, Winnie, Fannie, Lucille and Alexina, and a host of relatives and friends feel deeply the loss of Brother Gordon in the home and community. He was a great sufferer; yet he was patient. For several months he was troubled with carbuncles from which complications developed, finally requiring the bed, where he lingered until the end came. To the writer he expressed his feeling of resignation, and we were impressed with the fact that his vision and assurance of an eternal home were clear. He was a progressive farmer, a devoted husband and father, providing well for those dependent upon him. On Oct. 11, 1916, he quietly passed away. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Ramsey at Zion Rest Cemetery, where his remains were tenderly laid to rest. Owing to the death of my wife's brother, I was away with her attending his funeral. May the loved ones, who yet abide in life's struggling journey ever remember and duplicate in life his many commendable traits of character, covering a clear conscience and our Heavenly Father's approval at all times! CHARLES E. DOWNER.

PURE BLOOD MAKES HEALTHY PEOPLE

Hood's Sarsaparilla removes scrofula sores, boils and other eruptions, because it drives out of the blood the humors that cause them. Eruptions cannot be successfully treated with external applications, because these cannot purify the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla makes rich, red blood, perfects the digestion, and builds up the whole system. Insist on having Hood's. Get it now.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

All I want is your name and address so I can send you a free trial treatment. I want you just to try this treatment—that's all—just try it. That's my only argument.

I've been in the drug business in Fort Wayne for 20 years, nearly everyone knows me and knows about my successful treatment. Over four thousand people have, according to their own statements, been cured by this treatment since I first made this offer public.

If you have Eczema, Itch, Salt Rheum, Tetter—never mind how bad—my treatment has cured the worst cases I ever saw—give me a chance to prove my claim.

Send me your name and address and get the trial treatment I want to send you FREE. The wonders accomplished in your own case will be proof. Just address a letter or post card; say, "send me your Free Proof Treatment," and write your name and address plainly.

AMONG THE BRETHREN.

Dear Brother Meek: A report of some itineraries, made by one of the retired preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, may be of interest to the readers of the Advocate. My report begins with the first Sunday in June. On this Sabbath I was at Steele's Chapel on a call from Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus District, to finish his quarterly meeting services at this church, so that he might leave after the Saturday services for the Millsaps Commencement. I occupied the pulpit at the morning hour. I administered the Holy Sacrament, and made a Sunday school talk in the afternoon. Steele's Chapel is one of the churches on the Longview Circuit, of which Brother A. J. Beasley is the faithful pastor.

On June 11, I was with Brother J. J. Baird, of the Brooksville charge, and preached morning and evening to his excellent people at Brooksville. Brother Baird is closing out his quadrennium on this charge in high favor with his people.

On Sunday, June 25, I was at Cedar Bluff, and had the privilege of preaching at the morning service and of baptizing the infant son of Rev. W. A. Howlin, pastor of this circuit. Brother Howlin preached at the evening hour. He is a ready and industrious pastor. During the summer he had a great revival at Cedar Bluff, in which he was assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, one of our Mississippi evangelists.

On July 23 I preached at Smyrna, one of the churches on the Longview Circuit. Brother Beasley, the pastor, being much indisposed physically, was not at this service.

On Sunday, August 6, I was at Central Church, Columbus, where I had the privilege of preaching in the morning and evening to attentive and appreciative congregations. Brother J. M. Carpenter, the kind and genial pastor, was absent on a short vacation.

It was my pleasure to assist Brother W. F. Rogers at the Spring Grove Church, Sallis Circuit, Durant District, in a meeting beginning Sunday morning, August 13, and continuing through the services of Thursday night following. Being occupied with other duties, Brother Rogers did not get to the church until Monday afternoon. Preaching twice a day for several days in the August weather seemed no disadvantage to me, but was rather a spiritual, mental, and bodily tonic. Brother Rogers is a good co-laborer in a meeting—good in the pulpit, and in the altar services. There were 12 or 13 additions to the Church, all or nearly all on profession of faith. Brother Rogers has good staying qualities, and is closing a four years' pastorate on his large circuit. He has wrought well.

On Sunday, August 20, I was at Artesia, where Rev. T. J. Halfacre is pastor. I occupied his pulpit at both the morning and the evening hours. He was away assisting some brother in revival services.

On September 3, I was at Longview by invitation of the pastor, Rev. A. J. Beasley. It was my privilege to preach at 11 o'clock in the morning and at night. An added pleasure on this visit was that of meeting the father, mother, and sister of Brother Beasley. The sister was to look after the parsonage until Conference—a happy arrangement for this bachelor pastor. With his father, I had been a coworker in the years gone by. He was a quarterly conference secretary or recording steward on a charge in the Columbus District when I was presiding elder of it.

On Sunday, Nov. 5, I had the pleasure of worshiping with Brother Halfacre and his congregation at Sessums. He is in favor with his people, and is much pleased with his present appointment. He was expecting to make a good report at our approaching Conference session.

I acknowledge gratefully my indebtedness to the friends whose hospitality was accorded me, and to the preachers for their brotherly kindness and Christian fellowship during these several itineraries. May the blessing of our Heavenly Father rest upon his people, and may these dear brethren, with all the preachers of our Conference, receive such appointments as shall enable them best to glorify God and to build up our Lord's Kingdom.

T. C. WIER.

A NOTE FROM REV. L. J. JONES.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been confined to my bed and in my room for about six weeks, with a kidney and bladder trouble. My heart is made to feel sad, knowing as I do that I will not be able to attend the approaching session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, when I realize that the names of Major Millsaps, Brother G. H. Galloway, and Brother Robinson will be called in the memorial services during this Conference. I have labored with these brethren in former days, and as they are now in heaven I feel like others will follow them soon. I see very clearly that the future prospects of the Church depend upon an educated ministry that is thoroughly spiritual. How essential it is for the young men of our Conference to spend much time upon their knees in prayer to God, so that when they preach a strong sermon from an intellectual point of view the power of the Holy Spirit will be there to accompany the Word!

May God bless Bishop Murrah! We all realize that he is one of our home Bishops. How I should love to be at Jackson to see all the brethren greet him with a warm shake of the hand! I hope that this will be the best Conference that we have had in years.

The doctor says that I am getting along very well, and that, if nothing else sets up, I will be up in a few days. I am weak physically, but strong spiritually.

I want to thank you for sending me the Advocate. I have not been able to read a line in six weeks, but I know that we are all in safe hands as long as we can keep you on the tripod. I have long since discovered that you are the man to make the rough places smooth and the crooked places straight.

Brother Crisler's time is up this year, as is also that of Brother G. H. Thompson. We shall all hate to see them surrender their present appointments, unless they can exchange places. They have both done a great deal of good here. Brother Terry is winding up his first year at Broad Street. We all want Bishop Murrah to send him back to us next year. He has had a revival at his church throughout the year, and people are joining the Church at nearly every service. I hear good things about Brother Adams at Court Street. I feel that all the brethren will be able to make a good report.

Tell Dr. Watkins to have my postoffice address changed from Montrose to Hattiesburg. I have tried to have this done for the past three years, but have failed up to this time. I have lost a great deal of my good reading by a portion of my mail going to Montrose.

I wish to thank the good people of Hattiesburg and my doctor for the kindness shown me in my illness.

L. J. JONES.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Dec. 2, 1916.

Once This Beauty Had Pimples

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Proved That Beauty Comes from the Blood and from Nowhere Else.

Prove This With Free Trial Package.

Plaster your skin all over and you'll stop breathing in an hour. There is only one way to remove pimples, blackheads, eruptions and eczema with its rash and itch, and that is by the blood. In Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the wonderful calcium sulphide at meals serves to supply the blood with one of the most remarkable actions known to science. This is the activity in keeping firm the tiny fibres that compose even such minute muscles as those which control the slightest change of expression, such as the eyelids, lips, and so one. It is this substance which pervades the entire skin, keeps it healthy and drives away impurities. Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store and learn the great secret of facial beauty.

Sunday School

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Order your Sunday school literature at once, so that you will he sure to receive it before the last Sunday in December. Send for a copy of the new catalogue of Sunday school supplies, a sample copy of the new graded magazine, also a copy of the Workers' Council.

No one would think of fasting for the next three months, nor for one week. How much wiser is it to let the soul fast until next spring? Do not starve the babies that God has given us to nurture.

Dr. C. D. Bulla captured the Conference in his great address on Friday night at Winona. Many said the Sunday school anniversary was the best feature of the great Conference.

Judge J. G. McGowen, chairman of the Sunday School Board, sounded an optimistic note. He said we expect to do more and better work next year—and we will.

There is great need of a Conference Elementary Superintendent to look after this important department. Until one is employed, call on the Field Secretary for any help you need. Much can he done hy sending you literature and by answering questions.

During the year 1914 there were 214 enrolled in the teacher-training classes; during 1915 there were 295, and in 1916 there were 611. Let us enroll a round thousand during the next year. This is our first and most important work, and it is the hardest. We will make progress as we make teachers.

There were 107 Wesley Bible classes enrolled during 1916, making a total of 224 up to date. We must have ten more in each district before the first of June. Presiding elders, pastors, district superintendents, and organized classes can bring this to pass before the early days of June.

The Sunday School Board and the entire Conference is back of this federation of Wesley Bible classes in the good year 1917. It is going to take a lot of hard work to do it; hut it will be done. The place and date will be announced in a short time.

Keep the Skin Healthy.

Skin diseases, such as eczema, salt rheum, pimples, etc., are common in the South. Tetterine Salve is a godsend to the Southern people. It promptly corrects all skin troubles and keeps the skin in a healthy condition. It is fragrant and soothing to the skin. Buy a box and keep it handy. 50c a box. Sold by all druggists or by mail from

SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Get the Most Out of Your Food.

The digestive organs absolutely need the influence of pure blood for the proper performance of their functions. Persons that sleep in small, ill-ventilated rooms complain of little or no appetite in the morning and of disagreeable dryness of the mouth and throat. Why? Because, as a result of breathing air that is impure, their blood is impure and fails to give their digestive organs the stimulus they must have for perfect work. It is necessary that we should have pure blood if we want to get all the good out of what we eat that there is in it and to get it comfortably. Hood's Sarsaparilla is distinguished for making pure, rich, vitalized blood, perfecting the digestion and building up the whole system. Get it to-day.

BROTHER HARDIN COMMENDED.

(The following resolutions were adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Harrisonville, Miss., charge.)

Whereas, Rev. P. D. Hardin, our beloved presiding elder, who has showed great efficiency in his work, will, according to the time limit of our Church, soon be moved from us; be it resolved:

1. That we hereby tender him an expression of our appreciation of his untiring efforts, and of the faithful service he has rendered while with us.

2. That we heartily commend him to any people that he may be sent to serve, and pray God's richest blessings upon him and his beloved family.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: M. W. Porter, W. S. Harper, and I. T. Bell, Committee.

REV. J. V. BENNETT APPRECIATED.

(A copy of the resolutions adopted by the fourth quarterly conference, Monticello charge, Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, at Georgetown, Nov. 30, 1916.)

"Whereas, this quarterly conference marks the closing days of the four years' work among us of our beloved pastor, Rev. J. V. Bennett; and

"Whereas, his life and labors have been of the truest and highest type, making us to feel that we shall sustain a severe loss in his going; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we express to Brother Bennett our deep gratitude to him for his splendid work as a minister and his life as a citizen among us, and that we commend him to the people in whatever field he may go hence to labor; and

"Be it further resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and a copy thereof be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication."

Signed: W. E. Driner, W. S. Allen, J. H. Donnell, W. N. Sebren, F. B. Catching.

Aches and Pains of rheumatism are not permanently but only temporarily relieved by external remedies. Why not use an internal remedy—Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acidity of the blood on which rheumatism depends and cures the disease?

In heaven the hallelujah of the long thanksgiving psalm will be the perfect marriage and union of art and worship.—J. B. Heard.

What a Pity!

Isn't it a pitiful sight to see a handsome face covered with pimples and other scaly patches? And it is still more pitiable that some people allow these cutaneous troubles to continue, growing worse each day, when the simple treatment of applying Tetterine salve will entirely eliminate skin troubles and will restore the skin to its normal health. 50c a box. From druggists or by mail from

MISS DANIEL WRITES FROM CALIFORNIA.

Dear Conference Women:

My new appointment, with the change taking place so suddenly, left me rather breathless. In five months, however, I have been able to collect my scattered thoughts, get my breath, and feel it a privilege to take advantage of the opportunity offered to send you a real love message from far-away San Francisco.

However different the environment, and new and varied the problems to be faced, my real work and interest here, as in your Conference, is centered in girls. Not many of you can boast of so rapid an increase in family as I. Just think of stepping from a group of 25 into one of 128. And such a cosmopolitan group we have! Ten foreign countries and almost every State in the Union have contributed to our household! The result is the "Western girl"—pretty, efficient, independent as the day is long, an interesting type who gives us Southern girls many a jolt as to the proprieties. Most of these girls get splendid salaries and have only eight hours to work.

Catholicism, Christian Science, New Thought, all present among us, make the spiritual work of the Inn most difficult, yet we are encouraged over the number attending our evening prayer services. We know that underneath the apparent indifference there must be heart-hunger for the real things of life, that godless San Francisco cannot satisfy. We are here to point to the source, where all such longings may be satisfied.

I wish I had space to tell you of the beautiful Elizabeth Inn, of dear Mrs. Glide, the donor, and of my special work among the girls. But lack of space forbids. But one thought more, and I close.

As much as it hurts to leave the dear, responsive Corinth girls, it was easier, first, because they were being left in such good hands, and next, because I was to find so many "little sisters" here. But for another loss, I have found no compensation, no dear Conference women who claim the deaconess as their very own. I miss you. The inspiration of your love and prayers, so heartily assured me at the annual conference, meant more to your worker than you can ever realize; so, I bespeak for Miss Peeples the same loving co-operation you gave me, and I beg still a place on your prayer list.

God bless you in your work and your new plans to bring to pass his kingdom in the hearts of men.

Lovingly,
MARY DANIEL, Deaconess.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT MEETING.

The Alexandria District meeting was held in the Methodist Church at Natchitoches, Oct. 26 and 27. The first meeting opened Thursday at 10 a. m., with eleven delegates present, representing Alexandria, Campti, Jena, Colfax, Bunkie, and Natchitoches. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. P. M. Brown, who used the parable of the "Vine and Branches."

Mrs. Winstead, the district secretary, gave her yearly report. She explained the district chart, which indicated the number of adult, junior, and young people's societies. There are 15 adult, 5 young people's, and 7 junior auxiliaries in the district, and the Alexandria society received the conquest flag, having organized a new auxiliary at Tioga.

Mrs. Hattaway, of Campti, presented the children's work and exhibited the literature, pennant, mite boxes, and all other material used in the junior work.

Mrs. Scarborough, of Natchitoches, conducted the Bible half-hour, after which the meeting adjourned until the afternoon, when the opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Gibbs, who spoke on the blessedness of laying up treasures in heaven.

Mrs. Hyams presented the work of the mission study class, our periodicals, and Bible study, and did it in such an earnest manner that we were inspired to put forth greater efforts to inform ourselves concerning the work. Mrs. Hyams stressed the fact that ignorance is the greatest hindrance to the cause. She also displayed some excellent charts on Publicity.

Mrs. Cunningham, of Natchitoches, spoke on the young people's work, calling it the "King's Garden;" the first vice presidents being the gardeners, the hearts of the children the ground, the Bible, the tools, and the older girls the harvest. After this beautiful illustration of the work, a song, "Some One is Looking to You," was sung. It was composed by Mrs. Hyams for the young people's society.

At the night session Mrs. Hargrove, of Natchitoches, conducted the devotional exercises, after which Mrs. Winstead gave our aims for 1917, and also excerpts from the annual and council minutes. The address of the evening was made by Rev. P. M. Brown.

At the Friday morning session Mrs. Dezendorf, of Natchitoches, spoke on "The Why and How of the Week of Prayer," using helpful charts to illustrate her points. All societies were urged to observe this special season.

At the closing session, Mrs. Hyams conducted the devotional services and spoke earnestly and beautifully on "Companionship with Jesus."

The following subjects were instructively presented: "How To Use the Conference and Council Minutes," and 'Our Campaign—What Have We Done? What Will We do?"

Mrs. Drewett, of Jena, told of "Missions Within Our Conference" and made an earnest plea for our support of the same. A motion was made and carried that the Alexandria District take the Houma Mission for its special care, and that the district secretary communicate with the workers there and report the needs to each auxiliary.

The session closed with a consecration service conducted by Mrs. C. A. Owens.

Mrs. JIM DEZENDORF,
Secretary.

IMPORTANT!

Pledge cards for 1917 are to be ordered from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Lipscomb asks that all auxiliaries order early, stating the number of cards they weill need.

A BOOK FOR SOCIAL WORKERS.

Every social worker should own a copy of "Religion in Social Action," by Dr. Graham Taylor. It is a book for reference; it stimulates and will always be new. It would make a beautiful Christmas gift. Order a copy from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron

To Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER FIVE MILLION PEOPLE DAILY

Quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a perfect glow of health and beauty—Often increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over five million people daily in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

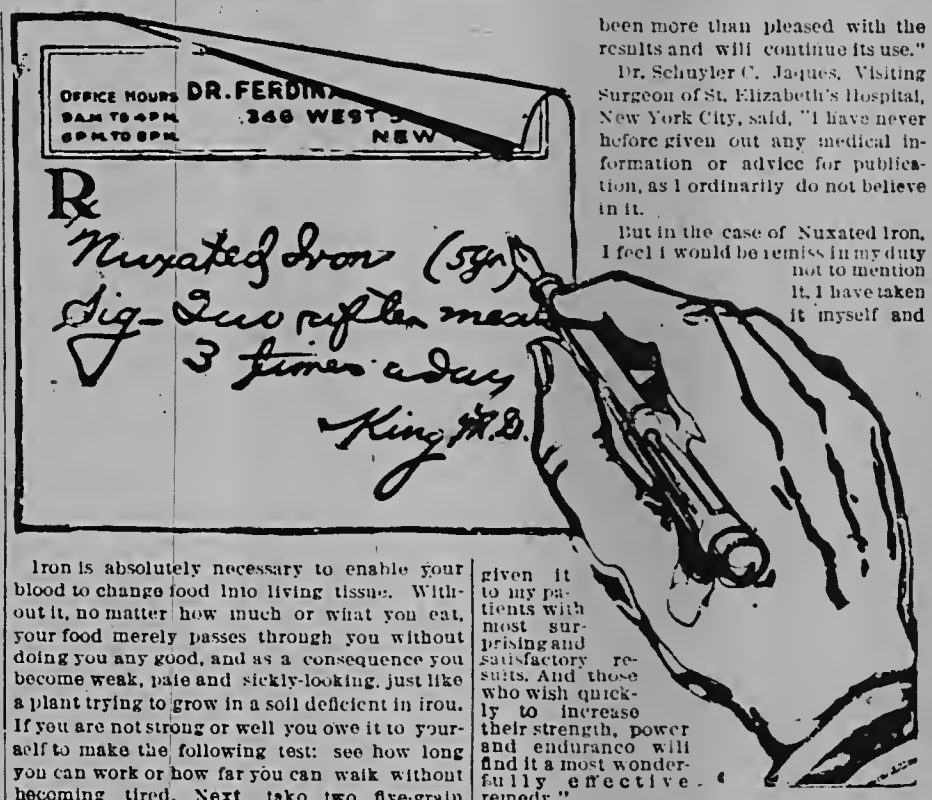
Dr. King, a New York physician and author says: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn-meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely in both this country and in prominent European Medical Institutions says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.



Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. V. Von Unruh, Medical Director in Chief of the New York City Clinic said, "I have given Nuxated Iron a fair and prolonged trial. I have been more than pleased with the results and will continue its use."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said, "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it.

But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. James, late of the United States Public Health Service, says, "Patients in an enervated and devitalized state of health—those, for instance, convalescing from protracted fevers, those suffering from a long-standing case of anaemia, all such people in my opinion, need iron. Of late, there has been brought to my attention, Nuxated Iron. In practice I have found this an ideal restorative and up-building agent in these cases above mentioned."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is the most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

From the Field

Harrisville, Miss.

We are winding up our first year's work on the Harrisville charge. We have had a very good year. God has certainly blessed us in many ways, and to Him we give the glory. We have had six revivals on the charge, which resulted in 23 accessions to our Church, and a helpful spiritual uplift to our people generally. Our collections at present for all purposes are far ahead of last year, and we hope to swell them considerably before we leave for Conference. We are serving a good people. Pray for us.—M. W. Porter.

Harriston, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I will write you a few words to let you know something about this new country. It looks very good to me so far, though the people need more preaching. They hear one sermon a month. I think that we Christian people over this way ought to come together and arrange so that these people can have preaching three times a month. Pray that we may be able to do this, and help us out in any other way that you can. A Sunday school and a prayer meeting are badly needed here. We feel that the Lord will help us if we do our part. —S. L. Cleveland.

Eucutta (Miss.) Charge.

Dear Dr. Meek: As some time has elapsed since a report has been made from our charge, I will state that our revival meetings were not quite up to our expectations, owing, perhaps, to sickness and partly to unfavorable weather conditions. However, we are confident that much permanent good was accomplished. At New Hope, Rev. J. T. Abney assisted us; at Eucutta, Dr. Peebles; at Boyle's Chapel, Brother Ramsey; at Goodwater, Brother O. S. Lewis; at Boice, Brother Chambers, and I, myself, conducted the revival services at the John Dan schoolhouse. These brethren preached earnestly, and their labors were appreciated by our people. We have some faithful members on this charge, who love the Church and are interested in its mission, both in the world at large and in their respective communities. There have been 35 accessions to the Church during the year.

On Nov. 11 our fourth quarterly conference was held with the Goodwater congregation. Every church was officially represented. As our people suffered severely from the July storm in damaged crops, etc., the financial deficit was larger than usual at this time of the year. However, our stewards are laboring vigorously, and we are yet hopeful of a better report at the Annual Conference; but it will not, I fear, be "in full," such as I have made for the past three years, which is sincerely regretted.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Hattlesburg District, is closing his four years of service and will be assigned to a new field of labor at the approaching session of our Annual Conference; be it

"Resolved (1), That we hereby express to him the esteem in which he is held in this charge and our appreciation of his efficient official administration, which has always been in a gentle and brotherly spirit, and also of the inspiring and Christ-filled messages which he has given us from time to time.

"Resolved (2), That as we will give him up reluctantly, and that our prayers and good wishes shall ever attend him and his family in their future efforts to uplift and advance God's Kingdom.

"Resolved (3), That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this conference, that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that a copy be presented to Brother Thompson."

Signed by T. C. Baggett, Recording Steward.

In every department of our church activity, we are earnestly striving to meet the requirements, with an eye single to God's glory, and to keep near the Cross in consecrated service, being led by the Spirit of the Master.

Pastor.

Herbs Smoked in Pipe or Cigarette Relieve Catarrh.

Write for a Free Trial Package.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, olutments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, The Blosser Company, 704 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga., will mail absolutely free to any sufferer, a sample that will verify their claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medical cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe, or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.

If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of our illustrated booklet.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, Rev. James T. Leggett, has served out his quadrennium on the Meridian District; and

Whereas, he has in many ways aided in the development of the Seventh Avenue charge, especially so in the planning and building of our parsonage, and has very greatly endeared himself to us as our presiding elder; therefore be it resolved:

1. That the members of the Seventh Avenue charge hereby express their appreciation of the honest and faithful service of which he has rendered for them, fully believing that he has done his duty as he has seen it, honestly and faithfully before God and man, and that as a charge we shall miss him.

2. That he has been brotherly and kind in his administration at all times, being in the possession of that happy and excellent Christian spirit which characterizes the child of God.

3. That we are much indebted to him for his labors among us, and for the soul-inspiring sermons which he has delivered, and for the touch of his life upon our lives.

4. That we pray God's choicest blessings upon him, his family, and his labors in the Lord's work.

5. That we heartily commend him to God's people wheresoever his lot may be cast by the appointing power at our Annual Conference.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this quarterly conference, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(The above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Seventh Avenue charge, Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, and a copy of them forwarded to us by Rev. Hilary Westbrook, the pastor.—Ed. Ad.

HIGHLY COMMENDED.

(The following paper was unanimously adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of the Meadville, Miss., charge.)

Be it resolved, by the members of the fourth quarterly conference of the Meadville charge, in the Brookhaven District of the Mississippi Conference, that we desire to express our hearty appreciation of the faithful and efficient work of our pastor, the Rev. J. W. Thompson, and his consecrated wife during their stay among us.

Brother Thompson has served this work for the last four years and has proven to be a pastor in the truest sense. By his untiring efforts to help those in need, by his upright life and example, by his unfaltering devotion to duty and by his fearless, determined, and impartial attacks on every type of evil and wrong-doing, he has won the esteem and confidence of every one, whether of his own Church or not.

Their sojourn with us has been a benediction to us and we wish for them a pleasant and congenial people in the new field that will be assigned them, and we pray that God may continue to bless the labors of these good people wherever they may be, and that the good influences which they leave behind them may be as abiding as time itself.

Adopted by a unanimous vote.

CHRISTMAS EVE THOUGHTS.

Colonel I. D. Wall.

The spirit of Christmas is abroad in the street,
It brightens the eyes and quickens the feet
Of the crowds hurrying on to buy gifts for the morrow;
Do they know that their gladness springeth from sorrow?

The wise men who came with gifts to the manger
Came each one foot-sore, a travel-worn stranger;
"After a thousand great dangers and toils overpast,"
They saw the Babe in the star-lighted cradle at last.

All the beauty of life springs from decay;
From the dead grain of corn shoots the green bud to-day;
The lily that floats like a star in a dream
Draws its life from the ooze, the grave 'neath the stream.

All the glory of life finds its sources in pain,
And without it you look for grandeur in vain;
The paths to the heights are marked by drops of red blood
Which heroes have shed for humanity's good.

Never freedom was won by the strong and the brave
Till Death had his toll for the dim, silent grave,
And never came life to the dying of earth
Till Death claimed the Son to whom Mary gave birth.

Joy from sorrow, life from death, peace from pain—
'Tis the old story over and over again;
From the darkness ever proceedeth the light,
And the gladness of morning is born of the night.

A CHRISTMAS MEDITATION.

With the Christians nations about to celebrate the birth of Jesus by festal occasions and the holiday season, it is but natural that one should reflect upon the meaning of the Master to this great world, now largely engrossed in war. The heart of the true Christian is not shaken on account of the turmoils in Europe, which also have been extended to the four quarters of the globe by the colonies of tho warring nations, and which are felt particularly in America by the natural participation of Canada in the strife. Besides, Mexico is in a state of national embroilment, which is disturbing to our own republic.

But only indirectly can this state of war be connected with Christ's mission upon earth. Jesus was sent by the Father to overcome the sins of the world—not to set up kingdoms and conquer others, nor primarily to bring placidity among nations. Only so far as it is essential to break the dominion of sin, is the Master interested in changing the social order. When Jesus was born the angels sang: "Glory to God is the highest, and on earth peace among men of his good will." (Plummer.) Christianity stands for peace of heart, calm of soul in the midst of revolution and upheavel, a staid and steadied man with Christ as his guide, when governments fall and worlds crumble. The picture of that artist is well known who won the prize from his competitors by representing peace in a scene in which a bird is resting calmly upon her nest in the bough of a tree extended over a terrific water-fall. The fact that many sections of Europe are at war among themselves signifies by no means that their peoples have degenerated into weaklings and sinners of the meanest caste. Multitudes of soldiers have perhaps ascended into glory from blood-stained battlefields. Christ has comforted the hearts of many of the wounded and the angels have borne them home to Paradise. It is deplorable that war should be waged, and those who are sinfully responsible for its existence at this time will surely be punished by God himself. But who has the temerity to say that Belgium should clothe itself in sackcloth and ashes for being engaged in the war? And who doubts but that amid the nations which the world looks upon as having caused the war there is not a preponderance of people fighting who actually have at heart good will toward every man? We should not judge a nation by a comparatively few individuals. When Achan had stolen the Babylonian garment and the golden wedge the whole people were regarded as having sinned; but the comforting words of Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth;" and the sobbing refrain of the Psalmist, "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow," have so deepened religious consciousness and justice that we know every man stands before God alone, with his soul bared for judgment. Amos, at Tekoa, brought his message to the Northern kingdom as a sinful whole, and in this key prophesied both the major and minor preachers of Israel and Judah; but over in the New Testament we find Jesus addressing the greater part of his attention to the sickness of soul of the individual man.

How sweet to the seeker after truth reads the interview of Christ with Nicodemus because it holds out hope to all men, especially when he said, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Again we hear the voice of Jesus saying: "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Because men occupying positions of influence have unholy ambitions and are willing to sacrifice the lives of millions for their selfish purposes, is no indication that the constituents of the nations concerned have departed any further from righteousness than in times of peace. The declaration of war merely indicated the true conditions, which some had misrepresented as being ready for the millennium merely because men were not fighting with swords. Degeneracy and spiritual impotency are far greater enemies to mankind than warfare. Death is not the most terrible calamity that can befall one. The world is raving over the shedding of blood and the maiming and blinding of innumerable men—and this is terrible enough—but spiritual blindness and being maimed by the shrapnel of hell are gigantic horrors beside which the warfares of kings are but pigmies. Men need to be more concerned about the conditions that make warfare probable; and nations should sit no longer in peace and watch the saloon carry off young people by the millions, see the brothel of the great city catch in its spreading net some of the fairest flowers of the land, and behold the general course of millions of men toward destruction, without a warning note. As long as the world stands, there will very probably be wars and fightings. In fact, God may use this means of arousing the slumbering consciences of men to a deeper appreciation of his truth. But the declaration of war by a nation does not indicate that all the people are committed to a warlike policy. It may be essential to maintain governments, and it is equally essential that the multitudes bow to the yoke of authority. Millions of good people have committed themselves to the care of the rulers above them; they are concerned about their daily affairs, and trust to the wisdom of leaders in matters pertaining to international relationships. This argument is not intended to be a defense of war, but merely to indicate the probability of millions being involved in its clutches who are innocent of any crime whatsoever before heaven for being thus engaged.

However, Jesus was born when the world was at peace. The reign of Augustus Caesar was one of calm, and almost throughout his long years of rulership the gates of the Temple of Janus were closed, when this had been the case only twice before in the history of the Roman Empire, and then only for short intervals. The dominions of Augustus spread from Rome to the shores of the Atlantic, to the Danube in northern Europe and to the Tigris in Asia. Soon after his death the disciples of Christ had carried his gospel everywhere, and Paul could say it was in all the world bringing forth fruit. But men like Nero, Caligula, and Domitian disgraced the name of humanity by their brutal persecutions of the Christians; yet the forces of Christ were not discouraged. Should the whole world be consumed in the heat of warfare, the Christian would never be deserted by his Master.

Christmas is the celebration of the birth of Christ, and this time is regarded as a festal occasion because Jesus meant so much to the world. He is the Conqueror, the Redeemer, and the Great King. The real joy of Christmas should not be entirely lost in the grosser celebrations with rich viands and merry parties and laughter and song. For all these good things we are grateful to the Father; but the religious significance of the celebration should be outstanding in the heart of every individual, because all the holidays may seem vanity and the rejoicing become fetid if the actual reasons for these manifestations are not given full prominence in a prayerful and worshipful attitude. Let the nations rejoice in the birthday of the Christ and join with the angels in singing, "Glory to God in the highest." C. A. B.

"The better you become acquainted with Christ, the less fault you will find with the people who live in the next house."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

By Helen Elizabeth Coolidge.

O, little Babe of Bethlehem,
Behold me, bending low,
May the rich gifts for which I plead
Thy tender love bestow.
I yearn to feel the holy joy
That Christmas holds for me,
To know a peace beyond all ken,
In drawing nigh to thee.

O, little Babe of Bethlehem,
Behold me, bending low,
To worship with the shepherds true,
As in the long ago!
I yearn to be a little child,
As gentle and as pure;
I crave the courage, for thy sake,
All crosses to endure.

O, little Babe of Bethlehem,
Behold me, kneeling still,
The gift that I would give to Thee,
My erst unyielding will—
O, take it, Lord, and make it Thine,
This holy, Christmas-tide,
So shall the Star illume my way,
And lead me to Thy side!

THE WORLD'S HAPPIEST SEASON.

Of all the joyous festivals during the year, Christmas is the king. Christmas, therefore, takes rank above all the sacred festivals. It is interwoven with the most devout Christian thought and with family life throughout Christendom. It is the season of gifts and glad greetings; and he must be a lonely creature who has no one to wish him a "Merry Christmas."—Theodore L. Cuyler.

DICKENS' VIEW OF IT.

I have always thought of Christmas time, when it has come around, as a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time; the only time I know of, in the long calendar of the year, when men and women seem by one consent to open their shut-up hearts freely. And, therefore, though it has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe that it has done me good, and will do me good; and I say, God bless it.—Charles Dickens.

ITS SPIRIT SHOULD LAST.

I wish that the spirit of Christmas could become the spirit of every day. For there is no truer blessing to one than to tell his friends how deeply he is interested in their welfare and how greatly he wishes them happiness.—Wilbur D. Nesbit.

A CHRISTMAS MEDITATION.

Willlam Everett Cissna.

Again the joy season of the year comes. Again we read the Christmas story and say, "I love it, I love it." Again our selfish spirit is rebuked and we repent of our misdoings. Again our better self asserts itself and our highest ideals awaken, the ugliness of hatred and malice are recalled, the haughtiness of pride and the viciousness of self-will are condemned, and again we renew our covenant to better live the Christ life.

We rejoice, weep, laugh, and mourn as the chariot of memory pauses at our side. Yet we thank God and do not complain, for we know he is just and good and that we are weak humans who sinfully err in his sight, but now are reminded that he loves us.

Our hearts get bigger, our burdens lighter, our tasks easier, and our hopes brighter as we again look into the face of the newborn Babe in the manger at Bethlehem. Again our eyes have seen the King and we answer, "Here am I; send me."—Northwestern Advocate.

BUILDING A LIFE.

Between the great things we cannot do and the small things we will not do, there is great danger that we shall do nothing. There are not a few people waiting for an opportunity to be heroes who, in the meanwhile, are not ordinarily useful citizens. Buildings are never constructed from the cupola downward, and yet sometimes people fancy they can begin at the top to build lives, without the trouble of laying a foundation."—Great Thoughts.

A NEW NAME SOUGHT.

By "Revelator."

"Good morning, Swinson. I have been looking for you. Well, Conference was over a few days ago—and you take the Advocate, I believe. Have you heard whom we get at Lean Ridge?"

"Yes, you get a young fellow from Ryeville."

"Well, I am glad that we get a change."

"The presiding elder tells me he is a promising young man and expects to join Conference next fall." "What's that, Swinson, you don't mean to say that we didn't get a Conference man!"

"Yes, you will see in the list of appointments it reads: Lean Ridge Mission, U. A. Flint (supply.")

"And our charge made a Mission!"

"Yes, that is the way it reads."

"Well, Swinson, I am not going to put up with it any longer. I mean to resign as a steward at Lean Ridge. I never did believe in this way of some one else always having the say as to who should be my preacher, anyway. I believe each church should have a voice in the matter."

"Yes, Mutterson, but you see, down here at Flag Pond they don't have a preacher half the time, and when they do have one they have trouble over it. That church calls the preacher, and when Bill Beasley fails to get the one he wants, he is like you are now, ready to quit; and when Bill gets the man he wants, Joe Mullins and his crowd are all against him and just about half of them have a preacher down there—when they have any at all. I think our way is better, for we always have a preacher. You remember, just this past year, when the man at Ryeville died, the presiding elder had a man there the very next Sunday. They never missed a single appointment. Your present pastor, Brother Flint, was just home from school and the presiding elder knew about him and secured his service for the remainder of the year."

"I know, Swinson, but here we are at Lean Ridge with 269 members and taking half of the preacher's time. I am the main steward and I lose fully half of a day each quarter collecting for the preacher. At the last quarterly conference, this very fall, I spent a whole day. You see, we only paid $37 at the first quarterly meeting, and at the second just $46. When the third quarter came on I knew money was scarce; so I did not go all around, but just saw a few of the members and we only paid $13, which left us $252 behind. It made it hard on me. I spent a whole day the day before quarterly conference—counting the time I spent the morning it met."

"Did you pay out, Mutterson?"

"Pay out—no! We had had that fellow, Moses, and I told the people at the first of the year that we would not pay out. I told them the first time I saw him that we would not like him. Then, we had that man Ploomer the two years before, and he was a failure. I told the presiding elder that we would never do any good until we could get a better man. I told the other stewards I was afraid we would not pay out—Moses was so young and could not preach. Lean Ridge demands a strong man, Swinson. I predicted from the very first that we would not like him—especially at our church—and it turned out that way. I know the people too well. If you expect Lean Ridge to pay out we must have a strong man. Say, Swinson, I am really tempted to have my name taken from the church book—do you know whom I should see to have it done? But I was not through about Moses; that man was not in my house but one time all the year, and he knew that I was the main steward on the whole charge. He spent a night with me soon after Conference and was never there any more—I believe he did stop in one afternoon when he heard about Gertie's having a chill. He knew my house had always been the preacher's home."

"I am glad to have met you, Mutterson, I must be going as we are to have a meeting of the board of stewards this evening and I want to be there."

"I never asked whom you get at Valley Station."

"Why, we get Brother Staysee again and we are all sorry that this is his last year. We would have raised his salary to have had him returned if necessary, but guess we will raise it, anyway, as the people are all prosperous and it costs a little more each year to live."

"Do you think you can pay out with a raise?"

"O, yes; when Brother Staysee came we were just paying $500 at both churches. This year Valley Station paid $500, and Plantersville, the country church taking one Sunday, paid $500."

"But you have a different class of people from what we have at Lean Ridge."

"You know, Mutterson, we have never failed to pay out since the year you left Valley Station. That man, Tomkins, who bought you out, is a Methodist and we had him elected steward in your place. The first thing he did was to see every member and get him to promise to pay a certain amount—and to pay it monthly. At first some of them objected to it; but Tomkins attends the Conferences, and he told us that all the best churches were doing that way. We pay the Conference collections that way, too. You know there are so many who will complain about the preachers collecting money that we decided just to add the amount of the benevolences to the assessment for the salary and take it all together. It is a good plan, and we business men can do it so much better than the preacher that we have never failed to pay up on anything since we began looking after it. I think it hinders a pastor to have to be always collecting. I never thought of it until Tomkins told us about it, but it does not look well."

"Yes, you may be correct, for that was one of the main objections to Brother Moses."

"Tomkins and I expect to see that the preacher at Valley Station has none of it to do. When a preacher holds the prayer meeting, gives sufficient time to his sermons, and does the pastoral work that we want done, with the hundreds of other incidental duties, it takes all the time he has, and I, for one, am opposed to his collecting money for anything."

"I believe it would be better, for I know that at the last quarter, when I went around, some of them would tell me that they had paid Brother Moses all they were going to pay. They thought he was collecting his salary, and talked about him because of it, and said it took lots of money for him."

"Tomkins is a great believer in the way they do things at Conference. He told us how the Bishop would ask if there was anything against the preachers. You have seen, in the minutes, where it says: 'The following made reports and their characters were passed.' I never knew what that meant until Tomkins told us. He said the Bishop would call the man's name and then say, 'Is there anything against him?' Tomkins says it is a good recommendation for a man to pass the Conference. He says they are pretty strict on the men, for at district conference they failed to pass the character of a local preacher because he had been guilty of some immorality, and at the last Annual Conference they expelled a Conference man for the same reason."

"Well, Swinson, I never knew that before. They must have to be pretty good men to pass."

"I did not get through about Tomkins and his plan."

"How did it turn out?"

"Tomkins got them all to paying monthly, and it is a success. He would spend about a day each month, usually on Monday after the first Sunday—that is the day when he has the most leisure, for he has a very prosperous business. He would see all who had not paid and get the contributions before reporting to the stewards' meeting. I don't think he has to spend that much time now, as they have all taken to bringing their contributions to church on Sunday. Bill Snipes said he was ashamed for as busy a man as Tomkins to have to call for his money; so he comes to church now—especially on the first Sunday to bring his $2."

"What! Does Bill Snipes pay $2 a month? I never got $2 a year from him."

"Yes, and the Brumlows, all the family, go. They said they did not want to pay into a thing and not get any good out of it. John Snipes and Sam Brumlow are ushers, and Virginia is a teacher in the Sunday school. Artie Brumlow is one of the best singers in our choir. You see, Mutterson, people will respect us and take an interest in the church when we go at it like we mean business."

Brother Mutterson found it time to go home. All the way the conversation with Swinson kept recurring to him, especially the statement, 'We have not failed to pay out since the year you left Valley Station.' He knew that Lean Ridge had failed every year since he had been there. As he entered the gate at Lome, the thought occurred to him that Brother Flint's character had passed at the district conference.

He said little about the new preacher, but learned that the people were very well pleased with him. As the leading steward at Lean Ridge, he pursued a different course. At the first quarterly conference he was ready to move that they raise the assessment. He arose and said: "I have seen all the members of Lean Ridge church and they have promised to pay enough, and pay monthly, to guarantee an assessment of $590." After a little talk by Brother Mutterson, the stewards of the churches agreed to raise their contributions proportionately.

Brother Mutterson was always present at the quarterly conference, and when Lean Ridge was called upon to report, it was always, "Up-to-date, on the salary and Conference collections." The other churches reported likewise.

When Brother Flint met the presiding elder on his way to Conference, he whispered to him: "Say, suppose you have the name of our charge changed?"

A FEAST.

What shall my birthday dinner be?
No banquet is prepared for me;
My store is small of earthly good,
But I shall feast on angel's food.

And first an appetite I'll need,
Upon this royal feast to feed;
"The soul that's full will nothing eat,
The hungry find the bitter, sweet."

This I may have by exercise
Of all the spirit's faculties;
"Blest they that hunger," Jesus says,
"And they that thirst for righteousness."

The table my great need shall be;
The spotless cloth is purity;
The "bread of life" is then set on—
"Man shall not live by bread alone."

So next—my meat, "to do his will;"
His lofty purpose to fulfill;
My first course now will be complete,
With living water—pure and sweet.

Through the next course I would not haste;
"How sweet thy words are to my taste;"
How they revive the fainting heart;
O, let me from them ne'er depart!

"Fruits of the spirit," ready then,
And lo! we fill our plates again;
"Love! Joy! and Peace!" who could ask more,
E'en from our Father's bounteous store?

O come with me my friends and dine:
"His love is better far than wine;"
He fills the Golden Chalice up,
And adds no sorrow to the cup.

Jesus will come to be my guest,
And break for me this heavenly feast;
And if he will abide with me—
The feast shall everlasting be.

"The man who gives as much as God expects him to, never growls about it afterward."

THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Osmond S. Lewis.

First Day—Wednesday.

The 103d session of the Mississippi Annual Conference met at Jackson, Miss., in the new and magnificent Galloway Memorial Church at 9 a. m., Wednesday, December 13, 1916, with Bishop Murrah in the chair. This is the tenth time this Conference has met in Jackson, the first time being Nov. 30, 1842. Many changes have taken place in the Capital City of Mississippi since the first time the Conference assembled there, the most rapid and progressive changes taking place in recent years. Wonderful improvements have been made since the last time the Conference met in Jackson, in 1907. There are several miles more of paved streets and street-car lines. Several more office buildings and stores add to the beauty and efficiency of the city.

Methodism has made marvelous strides in this growing city. About three thousand members belong to the four Methodist churches. One of these churches, the Millsaps Memorial, has been organized since Conference met in Jackson nine years ago. Two others, the Galloway Memorial and Capital Street, have built new houses of worship, excelled by no others in the Conference. These magnificent temples of worship are a credit to the Methodist Church in the Capital City of the State of Mississippi.

It was very fitting indeed that this session of the Conference should be held in the beautiful and commodious Galloway Memorial Church, and presided over by our beloved Mississippi Bishop, W. B. Murrah. Less than a year ago this church was finished and ready for worship. One hardly knows which to admire most, the "grandeur of the whole, or the finish of the detail." Every department of Church work is amply provided for.

For eighteen years Bishop Murrah was a resident of this city, being President of Millsaps College, during which time he greatly endeared himself to the people of Jackson and the members of the Mississippi Conference. All were truly glad to have him with us and to have him preside over the Conference.

The Conference opened by singing "Come thou fount of every blessing," after which was administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Bishop Murrah being assisted by H. P. Lewis, Sr., W. H. LaPrade, C. F. Emery, and Dr. A. J. Lamar. "Savior more than life to me" was then sung. Felicitous remarks were made by the Bishop, who expressed with gratitude his delight in having the privilege of being with the brethren of the Mississippi Conference. But this delight was mixed with sadness as he recalled, in memory, the faces of those who are with us no more. He paid a beautiful tribute to the character of the late Maj. R. W. Millsaps, and expressed his keen disappointment in not having him present at the Conference. He referred to the fact that Major Millsaps had planned to give his entire time to attending the sessions of the Conference.

Following the roll call by the Secretary of the last Conference, Dr. A. F. Watkins was re-elected by unanimous vote as Secretary, a position he has held with distinction for sixteen years. G. S. Harmon and J. L. Decell were elected assistants. J. L. Niell, G. P. McKeown, and C. E. Downer were elected statistical Secretaries.

As soon as the Conference was organized Dr. Cooper presented the Bishop with a gavel. Bishop Murrah made an appropriate speech of acceptance, stating, however, he had no need to use a gavel.

The standing committees, nominated by the presiding elders, to serve during the Conference were approved by the Conference.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education requesting the reference of the name of Major Millsaps to the Committee on Memoirs, was read and adopted.

The following were introduced to the Conference: R. A. Meek, C. O. Chalmers, Editor and Publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, respectively, A. J. Lamar, of Smith & Lamar, J. R. Stewart, Financial Agent for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, H. M. DuBose, Book Editor; Chas. D. Bulla, of the General Sunday School Board; A. L. Dietrich, Sunday School Field Secretary of the Gulf Division, J. B. Randolph, Superintendent Orphans' Home.

Dr. A. J. Lamar made announcements concerning the work of the Publishing House.

Dr. Cooper read a brief report of Whitworth College, which showed that institution to be in a flourishing condition—a thing not to be wondered at when one reflects upon the kind of man who is President there. The writer heard one lady remark that she wished Dr. Cooper would live always and be President of Whitworth College.

W. H. Huntley and Jas. M. Lewis were substituted on the Committee on Admissions in place of J. R. Jones and M. B. Sharbrough.

Question 22 was called, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The presiding elders were passed in character and gave in their reports as follows:

Dr. Cooper, for the Brookhaven District, spoke in high appreciation of the good work of R. Selby, who gave up the work in the early summer to become Commissioner for Emory University. Finances as good as last year. Dan Kelly had held several great revivals in the district. Other good ones also held.

G. H. Thompson, for the Hattiesburg District—Fairly good year. Gracious revivals; evangelistic spirit-growing. Approximately 1000 accessions. Special interest and activity in Sunday schools. $18,000 spent in building and repairing churches, $1000 spent on parsonages. Finances equal to those of last year.

P. D. Hardin, for the Jackson District—A very pleasant and successful year. Accurate reports from all the charges, except two, showed 954 accessions—net gain of 500. Twelve charges paid in full. Five Epworth Leagues. Seven Sunday schools. One new church. One parsonage remodeled. Five licensed to preach. Splendid revivals.

J. T. Leggett, for the Meridian District—One of the most successful years in the history of the district. Splendid revivals; 1200 conversions; 1100 added to the Church. A long standing debt at South Side paid. One church and a parsonage built. Marked increase in Sunday school enrollment. Pastors loyal.

W. L. Linfield, for the Newton District—430 conversions; 425 accessions; net increase of 193. Six licensed to preach.

M. B. Sharbrough, for the Port Gibson District, reported a net increase of more than 300. Built three new churches and another in process of building. Good revivals. Financial report the best made in several years.

J. R. Jones, for the Seashore District—An unusual and difficult situation obtains due to the shifting population. The district was storm swept and much damage done. 700 conversions. About 500 added to the Church. Splendid revivals. Preachers have been faithful.

Dr. A. J. Lamar, member of the Educational Commission, made a strong address in behalf of Emory University. Marvelous progress has been made in the establishment of that great institution. The hand of God is manifest in the wonderful achievements made. A unique feature of the Emory University is the fact that the buildings are made of marble, donated by one man. It is the only marble university in existence. The Lamar School of Law, in connection with the University, appeals especially to Mississippians, and it is hoped Brother Selby will meet with a hearty response in his appeal for the $50,000 to be used therefor.

After the reading of the report of the Hospital Commissioners, H. M. Ellis addressed the Conference in behalf of the Memphis Hospital. Very gratifying progress has been made, though much remains to be accomplished. Imperative need for the completion of the Hospital at an early date was read. The following were appointed as Committee on Memoirs: P. M. Bullard, M. S. Lewis, W. H. Saunders, C. W. Crider, and J. L. Neill.

Resolutions from the Port Gibson District were read in regard to the illness of Bishop Galloway, and it was ordered that a telegram be sent to him.

A report from Millsaps College was read. The report stated that the faculty is made up of strong Christian men and members of the M. E. Church, South, and interest in the new college is the best.

Dr. Dobbs addressed the Conference in behalf of the work in Jackson. He spoke appreciatively of the members of the Conference and paid beautiful tribute to the memory of those gone on to glory. Only a number of this Conference can be living at Bishop Galloway's place in the death of the writer. Just 31 years ago on the 4th October, Bishop Galloway, Dobbs and Lewis were ordained in Vicksburg. Galloway has gone, Dobbs was stricken in the zenith of his power, and Lewis is left alone. At the close of his address he read a telegram for Gilbert Memorial according to bid.

Announcements were made and the first day's session was closed.

Wednesday Evening.

The Sunday School Board held its anniversary Wednesday evening, Dr. H. F. Tolle, President of the Board, being master of the exercises. Rev. C. W. Crider led in prayer. Rev. P. D. Hardin read the Scripture lesson. Hymn No. 1 was rendered by the choir. J. L. Neill, Secretary of the Board, read the report, calling attention especially to the receipts from Children's Day. The Meridian District broke the record of reporting every charge as being counted Children's Day and making an offering. The Brookhaven District made the largest offering, while Vardaman Circuit led all circuits in raising the largest amount.

The report of the Field Secretary, J. L. Neill, showed as best we have ever had. Splendid results were obtained. Dr. H. F. Tolle called attention to the need for more workers and made an appeal for better observance of Children's Day, that funds may be available to meet the need.

Divisional Secretary A. L. Dietrich told what he thought of the Sunday school work in the Mississippi Conference. He said that the Mississippi Conference had made the best record of work done during the year, but there was yet room for improvement. He praised the work of J. L. Neill, stating that he has done more work than any other field secretary.

Dr. C. D. Bulla, Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department, made a stirring and timely address on "Our Larger Sunday School Program." He stated that during the year the enrollment of the Sunday schools in the Southern Methodist Church had increased 122,000, while 80,000 had been received into the Church from the Sunday school. The greatest development and progress during the year had been made in the Gulf Division, composed of the four Conferences in Alabama and Mississippi. Dr. Bulla expressed wonder that Brother Neill could have accomplished so much work and then have time to tabulate it.

Second Day—Thursday Morning.

The Conference opened at 9 a. m. After the opening hymn, Bishop Murrah led in prayer. He read some paragraphs from the 11th chapter of Hebrews. Following the Scripture lesson, the Bishop called attention to the passing away of Bishop Wilson. He spoke in terms of the highest praise concerning the character and work of this masterful and marvelous preacher, whom many regarded as the greatest on the American continent. Methodism, he said, has sustained a great loss in his going from us.

Following the reading of the minutes, the roll of those absent the day before was called.

The roll of the Conference, in accordance with a standing rule, was called, and those who had handed in their reports answered, "Yes."

Dr. Paul Dobbs, Dean of the Belhaven School of Expression, was introduced to the Conference.

Dr. Dobbs then led a short study of books in the Bible from the Pulpit, using the Old Testament.

Dr. [illegible] W. Pickett, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, Dr. F. H. Rhett, editor of the Daily Nashville Advocate, and Rev. E. H. Dodge, all representatives of the Missionary Appeal, were likewise presented.

Dr. Dobbs then read a resolution from the members of the Conference in Bishop's Bible Class in Belhaven, with an invitation to attend the Belhaven Bible Class Banquet.

Dr. C. Rhett, W. H. Lewis and P. D. Hardin were named as a Committee on Public Worship.

A resolution of the Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home expressing appreciation of the late Major Millsaps was read.

Question 11 was asked, and the roll of superannuates was called and new characters were passed. Those passed for the most part made interesting talks to the Conference.

Dr. R. Richardson stated that he represented the Methodist Conference in Brazil 10 years ago. He is now a married man and is living in Petropolis. He is "happy on the way."

Rev. J. H. Straughan sent a message saying he still loved the Methodist Church better than anything else. He is 74 years of age.

Rev. W. M. Simmons was present and reported that he had done some preaching during the summer. He still loves the Church and is as much interested as ever.

Rev. H. P. Lewis Sr. was present and said that this was the fifth time he had heard the statement made in Conference, "Nothing against him." He was in the active service 41 years.

Rev. R. Bradley stated that 41 years ago he was admitted into the Conference. He still preached sometimes, even "in his sleep." Rev. P. D. Hardin spoke feelingly of his pleasant association with Brothers Lewis and Bradley.

Rev. C. H. Ellis gave a short history of his ministerial career. Rev. E. H. Mounger and Rev. G. R. Ellis were present at the Conference, but did not get in their reports. C. M. Martin made a brief talk to the Conference.

On motion of J. L. Neill, the Conference voted to instruct the Secretary to send greetings to the following superannuates who could not attend the Conference: J. H. Evans, J. W. Brown, J. T. Nicholson, L. J. Jones, W. W. Cammack, G. W. Huff, L. Carley, F. D. Phillips, C. T. Noble, J. M. Massey, W. D. Lominick, and R. F. Witt.

C. J. Knapp was located at his own request. The names of M. L. Burton and B. H. Rawls were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

F. L. Applewhite and O. G. Haliburton were restored to the effective relation.

W. B. Waldrop was placed in the supernumerary relation. Brothers J. M. Guinn and W. L. Duren, of the North Mississippi Conference, were introduced to the Conference.

Question 22 was resumed and the following gave in their reports and were passed in character: R. H. Barr, S. N. Young, J. H. Grice, W. W. Moore, J. M. Morse, H. L. Norton, W. H. Saunders, W. H. Lane, J. L. Smith, B. F. Lewis, N. B. Harmon, F. B. Ormond, J. W. Thompson, J. V. Bennett, W. W. Nelson, H. K. McKee, W. N. Thomas, E. J. Coker, T. B. Cottrell, I. L. Pebbles, H. M. Ellis, and Robt. Selby.

G. H. Galloway having died during the year, his name was referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

The report of the Orphans' Home Board was read and adopted, which showed that institution to be in a flourishing condition.

Dr. J. R. Stewart, Superintendent of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, made an interesting address in behalf of our worn-out preachers.

Bishop Murrah recognized Prof. Gilbert, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, and called him to the platform and introduced him to the Conference. Prof. Gilbert made a thrilling address that touched the hearts of all. His account of some of the experiences that he and Bishop Lomax passed through in Africa was intensely interesting in the light of the activity a million and a half in that field.

Dr. J. Rhett Hall was introduced to the Conference. Dr. Hall is pastor of the Methodist Training School.

The time for adjournment having arrived, the benediction was pronounced and the Conference stood adjourned.

Third Day—Friday Morning.

The Conference opened at 9 a. m. Dr. J. L. Stokes of the Central Church at Memphis, Tenn., had preached the "Pure in Heart Sermon." He was ordained and addressed the Conference in the interests of the mission field. He stressed the necessity of establishing a community ministry, a community service and community co-operation. The opportunity and responsibility of the minister in being a social and industrial leader were emphasized.

Dr. Brown of the American Bible Society was introduced and addressed the Conference on the important work of that great cause.

Question 1 was called. "Who are admitted on trial?" James Bratton Pringle, Jno. L. Carter, and Tyler Granbery Clifford were admitted.

Question 2 was called. "Who remain on trial?" The names of W. D. Barnett, J. B. Cain, J. C. Jackson, and C. P. Jones were called. Having passed approved examination on the first year's course of study, they were advanced to the second year.

C. L. McNeese was passed in character and admitted in the class of the first year, due to his attendance at school.

Chas. Cornelius Beasley was received from the Methodist Episcopal Church and admitted into the class of the second year.

M. F. Adams, R. H. Clegg, M. W. Davis, S. C. Moody, M. W. Porter, A. A. Sims, D. W. Turner, and T. B. Winstead were passed in character and were recognized as eligible to deacon's orders and to full connection.

R. A. Allums, H. C. Castles, and J. H. Jolly were admitted in the class of the second year.

The Bishop's address to the class for admission into full connection was strong, practical and impressive. After answering satisfactorily the Disciplinary questions, those above-mentioned were admitted into full connection.

Dr. Bennett, of the Correspondence School, was introduced to the Conference, as was also Brother Terry, of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The report of the Editor of the Journal was read and adopted. The time for adjournment having passed, announcements were made, and the benediction was pronounced.

Fourth Day—Saturday Morning.

Rev. W. B. Jones conducted the devotional exercises. "O for a closer walk with God" was sung, after which Rev. W. M. Sullivan led in prayer. "Jesus, the name high over all," was then sung. The 116th Psalm was read responsively. The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

Bishop Murrah urged the brethren to co-operate in dispatching the business of the Conference and not to prolong the session unnecessarily.

The Committee on Admissions was called to meet and consider the case of J. T. Weems for admission into full connection. Later he was admitted into full connection and elected to Deacon's Orders.

Question 14, "Who are eligible to Elder's Orders?" was asked. W. B. Alsworth, C. E. Downer, T. A. Ferguson, S. E. Fleurry, R. F. Harrell, H. R. McKee, A. S. Oliver, and J. S. Duke gave in their reports and, having passed the examinations, were elected to Elder's Orders.

M. F. Adams of the class of the third year was reported as having completed the fourth year's course of study.

The following were passed and advanced to the class of the fourth year: E. H. Cooley, H. M. Johnston, P. H. Grice, C. H. Strait, and A. S. Byrd, who also had completed the fourth year's course.

W. E. Harrison was located at his own request.

Milton Asbury Massey was admitted into the travelling connection from the Congregational Methodist Church.

Question 22 was resumed and the following from the Hattiesburg District were passed in character and gave in their reports: W. M. Williams, J. E. J. Ferguson, E. H. Rawls, C. W. Crisler, T. W. Adams, W. A. Terry, J. W. Ramsey, H. J. Moore, H. E. Carter, P. H. Howse, W. J. Ferguson, J. W. Chisholm, J. M. Lewis, H. Mellard, J. L. Greenway, J. C. Chambers, D. E. Kelly.

B. F. Crook was located at his own request.

Dr. Bailey and Capt. Ratliff, representing the work of the Anti-Saloon League in Mississippi, were introduced to the Conference and spoke of the marked progress of this great work.

"Big Brother Fred" Long was introduced to the Conference, and he invited the brethren to attend the State Sunday School Convention to be held in April at the Galloway Memorial Church.

Saturday.

Dr. Bennett, Director of the Correspondence School of the Church, was introduced to the Conference and made a stirring appeal for an educated ministry. A great opportunity is afforded the preacher through the Correspondence School.

Dr. W. W. Pinson, our General Secretary of Missions, addressed the Conference, making an appeal in behalf of a larger circulation of the Missionary Voice. He said the number of subscribers was increasing, and was now larger than any other denominational missionary magazine.

R. T. Nolen, the veteran supply preacher of the Conference, reported a good work done on the Williamsburg charge. Brother Nolen is a loyal friend of the Advocate.

Question 22 was resumed and the following from the Jackson District were passed in character and gave in their reports: J. F. Campbell, W. J. Dawson, R. P. Fikes, M. M. Black, G. P. McKeown, G. G. Yeager, J. C. Ellis, W. H. Lewis, W. G. Henry, H. P. Lewis, Jr., R. H. Kleiser, T. H. King, R. E. Rutledge, A. F. Watkins, W. M. Sullivan, J. L. Neill.

The question of allowing District and Conference Lay Leaders the right of ex-officio membership in the Annual Conferences was voted upon with the following result: For, 53; against, 74.

Question 22 was resumed and the preachers of the Meridian District were passed in character and gave in their report: J. T. Abney, C. A. Schultz, J. F. McClelland, W. E. Dickens, J. M. Corley, J. H. Moore, D. E. Vickers, H. B. Watkins, J. A. Moore, H. A. Gatlin, B. L. Sutherland, H. S. Westbrook, A. M. Broadfoot, Geo. P. Fikes, A. B. Barry, R. H. Clegg, C. C. Evans, O. S. Lewis, J. Loyd Decell, A. J. Davis. The reports of these brethren showed splendid progress in spite of many adverse conditions.

W. J. McPhearson was received by transfer from the Louisiana Conference.

R. Selby made an interesting talk in regard to the Seashore Divinity School. The slogan of this school is, "A Greater Man for a Greater Service." Some unusually strong men are engaged for the next session. Every one that can should avail himself of the opportunity to hear Dr. Charles Goodell, Bishop Quayle, and Dr. Henry Churchill King.

Announcements were made and the Conference adjourned to meet in an afternoon session.

Saturday Afternoon.

The Conference convened promptly at 3 p.m., with Bishop Murrah in the chair. After the singing of a hymn, Dr. H. W. Featherstun led in prayer. The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

C. A. Massey was placed on the list of those to be ordained local deacons.

The Question, "Where shall the next session of the Annual Conference be held?" was asked. W. M. Sullivan placed in nomination Yazoo City; J. M. Morse nominated Brookhaven; Dr. T. B. Holloman nominated Vicksburg. Brother Sullivan withdrew the nomination of Yazoo City in favor of Vicksburg. Vicksburg was selected by a large majority.

Dr. T. B. Holloman was called to the chair, the Bishop having to meet with the cabinet.

The Committee on Conference Relations made its report.

Taking advantage of the absence of Bishop Murrah, Dr. Watkins told of the plan to place a portrait of Bishop Murrah in the Millsaps College chapel, and gave an opportunity for the members of the Conference to contribute to this worthy cause.

Dr. I. L. Peebles read the report on Temperance, which was adopted in lieu of an amendment memorializing Congress to favor certain prohibition bills before that body.

W. H. Saunders read the report of the Hospital Committee, which was adopted.

Report number 2 on Education was read and adopted.

Rev. J. M. Morse read the report of the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund, which was adopted. N. B. Harmon made a strong address to the Conference in the interest of the Galloway Memorial Superannuate Endowment Fund.

The report of the American Bible Society was read and adopted.

W. A. Hays read the report of the Sunday School Board, which was adopted.

The report of the Orphans' Home, read by W. A. Davis, was adopted.

The Epworth League report, read by W. A. Terry, was adopted.

On motion the Conference adjourned.

Fifth Day—Sunday Morning.

At 9:30 o'clock a.m. the annual Love Feast began, being conducted by Rev. R. Bradley. It was an ocasion of much interest, many of the brethren giving in grateful and inspiring testimonies and spiritual fervor being at high tide.

A great congregation that taxed the spacious auditorium of the Galloway Memorial Church greeted Bishop Murrah at the 11 o'clock hour, who chose as his text the 19th verse of the second Chapter of II Timothy: "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his. And, let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." The sermon seemed to grip the vast throng from the start and fervent "amens" were frequently heard from the pews.

After the sermon the following young men were ordained deacons: Revs. R. H. Clay, S. E. Calhoun, A. A. Sims, T. B. Winstead, H. W. David, W. M. Porter, A. L. Hillman, J. N. Alexander, and C. A. Massey.

Memorial Service.

The Conference met in memorial session on Sunday at 3 p. m. Rev. W. H. Lewis, chairman of the Committee on Memoirs, conducted the exercises. Dr. E. H. Mounger led in prayer. W. H. Lewis read the 27th Psalm.

Question 21 was called, "What preachers have died during the year?" The Secretary read the name of Rev. George H. Galloway as the only preacher who had died. G. S. Harmon read the memoir of G. H. Galloway, which had been prepared by W. H. Lewis. By resolution of the Conference the memoirs of Major R. W. Millsaps and Bishop A. W. Wilson were also read.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, who had prepared it, read the memoir of Major R. W. Millsaps.

Dr. B. F. Jones read a memoir of Bishop Wilson taken from the Nashville Christian Advocate.

The following brethren spoke in terms of high appreciation of all the deceased: M. M. Black, R. Bradley, W. A. Terry, M. B. Sharbrough, F. B. Ormond, R. Selby, I. L. Peebles, and J. C. Cavett, Superintendent of the Sunday school of the Galloway Memorial Church.

On motion the priviege of the floor was granted to Rev. A. C. Holder, who spoke appreciatingly of his association with Brother Galloway a little while before he died.

At Night.

After several spirited songs, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, Bishop Murrah ordained the following young men elders: Revs. W. B. Alsworth, C. E. Downer, T. A. Ferguson, R. E. Harrell, H. R. McKee, A. S. Oliver, and J. S. Duke.

Following this ordination service, Dr. W. W. Pinson, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, delivered an able and impressive address on "Methodism and Missions."

At Other Churches.

At the First Presbyterian Church, Revs. W. H. Huntley and J. T. Leggett occupied the pulpit; Dr. I. W. Cooper preached at the morning service at the First Baptist Church and the Lewis brothers quartette conducted the service at night. At the Griffith Memorial and Second Baptist Churches, Revs. B. F. Lewis, E. C. Gunn, G. H. Thompson and W. B. Jones preached; at the Central Presbyterian Church, Rev. H. B. Watkins and J. L. Decell conducted the services. Rankin Street Methodist Church, Millsaps Memorial Church, and West Capitol Methodist Churches were served by Revs. B. E. Meigs, J. L. Sells, W. N. Thomas, J. L. Smith, C. W. Crisler and H. B. Watkins.

(To be concluded in our next issue.)

OUR NATIONAL CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS

This poem was written upon request by Dr. James E. Dorsey of Illinois Wesleyan University, and was read at the opening of the Methodist Centenary Day celebration of the Methodists.

O, Power of Peace, whose Thy servants
A strength have known supreme,
Thou art of Love's true life
Both Thou the pledge and Thou the prize;

The young Dominion of the West
Owns it Thou art Power Divine
As Thou wast in days of old,
And art, worship under Thy skies.

In Europe's empire, for many a year
In battle's din be heard no more
And love to live thy word have said,
Unseen and crowned thy Allen Peace.

From unknown heights a war-swept home,
From Vernal Valley to the Plains,
From Rockies's cliffs to sea coast coves
A surging swell of pleading rises.

The pen of wisdom or despair
The cup of wrath or gladness cast,
The web of life is mortals there,
And life's a mingled yarn and weal.

The warrior lays his hope aside
And wields with power the pruning hook
And plows and prays, time and a work
Best of against the Throne of God.

While here the spirit will steady wood
The serious weapon vainers bow
And hate have no longer sway
That rose and ravage seized it day,

So Olden Rites of the Lord of Hosts
Here where with reverence worship doth
The virgin verdure of the sod
Wave with their beads of green and gold

And here the dream of nations shove
In deeper eye—in nobler mien
That summon's heart, before God,
To humble duties of the place.

So crimson river bears the sign
Here wise in winter's sternness,
Some close manse moment in summer's light,
Reflected in the waves below.

For this a nation lifts today,
In unison, its voice of praise;
For this our souls their utmost pay,
For this our hearts their songs upraise.

The Spirit of Pride is in command
Of this who in Thy fear abides,
And may the Heavenly Pilot's hand
Be on the head of him who guides.

His compass is Thy sovereign will;
Thy righteousness his polar star;
They guided, and will guide us still,
Far from the rocks and breaks of war.

Host of the nations! Lord, today
Columbia comes to praise, to bless;
And on Thine altar stone to lay
A heart overfull of thankfulness.

KEEPING METHODIST HISTORY STRAIGHT.

The "Negro Year Book for 1914-1915," edited by Monroe N. Work, of the Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, under the heading, "Slavery and Religious Denominations," gave this note in reference to the origin of our Church: "1845, May 17, the Southern Methodist Episcopal Conference withdrew and organized at Louisville, Kentucky, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

Because of the prominence of this year book, as it is a veritable encyclopedia of 500 pages of information, not only in regard to the Negro race, but in regard to many other things, we wrote the editor informing him that his statement was utterly at variance with historical truth and gave him the facts which have stood the severest tests; indeed, we sent him a copy of an editorial on the subject, written to call the attention of Dr. Oliver E. Bakelal, editor of the year book of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to a glaring inaccuracy he had been publishing to the world every year. The phrasing of the inaccuracy by a strange coincidence bore a striking resemblance to that in the "Negro Year Book." In his edition for 1915, Dr. Bakelal, in speaking of the General Conference of 1844, said: "During this quadrennium several Conferences in the South withdrew and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized."

The word is the Conference is the South is more accurate than the Conference is the word is, the right was divided according to a "Plan of Separation" that was passed by the General Conference of 1844, by an overwhelming majority and which was repudiated by the Southern Conference of the Northern branch of the Church in 1845 its validity was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States and it was recognized by the Geo. Day Commission some years ago. In these days when the atmosphere is charged with Methodist union it is not surprising to universities to see that facts count for it will prevent universities and possibly disunion again in the event the Conference come to action. Nothing will be gained by shutting eyes the truth at any time is true. It may be unfortunately presented in type sent before them but be the slightest case for misunderstanding. Publications bearing the imprimatur of great churches and their organizations should stay true to the word facts.

The editor of the "Negro Year Book" proved to be too busy to apologize, as under another date he wrote immediately that the information was not a "revelation to him and he would make the correction in the book for the succeeding year." True to his promise, in the year book which has recently come from the press the statement replaces the misstatement: "1845 May 17 the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church organized at Louisville Kentucky the Methodist Episcopal Church South. This was done in accordance with a plan of separation adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844."

The Year Book of the Methodist Episcopal Church for 1915 has changed the form rather than the substance of its statement. It now reads: "The organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was consummated in 1845 composed of the Southern Annual Conferences." Though the objectional word "withdrew" which has no historic basis, is not used the statement lacks much to make it creditable to the great Church from which it comes. Why is not its statement unambiguous and clear-cut like that of the "Negro Year Book," in harmony with the facts of history"—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

DR. H. G. HENDERSON—AN APPRECIATION.

Dear Advocate: To pay a just tribute to a character like that of Dr. Harry G. Henderson in a brief article would be utterly impossible. His was a life that shone in splendor from so many angles that it would be difficult to touch upon them all. He was a man with a big brain, a noble heart, a genial and gentle disposition, and above all possessing that rare thing—a vision. God seemed to have taken him, as it were, into his confidence and to have given him, as he did John on the Isle of Patmos, an insight into heavenly things. He seemed all the while to have stood high upon the mountain-top where he could catch a gleam and an inspiration fresh from the altar of God.

Dr. Henderson was more than an ordinary man. He was one of those few rare and noble characters that stand out here and there as beacon lights for others to follow. His coming to Holly Springs was a benediction to us all. His last great effort before his congregation here was made at the 11 o'clock service before he was stricken that afternoon. His theme was "The Transfiguration," and he pictured with a master mind that great scene, and so impressed it upon his hearers that it will linger with them in years to come.

It seems all but a pity that so rare a genius as Dr. Henderson, and one with so noble a heart and capable of doing so much good, should have been cut down amongst us in the midst of his useful work. But God said, "It is enough: come up higher."

During his last illness the undersigned wrote him a letter while he was confined in the hospital at Memphis. His good wife has requested me to insert a part of that letter into this little article, which I now do, as follows:

"Dr. H. G. Henderson, Memphis, Tenn.

"Dear Friend: This is a beautiful day here, but the paths are enough below, for one it seems to convert to the other saints. As the sun as the sun will be fair, the moon will be gentleness, the stars will their spectrum, the brook will their fragrance, the breeze will its smile, and the forests and mountains will their grandeur. All of these are milestones along the journey of life to that yet more beautiful country, the Home of the Soul. Then, we in that land, as another guide, the Bible, shall point us the way to our new, guiding us heavenward. Then, as has survived, but as other have already in that I present the promises and promises of that Book.

'Among the other things I find yourself reading many words of encouragement. The last remind I gave you present was of The Transfiguration. About I live a thousand years I can never forget that masterly effort. What joy was for it to you just then I tell you some I shall remember you of that sermon.'

God did see it in 'call him home' on the second day of November 1915.

Dr. Henderson was a man of much learning and was a famous pulpit orator and a preacher of great power. His sermons were logical, soulful, and helpful, and were delivered in such a way as to make a lasting impression upon those who had the privilege of hearing him. He was a graduate of two of our best institutions of learning and was the orator of his class at Vanderbilt.

His life was well spent and was one in every way worthy of emulation by those of us left on this side of the shore.

Holly Springs, Miss. W. A. BELL.

AN ARROW THAT HIT THE MARK.

A man once stopped a preacher in a street of London and said: "I once heard you preach in Paris, and you said something which I have never forgotten, and which has, through God, been the means of my conversion." "What was that?" asked the preacher. "It was that the latch was on our side of the door. I had always thought that God was a hard God, and that we must do something to propitiate him. It was a new thought to me that Christ was waiting for me to open to him." "If any man... open the door I will come in."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

THE CHRISTMAS CHILD'S CHRISTMAS.

By Rev. John D. Sammis.

No wreaths of red-tipped holly,
With spangles bright and gay,
Adorned the Christ Child's cradle,
Where rudely wrapped He lay.

He had no Christmas dainties,
No bright and pretty toys;
Nor rang the joyous laughter there
Of merry girls and boys.

But in the dingy stable,
Low on a bed of hay,
The Prince of the House of David
All uncomplaining lay.

Sweet mother dear to love Him,
Kind shepherds to adore,
And His Father, God, above;
He did not wish for more.

Oh, 'tis not fine surroundings
That Christmas joy imparts,
Nor gifts of price and beauty,
But the love of gentle hearts.

Christ comes to all the lowly,
The proud He passes by;
And they sing, His angels holy,
Only where the Christ is nigh.

—The Presbyterian.

CHRISTMAS THE WORLD OVER.

Although in France and Belgium, England and Germany, and the other countries affected by the European war there will be no time nor money for Christmas gifts, yet it is interesting to know what their Christmas customs are. Even if they are not observed this year, let us hope that next year all the countries will be able to keep Christmas in peace. If there were no war this is what you would find in other lands:

If you were a little Belgian girl or boy you would fill your shoes with beans and carrots, and set them in the chimney place, for good Saint Nicholas's horse. In the morning your carrots and beans would be gone (of course, the horse ate them), and in their place would be sweetmeats.

If you lived in Italy, you would go to the church to see the Bambino, or image of the Christ-Child, who is supposed to give the presents.

If you were a little Spaniard, you would hide your shoes and slippers in the bushes on Christmas Eve and find them filled with fruit and sugar plums in the morning.

If you were a French child you would find gifts in your shoe if you were good. But if you had been naughty, Noel, who brings the Christmas gifts, would leave instead a whip in your shoe.

If you lived in Norway or Sweden you would set in the window a candle to guide Kristine, who brings the gifts. And all the shoes, nicely polished, would be set in a row before the hearthstone, to show that all would be peaceful in the family during the coming year. The Bible would be read in every house, at eve, during the Yulefred or Yule peace, as Christmas-tide is called.

In Germany the Christmas tree is universal, for this is its home. At many places the whole family go to early service at five or six o'clock, as the custom may be, and in some parts of the country every one carries a lighted candle. These candles, placed on the back of the pews, sometimes make the only light in the church. At some places when the clock strikes twelve on Christmas Eve the bells ring and every house and church are quickly lighted up.

Christmas is a day of cheeriness and happiness throughout Germany. The presents are usually simple. Men and angels and many kinds of creatures are fashioned in gingerbread. It is twisted into many grotesque shapes and sometimes it is gilded.

In Hanover, just when the candles on the Christmas tree are dying out, there will be a mysterious rap on the door and a bundle will be thrown into the room. It contains a little present for every member of the family and comic verses for some of them.

In Oberammergau there is a more distinctly religious tone given to the whole holiday. The Christ-Child is the guardian angel of the time. It is He, they say, who brings the Christmas tree. He comes down from heaven on Christmas Eve, holding it in His hands. Two angels bearing presents fly before Him and two behind. He puts the tree on the table, rings a bell and flies away. He brings a blessing to the children who have been obedient.

To the children of Oberammergau Saint Nicholas is an angel in disguise. He goes about from house to house, in ragged clothes and with a bag on his back. He gives a loud knock at the door and asks, "Are the children good?" If the answer is "Yes," he leaves fruits and candies. If the answer is "No," he leaves a stick.

At Ellis Island, in the harbor of New York, on Christmas Day, several hundred children, with their parents, usually await debarkation on the shores of America. There is a multitude of German "kinder," of Italian "bambinos" and of youngsters of every nationality, as much interested, all of them, in Christmas doings as any American young folks could possibly be. It is indeed an occasion of great excitement for them, inasmuch as the missionary societies have provided for these humble aliens a wealth of good cheer, and, with the help of donations made for the purpose, the day is rendered joyful for all, both young and old, toys being plentifully distributed among the little ones.—New York Christian Advocate.

AMY'S CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY.

"I'm so disappointed about my Christmas tree party," sighed Amy, as she pressed her face against the pane of the nursery window and looked out into the snow.

"I'm sorry, too, dear," sympathized her mother, "but it could not be helped that you were ill this Christmas. We will have to make the best of it."

"I know," murmured Amy, "and I have had a good time with you here to play with me all the time, mother, even if I have been ill; but you know I have always had a Christmas tree and a party, and I do miss it."

Softly Mrs. Morris stroked her little girl's hair; suddenly her face brightened, and she said: "We'll see what else we can do."

When mother said that in that tone, Amy always knew something nice was going to happen, and she opened her eyes very wide indeed.

Mrs. Morris smiled mysteriously. "I'm going to bundle you over into the sitting-room now," she said, "where it is nice and warm, while I fix up here for the party. Don't peep!" she laughed.

Amy danced over to the pleasant, sunny sitting-room and tried to wait patiently, straining her ears for sounds from the other room. What could it be, she asked herself. How could mother have a Christmas tree and a party suddenly like this, when she, Amy, was ill with the measles, and could not see any one, only mother?

In a very few minutes mother came in smiling. "Now, come," she said.

When Amy entered the nursery it looked just the same. A look of surprise, then disappointment, spread over her face.

"Go to the window," said her mother, seeing the disappointed look.

Amy ran to the window, and there, in the snow, on the flat roof outside the window, stood a little Christmas tree which they had used the year before to decorate the dining-table, and on it were the strangest things—tiny bits of bread and crumbs and cake tied to the branches with red strings, while on the snow at the foot of the tree were scattered other crumbs, big and little.

Already two or three sparrows were fluttering around the tree, chirping joyfully, and others were seen flying toward it.

"Oh, I know!" cried Amy in delight. "A Christmas tree for the birds! A Christmas party of birds!"

The noise frightened the little feathered folk and they flew away in alarm.

"You must be very quiet, dear, or they won't come while you are at the window. Stand behind the curtain and you can watch them without their seeing you," advised her mother.

Amy drew back of the curtain and then she watched. Soon the birds came back, bringing with them others, and in a few moments the roof was covered with as gay a little party as could be imagined. They flew around the tree and picked the crumbs off the branches. They hopped around on the roof, and chattered and fought one another for the bits lying on the ground.

Amy got to know the big fat one and the little "baby," as she called the smallest one. She watched and watched them, forgetting entirely the time, or that she was ill, until it began to grow dark and all the crumbs were taken from the tree and the roof, and the snow was tracked all over with the marks of their tiny feet.

"That was a fine Christmas party," she said to her mother, after the last bird had flown away into the darkness.

"It made the birds happy, too. Probably some of them were very hungry. To-morrow morning I will bring the tree in, and you can dress it yourself with crumbs, and we will have another Christmas party," said mother.

"Oh, that will be fine," cried Amy, clapping her hands. "Can I have a Christmas party every day while I am sick and while the snow lasts, mother?"

Her mother nodded a smiling, "Yes."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

CHURCH UNION IN CANADA.

The pros and cons in regard to Church Union in Canada are still being discussed. There seems to be a general review of the whole question. A covenant is being circulated by those who desire to maintain the Presbyterian Church, and signatures are asked. There is also a review of the expenses incurred by the Reunion Committee, and of the effects of the union upon the history and continuity of the Presbyterian Church. We highly regard the Churches of Canada, and if there is to be a union, we hope it will be obtained without force and without bitterness; otherwise continued separation is far preferable, as the experiences of other efforts plainly declare.—The Presbyterian (Philadelphia).

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property. In the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

"LEARN TO LABOR AND TO WAIT."

Knowledge is of inestimable value to the human being and success. As the poet Longfellow has said, man of the world understands and judges more and more by the success of him who is the source of all wisdom. The human mind is capable of grasping only a few of God's truths but these are such as are absolutely and forever a part of the eternal. Wise is the morning boy of many earthly wisdom. "Dig in your soil, a dollar's in it," and that is to the best of his ability and knowledge. The time will come when he will find out that he is not the only one who has ever had to work for a living. The boy who is to be called a "self-made man" must start early in life and be willing to work hard. "Use it or lose it" is a true saying and particularly about mental effort. Many men who have become great have had very meager opportunities for education in their youth, but they have made the most of what they had and have become successful men. Many a man who has had a college education has failed to make a success of life because he was unwilling to work hard and long enough to become a master of his profession.

But all this requires courage, strength, years of patience. The habit of success can not be obtained in a day. He who learns to succeed in life do so only by knowing how. It seems to us that there is a moral lesson involved in this for those who are men of God have to bravely, though they may occupy humble places and the world may not applaud what they do. The result of their efforts will be known when the wheat and the tares are finally gathered, and then only. He who builds his character as a "heavy mansion" that is to stand throughout eternity must patiently wait for his right appreciation and reward until he can shake off this veil of sense and enter into the joy of his Lord. In the spiritual realm our earthly life is one of labor, and eternity brings the results.

WHERE OUR CONFERENCE STAND.

We are indebted to the Midland Methodist for the statement given below:

The following figures, culled from Dr. Ivey's Handbook of Methodism, set before us just what the Annual Conferences of our connectional Methodism did during the ecclesiastical year 1915 per member for the causes indicated. 'Ministerial support' includes pastors, presiding elders, Bishops, and Conference claimants. 'Missions' includes foreign missions, domestic missions, and missionary specials. * * *

This it will be seen that the Louisiana Conference paid its pastors $1.02 for ministerial support and it paid for missions the Mississippi Conference paid for these items were $1.65 and $0.30 and those of the North Mississippi Conference were $1.71 and $0.30. In the light of this comparison is compared with those of the other Conferences it is not high time that we were valuing by and because to raise the contributions of our people to a higher standard?

THE OUTLOOK BRIGHTENING.

The outlook for national prohibition is steadily brightening. Even the prohibitionist leaders were surprised last week when the Judiciary Committee of the lower House of Congress reported favorably a measure providing for a prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, and they were also made happy by the introduction in Congress of bills to make the District of Columbia "dry" and to forbid the use of the mails for advertising liquors. The sentiment against the liquor traffic seems to be increasing everywhere, and all the indications are that ours will be a redeemed nation in the nearer future. May God speed the happy day when this shall come to pass!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The present address of Rev. A. C. Searcy, who last year served in the Louisiana Conference, is Mullen, Texas. We wish Brother Searcy a large measure of success in his new field.

Dr. Thomas Carter, of Vanderbilt University, was in New Orleans last week, and while here called at the Advocate office. The Editor, who was out of the city, regrets having missed seeing him.

Writing from Winnfield, La., Rev. R. S. Walton says: "We have found a fine lot of laymen in our congregation here. I am told that every official of the church will lead in public prayer. We are expecting great things among this people."

We are informed that Rev. H. S. Spragins has made a most favorable impression upon his new flock—the congregation of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, Tenn. We predict that the more his people learn to know Brother Spragins the more they will appreciate and love him.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, has reached his new field of work at Pleasant Hill, La., and writes us as follows: "We are busy here, and we expect to have a successful year." We congratulate the people of the Pleasant Hill charge upon having secured the services of Brother and Sister Lipscomb.

Brother T. M. Babington, of Franklinton, La., has our thanks for a list of 8 subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Babington, who is a leading druggist in his town, is a friend who shows his interest in the Conference organ in a practical way. We wish him a happy Christmas and New Year.

Rev. T. E. E. Hamer, Senior, Leave, Pres. Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference writes as follows: "The very state of health is such as to make it impossible for me to attend the Conference. I am very sorry indeed that I cannot be present with you, but I am sure that you will have a good session and will accomplish much for the advancement of the kingdom."

Rev. E. E. Saunders, of Marion, La., writes us as follows concerning the fact that it rained during the quarterly conference: "We have had our share of rain, but conditions in good condition. Brother Lucas and Sharp preach great sermons. Results of the year will not be known until the Conference. We have had many additions, and the people here will not fail the Church and their pastor after the blessings of God ever rest upon them."

A friend sends us a copy of a publication entitled "The Other Side of Prohibition," which is published in Cincinnati. Just as the National Prohibition Liquor Dealers' Association. It is about on a par with "Facts" and "Sober" published in New Orleans. Anti-prohibition literature is all right in its place. Like the cause which it seeks to champion, it will not bear much examination.

It is with pleasure that we note that Rev. J. J. Chandler who served for a time our church in Alexandria, La., and was in the pastorate about a year and a half ago on account of ill health, which has in the meantime greatly improved, and that he is still making a good impression wherever he goes. Brother Chandler writes us from Asheville, N. C., where he is spending a few days, but he says he is anxious to get back to the Louisiana Conference from which he formerly came to Louisiana.

Rev. E. W. Tarpley, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, was in New Orleans last Monday and attended the Methodist Preachers' meeting. He reports the work of the League in the northern part of the State in good condition. Dr. John F. Sevier has been in the city for some time assisting the League in the campaign. He is a most effective speaker and is doing much good. It is to be hoped that the people will rally to the support of the League and help to make the campaign a success.

We have received the following letter from Rev. W. L. Lindsey, presiding elder of the Natchez District, Mississippi Conference: "Dear Brother Holt: Please announce in the Advocate that I will be in my office at Natchez, Miss., on the first Monday in December, and will be glad to meet the preachers of the district for a more intimate and confidential acquaintance than the pressure of our meetings in other places and pastoral duties."

In the removal of Mr. J. L. Decell from Mississippi to Tennessee the North Mississippi Conference has sustained an irreparable loss. Brother Decell was an active member of the Conference Board of Education and a Trustee of Millsaps College and his influence was strongly felt for good. We have known few laymen who equalled him in point of general ability and in the study of affairs in Southern Methodism. His health has not been good for some time and he has deemed it best to change his work and the place of his residence. He will make his home near Memphis.

We received too late for publication in the last issue of the Advocate resolutions from the quarterly conference of the Preston (Miss.) charge strongly commending the work of Rev. George H. Thornton, for the past four years presiding elder of the Jeffersonville District, and a like paper adopted by the quarterly conference of our First Church at Laurel expressing high appreciation of the services of Rev. W. L. Lindsey, presiding elder of the Newton District. Both of these brethren are workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, and their labors have commanded widespread approval.

Writing from Sardis his new home, Rev. W. D. Wendel says: "We have been given a royal welcome by these good people. I joined the Conference here 32 years ago. I am looking for a great year. I am sorry to state that Sister Holder, the wife of our beloved presiding elder, is seriously ill. She says there is not a shadow across her path. Let us pray for this stricken family." We are very sorry, indeed, to be apprised of the illness of this choice servant of the Master, who has been in an unsatisfactory state of health for many months, and we trust that her condition will soon be improved.

We have in hand an interesting wedding invitation which reads as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. James Richard Shelton will give in marriage their daughter, Hallie Mae, to Mr. Robert Paine Mitchell, on Wednesday evening, December 27, 1916, at 6 o'clock, at their home in Clarksdale, Miss." The bride-to-be belongs to a well known North Mississippi family, being a granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. S. G. Cochran, who resided for many years at Cruger, Miss., and who were held in high esteem by all who knew them. The groom is a son of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant District, who is one of the leading ministers of the North Mississippi Conference, and he is considered a young man of much promise. We extend in advance congratulations and all good wishes.

AT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Meek: What a delightful session of our Conference we had at Winona! One of the connectional brethren who returned to Nashville before the adjournment said to a friend of mine that I was having the time of my life. He was not far wrong. I had not met the brethren in three years, and was as happy as a boy turned loose in a watermelon patch. Every hand-shake was hearty, and expressions of friendship and love were not a few. This was comforting. My old friends seemed to be the gladdest of any to see me. This was an assurance that with the roll of years my name had not been forgotten, nor their friendship cooled. It is a blessed thing to retain friends in old age, the more so because old persons seldom make new ones—at least it is seldom that they form new and warm attachments. So I have heard, and such is my experience. I must retain the friends I have. I've none to spare, but they are growing fewer as the years go by. Since I met the brethren last, three of the best friends I ever had, had gone to their home above: J. W. Honnoll, J. W. Poston, and G. W. Bachman. They were friends of my early days. I first met Brother Poston in 1859, Brother Bachman in 1860, and Brother Honnoll in 1861. Their absence was the only thing that made me sad.

The Conference entertainment was all that could be desired. Everybody was in fine humor. The weather was ideal and Christian hospitality abounded. Winona is a town of good homes and liberal ideas—a town in which on Conference occasions everybody turns Methodist. There were no signs of sectarianism anywhere. Even "Brother Bailey of the Baptist Church" (like myself a visitor), with whom I used to have so many tilts when I was with the Advocate, looked very much like a well-fed presiding elder. And at the Presbyterian Church, one evening, where I worshiped, there was an effort to conform the order of service to Methodist usage. My "boarding house," as some of the preachers say, was the old home of Brother Bachman, now presided over by his daughter, Miss Lelia, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Brooks Bachman. How kindly I was looked after and cared for it would be hard to say. I appreciated this kindness, for I was suffering all the while with a cold. In the course of conversation I had occasion to say that, "like Bishop Fitzgerald, I can stand a great deal of kind treatment," and I received it, not only at the hands of the good sisters, but also of the boys—noble sons of a noble sire.

My roommate was Brother Joe Brooks, as clean-handed a Christian gentleman as I ever knew. I have known him from childhood, and loved him, not only for his own sake, but for the sake of his father and mother who were father and mother to me. When, a beardless boy, I began my career as an itinerant preacher, "Uncle Joe" was my first presiding elder. I had known him since I was a little fellow of seven years. He found me in the wreck of a home, and carried me on his shoulders to my distracted mother. That was on May 7, 1840, the day of the great tornado that swept away a big part of Grenada and killed twenty-one persons, four in the room where I was—three schoolmates and my teacher, Mrs. Plummer. Can I ever forget "Uncle Joe," or "Little Joe," his worthy son!

One pleasant feature of the Conference was the presidency of Bishop Murrah. He is North Mississippi's own Bishop. He was always highly esteemed by the brethren, and, if anything he occupies in their estimation a higher position to-day than ever. This was his first official visit to our Conference. He acquitted himself like a Bishop! That is saying much. He was dignified, but not stiff; courteous, but not condescending, and impartial in his administration. Nobody stirred up trouble, or thrust upon the Conference any vexing questions; so there was no occasion to test his nerve. Had there been, I am sure not a man present would have questioned his ability to meet the issue. Personally, I have no reason to regret that I helped by voice and vote to elevate him to the episcopacy. I am rather proud that I helped to give him "a good thing," and helped to put a good man into the apostolic order—an order in which there is room for the exercise of all his gifts and graces.

There was no friction in the Conference. If anybody's temper was ruffled, I failed to detect it. Toward the close Brother Woollard said to me, "This has been a pleasant session." I answered, "Yes, but maybe it only seems so to me as I can only see—not being able to hear all that is said." We had two lively discussions: one on the Unification of Methodism, and the other on the constitutional amendment giving the Conference and District Lay Leaders membership in the Annual Conferences. When the latter question was called it looked to me as if the vote would be taken without debate. I arose and expressed my desire to hear some brother on the affirmative side. But I did not add: "I want to oppose it," as your excellent reporter makes me say in the Advocate of December 7. I understood a brother close by to ask me, if I favored it, and I replied "no." I may have added, "I am opposed to it." But I got more than I expected. The call brought Judge Hughston, the Conference Lay Leader, to the front. In a full, clear, and pleasant manner he advocated his cause. He was followed by several others pro and con. The vote was against the measure.

The matter of unification elicited a prolonged and interesting discussion. Besides others, Brother Woollard and Brother W. W. Mitchell took part. Their speeches were notable—Brother Woollard's for, and Brother Mitchell's against. I was sitting too far from Brother Mitchell to hear him. This I shall always regret. I was told by an intelligent layman that "Brother Mitchell's speech brought the Conference to his side, and but for Brother Woollard, who brought up the rear, the vote would have gone against unification." The vote was an endorsement of the Oklahoma plan, but as well as I could determine by the "I's" and "no's," it was not by an overwhelming majority.

Judging by what was said on the Conference floor, and what I heard from laymen and preachers in private, our people are far from favoring organic union on any terms, and I am persuaded that if our General Conference accepts unification on the Saratoga plan, the Church will be disrupted. The majority I believe would be content to let matters remain as they are rather than see the identity of Southern Methodism destroyed. All would welcome federation and fraternity.

I was ashamed of but one thing that occurred at the Conference: That was the little talk I made in behalf of our Advocate—it fell so far short of what the subject deserved. It wasn't a good time. Nobody wants to hear a speech long or short any time within an hour of reading the appointments, as on that occasion.

For about two years I have been studying and looking around for something new to say in support of our Church papers. I have not succeeded. The subject, so far as reasons are concerned, is exhausted. We are shut up to the same old arguments, and to the duty of affirming with more earnestness than ever that the preacher is the key to the situation. He must give it personal attention and personal work, and even with him it must be "line upon line, precept upon precept," and more and harder work. The presiding elder cannot be depended on. He can only advise and exhort and encourage the preacher. He has neither time nor opportunity for making a personal canvass. In this critical time, if the preachers do not come to the help of the Advocates they will suffer.

I hope, Brother Meek, your constituents, who love and trust you as editor, and Brother Chalmers as the hard-working and faithful publisher, will come to the relief of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and give it the support which it so richly deserves. Yours fraternally,

Nashville, Tenn. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

"It will be found that some of the best known people in heaven filled very obscure places while on earth."

CHRISTMAS.

Again rolls round the year to Advent. Again Faith hears the song piercing the air above the shepherds and their sleeping flocks. Again the stars gleam o'er the Judean plains and above that lowly manger where the Savior is born. Faith hearkens and hears the angel's song, the unknown hymn of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Among Men." Long ages had humanity waited to hear that hymn, wearily waiting amid jargon and clamor of contending clans and feuds.

Faith hears the song though, indeed, it is drowned to-day in the roar of guns, in the crash of sabers and the cries of hate. Deep beneath all the war spirit that is cursing the earth, is the angel's song. Amid the war stands Christian piety. And everybody is seeing that war is a failure. When this awful catastrophe is over we have faith to believe the world will want to try Christ. Militarism has now had its full chance. Now let Christ have a chance. Then we will hear full and clear the Advent song: GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST! PEACE ON EARTH! GOOD WILL TO MEN!—Central Christian Advocate.

Obituaries of over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words will be charged for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount of money with the manuscript. That will save writing it twice. Otherwise the obituary will be cited back to the owner.

JOHN NAT KIMBROUGH was born on Dec. 26, 1831, in Attala County, Miss., and departed this life on Nov. 15, 1911, soon after the shades of evening appeared. He was married four times in the following manner: Miss Lena Atteberry, Miss Lula Atteberry, Miss Mary Taylor and Mrs. Mamie Lee who survives him, with the noble son and daughter, Charlie and Nana. In early manhood Brother Kimbrough united with the Methodist Church and thereafter he was a consistent member of the same until death. He was a faithful and worthy steward for more than twenty-five years. Truly he was the preacher's friend and often counseled with and comforted with the pastor in all subjects pertaining to the interests of the Church and the ways of eternal life. Sorrow not, dear sister, that a home awaits us, for we shall see him again if we live rightly. Surrounded by a number of friends and relatives, Brother Kimbrough was laid to rest in Liberty Hill Cemetery after funeral services, which were conducted by his pastor.

THE LATE (NORTH MISS.) CONFERENCE.

Mr Editor: Others have written, or will write, of the recent session of our Conference. It is seldom that the work of the session is written about, save as to the general issues of the appointments. I have had limited experience, five times I have had some hand in the making of appointments. I have usually gone away feeling that there were some men who had not received all the consideration that was their due, or some charge that had been somewhat neglected. If the presidency of Bishop Murrah was pleasing to the brethren in open conference, I may be permitted to say that it was even more satisfactory in the work of the cabinet. Not an unkind word was spoken—not so much as a "brotherly misunderstanding." Some things were done that did not meet the approval of any of us, yet there seemed no way to make more satisfactory adjustments. It was a new experience to me to have presiding elders voluntarily make concessions that did not help them but did help in the making of appointments. The utmost fairness obtained at every cabinet meeting. The brethren seemed more interested in making appointments that met the demand of the whole Conference than in getting some advantage in their districts. The new presiding elders were chosen, so far as I know, without so much as a suggestion from the cabinet. Yet, I would have no one think that due consideration was not given. Every appointment was discussed to an extent so unusual that as I look back at what was done, and on the spirit of the doing, I confess that I could not make even one change NOW that would be an improvement without working a hardship on some other man or place that would seem equally unhappy. If all our Bishops will use the wisdom, the foresight, the kindly spirit that characterized Bishop Murrah, friction will be all but eliminated. No man in the fourteen years that I have been in this Conference has presided over us more happily or helpfully than Bishop W. B. Murrah. So long as I can feel that equal consideration has been given me and my brethren, I am truly ready to "go where I am sent." May we have many such Conferences!

TAGALOGS SPEAK SPANISH.

For Tagalog people it is the newspaper language and Portuguese are the mother tongues.

For about 1,000,000 Canadians French may be regarded as the mother tongue.

For Hayti and other dwellers in the Gulf of the world English is the language of our school instruction and business.

Just now the English-speaking race is on upon a great colonial-hunting errand among the Spanish countries, but the English race forget the most essential thing of all—it never now it talk the other fellow's language.

It is one of the amazing things in the history of education that the United States with its splendid school system and numbers of colleges has never taken the trouble seriously to study the language of the twenty-one republics that lie beyond the Rio Grande.

Oh, yes, we pursue French, but never have as occasion to speak it. We know German, but rarely find a German who cannot speak English better than we can speak his native tongue.

But we have never thought it worth while in the United States to learn to talk with our 7,000,000 Southern neighbors.

We ignored the fact that we come directly face to face with far more people who speak Spanish or Portuguese than will those who speak French or German.

Our Constitution follows the flag, as somebody said, but our colleges fail to keep up with either. Dozens of Philadelphia business houses have to go outside to have their South American correspondence translated.

I am glad to note that with many Congressmen will to strike down our flag in the Philippines various colleges are now preparing to equip young men to do our country's work in Central and South America. At an education of the Drew University will this year establish courses in both Spanish and Portuguese.—Philadelphia Ledger.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM BACKACHE?

When your kidneys are weak and torpid they do not properly preform their functions; your back aches and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be despondent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Get it to-day.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give ful information about how you may find a complete cure without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 429C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Splendid for Bad Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis

An Inexpensive Home-Made Remedy—Gives Surest, Quickest Relief.

Anyone who tries this pleasant lasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and you have a full pint of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PERTINENT.

The Roman Catholic Church is very much opposed to public schools, but it is very noticeable that their people seek, in the liveliest way, to hold positions in those schools. It is said that sixty per cent of the public school teachers of Chicago belong to this Church, which denounces the system.—Presbyterian Journal.

LIVES LIKE STARS.

It is not what the best men do, but what they are, that constitutes their truest benefaction to their fellow-men. Certainly, in our own little sphere, it is not the most active people to whom we owe the most. It is the lives like the stars, which simply pour down on us the calm of their bright and faithful being, up to which we look, and out of which we gather the deepest calm and courage.—Phillips Brooks.

THE FLOWER OF MANHOOD.

There is an honor in business that is the fine gold of it; that reckons with every man justly; that loves light; that regards kindness and fairness more highly than goods or prices or profit. It becomes a man more than his furnishings or his house. It speaks for him in the heart of everyone. His friendships are serene and secure. His strength is like a young tree by a river.—Anonymous.

HAPPINESS AND DUTY.

Happiness dwells in duty performed. It will never yield its blessed treasures to the selfish seeker, nor can it be grasped with a greedy or unwashed hand. Happiness is a mosaic, composed of the tiny stones of daily duty, love to God, love to our fellow-man. Viewed singly they seem of small value; but when they are grouped together, and combined in Christian character, they constitute that costly jewel called "happiness."—Gospel Advocate.

DO SOMETHING FOR SOMEBODY.

O, let us do something for somebody, do something for everybody, and be willing to pay the price, if need be, of our fortune, our reputation, our very life; but let us do something for somebody, as the servants of God and as the servants of humanity. Greatness is service; service is greatness. And this is the way of happiness; he that seeks happiness shall never find it. The way of happiness is the way of service, the way of duty, the way of beneficence.—Bishop Bristol.

GOD'S PROVIDENCE.

The mantle of divine providence is thrown over the entire world. It shields not only the great oak, monarch of the forest, but also the sprig of grass, a tiny shred of the earth's carpet; and if in his infinite watchcare God is so vigilant of these least things, will he be unmindful of man, whom he has made the crown and glory of his creation? If he clothes with the beauty of the lily the vegetation of the field which to-day blooms and to-morrow burns, shall he not much more clothe us who are made in his likeness?—Biblical Recorder.

FREQUENT PRAYER.

Prayer is the key to open the day, and the bolt to shut in the night. But as the clouds drop the early dew and the evening dew upon the grass by that constant and double falling of the dew, unless some great shower at certain seasons did supply rest; so the customary devotion of prayer twice a day is the falling of the early and latter dew. But if you will increase and flourish in works of grace, empty the great clouds sometimes, and let them fall in a full shower of prayer. Choose out seasons when prayer shall overflow like Jordan in time of harvest.—Bishop Tayler.

EFFECTIVENESS TO BE SOUGHT.

I think it was Sidney Smith who said: The Churches are dying of dignity, of conformity. You say there are certain kinds of sermons you like to preach; certain subjects you like to discuss; certain forms you like to observe. To be sure! But if these are not doing the business it's time to tack. Get the winds of God in your sails so you may go somewhere. You may have to leave behind your present methods, and usages, and conventionalities perhaps. Well, Amen! It is better so, than to stay anchored till the old ship rots.—Western Christian Advocate.

ONE PATH OF SERVICE.

To dream through the hour that should be filled with doing is one of the snares and delusions of life. When a noble deed or clever one is announced as accomplished, what a chorus goes up to the tune of, "I thought of that years ago!" And the difference between men who do things and men who do not, lies very often in the mere fact that one goes ahead into action, while the other does not, rather than in any superiority of vision. Doing the good deed one thinks of, filling the moments with what one's thought is urging—that is the path to service.—Sunday School Times.

CHARACTER COUNTS.

"He that winneth souls is wise" is a true saying which has divine authority. But the question is how to win them. Many devise mechanical ways and endeavor by special methods to attract others to the gospel. The best equipment, however, is character. It is entirely an erroneous idea that we must in all respects put ourselves in the position of the one we would win. It is not necessary to drink to win the drunkard. Indeed, by doing so we are likely to encourage him in his intemperance. You cannot influence to Christianity the smoker by merely smoking with him. It is not necessary to play the world's games with the worldly in order to make them spiritual. In fact, we are much more likely to become worldly than they are to become spiritual. On the other hand, by standing for principle and exemplifying the Christian faith by a proper life is the best influence. Character, Christian character, is a magnet which will draw many into the field of Christ's kingdom.—Young Folks.

HELPING HANDS.

Visiting a great factory one day, I went through the room where young girls were fastening books and eyes upon cards. Their fingers fairly flew! Among them I noticed an old woman, busy at the same work. Her heavy fingers were crooked and worn. Months before she came begging for work. She needed it, for she had a sick husband to support. Seeing the girls at work, she said that she could do what they were doing. The superintendent knew that she would be slow and awkward, and he tried to discourage her, but he finally gave her a place at the long bench with the girls. It was such puttering work for her thick-tipped fingers, and she earned so little, yet she had to try! After awhile her pile of finished work began to grow strangely fast. There was a beautiful secret in it. Some of the girls, pitying her, were slipping some of their cards into her pile. Soon she was receiving almost as much as the others, and she was able to keep her little home in comfort.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

The measure of our love to God is our hatred of evil. This is clearly intimated in the Ninety-seventh Psalm, where the Psalmist says, "Ye that love the Lord, hate evil." Measured by this standard, how much do you love God? Do you hate evil with a perfect hatred that seeks to drive it from your own heart and to help others to wage successful warfare against it? Test your love to God by measuring your hatred of evil.—Christian Observer

A MESSAGE FROM BROTHER WYATT.

Dear Brother Meek: Our Annual Conference at Winona, was, to me, a great and inspiring one. Bishop Murrah delighted us all with his strong, beautiful, well-poised character, his wise words, firm and couservative presidency, and splendid preaching. It was such a pleasure to have him with us.

Now I am back for another year at Booneville. The outlook here for success in furthering the Kingdom of the blessed Christ is favorable. The people are genial, cordial and kind. Our missionary society is among the best, and is growing better; our Sunday school, under the watchful and faithful leadership of Brother J. J. Taylor, is making progress, and our choir is indeed excellent.

Brother Dorsey was with us last Sunday. He knows how to preach in a telling manner, and he does it. He is truly "diligent in business and fervent in spirit."

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is certainly a Christian paper that will benefit us and one that we should he proud of. It should he a live companion and factor in all of our homes. God bless you in the good work of giving us such reading matter, and of safeguarding the Church we love! Let us love it better.

Dec. 15, 1916. J. M. WYATT.

COMMENDATORY RESOLUTIONS.

(A copy of the resolutions adopted hy the fourth quarterly conference, Monticello charge, Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, at Georgetown, Nov. 30, 1916.)

"Whereas, In the providence of God, it has been our good fortune for the past several months to enjoy the faithful preaching, brotherly fellowship and efficient counsel, as presiding elder, of Dr. I. W. Cooper; and

"Whereas, he has proven himself to be a safe guide and faithful leader; and

"Whereas, we know that the Church has advanced during his administration; therefore he it

"Resolved (1), That we express our very high appreciation of him as a citizen, preacher, and leader.

"Resolved (2), That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this quarterly conference, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for puhlication."

Signed: F. B. Catching, W. S. Catching, Luther E. Grice, J. B. Smith, W. E. Driner.

THE PATH.

By L. D. Stearns.

A plain, straight path winds out, and up; another—wider, but with devious turnings—out, aud down. One, you must tread, but it is yours to choose; and if you choose the first, when once you have eutered, and take the first step on, from either side—ahead—above—low, sweet whispers reach the soul, thrilling with notes all tenderness, all majesty, all strength, combined in one clear whole.

As you walk along, even though at times your steps seem slow, a Presence that you feel, hut cannot see, is all about you. One by one seeming barriers just ahead disappear; what looked a dreary stretch gleams like a path of gold.

There are no complex turnings.

Joy may come; pain, failure—the Voice and Touch shed over all the same sweet glow. And this path is open for every soul who treads God's earth to-day, if, in honest purpose, they hut drop the past and listen in quietness before Him for directions for the future. He will never fail. Through the voice of Life in the soul He will point the way.

Before we can truly possess anything we must have the spirit that will enahle us to enjoy it.—Rev. E. Brown.

JUST THREE THINGS.

"I once met a scholar," says Bishop Whipple, "who told me that for years he had read every book that he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ; and he said he would have become an infidel but for three things.

"First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray upon the darkness. They shall not take away the only guide and leave me stone-blind.

"Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the hreast of its mother. I know that this was not a dream.

"Third, I have three motherless daughters (and he said it with tears in his eyes); they have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than to leave them in this sinful world if you hlot out from it all the teachings of the Gospel."—Christian Commonwealth.

THE HIGH-FLYING EAGLE.

There are two animals that puzzle naturalists more than any others. They are nature's submarines and aeroplanes, the whale and the eagle. It is known that whales occasionally descend as much as 3000 feet below the surface of the sea—a depth at which, by the pressure of the water, they ought to be crushed flat. Why they are not injured scientists have yet to discover. It is this pressure that prevents a modern submarine descending even 300 feet, let alone 3000. Eagles have been seen through telescopes to fly with apparent ease from 30,000 to 40,000 feet above sea level. At that height no human heing can live, owing to the rarefication of the air. How the hirds live and fly at a far greater height than man can endure for long, is a question still to he answered.—Pearson's.

There can be nothing acceptable to God which does not begin with faith, but he who is contented with becoming a believer is like a man who expends all his strength in laying a good foundation and then ceases to build.—William Henry Green.

COLUMBUS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Mcek: My wife, daughter, and I arrived herc to-day at noon. We were indeed given a royal reception. The entire Board of Stewards, with our faithful and beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, met us at the depot and escorted us to the parsonage in a handsome automobile; and on arival at the nice, neat, and comfortable home of the preacher we were greeted by quite a large number of the faitbful women of the Central Church. They soon led us to the dining room whcre a sumptuous dinner was spread. From this place of refreshment we werc then ushered into thc pantry and invited to look upon the many shelves well stored with all kinds of good catables which satisfy the appetite of a hungry Methodist preacher. We were then presented with a list of the church membership, giving names and addresses. This was also accompanied with a well filled purse from the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards. We are expecting a great year at Central Church. Pray for us.—W. V. Shearer, P. C.

A LETTER FROM MR. DIETRICH.

My Dear Mr. Editor: (We have to be formal In addressing the editors, elsc they may not print our "picces"—I was an editor once myseif.)

The other day, while it was raining outside and nice and warm here by the fireside (kept warm by good Alabama coal), I cracked a fine paper-shell almond grown in California, and inside there werc two fine, fat nutmeats, and they reminded me of John R. Pepper—no, not because they were fat, but because he has written a book that is just as full of good Sunday school nutmeats as that almond shell was full of almond nut-meats. The little book Is "Thirty Years at the Superintendent's Desk" (30 cents, Smith & Lamar), and I wish every Sunday school superintendent in Southern Methodism would get and read it.

Onc of the chapters bcgins: "The first thing to be thought of In the Sunday school session is its program; and every superintendent should have a program written down beforehand. May I be pardoned for giving personal experience? I have been superintendent of one Sunday school just about thirty years consecutively. For nearly the whole of that time I have had a written program for every Sunday's work; and I have quite a number of books laid away now showing what was done on any given Sunday for all those years." And I have becn in Mr. Pepper's home and seen some of those books. He puts down the title of the lesson, where the text is, the Golden Text, the songs to be sung, the story to be told, announcements, and all other details of the session for that day. Mr. Pepper has always had to buy little blank books for this purpose; but there has just come from the presses of our publishing house a splendid little book prepared expressly for this purpose; It is called "O. K. Superintendent's Pocket Record," arranged by Mr. W. H. Fitzgerald, of the Sunday School Supplies Department of the Publishing House, and the price Is fifty cents (order of Smith & Lamar). There are not only blank pages arranged for a program for every Sunday in the year, but there is a page on which the superintendent may note the statistical report for each Sunday, so that he may constantly have all that information by him in permanent, condensed form; then there are hundreds of bright, suggestive, helpful paragraphs scattered through the book that are themselves worth the fifty cents. In the back of the book is a blank for a comparative statement of attendance, by Sundays, by months, and by quarters; a page for a summary of everything for the year; a page for deaths; a directory of officers and teachers (with provision for address and 'phone number); and a page for committees. It is a valuable little book, and any superintendent who will use one of them all the way through a year will then have a book of his own make as full of "meat" as that almond was I began this "piece" with.

Thank, you, Mr. Editor. "If this escapes," etc. You know the rest.

Meridian. A. L. DIETRICH.

Catarrh is an excessive secretion, accompanied with chronic inflammation, from the mucous membrane. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts on the mucous membrane through the blood, reduces inflammation, establishes healthy action, and radically cures all cases of catarrh.

GIVE YOURSELF.

In all relations of life you will find success and every pleasant thing by giving more than is absolutely necessary for you to give. If, when you have a friend to stay with you, you think of every possible way to give him or her pleasure, not stopping at the perfunctory, expectant way of doing things, but reaching forth and brimming over the cup of welcome, you have won from your friend, by just the excess of loving thought, a deep gratitude and appreciation, and awakened depths of feeling impossible to gain by stereotyped duty-giving only.

If, whatever you are doing, either for yourself or others, you do not rest until you have done your work as well as you possibly can, putting in every additional beautiful touch you can think of to complete it, those extra touches, that deep-souled giving, full measure, pressed down and running over, will redound to your credit; you will reap also in deep measure.

If all were to make it a steadfast rule of life just to give themselves abundantly to their present life, living beautifully wherever they are placed, they would soon reach their heart's desire.—Mary Yeates.

MASSACHUSETTS' JITNEYS.

After extended deliberation and much public discussion, the city council of Springfield, Mass., on October 23, passed an ordinance regulating jitney traffic. The ordinance took effect on November 1. In addition to strict requirements as to the routing of jitneys, age of operators, obtaining of certificates from the city, etc., it contains a provision that every motor vehicle so licensed shall be operated for six or more hours a day in every day during the term of its license; that no such vehicle shall be operated by any person more than twelve hours a day; and that no solicitation of passengers by outcry or noise shall be permitted. According to the Electric Railway Journal, no motor vehicle in the jitney class is allowed to take on passengers on any street within 35 feet of any white post or other designated street railway stopping place; no passenger with a child in arms or seated on the lap is permitted to ride on any front seat of the vehicle, and no person is permitted to stand upon any running board, fender or step, or to sit upon any fender, top, or door. No passenger can be charged more than 5 cents for being carried in a motor vehicle so licensed between any two points in the city within the circle having a radius of 25 miles from Court Square. A $1000 bond is required and strict police supervision of routes and standing places is specified. License fees are $15 for every motor vehicle licensed to carry seven passengers or less and $5 additional for passengers authorized in excess of seven.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

"Make a little fence of trust
Around to-day;
Fill the space with loving works,
And therein stay;
Look not through the sheltering bars
Upon to-morrow;
God will help you bear what comes,
If joy or sorrow."

* * *

The editor of a secular daily, in welcoming a Methodist Annual Conference to the city in which his journal is published, said: "Methodism is as militant to-day as it ever was." We wonder if this is true.

* * *

If Jesus is consciously ours, we have no right to be cast down. If we are faithful to him, the future can only bring us good. With him as our daily companion, the pilgrimage of life is an increasingly brightening way, that finally ends amid the dazzling glories of the Father's house. The greatest calamity that can befall a human being is the forfeiture of his inheritance in Christ. With that gone, he has nothing valuable left that will endure.

* * *

Insincerity is never justifiable—not even when one is seeking an end that one considers desirable. To endeavor to effect an unperceived result that could not be openly achieved, by claiming to have some other purpose in view, is unworthy of any good man, to say nothing of one who professes to be a Christian. There are some who need to watch themselves at this point. It is nobler to be defeated than to secure what one wishes by meretricious methods.

* * *

If the benefits of prayer are restricted to a subjective influence upon him who offers it, wherein lies the good of praying for others? And how shall we interpret such pasages of Scripture as the Parable of the Unjust Judge (Luke XVIII)? The now-paraded notion that the Heavenly Father cannot be influenced in his actions by the petitions of his children lacks much of being in harmony with the Biblical idea of prayer. Though infinite, God is not shut up to the monotonous necessity of always exercising his power in the same manner and with an equal degree of intensity. He is a free and unfettered being.

* * *

The Divine forces of redemption are as potent for saving and uplifting humanity as they ever were—they have not weakened or waned to the least extent with the passing centuries. We need but to lay hold upon them and bring them into requisition to witness their regenerating and transforming power among our fellow-men. If the lost are not being brought into the Kingdom, it is not God's fault. The Gospel, rightly lived and preached, will effect the salvation of the human soul as wonderfully and as completely in this day as it did in the opening years of the Christian era. There were no substitutes for it then, and there are none now.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF OUR ALLOTTED YEARS.

How brief, even when longest, is the little span of man's earthly life! True and tremendously solemn are the familiar words of the Psalmist: "The days of our years are three scores and ten; and if by reason of strength they be four score years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away." No matter under what favorable circumstances it may exist, there is something very pathetic about extreme old age. The human body, the noblest material thing beneath the stars, is well-nigh worn out and is soon to fall in ruins, and it is not in that state a pleasant thing to look upon. And, moreover, though wisdom comes with advancing years, if one lives to be very old, one's mental faculties, doubtless because of the infirmities of the physical organs through which they operate, are apt to seem dull and impaired. It is affectingly pitiful to see a person who shone with notable brilliancy and was a tower of strength in other days when his powers have waned and his present capacity is in striking contrast with that which formerly won for him applause and distinction. So true is this that when an individual of great ability is stricken down by death in his prime, he is not uncommonly regarded as having been fortunate, in that he went to his grave before any declension of his talents had lowered his record or dimmed his fame.

In view of the fact that our years in this present world are so few, the going of a single one of them is an event of no little significance. The passing of an additional mile-stone on the short march from the cradle to the tomb may well cause us to pause and seriously reflect upon the meaning of human life and the question as to whether we are turning to a proper account the opportunities of our own existence. It is an awful responsibility for one to live here on this earth—a responsibility which none can shirk and which is eternal in its effects. All are here on probation, and every one of the vast millions of the race is developing as the days go by a character which will determine his everlasting destiny when he shall leave this mundane sphere, as in the near future he inevitably must.

When thus regarded, how precious is time, and how important that it should be wisely used! The first and most imperative duty of man is to secure a saving relation with Christ, which alone can open the way to the highest things for himself and the largest service to his fellow-beings. But the establishment of this relation is but a beginning. Following this, the soul of man should grow in goodness and strength, becoming constantly more like Him who was our great Exemplar; and its energies should be expended in such exercises and activities as will glorify God and help humanity. The building up of one's own spiritual life and one's efforts in behalf of others are endeavors that exert upon each other reciprocal influences. As we become strong religiously we are capable of accomplishing more for the betterment of mankind, and as we lay ourselves out in worthy ministries for those who need our assistance our own natures are strengthened and enriched. Therefore, we need both devotional hours for ourselves and Christian duties which shall call us forth into the fields of active service. Neither one's self nor one's fellow-men may be neglected if one is worthily to fulfill one's mission and make one's life count for the utmost possible.

These swift-fleeting years are our working and building season. What we are to be must be determined during their golden days, and what we are to achieve must be wrought while on lightning-wing they are speeding by. A profound sense of the significance of passing time and an abiding realization of the brevity of this earthly life and the tremendous issues staked upon it, are needful for the production of lofty aims and noble doing. It was a conviction as to these facts, deep-riveted in the soul, that led the great Wesley to write the memorable words: "I am the creature of a day, passing through life as an arrow through the air. I am a spirit come from God and returning to God—just hovering over the great gulf till, a few moments hence, I am seen no more; I drop into an unchangeable eternity. I want to know one thing—the way to heaven; how to land on that happy shore." This pilgrim spirit had much to do with making Wesley a well-nigh peerless saint as to his own religious attainments and one of the most prodigious toilers to set up the Divine Kingdom amongst men that has ever lived. We could pray no more fitting prayer as we stand at the bier of the Old Year and by the cradle of its successor than that expressed in the meaningful words of the mighty Moses in the Ninetieth Psalm: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

The world's greatest tragedy is a wrecked human soul, that has wasted life's opportunities, misspent its energies, and lost its birthright, as it stands pauperized upon the verge of eternity, with darkness and despair ahead. But, though its physical aspects may be unattractive, the close of a life faithfully spent in the worship and service of Christ is hallowed with peace and radiant with promise. Heaven lies about the second childhood of God's servants. "The light that was never seen on land or sea" streams through "the gates ajar" with increasing fullness upon their way. Soon they will enter the "city that hath foundations" and really begin to live.

"Yes, we do but die to live;
It is from death we're flying;
Forever lives our life—
For us there is no dying.
We die but as the spring-bud dies,
In summer's golden glow to rise.
These be our days of April bloom;
Our summer is beyond the tomb"

Whatever else may be scarce, opportunities for doing good are not so. The world always furnishes innumerable open doors to helpful service. And the wisest man is he who makes these possibilities count for most.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

THE BEST WAY.

BE EARNEST NOW.

NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED.

BIBLE READING A NECESSITY.

Christ is knocking at the door of many hearts. He asks of us nothing but an entrance into our hearts that he may sup with us and we with him. Shall we not open the door to him? He is a living, loving Savior. But the Bible was his own word. It is a record of facts as much as a book of doctrines. We read the Bible to learn what God has done, as well as to understand his character. He himself, in the words of the New Testament, "Search the Scriptures; for they are they which testify of me." Many will read the Bible, "that they may have life," but will not come to Christ that they may have life.

Mr. Moody undoubtedly believed that he had hold of the whole man, as well as the whole truth in the Bible, before any work was done. And some say that, he said, "I am full of fear for the next man to be converted by Moody. He is almost certain to fall before the enemy. Many times have I seen them in an agony, and it was the Word of God."

We believe it a grievous error to believe that the most worthy book a person can study is the one that records the experience of men and the Bible. That "a little reading understandingly is ready for every good work and word," and that to study an entire chapter is more useful than a hasty reading of many chapters. Indeed, that would be a mistake.—The Presbyterian.

THE GODLIKE SOUL.

The soul, dearest, is not yours and you cannot break down even a little wall of it. You may try to break your own pride, but a single drop is all the proof of your impotence and pitiableness. O this great and mighty soul! There is something in you more than what is in it. You charm it with the joys of a mother, you bind it in a safe with bolts and chains, but it shall go

THE NEW BIRTH.

HOW CAN WE ACCOUNT FOR JESUS?

It is not possible to account for Jesus on natural principles. Where he stands in the New Testament, even in Christ, the appearance of Jesus is absolutely inexplicable. The New Testament view of Christ is summed up in the Apostles' Creed. We are not going into deity of Christ, because it is not necessary, but the historical and the existence of Christ are not [illegible] as well as the [illegible] of Christ. [illegible] Jesus is a [illegible] and [illegible] Jesus [illegible] Jesus [illegible] Jesus to the New Testament, we say, "How can you explain Jesus?" We invite their faith and surrender. They must believe if they would be saved.—Christian Intelligencer.

PROCEEDING OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. O. S. Lewis.

(Concluded from last issue.)

Sixth Day—Monday Morning.

W. M. Sullivan conducted the devotional exercises. "O for a faith that will not shrink" was sung, after which Dr. J. Rolfe Hunt led in prayer.

Question 22 was resumed and the following preachers of the Newton District were passed in character and gave in their reports: R. A. Sibley, W. A. Hays, C. M. Crossley, M. L. White, L. E. Alford, W. B. Hogg, W. F. Baggett, J. D. King, W. W. Graves, J. G. Galloway, H. N. McKibben, M. R. Jones, W. W. Murray, J. S. Purcell.

H. N. McKibben was located at his own request. J. S. Purcell made a stirring appeal in behalf of the Montrose Training School—a school that has done much for many young preachers. Brother Purcell has done a great and generous part in helping young preachers. He spoke highly of the character and ability of the new president, Dr. J. Rolfe Hunt. Dr. Hunt made an interesting address, outlining the policy of the school.

Dr. I. W. Cooper spoke heartily in favor of the work at the Montrose Training School and made an appeal for a better support and larger co-operation.

Question 22 was resumed and the following preachers of the Port Gibson District were passed in character and gave in their reports: E. L. Alford, J. O. Ware, J. E. Williams, J. T. McVey, J. N. Price, W. W. Hopper, C. F. Emery, J. A. Wells, H. W. Featherstun, C. M. Chapman, T. J. O'Neil, J. H. Foreman, B. W. Lewis, T. B. Holloman, L. L. Roberts, C. H. Herring, J. D. Ellis.

The following from the Seashore District were passed in character and gave in their reports: B. E. Meigs, H. F. Tolle, H. J. Maddox, W. H. Huntley, R. T. Pickett, W. T. Griffin, E. C. Gunn, J. E. Gray, W. B. Jones, L. A. Darsey, B. F. Jones, W. G. Forsyth, G. S. Harmon, L. F. Alford, W. L. Blackwell, J. L. Sells, H. W. Van Hook. Brother Van Hook spoke of the work being done at the Seashore Training School; and Brother J. R. Jones spoke appreciatively of the work of Brother Van Hook as President of that institution.

The Bishop urged the members of the Conference not to get their work into confusion in the closing hours.

Miss Janie Watkins, one of our most honored missionaries laboring in China, was introduced to the Conference and spoke words of appreciation for the privilege of meeting the Conference.

At his own request the name of Rev. I. L. Peebles was referred to the Committee on Conference Relation for the superannuate relation. Dr. I. W. Cooper took up a collection to pay off a mortgage on the home of Dr. Peebles. The amount collected and subscribed was $1242.

The report on Education was read by N. H. Harmon. R. Selby was recommended as Commissioner for Emory University, and M. M. Black was recommended as Commissioner for Millsaps College, to raise $60,000 for a dormitory.

R. Selby addressed the Conference, making an earnest appeal for co-operation in his work for the building of the Lamar School of Law.

Dr. A. F. Watkins spoke in the interest of Millsaps College in connection with the report of the Board of Education.

After amending the report of the Board of Education by taking $250 from the appropriation to Millsaps College and applying it to the Seashore Training School, it was adopted

Announcements were made, the doxology was sung, and the Conference adjourned to meet in afternoon session at 3 p m.

Monday Afternoon.

The Conference was opened at 3 p m., with Dr. T. B. Holloman in the chair. J. H. Randolph led in prayer after the singing of Hymn 446, "When I can read my title clear."

Dr. A. F. Watkins introduced a resolution on the question of Unification, and, with an amendment (which was accepted), it was adopted.

Bishop Murrah came in and took the chair.

W. M. Sullivan read the report of the Joint Board of Finance. The first Sunday in March was recommended as Veterans' Day. The report was adopted.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, Manager of the Orphans' Home, addressed the Conference.

A. F. Watkins introduced a resolution to the effect that a suitable memoir of Rev. G. W. Buchman, for many years a familiar figure in our Conference and acting as Colporteur for the Publishing House, be placed in the Conference Journal.

C. M. Chapman reported his work.

M. M. Black read the report of the Board of Missions. A superintendent of missions for each district was recommended.

C. W. Crisler, J. R. Jones, and H. B. Watkins were recommended as a Committee on Evangelism. Rev. Dan Kelly's work was commended and he was again recommended as Conference evangelist. The report was adopted.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read by L. E. Alford. The fact was brought out that more money for aiding churches and parsonages would have been paid if the assessment for Church Extension had been paid in full. The report was adopted.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Conference Relations, recommending Dr. I. L. Peebles for the superannuate relation, was read and adopted.

Resolutions of thanks expressing appreciation for the hospitality of the good people of Jackson, and for courtesies and services rendered by the different pastors and others were presented by Rev. C. F. Emery and were unanimously adopted.

A resolution expressing appreciation for the services of Dr. Plato Durham was unanimously adopted.

The Bishop called for the statistical report, which was given by J. L. Neill.

The report on Lay Activities was read by G. L. Harrell, the Conference Lay Leader, and was adopted. G. L. Harrell was re-elected Conference Lay Leader.

G. S. Harmon called attention to the fact that J. C. Chambers was made Treasurer for the fund subscribed for the benefit of Dr. I. L. Peebles.

L. Fayard, supply, was called on to give in his report of the Wolf River Mission, which was highly interesting.

It was moved and carried that following the reading of the appointments the Conference stand adjourned.

The minutes of the morning session were read and approved.

The Committee on Memoirs nominated by the presiding elders were elected.

Minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved.

"Am I a Soldier of the Cross" was then sung heartily by the brethren. Dr. W. H. LaPrade led in earnest prayer, after which Bishop Murrah made appropriate remarks, speaking feelingly of the memories and associations of the past, and the emotions that arose in connection with his administration of the Conference. The appointments were then read.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. O. S. Lewis.

The many friends of Dr. H. M. Dulose hailed with delight his presence among us, and regretted he could not stay through the Conference. He is a worthy successor of those who have preceded him as Editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review. The Mississippi Conference is proud of him.

The presence of Rev. William Larkin Duren, the capable and popular pastor of the First Methodist Church at Columbus, at the sent of the Conference was greeted with pleasure by his many friends in this Conference. "Father" Duren is an honored graduate of Millsaps College, where he won fame as an orator. He looks as young now as he did then.

Brother J. M. Quinn, of the North Mississippi Conference, also attended the Conference in Jackson. After the death of Brother L. H. Galloway, he served with distinction the Centenary Church in McComb, and is held in high esteem by that congregation.

The brethren of the Conference were truly glad that Rev. M. L. Burton was able to attend the Conference, but regret that he cannot take work another year. No one among us is more beloved than Brother Burton.

The address of Dr. McMurry, on Friday evening, was fully up to his high standard. His description of his first impression of the headquarters of the Church Extension Board was laughable. No one went to sleep during his thrilling address. His reference to Annuity Bonds seemed to appeal especially to Wiley Ferguson. L. E. Alford proved to be the champion calculator of the evening. Brother W. M. Williams did not pretend to know a thing about arithmetic. Some others have learned not to try to answer Dr. McMurry.

As Dr. McMurry would say, the landscape was wonderfully improved by the presence of so many preachers' wives. A cordial invitation had been extended them by the good people of Jackson to attend the Conference. An unusually large number took advantage of the rare opportunity. Among those attending the Conference we noted the following: Mesdames C. F. Emery, W. M. Williams, R. P. Fikes, J. F. Campbell, J. G. Galloway, B. F. Lewis, H. P. Lewis, Jr., B. W. Lewis, O. S. Lewis, T. B. Holloman, W. H. LaPrade, Roy H. Kleiser, H. L. Norton, B. F. Jones, J. R. Jones, Claud Jones, T. W. Adams, M. F. Adams, H. H. Watkins, J. V. Bennett, W. W. Hopper, W. W. Graves.

The Mississippi Conference never met in so grand and commodious a building as the beautiful Galloway Memorial Church. Situated within one block of the magnificent State Capitol building, it compares favorably with that stately building and is a great credit to Mississippi Methodism. Directly in front is the home of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway. As the writer looked over that vast auditorium he could not help thinking how Bishop Galloway could have filled it with that matchless voice, and regretted that this church was not completed in his lifetime. It is truly a fitting memorial for so grand a man. It was a genuine pleasure to see and greet Mrs. Galloway.

The report of the Conference would be incomplete if no mention were made of the sermons preached by Dr. Plato Durham, Dean of the Candler School of Theology. Besides his great address on Christian Education, he preached two great sermons on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. All hearts were strangely moved, and heaven came down our souls to greet, as he richly fed us with the Word of God. His sermon on Thursday afternoon was the feature of the Conference. The writer has never witnessed a greater demonstration at Conference than that attending the close of the sermon. Every eye was filled with tears, many glad hallelujahs filled the vast auditorium as the mighty current of spiritual power was felt by all. When Dan Kelly made the call for all who desired to have more of the spirit of Christ, as Paul possessed it, to come to the altar and pray, there was a rush to the front. Many a preacher's spiritual life was enriched by these services and greater results are sure to follow Dr. Durham's labors.

Bishop Matthew S. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is reported to be suffering from a throat affection which has necessitated a temporary cessation from preaching.

Human Intelligence in Bell Service

Bell Telephone operators are human beings with the same hopes, aspirations and sorrows that you experience.

They are trained to be quick, courteous and accurate. They take pride in their work. Sharp words spoken thoughtlessly are as keenly felt by them as by other individuals.

They are at your service night and day, striving to render perfect service. In emergencies they often save lives and property; in the ordinary day's work they save you time, travel, trouble and money.

TO-DAY.

To-day! To-day, we have it all!
To use, to spend.
All yesterdays are past recall.
Time will not lend
One little hour from out the past,
So use to-day while it shall last.
To-day! To-day, it is our own.
To-morrow may
Elude us. Death stands near,
But of to-day
He may not rob us. Only we May lose or use. Which shall it be?

MORBUS SABBATICUS.

A certain parish paper of Australia has the following that is too good to keep. We are not yet ready to sanction Christian science, but if ever an ailment could yield to the treatment of this cult, we believe "morbus Sabbaticus" would be that one. "Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, is a disease peculiar to Church-goers. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday; no symptoms are felt on Saturday night; the patient sleeps well, eats a hearty breakfast, but about Church time the attack comes on and continues till services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better, and he is able to take a walk and talk about politics; but about Church time he gets another attack and stays at home. He retires early, sleeps well, and wakes up on Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until next Sunday." The vicar, in the same manner, suggests a remedy: "On Sunday," he says, "rise at seven; use plenty of cold water. Then mix up and take internally a dose composed of equal parts of the following ingredients, namely, will, push, energy, determination, self-respect for God's day, respect for God's Book, respect for God's house. Stir well; add a little love just to make it sweet. Repeat the dose every three minutes until Church time, unless relief comes sooner. If the day is stormy an external application of overshoes, rubber coats, and umbrellas will be beneficial."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

LEARNING FROM EXPERIENCE.

(The following account of one of the happenings at the late meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, held in St. Louis, is from an editorial in the Alabama Advocate of December 14. Dr. Branscomb, the editor of that paper, and Dr. Bradfield, of the Texas Christian Advocate, have perhaps done as much idealistic and gushy-sweet writing on the subject of Methodist union as any two men in Southern Methodism. To mention obstacles in the way of the marriage of the two great Episcopal Methodisms, has been to incur their displeasure, Dr. Bradfield even going to the extent of expressing the hope that Southern Methodists would not insist upon having the Church, North, to part with its colored contingent as a condition of union. Truly, there is no school like that of experience. If the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate had written the severe statements italicized (by us) in Dr. Branscomb's utterance, would he not have been proclaimed horribly naughty by the extreme unionists? But this deliverance comes from an unexpected quarter, and is several bowshots beyond anything that has emanated from our pen.—Editor N. O. Advocate.)

In the afternoon the point of highest interest was a discussion of the Negro question. A report from a committee referred to the "Negro Churches." Bishop C. T. Shafer, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, arose and protested against the word "Negro." It is said the Bishop has Negro blood in him, but you would never suspect it from his appearance. He looks like a white man. He said the word "Negro" was a term of reproach, and should not be used in designating the work among Americans of African descent. He wanted the word "colored" used. A sure enough black man, about whose color there was no mistake, got the floor and insisted that "Negro" was the right term. He routed the sensitive, almost-white Bishop in the argument, but the Negroes were divided, and the Council did not know what to call its black constituency. As the discussion continued, some of the Negro speakers attacked the South most violently. Dr. Bradfield, of the Texas Christian Advocate, got the floor and said in substance that while the thinking people of the South had no defense to make of the lynching and burning of Negroes by crazy mobs, yet he wanted the Council to remember that the provocation was great. Unmentionable crimes would sometimes drive the best of men to frenzied deeds.

R. C. Ransom, a tall, long-haired, dramatic-looking preacher of the African Methodist Church, proceeded to go for Dr. Bradfield and the South. He declared that thousands of Negroes were fleeing for their lives from the Southern States. That they were being murdered in a most terrible manner, and not for the unmentionable crime. He told of horrible atrocities that he said had recently been perpetrated in Georgia. That the colored people were trying to get away from there. That recently he was in the State and saw white men take the tickets away from some 35 colored people and tear them up to prevent their leaving. That the challenge to this country was not from bleeding Europe, but from the millions of oppressed and suffering Americans of African descent. We wondered what he was doing at the Georgia station where all those tickets were said to have been destroyed, and if he had any connection with the effort that the press boldly affirmed was being made to transport Negroes into doubtful States just before the election. We wondered how, if the other Negroes were detained, he escaped, and suspected that possibly he may have found it necessary to hasten his departure, and for this reason he was making his vicious attack upon the South.

We were convinced of one thing. The time has not arrived when it is best for the Southern whites and Northern Negroes to attempt to work together in the same Church organizations. That the Negro has grievances, all will admit. But the semi-social recognition given some Negro preachers in the North has so turned their heads that they feel at liberty to attack at will the section where the vast majority of their people live and must continue to abide. Such outbursts can do them no possible good, and are calculated to alienate their friends and anger any one who may be their enemies.

We are glad to say that, so far as we know, the delegates representing the C. M. E. Church took no part in knocking the land of their birth, nor the people among whom they labor.

THE AFTER-MEETING.

Mrs. Annie A. Preston.

"That was an impressive service, John," said a New York clergyman, leaving a Connecticut convention in company with the preacher of the evening, who was his classmate and friend. "I wondered you did not give an invitation. For my own part I longed for an after-meeting."

"You may have the after-meeting with me," replied the preacher, smiling a little dubiously. "It may be that I need it as much as any one present to-night, and you may be able to help me in a matter where I often feel that I need help."

"What is it, John?"

"The after-meeting."

"Because you fancied that the majority of those present were church members? I hardly think so. There are often delegates from Sunday schools who have not made a profession. Even if all had done so a season of prayer would have fitted us for the services to-morrow. I fear we are neglecting precious opportunities of drawing nearer to the Fountain. But tell me in what particular you are needing advice."

"You will think me singular, foolish, possibly, but suppose I feel the presence of the Spirit in an unusual degree and give the invitation and no one responds? What then?"

"Why, man, is not prayer open to you? Can you not pray for the soul brought almost to the point of decision but holding to some prejudice or fear of those present? Do you never give the invitation?"

"Never by myself, alone."

"How can you give it by yourself, alone, believing in the Abiding Presence?"

"I do believe, John, indeed I do. Possibly I am not as conscious of it as I should be, for always there is that lurking timidity that no one will respond, that I have overestimated the power of my own effort, and that by asking for witnesses—for God does need His witnesses—I shall make myself ridiculous."

"That you, a pastor, make this confession, is remarkable. I wondered at your church reporting so few baptisms. What have you for encouragement?"

"A certain tenderness and attentive listening to the preached word, that leads me to expect an ingathering. I wish you could go home with me and help me in a series of special meetings."

"That, in my opinion, would be unwise. Let me advise—but, see! There is a prayer-meeting going on in this basement vestry. Come," and as they entered the low, crowded, and not large room, he murmured: "It might be an overflow from our convention, there are so many familiar faces."

The two clergymen stood with bowed heads by the door as the hymn that had attracted them drew to a close, while some one uttered a brief prayer, and were greatly moved as an elderly brother asked gently if there were any present who desired the prayers of Christian people. "There is a convention going on in the city," he said, "and I fancy some of the delegates may have followed the invitation of our hymns, and, if so, they are very welcome. We will sing another verse, during which some may feel led to draw nearer."

As the singing sweetly and appealingly filled the room many were on their feet and the preacher of the evening at the large church on the main street, still keeping fast hold of his friend's arm, went and stood with a little group in a near-by seat.

As the music ceased he said brokenly: "I have a confession to make. My friend and I have just come from the convention alluded to by our brother. We both felt a longing for a meeting of this nature, but failed to accept our opportunity, and were led in here—and here I find these dear young people of my own church accepting the invitation that their own pastor failed to extend. I am self-condemned."

And the elderly brother said, still very gently, "The adversary still walketh about seeking whom he may devour. You have had your lesson, my young brother; you will never be intimidated by him again."

"I was sure I was not alone in my longing for an after meeting," said the New York visitor. "Let us pray."—Zion's Herald.

JOY IN ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD.

The strong note of the early Church life was the joy of Christians. Nowadays it too often seems as if religion were a burden to be carried. In the old days it was arms of God that carried believers as if on eagles' wings. This contrast is heightened all the more by contrast of circumstances. Perhaps nearly a majority of Christians fifty years after Calvary were slaves, subject to compulsion and indignities and with little hope of comfort or wordly success. Yet the impression they made upon their generation was that of people who were in possession of a great and overflowing joy. They went joyfully to drudgery. They sang hymns in prison at midnight with backs sore from the whip. They went to their death like those who saw a heavenly vision. A company of such happy Christians in every village and city would simplify the problem of evangelism. This joy was so strange in that old, weary Greek and Roman world that men were attracted to Christianity by it as the iron filings are attracted by the magnet. It brought many a sorrowing man and woman into the fold to experience the joy of a loving acquaintance with God.—Herald and Presbyter.

P. Morgan & Company on January 1. In a search for promising young men Henry P. Davison discovered Cochran and selected him with Seward Prosser, now President of the Bankers Trust Company, to add him to reorganize the Astor Trust Company. Mr. Cochran, who is 16 years old, will be the youngest of the twelve partners of Mr. J. P. Morgan.

A GREAT PAPER

Dear Mr. Editor: The initial article of the forthcoming number of the Methodist Quarterly Review, to be in the mails about January 1, will bear the title, "Christ's Person and His Cross." It is by Dr. Peter Taylor Forsyth, the great scholar and writer, of Hackney College, London. The editor writes this note to say that for eloquence, evangelical force and clearness, as also for soundness and perspicacity, no matter equal to this has for a long time appeared in any American journal. We are particularly anxious to get this paper before the ministers of our Church, and especially before the men in the younger ranks of service. We believe it to be the full note of a new discussional literature which is to lift theology and interpretation out of the distress from which it has so largely suffered in recent years. The reading of this paper cannot fail to infuse into the pulpit ministrations of our younger preachers a vitality of statement and an effectiveness of interpretation which will tell at once. The January number of the Review will have other fine features, but we are laying particular stress on the good fortune which has brought to our pages this most exceptional contribution of Dr. Forsyth. The Review is $2 per annum; but if any of our brethren feel that they cannot afford a year's subscription we would urge them to send 50c for the January number. Very faithfully,

H. M. DuBOSE.

SUPERANNUATION OF REV. I. L. PEEBLES.

Through the entire stretch of my own active ministry, I have known and have been intimately associated with Isaac L. Peebles. I have known him only to love and honor him. I have never known any man who gave himself, soul and body, more devotedly to the ministry of the Holy Word and who labored more assiduously in heralding the glad message of salvation than has he. His memory is stored with the lore of the ages. I suspect his library equals that of men who have received twice the amount of money he did from the charges he served. In many respects he is a remarkable character. The subscription raised at Conference for the purpose of securing him a home shows the esteem in which he is held by his brethren. There is not a town within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference where he is not known. His name is a household word among the nearly 60,000 Methodists of the Mississippi Conference. He only could tell us the number of children in our State and Church upon whose heads his hands have been laid in holy baptism. Men of the sterling worth of I. L. Peebles, sacrificing personal interests for both Church and State, and laboring incessantly for both, are the great sills upon which civilization rests. He has never spared himself in ministering to the needs of the souls and bodies of the people whom he has so faithfully served for 38 years. Did he ever spend a night or a day anywhere without seeking to know if those he met were at peace with God? I have been associated in the pastorate with ministers of other denominations who were far more feeble and aged than he, but, who through the love of their people, were kept in the active work.

Superannuation is one of the hardships that the itinerant preacher must at the last endure. With [illegible] deep sorrow [illegible] Brethren [illegible] superannuation. I am [illegible] to our laymen and preachers [illegible] our Conference Endowment Fund [illegible] to be able to honorably [illegible] out of the debt on the anniversary [illegible] life and giving what [illegible] years it gave without [illegible] unable to secure a [illegible] Who among us has ever given more liberally to the various causes of the Church than I. I. Peebles? He gave freely of what he made and it becomes the duty of us all preachers and especially laymen whose [illegible] to see that such men [illegible] their declining years.

The Fernwood charge through Mr. P. H. Enochs has added $1000 to our Conference Endowment Fund and all of us surely expect the seven Districts to bring in $4000 more. The proper care of these tried and true servants of the Church is an obligation that my conscience will not allow me to shirk. With the superannuation of this holy man of God fresh in our minds, a man who "wrought righteousness, obtained promises, out of weakness was made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens," I make this earnest plea for the better support of these aged servants of the Church. I plead with our laymen to insist that they shall not be retired on less than $500 a year.

A SORE BEREAVEMENT.

Dear Brother Meek: Our pastor at Bonita, Brother A. D. George, and his wife are deeply grieved over the death of their youngest son, Herbert Marvin, who was two years of age. He was a bright child and was sick only three days when his young spirit took its flight heavenward. Those who have passed through similar sorrows will know how to sympathize with the parents. He was buried in the Bonita Cemetery on December 20, beside the body of a fellow-itinerant preacher's child. What a sacred spot this is to these faithful preachers! For fewer places on earth are nearer heaven than the spot where rest our dead.

Sincerely yours,

Monroe, La. ALBERT S. LUTZ.

A VALUABLE BOOKLET.

The Mississippi Anti-Saloon League has had the Mississippi anti-liquor and anti-liquor advertising laws of 1916 reprinted in booklet form. This has been done to meet a wide demand coming from ministers, Sunday school workers, and other temperance and prohibition workers. Send to Rev. T. J. Bailey, D. D., Jackson, Miss., ten cents in silver, actual cost, and the booklet will be mailed to you at once. It is important that our ministers and leading laymen should be accurately informed concerning these matters.

A MESSAGE FROM DR. COOPER.

To the Patrons of Whitworth College:

The President of Whitworth College sends you the season's greetings and good wishes. He is pleased to announce that the present session has been, so far, a happy and prosperous one. As a whole, the student body has been healthy, studious and enthusiastic. One of our pupils, Miss Amielle Alford, has lately been awarded a prize by the State Federation of Women's Clubs for the best original musical composition. We now have 208 students and 22 officers and teachers. We were glad to have your daughter with us during the past few months and shall expect her to return in time for the opening hours of school work—study hours from 7 to 9:30, Tuesday evening, January 2.

The new Governor of Florida, Mr. Sidney J. Catts, is a Baptist preacher.

Our two Annual Conferences in Oklahoma have resolved to raise $60,000 for the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, at Dallas, Tex.

The Southern Methodist Evangelists' Association held a profitable annual meeting in Memphis, Tenn., last week. The next session of this organization will be held in Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, who is well known in North Mississippi, has been returned to Paragould, Ark., for the second year. He was given an enthusiastic welcome upon his return from Conference.

Dr. W. N. Ainsworth lately closed a quadrennium as pastor of the Mulberry Street Church of Macon, Ga., which was notably fruitful. Dr. Ainsworth has been stationed at Wesley Monumental Church, Savannah.

The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) says: "The Baptists of Nashville, Tenn., within the past sixteen years have grown from 9 to 19 churches, and have doubled their membership. During this time 16 new houses of worship have been erected."

Bishop Kilgo's presidency, according to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, gave great satisfaction at the late session of the North Carolina Conference. The influence of this gifted chief pastor is being widely felt for good in Southern Methodism.

The managers of the Raleigh Christian Advocate have been given, by Conference action, the right to raise the subscription price of that publication to $2, at their discretion. They hope, however, that it will not become necessary to do this.

The following press dispatch was sent out from Mexico on December 18: "The Constitutional Assembly has passed the educational section of the new Constitution, barring all clergymen of all sects from teaching in any school, by a vote of 90 to 56."

Pope Benedict has publicly announced that he has no intention of attempting to mediate among the warring nations of Europe, and that statements attributed to him (appearing in the press) concerning points at issue among them are unauthorized.

Dr. C. A. Schilling, a physician at Abbeville, La., has been elected Superintendent of the State Baptist Orphanage at Lake Charles, La., to succeed Rev. J. N. Shealy, who resigned on account of ill health. Dr. Schilling was formerly a Baptist minister.

During the two years that he has been pastor of Trinity Church, Dallas, Texas, Dr. S. H. C. Burgin has received 599 members. Dr. Burgin is now pastor of the new First Church, formed by uniting the Trinity and old First Church congregations. His present flock numbers 1700.

Mr. W. C. Everett, of the Dallas Publishing House, states that the Committee to arrange a suitable program for the observance of the centenary of the planting of Methodism in Texas will meet in Dallas on January 10. This celebration should prove a highly interesting one.

The following were named as representatives of the M. E. Church, South, on the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America: John M. Moore, Frank M. Thomas, Paul H. Linn, H. M. Dobbs, and L. C. Branscomb; Alternates—B. P. Taylor, and R. E. Dickinson.

In a letter in the North Carolina Christian Advocate, Rev. J. M. Culbreth, who has resigned as Assistant General Secretary of the Epworth Leagues of our Church and acepted a pastorate in St. Louis, says: "Since the General Conference of 1914 the status of the Epworth League has been assured, and its resources have been multiplied. The work throughout the Church has been more completely systematized, and a spirit of solidarity has been cultivated among the widely separated units of the organization." We are pleased to note this statement. The Epworth League has a distinct place in the Church—a place that nothing else could probably fill anything like so well—and its interests everywhere should be vigorously promotcd.

REV. B. P. JACO'S WORK MUCH APPRECIATED.

(The following letter and reply are self-explanatory. Brother Jaco wrought well for Grenada College, having raised in cash and subscriptions for that institution during the past year more than $37.000; so it is but natural that these young ladies, who are devoted to the College, should highly appreciate the service which he rendered it.—Editor of Advocate.)

"Rev. B. P. Jaco,

Former Commissioner of Grenada College.

"Dear Mr. Jaco: We, the students of the College for which you labored so diligently during the past year, want to express our appreciation of your work and our sorrow at your departure from our midst.

"We not only value the success that your efforts have brought to the College, and thank you for that; but we feel especially grateful to you for the fatherly attitude that you always maintained toward us. You were one of the leading lights and guiding models of our Christian lives. Your absence at chapel will be felt by all of us, and your inspiring talks, which we often had the pleasure of hearing, will never be entirely replaced by any others. Your fatherly attitude in our welfare at all times has won an important place for you in our affections, and we feel that the Christian influence that you exerted here will have a far-reaching effect, and that the good that will come from your and Mrs. Jaco's residence among our student body cannot be easily measured.

"That your life may continue to shed blessings in the future, and that happiness and prosperity may ever come to you and Mrs. Jaco, are the wishes of your devoted admirers and grateful friends—the students of Grenada College."

Signed by sixty-six students of Grenada College.

"Lexington, Miss., Dec. 20, 1916.

"To the Students of Grenada College.

"Dear Girls: In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of appreciation, I am glad to say that you all were an inspiration to me to do my utmost for the school; and that your happy faces, cheerful hearts, and cordial attentions drew upon my heart, calling out the best that was in my soul.

"My love for, gratitude to, and interest in each of you will follow you through life, hoping that you may all fill noble spheres.

"Sincerely.

"BEN P. JACO."

QUITE A DIFFERENCE.

Dear Doctor Meek: Some time ago a very smart Campbellite preacher said to me. "I will give you $500 if you will find me a standard classic Greek Lexicon which will define the word 'Baptizo' to mean anything but immerse." He said if you can not do that, you Methodist people are committing an awful sin by disregarding the mode of Christian baptism. It is a well known fact that all the writers in Classic Greek were heathen people. They knew nothing of Christ and his religion. Words are the signs of ideas. In all the vocabulary of Classic Greek there is not one word which will express an idea of any doctrine of the New Testament. If we were to run back into the classic Greek for the primary meaning of words and try to apply them in the New Testament, we would soon become primary infidels. Take the Greek word 'Ecclesia' as it is laid down in Classic Greek and try to apply it to the New Testament, and you have no Church. Take in the same way 'Deipnon' and carry it into the New Testament, and you have no Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Take the word 'Christos' as employed in the Classic Greek and transport it into New Testament, and you have no Jesus Christ. Take in the same way the word 'Theos' with its significance in Classic Greek and try to apply it in the New Testament usage, and you have no God. The word 'Pistis,' which is the Greek word for faith, is found in Classic Greek and it has a significance in the New Testament unknown to heathen writers. The word 'Metanoia,' which is the Greek word for repentance, has a meaning in the New Testament that heathen writers never dreamed of.

The word 'Baptizo,' as it appears in Classic Greek, may always mean 'to dip,' 'to sink,' 'to immerse,' 'to overwhelm;' but it has no more to do with the ordinance of Christian baptism than the laws of the dog star have to do with the ocean tides. Take the word 'Baptizo' as it is used in Classic Greek and apply it to the New Testament, and you have no Christian baptism. Aristotle was the greatest Greek philosopher, and probably the greatest philosopher that the world has ever known, but he knew nothing of Christ; he knew nothing of the doctrines of the New Testament. Socrates was for years a pupil of Aristotle and was a great and good man; but he knew nothing of the Gospel of the Son of God. Demosthenes was a 'son of thunder,' a golden-tongued orator, but the name of Jesus Christ was probably never spoken by him.

In conclusion, I wish to say that any person who will try to apply the primary meaning of words contained in Classic Greek to the doctrines of the New Testament will get himself into the dilemma from which he can not escape. The word 'baptize,' or 'baptism,' comes from the Greek word, 'Baptisma,' which has both a Classic and New Testament meaning. It is a generic and not a specific word. It means a thing done, an ordinance performed, without the least reference to the manner of doing it.

CONVINCED BY EXPERIENCE.

It is a happy thing to see a paper willing to take a new position. The Spokane Daily Chronicle, Washington, was an ardent opposer of the prohibition measures two years ago. Now, after prohibition has been practically applied, it says: "This paper is ready at ten seconds' notice to fight its best against any serious effort to repeal or cripple the prohibition law. The dry way is the way of economy, of safety, of righteousness."—Presbyterian Journal.

THE WAY OF IT.

A little boy made him a wee snowball
And rolled it about in the snow;
And it gathered the crystals and clung to them all,
And oh! how that snowball did grow!
Oh! my!
You've made one, of course, so you know.

A little boy whispered a word one day
Unkind of some one he knew,
And each one who heard it reported his way
The story till oh, how it grew!
Oh! my!
And a heartache was caused by it, too!

Two little red mittens the small ball rolled,
That grew in such magical way,
And a little red tongue was the one that told
The tale that grew big in a day.
Oh! my!
Be careful, wee tongues, what you say!
—Child's Hour.

ONE NEW YEAR'S DAY.

"We are going to have just the grandest time New Year's," said Halford to his friend. "Papa has engaged a big barge and four horses and we're going to Old Fort Inn—all the uncles, cousins and aunts—and take dinner and come home by moonlight. O, we'll have a jolly time! What are you going to do, Lester?"

"O, we shall stay at home, I s'pose," Lester answered.

"But you'll have company and have a big dinner, won't you?" asked Halford.

"No," said Lester. "You see, papa was sick all the fall, and then mother had to go to New York to have her eyes 'tended to, so there isn't any money for good times. But I'm glad mamma's eyes are better. I guess I don't mind very much about Christmas and New Year's."

"'Course you do—you can't help it," said Halford. "It's a shame! But I'll have to go home now. Good-by!" And Halford jumped on his sled and started homeward. But he was so unhappy about it he could hardly eat his dinner.

"Lost your appetite, Halford?" asked his father.

"I'm thinking all the time about Lester," said Halford. "They can't have any good time New Year's 'cause his father hasn't any money, and I think it's a shame, and he a minister! Why can't you invite them all to go with us, papa, to Old Fort Inn?"

"I would do it with pleasure if there were room," said Halford's father. "And now I think of it, Aunt Lois has decided not to go, and I'll ride on the seat with the driver, so if you'll give up your seat to your friend Lester, there will be room for the three of them. If you wish, I'll send an invitation at once."

"And I stay at home! Why, Papa Newell! You know I couldn't do that!" cried Halford. "You know the boys are expecting me to play hockey with them."

"I don't ask you to do it," said his father. "But you seemed so anxious to have Lester go I was trying to think how we could manage to carry them. But as they know nothing about it, they won't be disappointed. So think no more about it."

But Halford found that not so easy. He could not help thinking how many things and how many pleasures he had that Lester did not have. There was his bicycle, his box of tools, his new sled, his skates and ever so many books, and he was sure—now he came to think of it—that Lester was as fond of all those things as he was. Yet he was sure he could not give up this ride even for his best friend. That was too much. But in the evening he said to his father:

"I couldn't stay at home alone, and besides, I don't believe Mr. Lowell would feel able to pay for their dinner and everything." There was an uncertain and troubled look in his face. His father looked up from his paper; then he laughed.

"O, you are still thinking about the ride, are you?" he said. "Well, as to that, of course if I invited them to go I should pay all the bills. That would be my part, and you know Grandma Hawes would be delighted to have you spend the day with her."

Halford sighed and said no more, but that night he could not sleep. The next morning he went to his mother.

"Mamma, won't you or papa write that invitation for Mr. Lowell and all of them, right off," he said, "and tell them they must be sure to go? And I guess I'll go to grandma's to-day, 'cause she always likes to have me stay two or three days." And just as soon as he could get ready he was off to grandma's.

The next morning he was cracking nuts when he heard a great noise of sleigh-bells, horns and shouting. He ran to the door, followed by grandma, Susan the cook, and Rover. There were his father and mother, the Lowells and all the others, and everybody looked happy.

"Hurry and get on your coat," said papa, "and you and Lester can sit up here beside me. We thought there wouldn't be much fun in going without you, after all, for the boys needed you for the hockey game."

Halford, with joy, climbed up beside his father, and the four horses dashed over the smooth road toward Old Fort Inn.—Youth's Companion.

BENNY'S DIARY.

Little Ben likes to write, and so he was very much pleased when mamma gave him a diary. It had a red cover, and the date of each day was prettily printed on a separate page.

"You had better keep your diary on the table in your room," said mamma. "Then you will always know where to find it."

"Yes, mamma," said Benny. "What shall I write?"

"This is New Year's day," said mamma, "so you might write some good resolutions."

"What are they?" asked little Ben.

"Why, you might resolve not to lose your mittens and books and toys," said mamma, smiling.

"O, yes!" said Benny, so he wrote on the first page of his diary, and put it in his pocket. He started to carry it upstairs; but he met Rover in the hall, and he had to stop and wish him a happy New Year. They had a good romp together, and then Benny saw that it was snowing. So he ran out to find Tom, who had given him a severe snowballing a few days before; and now there was a good chance to pay him back. The snow kept on falling for three days, and Benny had so much fun that he quite forgot his new diary. But one day, when Tom was shoveling a path, he saw something red in the snow. What do you think? It was Benny's diary. He had dropped it in a snowbank, when turning somersaults.

Tom opened it, and this is what he saw in Benny's writing:

Jan. 1. I am gowin' to make a reserlution not to be so carcless about losin' my things."

And that was all that Benny had written. How Tom did laugh. Benny looked sober a minute, and then he began to laugh, too.

"Well," he said, "I am goin' to make a new reserlution not to lose anything more, never again."

And mamma says that he is keeping this resolution pretty well for such a little fellow.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE YEAR 1816.

Historians tell us that the year 1816—one century ago—was long called in New England "the year without a summer." Snow fell every month in the entire year. In Salem, Massachusetts, the thermometer on June 5 registered 92 degrees. On June 6, it had fallen to 43 degrees, and on June 7 ice formed on many small ponds, while there were snow flurries.

In Maine snow fell and the ground was frozen hard, while those doing out-door work had to wear overcoats and mittens. In Vermont on June 8 an old gentleman lost in the woods all night, was so badly frost-bitten that one toe had to be amputated. Many birds were frozen, while others took refuge even in houses.

In July there was frost and on August 29 a killing frost caught some Massachusetts counties, but farmers saved part of their corn by digging it up, roots and all, and placing it in a sheltered spot where it ripened on the juices of the stalks.—The Presbyterian.

WHEN THE APPOINTMENTS WERE READ.

Rev. James H Moss

They were brave men and true who assembled to hear
The appointments announced for the next Conference year;
They had suffered and toiled, they had labored full well;
The result of their labors the appointments would tell.

They had labored for God, but the judgment of men
Had determined the question of where and of when
They should take up again the struggle and strife;
And for some it meant hardship, for some it meant life.

They were good men and pure who in council had striv'n
To reward the deserving, and to all had been giv'n
The positions that seemed for the Church and the man
To be fitting; for they do the best that they can.

There were some disappointments—of course it must be;
In this world even justice we never will see.
'Twas a little word dropped, not in malice, oh, no!
Simply thoughtless, that's all, but a man could not go

Where the harvest invited, and so once again
He must take up the work with a quiver of pain.
It is needless to fret, to fume or to frown,
He must just do his part, "Live it down, live it down."

Over all is the Savior to help and direct;
If we keep close to him we may surely expect
To be useful and happy, be guided and blest,
And when labor is ended how sweet will be rest!
—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

SIN.

Anything which makes sin less sinful connives at sin. Anything that glosses sin, that varnishes it, that decorates it, is in reality a minister of sin. And in this way even our very forgiveness can be the enemy of virtue and the barrier to a holy life. In our desire to be "nice" we are often hurtful, and in our wish to be sweet and pleasant we are often morally and spiritually destructive. We may smother the report of an open sewer with a flask of eau de cologne. Our forgiveness may be just sweet-scented sentiment, and the uncleanliness of the sin only daintily concealed. Well, now, if the holy Lord is to forgive our sin, it must be in some way that will not make light of it. However he may forgive us, the sin which is forgiven must not appear light and frivolous; it must appear exceedingly sinful, black with the blackness of the blackest night. If the holy Lord made sin less awful by the manner of his forgiveness, what an awful world would this become! It is at the Cross of Christ that we see what divine forgiveness has cost. At the Cross the guilt of sin is forgiven, while its appalling nature is revealed.—Dr. J. H. Jowett.

A WORD OF GREETING.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate extends to all its readers the greetings of the season, and wishes each of them a happy New Year. That 1917 may bring to them an enlarged knowledge of Christ and richer and fuller experiences of grace, is our most earnest prayer. Better blessings than these can come to none on earth.

WILL IT BRIGHTEN, OR FADE?

On December 12 a faint bow of peace suddenly appeared in Europe's battle-clouded sky, as a result of an address in the Reichstag by the German Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, who announced the willingness of the Central Powers engaged in the prevailing war to consider terms looking to the cessation of the vast conflict. Along with this, a note was sent to several neutral powers announcing the readiness of Germany and her allies to treat with the nations arrayed against them for peace, with the expectation, of course, that this note would be conveyed to the governments of the latter. No terms are specifically set forth in the German official note; but it was reported from seemingly dependable sources that Germany and her coadjutors would be willing to leave France, restore Belgium, and organize Poland into an independent country, while Turkey should keep Constantinople, and Germany receive back her lost colonies, the Balkan situation being left to be adjusted in conference.

These overtures of the Central powers were not received favorably in any one of the countries warring against them. In France, Russia, and England the heads of the governments spoke strongly against a consultation upon the suggested basis. In ringing speeches in the British Parliament, the Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd-George, and Mr. Asquith, who lately retired from that responsible position, both declared that England and her allies would not sheathe the sword until the purposes for which they went to war were secured, namely, the destruction of Prussian militarism, a guarantee of the safety of small nations, and the establishment of peace upon a permanent basis.

It was at first announced that President Wilson would merely communicate the German note to the hostile nations, offering therewith no suggestion of any kind; but later through Mr. Lansing, our Secretary of State (moved, it was said, by the fact that the United States is becoming increasingly involved in the situation developing), he addressed a note to all of the belligerent powers asking them to state definitely what each of them is fighting for and what is meant by "a just and permanent peace." On the whole, it cannot be said that the President's message has been welcomed abroad, but it is yet too early to tell what may come of it. Men of distinction and large influence are expressing their minds in the various countries involved, and we would not presume to predict what a day may bring forth.

For two and a half years the present war, which has been the most appalling in human history, has raged upon an expanding scale. Scores of billions of money have been wasted, millions of lives have been sacrificed, the wounded and maimed fill all the hospitals in Europe, and there is scarcely a home in any of the belligerent nations in which is not heard the voice of mourning. Indeed, the shadow of this colossal conflict is upon the whole world, and the citizens of every land are feeling the influence of it. But while all this is true, and anxious as we are for the awful ravages of this mighty war to cease, we are not disposed to clamor for peace apart from righteousness and justice—a peace that would be only an armed truce, to be followed by another outbreak of hostilities. If Germany is willing to measure up to what unprejudiced arbiters shall declare to be justice and to stand for disarmament, she can doubtless obtain a cessation of strife; but we doubt if she will find it possible to do so otherwise.

MISDIRECTED ENERGIES.

Some preachers are so busy trying to discover new religious truths that they seem to neglect the great fundamental teachings that God has plainly revealed in his precious Word—teachings that have produced the most majestic Christian characters that the earth has ever known. At any rate, their so-called discoveries are what they are most given to talking and writing about. And the results, as evidenced in their ministries, are what might be expected. The harvest in this case, as it is in all others, is in harmony with the sowing. Those who are fed principally upon the shifting winds of modern speculation are sure to be wobbly in faith and lean in Christian character.

NOT A SUFFICIENT REMEDY.

The Church News Association (New York) says: "Reports from England show Established and Free Church leaders to be agreed in the view that hereafter personal conversion should form the basis of Church membership. Both are circulating tracts on what they call 'Baptized Paganism,' which, it is declared, follows from the plan of baptizing any willing person." That the Churches need to be much more careful as to the fitness of the persons whom they admit to membership is a truth that could scarcely be too strongly emphasized; but the evils flowing in part from too much laxness at this point cannot be cured by a mere resolve to receive only converted applicants. The correctness of this statement is shown by the fact that denominations that have had the rule of taking in only avowed Christians are no better off respecting the matter of worldliness than those which also have admitted professed seekers of religion. The trouble is that no church can tell when an individual is truly regenerated by merely questioning him. That is a thing that continuous daily living alone can prove. To lift higher its standards of membership, a Church should both seek conscientiously to guard its door and to require a reasonable conformity to its rules upon the part of its communicants. It should recognize the fact that it has not lost jurisdiction over those within the fold. It needs a door of exit as well of entrance. It is the lack of Christian discipline and spiritual nurture that is stripping the Churches of their power.

TO OUR FRIENDS.

Except to superannuated preachers and the widows of preachers, the price of the Advocate to all persons (including ministers) is $1.50. There are no longer any club rates. It was with sincere regret that we adopted this new policy; but the high price of paper and other printing materials forced us to do so. Practically all other religious journals in the country have taken similar steps. We appeal to our hard-worked, faithful pastors to stand by us in these unusual times, and we believe that they will. Get all the renewals and new subscriptions that you can, brethren, at $1.50; and if any brother declines to take the paper at that price, see if you cannot induce him to have it come to him eight months for $1. We do not desire to strike off a single name from our subscription files that we can possibly retain; but, under the existing conditions, all subscriptions must be paid up or discontinued. Shall we not bestir ourselves to keep the Conference organ in the homes of our people? The best time to undertake such work is early in the year.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Many Church journals are bringing out no issue this week. The New Orleans Christian Advocate, "the old reliable," is making its appearance as usual.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the new presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, spent Sunday, December 17, in Tupelo, Miss., where he made a good impression.

Rev. W. D. McCullough, of Shannon, Miss., says: "We arrived here on December 13, and were given a kindly greeting. I think that we shall be delighted with the Shannon people."

The people at Abbeville, Miss., have given Rev. R. S. Lawson, the new pastor assigned to that work, a hearty welcome. We are grateful to Brother Lawson for kindly words of encouragement.

Rev. A. S. Briscoe, of the Nettleton (Miss.) Circuit, gave us 3 subscriptions on the 18th inst., which he says he hopes is but a beginning. We are grateful for this good work so early in the Conference year.

Rev. Olin Ray is delighted with Tunica, Miss., his new appointment. This is not surprising. With a capable pastor and responsive flock to work in co-operation, we shall expect to hear of forward strides in this charge soon.

"Mr. W. W. Wright announces the marriage of his daughter, Laura Luola, to Mr. Victor Hugo Stephenson on Saturday, December 23, 1916, Booneville, Miss." So reads a card upon our desk. We wish the bride and groom much happiness.

Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Dubach, La., writes: "I have made my first round on this charge and have been given a royal reception. All the services held so far have been most encouraging. We have a fine people and are expecting a good year."

Rev. D. B. Boddie, of Waller, Texas, renews his subscription to the Advocate, and sends in his business letter the following message: "I wish the Advocate force and all the Louisiana Conference a merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

A letter from B. H. Rawls, of Moselle, Miss., states that he has been in poor health all this year and was too unwell to be present at the late Annual Conference in Jackson. We hope to have better news from this faithful servant of the Master at an early date.

In Dr. Boswell's communication, entitled "At Conference," which appeared in the Advocate last week, he was made to give the date of the great tornado which swept away a part of Grenada, Miss., as "May 7, 1840," when he wrote "May 7, 1846." We regret this error.

Rev. Leon I. McCain reports that he has been cordially received at Hammond, La., and that he is being greeted by large congregations at the preaching services. The people of that progressive town should count themselves fortunate in having as their pastor this gifted young minister.

In a note to the Editor, Rev. O. S. Lewis says: "I am pleased with my appointment to Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg. I shall spend Christmas in Hattiesburg with relatives before going to my new charge." We wish Brother Lewis a large measure of success in his pastorate in the Hill City.

A message from Rev. C. W. Campbell, who is now at Greenville, Miss., gives directions concerning his Advocate, which he says he could not well do without. Brother Campbell expresses disappointment that he found it impossible to be with the brethren at Jackson during the late session of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. C. F. Emery, of Natchez, Miss., says: "I have been very cordially received here. This is a most delightful place to live—rich in historical associations and abounding in every element that makes life pleasant." We trust that Brother Emery's labors may be crowned with much success during the coming year.

We extract the following from a business letter to our office from Rev. J. W. Faulk: "We have been splendidly received by the people of Boyce, La., and the other churches of this charge. Brother Perry did a good work here and is pleasantly remembered. The people embraced in this field are loyal and religious, and a good year is confidently expected."

We have in hand an interesting communication from Rev. W. C. Carisle, our new pastor at Louisville, Miss., which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will be published next week. Brother Carisle is in place in his new field and is already at work.

The Editor acknowledges himself indebted to Rev. H. N. Harrison, Rev. W. W. Jones, and Rev. O. S. Lewis for reporting the proceedings of our three patronizing Conferences. These brethren generously rendered this service gratuitously, and did it well. We shall not soon forget their kindness.

Rev. R. S. Walton, our wide-awake pastor at Winnfield, La., has taken a census of his congregation to ascertain the number of subscribers to the Advocate and will seek to have the Conference organ more largely circulated in the homes of his people. We appreciate the work he is doing looking toward the accomplishment of this end.

We are in receipt of an attractive card containing the following interesting announcement: "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Macaulay Babington announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Mr. Karl Irwin Bean, on Saturday, December 23, 1916; Franklinton, La." Mr. and Mrs. Bean will reside at Bogalusa, La. The Advocate extends congratulations.

A personal note from Brother J. H. Johnson, of Clarksdale, Miss., informs us that his pastor, Rev. R. O. Brown, has been ill since Conference and found it necessary to go to a hospital in Memphis for treatment. When Brother Johnson wrote, Brother Brown had returned home, but was still confined to his room. We trust that he will soon completely recover.

Sunday, January 27, will be "Hospital Day" in Mississippi. Let every pastor and Sunday school superintendent begin now to get ready to observe it. This day should bring in a large sum of money for the Methodist Hospital, located in Memphis. That commendable enterprise is now an assured success, but the institution needs to be opened at the earliest day possible.

The following press dispatch was sent out from Jackson, Miss., on December 18: "Mr. Walter M. Lampton, of Magnolia, Miss., has had his life insured for $12,000 in favor of the Methodist Orphanage located here. At his death this sum will go to that institution. He has set aside $1000 a year to pay the annual premiums. This year the premiums amounted to only $800, and a check for the remainder has been sent to the Orphanage." This is, indeed, a noble benefaction.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, of the Sicily Island (La.) charge, sends us a remittance to cover 4 subscriptions to the Advocate, and in his business communication appends the following note of interest: "I am cutting wood at home (Sicily Island) now, and building a new brick chimney to my house. My Ladies' Aid Society at Oak Grove gave me a general shower of gent's furnishings on the day I was 50 years of age, December 7, 1916. These people are hard to equal in kindness to their pastor."

Just as we are about to close our forms, a 'phone message from Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, brings the information that Rev. U. G. Foote has been transferred by Bishop Hoss from the Baltimore to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Rayne Memorial Church, this city. Mr. Foote has served prominent churches in Louisville, Ky., and other cities, and will come to New Orleans highly recommended. We hope that he will have here a great pastorate.

Mr. A. G. King, Secretary of the "New Church Commission of Algiers" (New Orleans), writes us as follows: "At the last meeting of our 'Commission,' held December 15, Rev. R. M. Brown, our former pastor, was unanimously elected an honorary member of our body. We hope that this evidence of esteem upon the part of his friends over here will show Brother Brown that he has not been forgotten by those whom he served so well during the past four years." This is an honor worthily bestowed.

The following, contained in a business note from Brother W. R. Whatley, of Eden, La., is a good New Year message: "I enjoy and love the Advocate. It is a great comfort to me. I hope to be able to work more for it and the Kingdom of Christ. I love all my brethren. I have been a Methodist preacher for 43 years." We regret to learn that Brother Whatley has been confined to his bed with rheumatism for more than three weeks and that he is still suffering from that painful malady. We hope that relief will soon come to him.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, writes: "I am now in the district parsonage at Lafayette and will soon begin my work. We were delayed very much in moving by reason of the illness of our daughter, Mrs. E. C. Cameron, of Purcell, Oklahoma, now on a visit to my family. My field is an inviting one, and to it, God willing, I shall give myself faithfully." As a presiding elder, Brother May ranks with the best, and a truer man to the Church would be difficult to find. We wish him well in his new "diocese," which is a widely extended one.

Our esteemed friend, Rev. R. P. Neblett, is in place in his new field, and writes us as follows: "Como is a delightful charge. We have here a modern $20,000 brick church, which has Sunday school rooms, a ladies' parlor, a pastor's study, and a fine pipe organ which cost $2000. I am going to do my best here. We had a fine beginning on Sunday, December 17. The audience was an excellent one, and there was one accession by profession of faith and four by letter." We are pleased to know that Brother and Sister Neblett are so pleasantly situated. They well deserve to be.

Writing under date of December 21, Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, of Magnolia, Miss., says: "The people here gave me a most royal reception at the church last night. A prayer meeting crowd almost as large as my Sunday morning congregation greeted me." Any flock should count itself happy to have so able and true a shepherd as Brother Harmon.

From numerous sources we have heard that Rev. V. C. Curtis is starting off well on the Greenville District. He spent Sunday, December 17, at Clarksdale, where the brethren classed him with Brother Duren, a former highly esteemed pastor, as a pulpit man.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Bogalusa, La., writes: "Please state that I am prepared to mail to our pastors in Louisiana and Mississippi copies of my program for the installation of church officers. I charge only for the printing and postage. We have received from the people here many substantial tokens of appreciation, including big, fat Christmas turkeys, poundings, and handsome gifts in cash. I have taken in 20 members during the first three weeks of my pastorate at this place." The installation program referred to by Brother Townsley is an excellent one, and the brethren would do well to secure and use copies of it.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria (La.) District, sends us the following note: "Through somebody's fault, the Elizabeth and Fulton charge was omitted from the list of appointments published in the Advocate. The place was left to be supplied, and I have supplied it with Rev. J. H. French." We feel reasonably sure that this omission was not attributable to an oversight in the Advocate office, as proof of this kind is very carefully read in connection with the copy. Another charge did not appear in the official list sent us for publication and was inserted by a 'phone message after the Advocate was on the press.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital located in Memphis, Tenn., calls attention to an error which occurred in the Advocate's report of the proceedings of the late session of the Mississippi Conference. W. M. Sullivan, M. S. Enochs, W. H. Saunders, C. W. Cochran, and J. L. Decell were not named as Hospital Commissioners, but as the Conference Hospital Committee to consider the report of the Commissioners of the projected institution. They recommended and the Conference elected as Hospital Commissioners: J. R. Jones, J. T. Leggett, L. N. Dantzler, P. H. Enochs, and W. E. Lampton. We are pleased to make this correction.

The Winnsboro (La.) Reporter of December 8 gives extended editorial mention of the work accomplished in that charge by Rev. H. B. Thomason and pays a beautiful tribute to his Christian character. It states that he received 90 members into the Church, left three prosperous Sunday schools (two of which he established), and that his salary was met in full. The Reporter concludes its editorial as follows: "While we are loath to give up Brother Thomason, we congratulate the people of Bayou Chicot upon getting such a man. Rev. S. D. Howard, who is to succeed Brother Thomason here, comes well recommended as a preacher and Christian gentleman, and we hope to have a prosperous year under his administration."

DR. WEBER ON OUR EDUCATIONAL WORK.

(The following is an excerpt from a communication in the Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati, of November 29, 1916, from the pen of Dr. John Langdon Weber, now of Jackson, Tenn. This is quite a different utterance from those which Dr. Weber made in this same journal in the months immediately following our last General Conference, which, in part, consisted of criticisms of the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate for his emphatic insistence that the time had come to sever all the cords that bound us to Vanderbilt University and to support concentratedly and energetically our new educational institutions in Atlanta and Dallas. We trust that it is not immodest for us to say that we are greatly gratified at the extent to which the policies for which we have inflexibly stood in the Church now seem to be prevailing.—Editor of the Advocate.)

The biggest thing we have on foot is the movement for our two new universities. The loss of Vanderbilt is turning out to the advantage of the South and the enrichment of the Church. Emory University, at Atlanta, is growing at a rate that excites the admiration of the whole South. The buildings, all of pure white Georgia marble, are rapidly taking their places in the landscape scheme that is to make the campus of Emory University one of the most beautiful of the show places of America. The whole scheme of the university home is unique and bears the air of individuality as perhaps no other institution in America does. The departments of theology, law, medicine, and liberal arts are now in operation with a most encouraging attendance of students. Chancellor Candler, in addition to his Episcopal duties, is planning large things for the university, made possible by the gift of $1,000,000 on the part of his brother. Commissioners are being appointed in most of the Conferences and an active campaign is contemplated both for money and for students. There is nothing in the South that can begin to compare with this young educational giant that has leaped forth from God eager to serve man and to stand loyal to him who is the light of men. I have no hesitation in making the prediction that when the fifth birthday of the university comes around, Emory will have a chain of beautiful buildings practically complete and $5,000,000 in her endowment fund. This is possible largely because Bishop Candler is pouring his very heart's blood into the shaping of the service of this new enterprise of the church. He is a man of the deepest convictions and of courage unquestioned. He knows how to do everything except take care of himself. It will be the height of unwisdom for the church to allow him to work himself to death; but he will do that very thing if some restraining hand is not laid upon him.

Across the Mississippi, out at Dallas, Texas, Bishop Mouzon is sponsor for the second university. While they have not had the inspiration of a $1,000,000 gift, they have had a great city to rally to their aid, and all Texas Methodism to respond in liberal gifts to their call. They have made a most encouraging start and will surely go on to acknowledged success. Texans do not know how to fail. * * * *

We will have more than two hundred young men in our schools of theology this year. While we had but the one school at Vanderbilt we did not have the half of that number. No Church has so hopeful a situation in regard to the supply of young ministers.

The following illustration, used by a writer in a secular paper, is not very elegant, but it impresively sets forth a fact of no little significance; so we pass it on: "A boy I know skinned a skunk the other day. His family had to drive him out of the house for a bath and clean clothing. He protested that they were fastidious; that it 'wasn't so bad,' and that there was no use making a fuss about a little bit of smell. The trouble was that he had been so close to the horrible odor for so long a time that he had got used to it. His olfactory sense of values had been warped. That is what is happening to many persons with respect to sin. They have tolerated it until they have lost their realization of its awfulness."

On Nov. 18, 1916, Mrs. EFFIE McCLAIN reeeived her summons to the home eternal. She was the daughter of Mr. J. F. and Mrs. M. J. Carlisle and was born on Nov. 2, 1882. She was married to Mr. Viétor McClain in 1909. She leaves a husband, one ehild, and a host of relatives to mourn her death. She was eonverted when a ehild and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. From the time of her conversion till the hour of her death her faith did not wayer. Her only regret in dying was leaving her baby. Who can love like a mother? She proved her faith by her works in her every-day Christian life. Her influenee was not only felt by the family—it was far-reaching. She was looked upon by every one who knew her as a conseerated Christian woman. My message of eonsolation to the bereaved family is that I eommend them to God, who alone can eomfort them in this hour of bereavement. The remains of the deeeased were laid to rest in Ingomar Cemetery, to await the morning of the resurreetion.

C. A. NORTHINGTON.

Mrs. J. W. CARNES was born in Okolona, Ark., on Nov. 5, 1875. The following year her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kemp, moved to Tennessee, in which State she lived until 1903. At the age of fifteen, she united with the M. E. Chureh, South, at Pleasant View, Tenn. The next year, at that time residing in the eity of Nashville, Tenn., she eonneeted herself with North High Street M. E. Chureh, South. Quite early in her Christian life she became noted for her devotion to the Chureh, her faithfulness in the performanee of duty and independenee of charaeter and aetion. In 1900, she was married to J. W. Carnes at Nashville, where they continued to reside until 1903. After leaving Nashville, they lived at Tampa, Fla., and a while in Texas. The last five years they spent in MeDonoghville, La. It was while a member of our Church at the last-mentioned place that Sister Carnes did the best work of her life. Being a gifted and industrious womau, she took a prominent part in all the ehureh's aetivities. As a Sunday sehool teaeher and as the head of the Junior League work, her life and labors were abundantly fruitful. She was so self-forgetful and self-sacrificing in the performance of the duties of the home and the work of the Church, that she considered not herself. Her death was a shock to the whole eommunity and was lamented by all who knew her. Her friends and fellow-Christians unite in saying: "Well done, good and faithful servant." May God bless, eomfort and sustain her grief-stricken husband and her noble splendid daughters—Thelma, Lois, and Wilmuth! Beloved, "sorrow not even as others which have no hope," "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has taken Mrs. Howard Gay from our midst, be it resolved:

1. That we express our deep sense of loss in her going, and our respect for her life of eheerfulness and unselfishness.

2. That we extend our tenderest sympathy to her stricken relatives and friends, and pray that the Holy Spirt may comfort and sustain them in their great bereavement.

3. That our Missionary Soeiety has lost a true friend and eo-worker.

4. That a eopy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Sabine Banner, and to the family.

Signed: Mrs. Bill Allen, Mrs. C. C. Wood, Miss Laurina Holladay.

MILLSAPS NOW HAS EXTENSION BUREAU.

Millsaps College now has an Extension Department which will aid the high schools of the State in furnishing material for debate, umpires for athletic contests and library information on scientifie subjects to those who make such requests. This extensiou bureau has already mailed out letters to several schools offering the services of the faeulty and also inviting the pupils and teachers to make use of the Millsaps library. In addition to this, the eollege will give a trophy eup for the best school debating team which makes use of the college auditorium next spring. Prof. S. G. Noble is in charge of the Extension Department. The letter mailed to the schools follows:

"Dear Friend:

"The Extension Department of Millsaps College wishes to co-operate with you, and with all who are interested in the furthering of debating amoug the high schools of the State. With this in view we want to place at your disposal the resources at our command.

"1. We are having printed a list of desirable questions to be used in high school debates. Would you like to have us mail you the list?

"2. We will furuish free of charge information as to where data may be obtained for defeuding either side of these questions.

"3. We will open the doors of the Millsaps library to any who may desire to eome here to inform themselves on questions for debate. The library is unusually well equipped with data of this kind.

"4. For the benefit of a limited number of high schools, we will offer a trophy eup to the school sending the best debating team to a contest in the college auditorium this spring.

"The college stands ready and waiting to eo-operate with the high schools not only in the matter of debating, but also in other educational interests which we hold in common. If at any time you desire technical or scientific information which we have in our power to give, we will be glad to correspond with you or have our faculty speak to you in person. We can furnish popular addresses, advice with respect to your school organization, athletic umpires, etc., at almost any time. Please let us co-operate with you. If you wish further iuformation, indicate this to us on the enclosed card."—Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

A HAPPY OCCASION.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have had an extremely pleasant and unique experience to-day of which I wish to tell you. I suspect few, if any, of the preachers have had a like one. Mr. Elijah B. Parker and his wife, Mrs. Eudora Roper Parker, to-day celebrated their fiftieth marriage anniversary at their home, about twenty miles from Kosciusko, Miss., and invited me to perform an appropriate ceremony. Their home was the scene of a happy reuuion—all of their children, five in number; all of their grandchildren, ten in number, and one great-grandson were present, lavishing their love and affection upon them and showering them with beautiful gifts. A beautiful gold ring preseuted by the children was placed upon the finger of "Mother" during the ceremony.

Mr. Harry Stewart and his wife, Mrs. Elvira Stewart, who have been married fifty years and a few days, and Mr. William Herrin and his wife, Mrs. Martha Herrin, who will have been married fifty years in a few days, were also present. They also joined in the celebration and received tue congratulations of the entire party. These three couples have lived as neighbors ever since their marriage, and a close and sacred friendship has developed in their association. It was a beautiful sight to behold these three happy couples, upon whom God has showered his best blessings, seated together receiving such expressions of love and affection as that appreciative group of friends showered upon them.

After the ceremony celebrating the anniversary of their marriage was concluded, it was my very great pleasure to baptize a grandson, Eugene Benard Parker, Jr., and a great-grandson, William Allen Smithson. Two prettier and sweeter babies will never receive Christian baptism at the hands of any minister. There were about seventy-five persous present to witness the impressive ceremonies and enjoy the hospitable entertainuent dispensed in this splendid home. We all felt the sacredness of the occasion, rejoiced in the happy estate of these uoble servants of God, and joined in the hope and prayer that there will after a while be a happy reunion of these families and all of the company in heaven above. May the riches of His grace be upon Brother and Sister Parker, Brother and Sister Stewart, and Brother and Sister Herrin, their children and grandchildren, and the great-grandson, now and evermore.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL.

My grandfather, Robin White, and my great-grandfather, Louis Coon, came from Engiand during the Revolutionary War. Engiand, being short of soldiers, induced a number of British boys to comio aboard a British vessol by offering them refreshments—molasses candy being one of the inducements—and when tho vessel was weii filled with these young men the gang piank was raised and tho ship saiied to the American shore. So Robin White, aiong with many others, was turned over to General Ferguson, who took a stand on King's Mountain in fancied security. Somo of the men who gathered to opposo Ferguson were "Mountain Men" from Tennessee. Coloneis Isaac Sheiby, John Sevier, Wiiiiam Campbeii, McDoweii, and Wiiiiams ied bodies of men to the scene. Ferguson was attacked on severai sides—tho attack iasting oniy a iittie over an hour, and the general was kiiied. The signai of surrender was raised, and the whoie army was said to have been taken prisoners; but the story of Robin White was, that he escaped with a wound in his leg, and hid in the Catawpa swamps—spending his nights in a hoiiow iog, which furnished a sheiter from tho cold and rain. Being hungry, ho wandered around and came to a iittie house on a hiii where he was given something to eat, and a young iady, as iong afterwards as he remained in hiding, saw that he was fed.

At the close of the war, when he could safely come from his hidingpiace, he worked for this family, and afterwards was married to Miss Hux—the young iady who fed him.

In 1810, he, with his wife aud chiidren, moved from South Caroiina to Mississippi through the country and settled at Buffaio, in Wilkinson County, having purchased a large tract of land near Buffaio. The same year he planted a pecan tree, and at this time the tree still bears, having gathered about it a good pecan orchard.

All the chiidren, a large family, settied near him. The oldest boy settled at White's Town, giving the town its name.

Later on Robin White's wife died, and he married Mrs. Boland (neo Casseis), and two children were born to them, Mary (Poiiy), and Archie Whito.

In 1812 my maternal great-grandfather, Louis Coon, with his family, moved from South Caroiina to the same community in Wilkinson County.

Amio Jane Coon, daughter of David Coon, and my father, Archie White, were married about 1840, and twelve chiidren were born to them, and seven of these were boys, I being the fourth boy and the seventh child.

At the age of thirty or thirty-three years my father and mother both joined the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Carmel Church, near Gloster, in Wilkinson County. I have heard my father state that on his return from church in the afternoon of the day when he joined, the devil tried to convince him that he was not converted. He carried the devil down to the oat patch, and there in the tall oats he settled it forever with him. The next day, Monday, my mother accompanied my father to church and she joined also. My father and mother were shouting Methodists, though reared as Campbeiites. Sunday night when he returned home, after uniting with the Church, my father erected a family aitar, and kept it up, night and morning, until th end of his life. He was eiected a steward and was iicensed to exhort, and later on was licensed to preach in local orders.

I joined the Church at Macedonia, but the time I do not remember, as I was so small when I did this. Having been reared in the lap of reiigion, I knew not what remorse of conscience was. I was reared on a farm and labored hard day after day by the side of the negroes on my father's farm, my father's property having been swept from him after his return from serving four years in the Civil War.

I was born on Feb. 3, 1856, and at the time when I should have gone to school he was not able to send me, consequently, i grew up with very iittie education, having spent about twenty-five months in the common schools of Wiikinson County, being taught by different teachers—Davenport, Poio Haroid, Ab Germany, Miss Josie Timon, and Pole Whittington. Whatever i know to-day that was iearned outside of those schools I got from reading to my father in his old age, and what theology i have learned I got from my father's books and the Conference course of study. As to my call to preach, it came early in iife, when I was but a boy on my father's farm. It gave me great deiight when the preachers came to my father's home, for it was a home for preachers, and I used to sit for hours listening to my father and the preachers discuss Bible questions and Church work.

The first preachers I remember, other than my father, were Brothers R. D. Norsworthy, T. W. Brown, Shelton, Wade, Langford, and Howard. I am very much indebted to T. W. Brown and D. C. Langford. Brown is the man who spent half a night with me, that I might surrender and go into tho ministry. D. C. Langford is the man who put his arm around mo and; with the tenderest expressions, heiped mo on to whatever success I have had. Dr. T. S. West is the man who took mo up from Wiikinson County and sent me as a suppiy to the Vancieave Circuit. He was my presiding eider, and a fine man he was. Being interested in humanity, the best I could do was to gather the negro boys on my father's piantation and teach them at night. Several of those boys have become preachers in the C. M. E. Church.

On August 8, 1878, I was married to Miss Frances Gordon Haynes. At the age of twenty-nine, I was recommended by the Macedonia Church, J. D. Newsom being the pastor, to tho fourth Quarterly Conference, of the North Wiikinson Circuit for license to preach (Woodviiie District), which was held at Mt. Carmel Church (where my father and mother were converted and joiued the Church), on November 14, 1885. D. A. Little was the presiding eider, and R. M. Cassels, Secretary.

I was appointed in December, 1887, by J. A. Eiiis as Junior preacher on the Gloster work under J. W. Brown, who was really a brother to me, and served the congregations at Mt. Vernon, Homochitta, Cedar Grove and Gaiioway Chapel. This was a great year—more than a hundred peopio were brought into the Church. My first man, Rev. G. W. Huff, was licensed to preach.

In December, 1888, I was appointed to Vancleave as a supply by Bishop Hargrove. On my way to my work, I traveied from Buffaio in Wiikinson County on horseback through tho country, through Centerviiie, Oiio, and Franklinton, La., spending the night with a widow who lived at Pool's Ferry on Pearl River, in company with a Baptist preacher by tho name of Biibo. This lady had no one to feed our horses, so I went and used the last corn that she had in her barn, and was told that she would not charge anything for keeping us for the night; but I could not afford to ieave without paying after I had used her last corn; so I paid her (this iady was very sick with the rheumatism), and early the next morning I left, passing through the Forney neighborhood. Doing without dinner, I arrived at Popiarviiie at sundown, and spent the night with dear Brother J. M. Gann. That night he closed the back doors and went into the house thinking that he had left his store secure, but soon some one came running in and told him that he had left his front store doors opened. So he went to fasten them and came back laughing at his forgetfuiness.

The next morning, leaving them early and again doing without dinner, I spent the night with some family whose name I have forgotten, but who lived at Perkinston, in Harrison County.

M. L. WHITE.

Homeward, Miss.

P. S. While I was junior preacher under Rev. J. W. Brown on the Gloster Circuit, Brothers Billie Webb, Dan McNeil, Mike Anders, Epho Foreman, J. B. Anders, Cebe Crumm, John Huff, Abe and Tom Steele and Ferd Huff rendered me many kindnesses. G. W. Huff was a steward of Homochitta Chapel, and a better steward no preacher ever had. He was a friend, indeed. The success I had on the work was largely due to the influence of my father. As a local preacher, he had preached over all this territory, and was much loved. I was treated better on account of him.

Established 1879

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended.

It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment.

Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once.

In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose.

The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights.

Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria.

Cresolene's best recommendation is its 37 years of successful use. Send postal for Descriptive Booklet.

A Cough May Lead to Tuberculosis

Distressing and dangerous complications may follow if you neglect it. Even when so serious a stage is reached, Eckman's Alterative may bring relief. For more than twenty years it has been widely used in such cases with beneficial results.

As with any medication employed in this trouble, the best results are obtained when the patient pays strict attention to diet and gets plenty of rest and fresh air.

Because of its easily assimilable content of calcium chlorid, this preparation is effective where a tonic upbuilder is indicated. As a corrective of nightsweats it has proved most useful. It may be tried with absolute safety, since it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

Baton Rouge, First Church, Monday, Mar. 5.

The above round of conferences is set for the day on which the conference will be held. Let every member of the quarterly conference be present. The hours of holding the conference will be set to meet the convenience of the brethren. The hours of preaching will be arranged with the pastors by mail.

The district stewards and pastors are called to meet in the First Methodist Church at Baton Rouge on Jan. 9, at 9:30 a. m. We desire every pastor, charge, lay leader, and district steward to be present. It will be a conference of preachers and laymen to plan the campaign for the year.

Pastor, you come; and if the district steward or charge leader cannot come, bring a layman with you.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Is it worth while to have a goal before us? Should our prayers be definite? Is it wise to study the Bible for a specific purpose? When we do not aim to do a thing we usually do wrong. Let us begin the New Year with Paul's purpose: "This one thing I do—I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The business world has learned that organization means work for every one and every one at work. The Church can attain this ideal to a greater degree than we think. Organize one class, put the membership, the evangelistic, and the missionary committees to work, and see what will happen during the year.

Eighty new Wesley Bible Classes, ten in each district, before the first of April, is one thing to aim at. Several strong classes have promised to go into the country charges and lend a helping hand. Let some of our country churches invite their neighbors to come out and tell what they have done and how they have done it. In the early days it was common for a farmer to call in the settlers to a house-raising or log-rolling, and what a time they would have socially, and look at what they wrought! Why not invite the best men in some Bible class to help do a greater work in Christian service?

Do not wait for a "good time" to organize a class, but organize NOW, and the "good time" will come sure and soon. Do not wait to learn how, but do it and learn how. Here are a few of the things expected of an organized class: to increase class membership, to secure church attendance, to promote systematic Bible study, and to assume some definite social service task. It is pitiful to see how few men know what the Church means by social service.

Up to date I have visited six churches, held twelve services, started one Wesley Bible Class, two Teacher-training Classes, ordered 25 books, and a lot of other things to help do the work better.

DEATH AND IMMORTALITY.

Last Sabbath morning, before another large congregation, Rev. N. B. Harmon gave the fourth sermon in his series on immortality. The text was from II Cor., 5:1: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

He said in part: "When we come to the last hour of life here, we shall not find it a horror, not a pain, but sweet sleep. We are told by those who have the best right to an opinion upon the question, that in tens of thousands of cases there is no consciousness of suffering in the act of dying. The Savior spoke of death as a sleep. Our coming into this life was expected and preparations were made to receive us. I do not believe that the next step ahead of us in the universe will be less adequately prepared for than was our coming into this world. Our earthly fathers did their best to make us homes here that would give us all that we needed. The Son of God himself declared that when we leave our earthly fathers' home we shall be received into the Heavenly Father's house. Do you think that our surroundings there are going to be any poorer than here? If our Heavenly Father feels toward us as our earthly fathers do, we have nothing to fear. This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, said Christ to the dying thief. When you leave this world you will be with loved ones. Where is heaven? In the 21st chapter of Revelation, and 16th verse, we read: "The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal." What can that be but the universe? It may be right around us. As Milton said, it may be true that—

"Millions of spiritual creatures walk this earth, Unseen; both when we wake and when we sleep."

—The Magnolia Gazette of Dec. 6.

CONSTIPATION—HEADACHES —BILIOUSNESS

DON'T MISS THIS. Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2837 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey & Tar Compound, for bronchial and la grippe coughs, colds and croup; Foley Kidney Pills, for lame back, weak kidneys, rheumatism, bladder troubles; and Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic for constipation, biliousness, headache and sluggish bowels. You can try these three excellent remedies for only 5c.

TYPICAL TOMMYROT.

Wander behind the lines into the ranks of the enemy and listen to their conversation. You will learn many things.

For instance, the Brewer's Journal of September 1, 1916, openly declares the contempt of the liquor dealers for laws:

"'A Perfect Stranger,'" it says, "writes three long columns in the Detroit 'Saturday Night' to show that saloons are open in Detroit on Sundays. What a waste of time, paper, and ink! Everybody knows that in our large American cities, the centers of learning, industry, finance, fashion and intelligence, the inhabitants care not for 'laws' made by time-serving politicians, at the behest of economically and intellectually limited theologians and their few and misled followers!"

A quotation from the Wholesalers' and Retailers' Review is also given which illustrates their contempt for truth. It reads:

"To-day insurance companies can find no distinction in the length of life of men who drink and those who do not."

Reports of insurance companies on this matter have been numerous and without exception to the contrary to the foregoing, as everyone knows.—Board of Temperance of M. E. Church.

Do the duty which lieth nearest to thee! Then thy second duty will already have become clearer.—Carlyle.

MARRIED.

At the Methodist parsonage in Rayville, La., on December 13, 1916, by Rev. I. T. Reames, Mr. HENRY WYNN, of Wynn Island, and Miss GRACE HUMPHRIES, of Grayson, La.

At the residence of the bride's parents in Rayville, La., on Dec. 17, 1916, by Rev. I. T. Reames, Mr. J. A. TAYLOR and Miss ELIZABETH COOK.

HIS LIKENESS.

There is a story told of a great sculptor who longed to carve a statue of Christ. He worked upon a block of marble for three years and then, calling a little child, asked whether she knew who it was.

"No," said the child, "I don't know. It may be some big man; I don't know."

The sculptor knew that he had failed, and falling on his knees in sorrow, he asked the Lord to help him try again.

Years longer he worked and prayed, and prayed, and at last again called a child to the household. "Do you know who it is?" he asked her.

She looked upon the marble face for a moment, and, with tears streaming down her own cried out: "It is the One who said, 'Come unto me.'"

Then the sculptor knew that he had caught in his marble something of the divine likeness he sought for.

If we are Christians, it ought to be possible for all to see in us some resemblance to Christ. They should be able to point to our patience, our lovingness, our ready forgiveness, our faithfulness, and say, "That is Christ in him."

We could never bring out the likeness alone; but if we will let Jesus work in us and with us, He will develop it surely, so that, though we see it not, our friends cannot fail to recognize His likeness.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

"PROVE ME NOW HEREWITH."

If any Christian who has never tried tithing will make the experiment, following it through to the end in prosperity and adversity, we predict for him two surprises: First, he will be astonished at the increased amount which by this method he is enabled to give to the Lord; and, secondly, he will be astonished at the increased spiritual and temporal prosperity which the Lord will give to him.—A. J. Gordon.

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitorium treatments, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

LOST—A BOY!

"Not kidnaped by bandits and hidden in a cave to weep and starve and rouse a nation to frenzied searching. Were that the case, a hundred thousand men would rise to the rescue if need be. Unfortunately, the losing of the lad is without any dramatic excitement, though very sad and very real. The fact is that his father lost him. Being too busy to sit with him at the fireside and answer trivial questions during the years when fathers are the great and only heroes of boys, he let go his hold upon him.

"Yes, his mother lost him. Being much engrossed in her teas, dinners, and club programs, she let her maid hear the boy say his prayers, and thus her grip slipped, and the boy was lost to his home.

"Aye, his church lost him. Being so much occupied with sermons for the wise and elderly who pay the bills, and having good care for dignity, the minister and elder were unmindful of the human feelings of the boy in the pew and made no provision for him in sermon or song; and so many sad-hearted parents are looking for their lost boys."

ITEMS WORTH NOTING.

There is no better test whether the love of money or the love of God is stronger in a man's life than his willingness to give regularly to God at least a tithe of all his income.—J. Campbell White.

Alaska presents a great home missionary opportunity. It is estimated that inside of five years the whole population will reach five hundred thousand people. There were only two hundred white persons in the whole territory less than forty years ago.

In Chota Nagpur, India, there are 260 German schools. They have received a grant in aid from the British government to tide them over during the period in which support from German sources has lapsed.

The largest Christian Endeavor Society in the world is to be found in the heart of Africa, where nearly two thousand young people of the Bantu race are united in an enthusiastic organization.

VALUE OF EDUCATION.

The Commissioner of Education of the United States has said that a common school education increases a man's productive ability 50 per cent, a high school training increases it 100 per cent, and a college training increases it from 200 to 300 per cent.

A MISSIONARY'S IMPRESSIONS AT THE END OF HER FIRST YEAR.

I have completed my fourth quarter in Brazil and feel that I can now write my impressions without the glamor that a new-comer finds all about her. Everyone has done all that could be done to make the time pass pleasantly. I am now giving full time in service. I understand the language better and can talk with the people themselves. My work in the school throws me in daily contact with the girls in such a way that I have come to know them very well and to love them, too. I have had charge of the dormitories ever since I have been here. The greatest joy that has come to me is that of seeing several of the girls start in the Christian life. Three of them joined the Church last Sunday, and another is waiting for her father's permission. You have no idea how hard it is for these girls to do right, for they have no training at home. One of the strangest things to me here was the number of times we had something to eat. We have to conform to the Brazilian custom of eating four or five times a day. At seven o'clock we have coffee and a piece of bread. Then at ten we have a regular breakfast—bread and butter, rice and beans (without which no Brazilian would think of sitting down at the table for either breakfast or dinner). Besides this, we have two vegetables and meat of some kind, with tomatoes or celery or lettuce. Usually the vegetables are from our own garden, which is very fine, and which makes it possible for us to have a small food account. At two o'clock we eat again. This time it is very simple, consisting of only bread and butter, with jam or jelly and mati, a Brazilian drink similar to tea. Then we rest until five, when we have dinner. Do you think we spend all of our time eating? I thought so when I first came; but the family are always ready to eat, and they seem to thrive under it all.

We have a nice garden and have had more tomatoes than we could use on the table. We also have lettuce, turnips, celery, onions, radishes, corn, and strawberries.

I am anxious to be of more help next year, as I have been getting accustomed to the climate and learning the language so much of this year, that all of my time could not be given to the work.

MARY SUE BROWN.

ATTENTION, SECOND VICE PRESIDENTS.

The Junior Missionary Catechism, which was authorized by the Council more than a year ago, has been prepared and is ready for distribution. The Second Vice Presidents are urged to call attention to the Catechism in the Conference and to do their utmost to secure a wide use of it in Junior Missionary Societies. Every child in the Junior Division should have a copy. The price of the Catechism is five cents. Order from the Home Base Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT MEETING.

The Lafayette District meeting held in Crowley, Nov. 14 and 15, was, in many respects, the best meeting held in recent years. Although the weather was disagreeable, nine of the thirteen auxiliaries were represented by one or more delegates.

Miss Gibson, head resident of St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans; Miss Walker, deaconess of Houma Mission, and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, of Shreveport, were guests of the meeting and gave much help and inspiration by their encouraging messages.

Nine auxiliaries have mission study classes. We consider this proof that our women are awake to the necessity of missionary education, that they may, through the knowledge thus gained, do more efficient service in building up the kingdom of God.

Eight auxiliaries observed the Week of Prayer. Another cause for rejoicing is the fact that we are meeting our financial obligations better this year than last. We are preparing to celebrate December 1 as Harvest Day, when all obligations shall be met, and we are fully expecting to do this.

Our district pledge was $475. The pledges made by eleven auxiliaries were not quite sufficient to meet this, but those who did not feel like making a pledge are helping just the same, and we feel sure each auxiliary will want to make a pledge next year.

The Crowley adult, young people, and junior pledged $140; Houma (our French mission), $25; Lafayette, $100; Lake Charles, $50; Lake Arthur, $33; New Iberia, $10; Rayne, $80; Sulphur, $11. Morgan City made no pledge, but has paid $2. Franklin made no pledge, but has paid $4.80. Branch, our infant organization with nine members, organized last May by the Rayne Auxiliary, deserves special mention. They have completed "The King's Highway," have paid $25 on the pledge, and the Scarritt assessment in full, and have a fine junior organization of 19 members. The fine spirit manifested by these women is a shining example to all the district.

Our district is hostess to the annual meeting in February and we most earnestly desire each and every auxiliary to feel that they are expected to do their very best to make this meeting a success. We must not expect the Crowley workers, who will entertain the meeting, to assume all the responsibility. It is your meeting; so begin now to plan to send delegates with instructions to get information and inspiration to take home and give to those who could not attend. It will be worth your most earnest efforts to attend.

There will be present as helpers, a Council worker from Nashville, a returned missionary, and others who will give us the best in their line of work.

Lafayette is a great district, being in area about 200 miles from the east to west line, which makes the work of the District Secretary a little difficult. We are not able to visit every charge, but are striving to get in personal touch with as many as possible, trusting them to carry the good work on to others.

Mrs. W. M. BUCHANAN.
District Secretary.

KILMICHAEL (NORTH MISS. CONF.)

Dear Dr. Meek: At the last session of the North Mlssissippi Conference I was returned to Kilmichael for our fourth year. The people havo received us very kindly, and we aro at work. I have made part of my first round for the new Conference year. The third Sunday was a good day at Kilmichael. Ninety-five were present at Sunday school. At tho close of the Sunday school, Brother A. J. Wilson, who has been the superintendent for 12 years, and his good wife were brought forward and seated together, and after he had made a short talk, Dr. T. L. Wilburn in a few well chosen words presented, for the Sunday school, Brother Wilson with a handsome gold watch-chain, and his wife with a beautiful gold thimble. They responded in loving words expressing their appreciation of the love and esteem of their friends. This month marks the passing of their fiftieth marriage anniversary, and they have been faithful and true and are worthy of all honor. The congregation was good at the preaching hour. The interest in Church work is good. We are glad that Rev. W. W. Mitchell has been returned to the Durant District for another year. He is a good presiding officer and a faithful and wise leader. The prospects are good for a successful year. The Lord helping us, we will go forward in his name to do our best.—J. J. Gainer, P. C.

Dec. 20, 1916.

FROM REV. GEORGE D. PARKER.

The following extracts from a letter to our office from Rev. George D. Parker, of Uruguayana, Brazil, will doubtless be read with interest by his many friends in Louisiana:

"Upon our return from the U. S. A. in July, 1915, Bishop Mouzon asked me to transfer to the South Brazil Conference, where a man was needed, to which I readily consented. He appointed me to the Uruguayana District, covering an area almost equal to the State of Louisiana, and to the pastorato of the church in this city. At the last Conference the district was divided, which relieves me of a good deal of travel. We are on the Southern frontier of Brazil, the Uruguay, a noble river, separating us from the Argentine Republic as the Mississippi separates New Orleans from Algiers. A short distance west lies the Republic of Uruguay and a day's run on the railroad toward the east brings us to the Paraguayan frontier. We are in the South Temperate Zone and enjoy the four seasons here, a pleasure that we never experienced in the Tropics. We have a church building, with a parsonage in the rear of same, and three squares away is a mission school, occupying two unfinished buildings, and having a matriculation of about 140 students, 35 of whom are boarders. I give instruction in 14 periods per week in Bible Study, teaching all the classes above the Primary Grade; and I also teach Gymnastics in this school. Our church here has about 200 members, who paid for all purposes last year about $6 per capita. Our Sunday school is graded, having the five departments—Cradle Roll, Primary, Intermediate, Senior, and Home Department. The attendance on Sunday runs from 120 to 140. There is also a Normal Class, besides a Teachers' Class. The latter meets on Friday night for the study of Oliver's book on 'The Preparation of Teachers," followed by a study of the lesson for the following Sabbath. Written examinations are given on the above book. The Sunday school is also organized into a missionary society, the second Sunday of each month being observed as Missionary Day, when an offering is made to missions. Our Special this year is Africa, where we are helping our Annual Conference to support one of our missionaries. Recently I have opened an afternoon Sunday school down by the river in a very much neglected district; we also work in the factory district of the city. Both of these places are becoming strong centers of propaganda. The young men in our mission school are fine fellows and many have taken a public stand for Christ during the past year."

A LETTER FROM MR. PEPPER.

Tho following letter was written by Mr. John R. Pepper, chairman of the Sunday School Board of the Memphis Conference, under date of November 22, 1916, to Mr. C. J. Nugent, the Divisional Secretary for the Middle Division. It has reference to the same matter that I wrote about a few days ago—the importance of the Sunday school superintendent having a written program for every session of his school. Read what Mr. Pepper has to say on the subject:

"Dear' Brother:

"I am just in receipt of yours of the 21st and beg to give the following reasons for having a written program for each Sunday, which I have had regularly for more than 25 years, I am sure.

"1. It saves a great deal of time to know what songs are to be sung, what Scriptures read, what announcements and any other thing that is to be done during the session.

"2. It saves confusion to know exactly where you are going to start in and where you are going to come out.

"3. It saves duplication and repeating one's self from session to session, which is very important and goes far to preserve good order during the session.

"4. It gives variety to the session, and keeps the school on the lookout as to what features will be introduced from session to session.

"5. It is very important to have a program book, in permanent form, so that you can turn back occasionally and bring out some of tho best things you have had from year to year, and which will be perfectly new to a large per cent of the school, as many new scholars come in from year to year.

"6. I would not think of going before the school without a definite, written program, and written in ink, so that it will abide, and this program is made up on Saturday night, almost invariably, when time is given to prepare the best program, which the school so richly deserves.

"There are other reasons, perhaps, that are equally as good as the above, but these are the chief reasons why I have held steadily to a carefully prepared, written program for each session, and I am just entering my 37th consecutive year as superintendent of one school. Nothing impresses me more than the fact that there is so much land yet to be possessed in this great work. Yours truly,

"J. R. PEPPER."

I wish every superintendent in the Gulf Division could catch from Mr. Pepper some of the enthusiasm and inspiration with which he goes about his Sunday school work. He is a banker, a merchant, an insurance man, and goodness only knows what other sort of a big business man, but his biggest and best business (in his own estimation, too) is the Sunday school business.

You Must Have Plenty of Iron in Your Blood to Be Strong, Says Doctor

Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate, Nervous, Run-down People 200 Per Cent. in Ten Days in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a physician who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

IN DEFENSE OF THE PRAYER MEETING—A TRUE STORY.

By Mrs. Annie A. Preston.

The discussion, among a group of Christians who had met casually, regarding the usefulness of the mid-week prayer meeting—the old-fashioned, family, neighborhood or community meeting attended by all ages and conditions—was thus defended by a clergyman past middle age, who said:

"More than a score of years ago two American lads of the old stock in a remote farming community, having been sent to the village store one summer evening, passed the open door of the small church where the thinly attended mid-week prayer meeting was in session, and as a hymn was started they went back and dropped down upon the cool stone steps to listen.

"As the hymn that was in itself a prayer closed, some one said: 'What an unspeakable blessing it is to every Christian believer that God has promised to hear and answer prayer, and what joy that we may go to Him like children and ask Him for whatever we wish! What a sweet comfort that we can pray for our friends and that our friends in Christ can and do and will pray for us!'

"'Do you believe that?' whispered John, as the two boys drew nearer together. 'Have to,' replied David, 'but listen.' The time sped swiftly, and with the singing of another hymn I, for I was the inexperienced young pastor, and not much of an advocate of the mid-week meeting, 'perfunctorily attended,' as in my ignorance I asserted to myself. Leaving the room hastily after the dismissal, I nearly stumbled over the two boys, who were hurrying to pick up their belongings and to get away.

"'What is all this? Who are you? Why did you not come in?'

"'The Murray boys. Stopped to hear 'em sing. Darsent come in—never been in.'

"'How did you happen to be here?'

"'We were going to the store with eggs, but we want to ask you—'

"'The store will be closed—go first and do your errands and come back with your question. I will wait here.'

"They came presently, and I, asking where they lived, said: 'I will walk along with you; give me a package to carry; we can talk better if we even up. I'll take this bucket, it is pretty heavy. What's inside? Sugar? It hints of cookies and things and makes me wish for an invitation down to your place to supper to-morrow night.'

"'You wouldn't come; the ministers never do.'

"'Try me and see. Tell your mother she is not to make company of me, for I'm coming to get acquainted.'

"'Ain't no mother, only gran'ma.'

"'That's good; I love grandmothers, and I miss my own. I shall be there early. Now what did you want to ask?'

"The reply came hesitatingly and one helped the other out, but the gist of it was, 'Is it true that we may go to God like children and ask Him—'

"'Certainly it is true. Did you not learn that in Sunday school?'

"'We've never been.'

"'You might have read it in your Bible without quite understanding. In the Psalms it reads, "The Lord is nigh to all them that call upon Him!'

"Then, almost in a whisper, came the confession, 'But we cannot read.'

"The pathos of it was beyond words. I set down the bucket and was glad that the evening shadows hid my tears as I said as steadily as I could:

"'Will you tell me, little brothers, what you wish to ask your Heavenly Father and mine?'

"'To make us like others.'

"'Why are you not like others?'

"'We never go to meetin' or school or anywhere. We never have school things to wear or meetin' things. Nobody ever comes to see us. It is jest work, work, all the time.'

"'Work is all right. We have no quarrel with work. Please tell me, do you believe in God? Yes? Your grandmother has taught you that? Then before you sleep pray to Him and tell Him all that is in your heart, and I will tell Him what I know of you also, and to-morrow I will come to see you as I promised. Now, good-night, little brothers: I have been pretty lonely here, and am thankful that God has helped me to find you.'

"That was the beginning. I learned on inquiry that the father had been killed in action in the War between the States, the young mother had died, the children had lived with grandparents who followed what light they had by teaching them to work and to be industrious and saving. There were no laws then for compulsory education, and although there was no lack of means, no one took particular interest in the family, and the two forlorn little fellows had grown like weeds until the awakening on the church steps of the spiritual flame kindled by the thought that met their need.

"I had no further time for homesickness. I cultivated that family, and immediately there were kind-hearted people to take an interest. We had the children in school and in Sunday school, and how they responded to every effort made in their behalf! The grandparents came also to church and became members at the same time as the boys.

"The result was that those little brothers, as I have always delighted to call them, have grown up to be useful, Christian men, and to me they have ever been living witnesses that for the welfare of the church the mid-week meeting is absolutely indispensable. Even if thinly attended, it keeps the fire on the altar of love ever burning, and I say the altar of love advisedly, for always there are those present who are there because they love the Lord's house and His worship."—Christian Intelligencer.
